Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

There will be a meeting of the Camp-meeting Committee at Amboy Thursday June 13, to arrange for the time and other matters connected with the camp-meeting. A full attendance is desired. Let none be absent. The Board of Officers of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference constitute this committee. N. W. SPENCER.

INDIANA.

The annual meeting of the A. C. Ministerial Association of Southern Indiana will commence at Jeffersonville, June 12, and continue over the following Sunday. A full attendance is solicited, and brethren from abroad will be cordially welcomed. N. FIELD, Pres't.
C. H. CASS, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

The Michigan Campmeeting will be held June 15-24, on the Fair Grounds at Jackson.

This is the most convenient railway center in the State.

Eld. J. V. Himes, Br. and Sr. Mansfield, Br. J. H. Whitmore—and in fact all our preaching brethren expect to be present unless they are providentially detained away.

J. M. SNOOK.

The Fort Wayne Jackson and Saginaw Railroad have consented to give RETURN passes to all who attend the Jackson meeting from the South, providing they do not return until the 23d or the 24th. Return passes can be obtained on the ground. Possibly a like favor may be obtained for the entire length of that Road.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.
Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.
Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.
Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

MINNESOTA.

In accordance with a vote of our State Conference a State Campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove called "Cheatham's Grove," in Utica, Winona Co., commencing Thursday, June 27, and holding over the ensuing Sunday, and as much longer as deemed practicable. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with permanent stands and seats; also a good well of water and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground.

Brethren and sisters of the Advent faith throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles and work for God. Come from every quarter; come with hearts burning with the love of God, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs portend the speedy coming of the Master. Shall we not improve these general gatherings, as God requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and for the salvation of others?

Come Christians of every name, and unite with us in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove.

Brethren and sisters in the ministry, all who can come, at home or abroad, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon-coming King. Come endued with power from on high, with an unction from the holy One; with words that burn, that will reach the hearts of the perishing.

☞ Those coming to tarry on the ground will please come prepared with bedding and provisions (and tents if they have them.) We expect to procure a large building erected by the Methodists, on the ground, and also have the Bethel tent if possible, so that all can be accommodated if they have their bedding and provisions.

Arrangements will be made with the R. R. companies for half-fare tickets from all points where the friends notify ME THIS MONTH that they will attend our meeting. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

Viola, Stone S. H. 10½ a. m. June 16.
Beatly S. H. 2½ and 7½ p. m., same day.
Eyota, Bliss S. H. 10½ a. m. and 2½ p. m. June 23.
Crook's Hall, St Charles, eve. same day.
S. C. WELLCOME.

IOWA.

There will be a Q. M. of the A. C. conference of Iowa, Iron Hill and Deep Creek Districts at the Esgate S. H. Jackson Co., Friday eve, June 14, and over Sunday. Let there be a general gathering. Come brethren to work for the cause of Christ. M. CHANDLER.

The third Q. M. of the A. C. Conference of Iowa, Manchester District, will be holden in the Odell S. H. situated about 2½ miles N. E. from Greeley, commencing June 14, and holding over Sabbath.

The brethren that enjoyed our last Q. M. at Elkport will only need to know when the next one will be held to insure their attendance, for we all love good things, and such a feast will but sharpen the appetite for more of the same kind.

To those that were not there, we we wish to say, important business will come before this Conference, and we wish all the lovers of Jesus to be there. Come to work for God and his cause. Come filled with the Spirit, praying that God will give us souls for our hire. This is a new field, all ripe for the harvest.

M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

There will be a Grove Meeting 12 miles S. W. of Corydon, and 6 miles W. of Warsaw, Wayne Co., commencing June 14, and holding over Sunday.
S. BALDWIN.

Br. Moses Chandler is, by unanimous consent of the brethren, requested to appoint the place of the next Q. M. of the Deep Creek and Iron District, to meet sometime in June.

The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its sixteenth Annual Session at New Hartford Buttes Co, commencing June 18. This meeting will be held in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting, (see notice.) Let the churches send delegates, and all the ministers who are interested in the speedy coming of our blessed Lord, make a sacrifice and attend. You are wanted to help in this cause. Ministers who are members of this Conference are required to report by letter, if not personally present, by the constitution all are cordially invited to this meeting. JOB GILDERSLEVE, Pres,t.
A. RAYMOND, Sec'y.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp ground at New Hartford, Buttes Co., commencing June 18 and continuing until the 23d. The invitation is to all. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is better than last year for having a good meeting. Our grounds will be better fitted up. There will be wood, hay, and straw, and lumber for tent frames found on the grounds. There will also be a grocery upon the ground where all things necessary for the comfort of the people can be bought at reasonable rates. The profits accruing will go to bear the expenses of the meeting.

We are hoping to secure the labors of ministers from abroad (Particulars hereafter.) Elds. C. C. Ramsey and E. M. Thomas will be present, with many others, to preach the word.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Pres,t.

MISSOURI.

The Third Q. M. of the Third District of the Iowa and Mo. Conference, will be held with the Greenland church, in DeKalb Co., near Stewartsville, Friday, June 14, and over Sunday. Come one and all. H. BILLMIRE, Prest.

ARKANSAS.

The third Q. M. for Blue Mountain District will be held at Flatwood, with the church, at the place selected by Br. Bishop, June 26 and 28.
J. B. BROWN, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

"If the Lord will" the New-York A. C. Conference will hold its next Annual Meeting in the new chapel in Springwater, about 30 miles south of Rochester, on the Genesee Valley R. R. Thursday eve. June 13, and over Lord's day.

Good homes and ample accommodations will be provided for all that come; and all are invited.

It is expected that all the churches desiring to further the general interests of the cause will be represented at this annual gathering. Delinquent and new churches are earnestly urged to co-operate with the body, and they are hereby cordially invited to seats (by delegate) in the convention. For their information it should be stated here that each church, belonging to the Conference Association, is required, by the constitution, to report either by delegate or by letter at least at each annual session; and, also, requested to send in, quarterly, such donations as they may be able to collect, for the General Mission Fund.

This is an important meeting and should be remembered in the earnest prayers of the church.

D. COGSWELL, Pres't.

WM. E. BROWN Sec'y.

Persons going from or through Rochester to the Annual Meeting of the New York State Conference at Springwater, can procure R. R. tickets at reduced rates, good from the 13th to the 19th of June. Inquire at the Erie Railway office for tickets to "Adventist Conference, Springwater." J. H. WHITMORE.

At our Annual Conference June 13, we are expecting a large gathering. Let us all come together to worship God, and not to visit and feast. We shall not expect, nor wish, but two meals a day—Let the friends in the vicinity of the meeting bring in baskets of provision, so that if any one wants a lunch at noon they can get it at the church, and by so doing ease up a little on the friends in the Valley. "Bear one an others burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Let every church be well represented by delegates, do not forget the Quarterly Collection.

D. COGSWELL.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, of the $300 pattern, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

"The Home Shuttle." We can give a good bargain on two or three excellent Sewing Machines, if application is made soon. Address this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume I will commence in June. $2 a year. THE TIMES and Record one year for $3.
H. V. Reed, Publisher, 9 South Canal St. Chicago.

When & How; or a collection of the more recent facts and ideas upon raising healthy children. By D. Newcomb, M. D.

A strong, common-sense, and hence valuable work. Sent by mail, post paid, $2. For sale at this office.

Favorable terms to agents by the Publishers, A. W. Penny & Co. 62 South Canal St. Chicago, Ill.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper: 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $20.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 11 South Canal St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

WEBSTER'S
UNABRIDGED
DICTIONARY
NEW
ILLUSTRATED
EDITION
3000
ENGRAVINGS

GET THE BEST.

Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.

10,000 Words and Meanings not in other Dictionaries.

3000 Engravings. 1840 Pages Quarto. Price $12.

☞ A National Standard. The authority in the Government Printing office at Washington.

☞ Warmly recommended by Bancroft, Prescott, Motley, Geo. P. Marsh, Halleck, Whittier, Willis, Saxe, Elihu Burritt, Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate, and the best American and European scholars.

Published by G. & C. MERRIAM, Springfield, Mass. Sold by all Booksellers.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n20m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

E. H. WHEELER'S
IMPROVED
AXLE & THIMBLE SKEIN
PATENTED JAN. 12, 1872.

THE LIGHTEST, STRONGEST, AND BEST AXLE BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

Less liable to break, and cannot spring under any amount of weight that can be put upon it.

It takes a smaller sized axle and bolster or sand-board than the same sized skeins of common style; is more simple and easier to fit, the skein being of uniform taper, without shoulders upon the inside a better fit is secured. The axle can be turned in a common lathe to fit the thimble, by putting one end out of center.

The arm, or spindle, is so made as to secure the proper set of the wheels, when moderately dished, with the bottom line of the spindle on a parallel line to the bottom of the axle, an important principle never before attained. The set of the wheels is a perpendicular or right angle to the bottom line of the axle upon the face of the spokes, upon their lower half.

This cut shows the thimble and lug for the tension rod across the bottom of the axle, from thimble to thimble, and the socket for the bolster, or the sand-board, as the case may be. I also use a sand guard to keep the dirt out of the shoulder of the hub; but it is not shown in this cut.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Sample thimble skeins furnished to purchasers of rights, at actual cost. For further information address
E. H. WHEELER, Memphis,
Scotland county, Missouri.

☞ Please state where you saw this advertisement.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 45. CHICAGO, JUNE 18, 1872. WHOLE NO. 425.

AURORA COLLE

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, June 18, 1872.

The Restitution of all Things.

(Continued.)

And in arguing thus, we have confined our attention to the parties actually punished, while we have left out of sight the grand object of all wise punishment—viz., the lesson taught by it to those who have not offended. Viewed in this light, eternal death inflicted on sinners, is eternally felt, and has an eternal influence on the parties whom it was intended principally to affect. The actual sinner suffered as he deserved—if not less; certainly not more. His death then intervenes to afford its eternal lesson to all future times. Those who rejoice in immortality are forever warned by the aspect of its loss. Milton draws the fallen angels as shuddering at the thought of the loss even of their life—lowered, shattered, with no aim or object but evil:—

"To be no more: sad cure; for who would lose,
Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
These thoughts that wander through eternity?"

How much more terrible must the thought be to those whose life, fom all its associations, is synonymous with joy!

We will here merely add that the term "eternal death," used by us as properly descriptive of the theory of the future destruction and non-existence of the wicked, is the very term used by the best writers of the periods before and after the birth of Christ, when they would describe the eternal loss of life and existence to beings who had once possessed it. The Grecian writer calls it "deathless death;" the Roman poet calls it "immortal death," "eternal death;" Cicero, the great master of language, calls it "everlasting death:" even the Christian Tertullian, though his theory compelled him to confound life with death, when he would describe a state from which there was no resurrection to life, can find no stronger, truer description of it than "eternal death."

Death was the penalty which God pronounced against human sin. All that God purposed to inflict upon Adam and his posterity in case of transgression, is included in the word death: "in the day that thou eatest thou shalt die." (Gen. 2: 17.) It is of the utmost consequence then, that we should understand what God meant by death, nor is there the smallest difficulty in doing so if we only attend to what reason and justice require, and what Scripture expressly declares. Its meaning then, we contend to be, when thus attached to sin as its penalty, the loss of life and existence.

One of the first principles of justice requires that parties threatened with a penalty for transgression should have the full opportunity of knowing what the penalty was. God accordingly speaks to Adam of death as a thing whose nature Adam knew. Now Adam knew very well what death was in one sense, and in one only. He knew it to be the law of the lower creatures, and to consist in the loss of their being and existence. He knew nothing of any secondary senses of death, such as death in sin, or death to sin, for in his innocence he did not know what sin was at all. Still less did he understand by death an eternal existence in agony. He had one clear, well-understood sense for death—the loss of life and being. When God, therefore, threatened death to Adam as the penalty of disobedience, Adam could only know that penalty to mean that he would become like the beasts that perish.

With this, and with this only, agrees everything that Scripture says of death as the penalty of sin. As soon as Adam trangressed God came to him and repeated to him in other words the penalty he had just incurred. It was "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." (Gen. 3: 19.) God's definition of death inflicted for the first transgression is frequently repeated in the later Scriptures. Paul tells us that it is the death which all men actually undergo, whether they are among the saved or the lost, and therefore an eternal existence in pain can be no part of its meaning. (Rom. 5: 12, 14, 17; 1 Cor. 15: 22.) Such, too, was the death which Christ endured for human sin, the very same penalty to its full extent to which man was exposed, and therefore spiritual death or an eternal life in misery can form no part of its meaning. (Phil. 2: 8; Acts 2: 24; Rom. 5: 7, 8.) We have thus, if we will accept God's teaching, the clearly expressed sense of death. It was not spiritual death; that was the sinner's guilty act, not the penalty for his sin. It was not an eternal existence in pain. It was simply the withdrawal of a life whose true aim and object had been lost. God said nothing in the first instance whether this death would be temporal or eternal, but what the death was he fully explained. He gave life to the race of man, and he would withdraw that life if man sinned. Such was the simple Scriptural meaning of that word Death, about which Christian theologians have written whole libraries of confused jargon and hopeless nonsense ever since the introduction of the Platonic dogma of the inalienable immortality of man compelled them to hold that all men must live forever.

This death, which was the penalty for original sin, is throughout the whole of the Old Testament declared to be the punishment which God will hereafter inflict on such as refuse his offers of mercy. For such God declares he has "provided the instruments of death;" of such as hate divine wisdom, that wisdom says, "they that hate me, love death;" to the wicked God saith, "Thou shalt surely die," "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ps. 7: 13; Prov. 8: 36; Ezk. 3; 18; 18: 4.)

But it is not merely by this phrase "death," that the Old Testament describes the punishment of the ungodly. By every expression in the Hebrew language significant of the loss of life, loss of existence, the resolution of organized substance into its original parts, its reduction to that condition in which it is as though it had never been called into its being—by every such expression does the Old Testament describe the end of the ungodly. "The destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together;" "Prepare then for the day of slaughter;" "God shall destroy them;" "They shall be consumed;" "They shall be cut off;" "They shall be routed out of the land of the living;" "blotted out of the book of life;" "they are not." (Is. 1: 28; 66: 16, 24; Jer. 12: 3; Ps. 28: 5; 37: 20; 73: 27; 37: 38; 52: 5; 69: 28; Job. 27: 19.) The Hebrew scholar will see from the above passages that there is no phrase in the Hebrew language significant of all destruction, short of that philosophical annihilation of elements which we never teach, that is not used to denote the end of the ungodly. The English reader need only turn to his English dictionary to see that the primary sense of all the above terms is significant of the loss of existence. At a subsequent time we will show them that the primary sense of words is the only sense that is allowable where a law-giver is laying down for the guidance of men his penalty for transgression.

We now turn to the New Testament We will find it in perfect agreement with the Old. Before, however, bringing forward its statements, we will make a few observations on a new feature here introduced, viz., the change of language adopted in the publication of the gospel revelation.

We remark, then, that the writers of the New Testament must not only be supposed to follow the sense already fixed on the terms for future punishment in the Hebrew Scriptures, but that they also give us another guarantee as to their meaning by the use of the Greek tongue. The gospel, revealed and recorded chiefly by Jews, is recorded not in provincial dialect, but in the language of the Roman world. We have here a guarantee as to their meaning, whose overpowering force upon the present question will show a little farther on. Paul, and Luke, and John, and Peter, use a language which they had no hand in forming or moulding, but which was already provided for them to be the vehicle of their thoughts. They made no claim to alter the world's tongue, but to alter the world through the medium of that tongue which the world used and understood when they were children, learning the meaning of its words from the elders. The ordinary Greek Lexicon, not Lexicons of the New Testament colored and tainted by theological opinion, is the true guide to the Greek of the New Testament. It is only where an idea new to the human mind is brought before it that we have a right to look for a new or modified phrase, whose sense is to be stamped upon it by the teachers of the novel truth. Neither a future life, however, nor judgment and punishment to come, were ideas new to man. Heathen poetry and prose perpetually discussed them before the preaching of the gospel.

We will first draw attention to the fact that the punishment of the wicked is just as frequently described as their death in the New Testament as in the Old, without the smallest effort to show that its terms "death," or "to die," have any new sense placed upon them. These words, as all other words on this question, are used without any explanation, as words whose sense was long established. Thus our Lord, speaking of himself, says, "This is the bread which came down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die." And again he says, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." (John 6: 50; 11: 26.) In these passages he implies that they who do not believe in him shall die. What our Lord implies of the ungodly, Paul affirms of them, "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die." (Rom. 8: 13.) Very frequent are the passages in which the expression "death" is used for future punishment. Thus our Lord says, "If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Paul affirms of wicked works that their "end is death;" that "the wages of sin is death;" of those who perish he says that to such "we are the savour of death unto death." James declares that "Sin when finished bringeth forth death;" and "He which converteth a sinner shall save a soul from death." John declares that the ungodly shall suffer "the second death." We have thus, in repeated places, death described as the lot of the wicked in the world to come.

As we proceed in our examination of the New Testament, we will only find ourselves confirmed in our view. To the second death we have given the usual meaning of the loss of life hereafter, as death now means the loss of life here. We will proceed to show that such is the meaning which the New Testament itself imposes on the term. Its uniform testimony is that "eternal life" hereafter will be the exclusive possession of the just, and that the wicked will certainly not obtain it; "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." Our simple inquiry is, What is the primary sense of that Greek word zoe, translated "life" in the New Testament? It was one of the commonest words in use among Jews and Gentiles. We have only, therefore, to open our classical dictionaries, and there we find its primary and universally accepted sense to be "existence." "What is your life?" saith the apostle James. "It is even," he replies, "a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." Such was the primary sense of the word "life," among Christians and heathens, among savage and civilized people. Among the ruder and barbarous nations it was the only sense they put upon the term.

There is another Greek word, psyche, constantly translated "life" in the New Testament. In passages where this word can only mean animal life, such as we share with the lower creation, this life, it is expressly declared, shall be lost hereafter by the ungodly. In Mat. 10: 39, our Lord declares, "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it." What is this life which the fearful and unbelieving prolonged by their denial of Christ, and which martyrs lost by their confession of Christ? It is, and can be nothing but animal existence. It is the life which the good and the bad have in common. It is that which both alike value and would prolong, but which one are content to lose, and do lose, for Christ, and which the other will not lose for his sake. That which these latter here prolonged for a little while the Lord of Life tells them they shall lose in the future retribution—i. e. they shall cease to exist. Christ's words here can have no second meaning. And this is agreeable to all Scripture. Immortality is nowhere spoken of as the possession of fallen man, but is described as a blessing to be sought by him as; much as the "glory and honor" of the future state. (Rom. 2: 7; 6: 23.)

And here we will refer for a moment to a passage in the history of Moses, which strongly confirms our view. Moses intercedes with God that Israel may be forgiven, and asks that if his prayer be not granted he may be blotted out of the book which God had written. (Ex. 32: 32, 33.) This book can be no other than the "Book of Life" frequently referred to in Scripture, in which the names of the redeemed are written. What, then, did Moses mean by his receiving the doom of sinners, and being blotted out of the Book of Life? We cannot for a moment suppose that he wished throughout eternity for a life of pain and moral corruption! He could only have wished for the utter cessation of a life which he then felt would be intolerable if his prayer were refused. Since this must be his meaning, it follows that what he asked for himself shall be the condition of the ungodly, for God declared upon this occasion that what Moses sought for himself he will inflict on them—"Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book."

We now proceed to consider other expressions significant of future punishment. Of these none are so common as the Greek verb and noun translated by the words, "destroy," "perish," "destruction." None are more significant of the utter loss of existence! "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction," saith Christ; and Paul speaks of the ungodly as "vessels of wrath fitted for destruction." Our Lord tells us to "fear him who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell;" and Paul affirms that "they who have sinned without law shall shall perish without law," that he is "a savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish."

If we go to the Greek dictionary we will find that the terms used in these passages signify primarily the destruction and loss of life. And if the English reader will open his English dictionary, he will find that such is their primary meaning in the English language. For the present we confine our attention to their use in the New Testament. Mat. 7: 13 runs thus: "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction," and the next verse adds, "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life;" destruction is used as the opposite to life. Mat. 10: 28 runs thus: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both both body and soul in hell." Here destroy is used as the equivalent of kill; that which man is able to do to our bodies, but which he cannot do to our souls—viz., kill them, that God is able to do in hell both to body and soul. The same connection of destruction with loss of life is seen in 2 Cor. 2: 15, 16: "We are a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish." To the one we are the savor of death unto death. From acts 25: 16 we find that the usual sense of the word apoleia, commonly translated destruction, was death, or the loss of physical existence. Festus, who here spoke of "delivering a man to die," or to destruction, did not believe in any future life. These passages show us that the New Testament, when it speaks of the "destruction of the wicked, means by it their loss of life.

In exact agreement with the foregoing are the other expressions used in the New Testament. Thus Paul adopts the teaching of the Old Testament as truly descriptive of the end of sinners, and sums it up in these words, "Behold, ye despisers, and wonder and perish." (Acts 13: 41.) The Greek word here translated perish, means properly to become unseen, to disappear and be heard of no more. The whole process is explained in these pithy words: unbelievers will rise from their graves and see what they have rejected, will marvel at their folly, will vanish out of existence. (To be continued.)

Advent Christian Times.

AURORA COLL

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 45. CHICAGO, JUNE 18, 1872. WHOLE NO. 425.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - Editor

Tuesday Afternoon, June 18, 1872.

The Restitution of all Things.

(Continued.)

And in arguing thus, we have confined our attention to the parties actually punished, while we have left out of sight the grand object of all wise punishment—viz., the lesson taught by it to those who have not offended. Viewed in this light, eternal death inflicted on sinners, is eternally felt, and has an eternal influence on the parties whom it was intended principally to affect. The actual sinner suffered as he deserved—if not less; certainly not more. His death then intervenes to afford its eternal lesson to all future times. Those who rejoice in immortality are forever warned by the aspect of its loss. Milton draws the fallen angels as shuddering at the thought of the loss even of their life—lowered, shattered, with no aim or object but evil:—

> "To be no more: sad cure; for who would lose,
> Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
> These thoughts that wander through eternity?"

How much more terrible must the thought be to those whose life, fom all its associations, is synonymous with joy!

We will here merely add that the term "eternal death," used by us as properly descriptive of the theory of the future destruction and non-existence of the wicked, is the very term used by the best writers of the periods before and after the birth of Christ, when they would describe the eternal loss of life and existence to beings who had once possessed it. The Grecian writer calls it "deathless death;" the Roman poet calls it "immortal death," "eternal death;" Cicero, the great master of language, calls it "everlasting death:" even the Christian Tertullian, though his theory compelled him to confound life with death, when he would describe a state from which there was no resurrection to life, can find no stronger, truer description of it than "eternal death."

Death was the penalty which God pronounced against human sin. All that God purposed to inflict upon Adam and his posterity in case of transgression, is included in the word death: "in the day that thou eatest thou shalt die." (Gen. 2: 17.) It is of the utmost consequence then, that we should understand what God meant by death, nor is there the smallest difficulty in doing so if we only attend to what reason and justice require, and what Scripture expressly declares. Its meaning then, we contend to be, when thus attached to sin as its penalty, the loss of life and existence.

One of the first principles of justice requires that parties threatened with a penalty for transgression should have the full opportunity of knowing what the penalty was. God accordingly speaks to Adam of death as a thing whose nature Adam knew. Now Adam knew very well what death was in one sense, and in one only. He knew it to be the law of the lower creatures, and to consist in the loss of their being and existence. He knew nothing of any secondary senses of death, such as death in sin, or death to sin, for in his innocence he did not know what sin was at all. Still less did he understand by death an eternal existence in agony. He had one clear, well-understood sense for death—the loss of life and being. When God, therefore, threatened death to Adam as the penalty of disobedience, Adam could only know that penalty to mean that he would become like the beasts that perish.

With this, and with this only, agrees everything that Scripture says of death as the penalty of sin. As soon as Adam trangressed God came to him and repeated to him in other words the penalty he had just incurred. It was "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." (Gen. 3: 19.) God's definition of death inflicted for the first transgression is frequently repeated in the later Scriptures. Paul tells us that it is the death which all men actually undergo, whether they are among the saved or the lost, and therefore an eternal existence in pain can be no part of its meaning. (Rom. 5: 12, 14, 17; 1 Cor. 15: 22.) Such, too, was the death which Christ endured for human sin, the very same penalty to its full extent to which man was exposed, and therefore spiritual death or an eternal life in misery can form no part of its meaning. (Phil. 2: 8; Acts 2: 24; Rom. 5: 7, 8.) We have thus, if we will accept God's teaching, the clearly expressed sense of death. It was not spiritual death; that was the sinner's guilty act, not the penalty for his sin. It was not an eternal existence in pain. It was simply the withdrawal of a life whose true aim and object had been lost. God said nothing in the first instance whether this death would be temporal or eternal, but what the death was he fully explained. He gave life to the race of man, and he would withdraw that life if man sinned. Such was the simple Scriptural meaning of that word Death, about which Christian theologians have written whole libraries of confused jargon and hopeless nonsense ever since the introduction of the Platonic dogma of the inalienable immortality of man compelled them to hold that all men must live forever.

This death, which was the penalty for original sin, is throughout the whole of the Old Testament declared to be the punishment which God will hereafter inflict on such as refuse his offers of mercy. For such God declares he has "provided the instruments of death;" of such as hate divine wisdom, that wisdom says, "they that hate me, love death;" to the wicked God saith, "Thou shalt surely die," "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ps. 7: 13; Prov. 8: 36; Ezk. 3; 18; 18: 4.)

But it is not merely by this phrase "death," that the Old Testament describes the punishment of the ungodly. By every expression in the Hebrew language significant of the loss of life, loss of existence, the resolution of organized substance into its original parts, its reduction to that condition in which it is as though it had never been called into its being—by every such expression does the Old Testament describe the end of the ungodly. "The destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together;" "Prepare them for the day of slaughter;" "God shall destroy them;" "They shall be consumed;" "They shall be cut off;" "They shall be rooted out of the land of the living;" "blotted out of the book of life;" "they are not." (Is. 1: 28; 66: 16, 24; Jer. 12: 3; Ps. 26: 5; 37: 20; 73: 27; 37: 38; 52: 5; 69: 28; Job. 27: 19.) The Hebrew scholar will see from the above passages that there is no phrase in the Hebrew language significant of all destruction, short of that philosophical annihilation of elements which we never teach, that is not used to denote the end of the ungodly. The English reader need only turn to his English dictionary to see that the primary sense of all the above terms is significant of the loss of existence. At a subsequent time we will show them that the primary sense of words is the only sense that is allowable where a law-giver is laying down for the guidance of men his penalty for transgression.

We now turn to the New Testament We will find it in perfect agreement with the Old. Before, however, bringing forward its statements, we will make a few observations on a new feature here introduced, viz., the change of language adopted in the publication of the gospel revelation.

We remark, then, that the writers of the New Testament must not only be supposed to follow the sense already fixed on the terms for future punishment in the Hebrew Scriptures, but that they also give us another guarantee as to their meaning by the use of the Greek tongue. The gospel, revealed and recorded chiefly by Jews, is recorded not in provincial dialect, but in the language of the Roman world. We have here a guarantee as to their meaning, whose overpowering force upon the present question will show a little farther on. Paul, and Luke, and John, and Peter, use a language which they had no hand in forming or moulding, but which was already provided for them to be the vehicle of their thoughts. They made no claim to alter the world's tongue, but to alter the world through the medium of that tongue which the world used and understood when they were children, learning the meaning of its words from the elders. The ordinary Greek Lexicon, not Lexicons of the New Testament colored and tainted by theological opinion, is the true guide to the Greek of the New Testament. It is only where an idea new to the human mind is brought before it that we have a right to look for a new or modified phrase, whose sense is to be stamped upon it by the teachers of the novel truth. Neither a future life, however, nor judgment and punishment to come, were ideas new to man. Heathen poetry and prose perpetually discussed them before the preaching of the gospel.

We will first draw attention to the fact that the punishment of the wicked is just as frequently described as their death in the New Testament as in the Old, without the smallest effort to show that its terms "death," or "to die," have any new sense placed upon them. These words, as all other words on this question, are used without any explanation, as words whose sense was long established. Thus our Lord, speaking of himself, says, "This is the bread which came down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die." And again he says, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." (John 6: 50; 11: 26.) In these passages he implies that they who do not believe in him shall die. What our Lord implies of the ungodly, Paul affirms of them, "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die." (Rom. 8: 13.) Very frequent are the passages in which the expression "death" is used for future punishment. Thus our Lord says, "If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Paul affirms of wicked works that their "end is death;" that "the wages of sin is death;" of those who perish he says that to such "we are the savour of death unto death." James declares that "Sin when finished bringeth forth death;" and "He which converteth a sinner shall save a soul from death." John declares that the ungodly shall suffer "the second death." We have thus, in repeated places, death described as the lot of the wicked in the world to come.

As we proceed in our examination of the New Testament, we will only find ourselves confirmed in our view. To the second death we have given the usual meaning of the loss of life hereafter, as death now means the loss of life here. We will proceed to show that such is the meaning which the New Testament itself imposes on the term. Its uniform testimony is that "eternal life" hereafter will be the exclusive possession of the just, and that the wicked will certainly not obtain it; "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." Our simple inquiry is, What is the primary sense of that Greek word zoe, translated "life" in the New Testament? It was one of the commonest words in use among Jews and Gentiles. We have only, therefore, to open our classical dictionaries, and there we find its primary and universally accepted sense to be "existence." "What is your life?" saith the apostle James. "It is even," he replies, "a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." Such was the primary sense of the word "life," among Christians and heathens, among savage and civilized people. Among the ruder and barbarous nations it was the only sense they put upon the term.

There is another Greek word, psyche, constantly translated "life" in the New Testament. In passages where this word can only mean animal life, such as we share with the lower creation, this life, it is expressly declared, shall be lost hereafter by the ungodly. In Mat. 10: 39, our Lord declares, "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it." What is this life which the fearful and unbelieving prolonged by their denial of Christ, and which martyrs lost by their confession of Christ? It is, and can be nothing but animal existence. It is the life which the good and the bad have in common. It is that which both alike value and would prolong, but which one are content to lose, and do lose, for Christ, and which the other will not lose for his sake. That which these latter here prolonged for a little while the Lord of Life tells them they shall lose in the future retribution—i. e. they shall cease to exist. Christ's words here can have no second meaning. And this is agreeable to all Scripture. Immortality is nowhere spoken of as the possession of fallen man, but is described as a blessing to be sought by him as much as the "glory and honor" of the future state. (Rom. 2: 7; 6: 23.)

And here we will refer for a moment to a passage in the history of Moses, which strongly confirms our view. Moses intercedes with God that Israel may be forgiven, and asks that if his prayer be not granted he may be blotted out of the book which God had written. (Ex. 32: 32, 33.) This book can be no other than the "Book of Life" frequently referred to in Scripture, in which the names of the redeemed are written. What, then, did Moses mean by his receiving the doom of sinners, and being blotted out of the Book of Life? We cannot for a moment suppose that he wished throughout eternity for a life of pain and moral corruption! He could only have wished for the utter cessation of a life which he then felt would be intolerable if his prayer were refused. Since this must be his meaning, it follows that what he asked for himself shall be the condition of the ungodly, for God declared upon this occasion that what Moses sought for himself he will inflict on them—"Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book."

We now proceed to consider other expressions significant of future punishment. Of these none are so common as the Greek verb and noun translated by the words, "destroy," "perish," "destruction." None are more significant of the utter loss of existence! "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction," saith Christ; and Paul speaks of the ungodly as "vessels of wrath fitted for destruction." Our Lord tells us to "fear him who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell;" and Paul affirms that "they who have sinned without law shall shall perish without law," that he is "a savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish."

If we go to the Greek dictionary we will find that the terms used in these passages signify primarily the destruction and loss of life. And if the English reader will open his English dictionary, he will find that such is their primary meaning in the English language. For the present we confine our attention to their use in the New Testament. Mat. 7: 13 runs thus: "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction," and the next verse adds, "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life;" destruction is used as the opposite to life. Mat. 10: 28 runs thus: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both both body and soul in hell." Here destroy is used as the equivalent of kill; that which man is able to do to our bodies, but which he cannot do to our souls—viz., kill them, that God is able to do in hell both to body and soul. The same connection of destruction with loss of life is seen in 2 Cor. 2: 15, 16: "We are a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish." To the one we are the savor of death unto death. From acts 25: 16 we find that the usual sense of the word apoleia, commonly translated destruction, was death, or the loss of physical existence. Festus, who here spoke of "delivering a man to die," or to destruction, did not believe in any future life. These passages show us that the New Testament, when it speaks of the "destruction of the wicked, means by it their loss of life.

In exact agreement with the foregoing are the other expressions used in the New Testament. Thus Paul adopts the teaching of the Old Testament as truly descriptive of the end of sinners, and sums it up in these words, "Behold, ye despisers, and wonder and perish." (Acts 13: 41.) The Greek word here translated perish, means properly to become unseen, to disappear and be heard of no more. The whole process is explained in these pithy words: unbelievers will rise from their graves and see what they have rejected, will marvel at their folly, will vanish out of existence. (To be continued.)

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

CLARK BRADEN'S TENTH LETTER.

We will now briefly review what our opponent has said in his ninth letter. We repeat our remark that analuo means "leave" a place, and unless the context determines that the leaving is for the purpose of returning, the idea of return is not in it. In Timothy the apostle uses it simply in the sense of leaving this world, or departure. So in Philippians he uses it in the sense of leaving this world and being with Christ. It is sheer nonsense to attempt to pervert it into a return at the resurrection thousands of years hence. It would be an insult to common sense to pursue the thought farther.

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus teaches immediate conscious retribution after death. This is its great lesson. The imagery describing the retribution, from the nature of the case, cannot be literally interpreted. We cannot interpret literally the descriptions of future happiness, or the imagery by which it is set forth. But the future life is real, nevertheless. So is the punishment of the wicked, and the consciousness of the wicked and good immediately after death. In the same way he sets to one side the parable, I can destroy all future existence, and even the existence of God.

I know of no weaker attempt to evade an argument than this attempt to set aside the great truths or teachings of symbolic language, because we cannot literalize the figures employed. It is even blasphemous, for it leaves us neither God nor heaven, nor any religious idea, if rigidly carried out. Peter does say that the angels who sinned were cast into Tartarus. This is Bible, and not heathen fable. Jude says the same thing, and adds, "so also the cities, or their inhabitants, who gave themselves over to fornication, are set forth as an example, suffering the vengeance of an eternal fire." Then the wicked inhabitants of these cities suffer with the angels who sinned.

The translation I give of 2 Pet. 2:9 is not doubtful, nor is the passage a doubtful one. The translation is demanded by the plainest principles of the Greek language. His reiteration of his perversion of my illustrations of Ex. 3, have descended beneath notice. They can only be excused on the ground of inability to distinguish between two, entirely distinct ideas—the existence of a relation between parties, and the existence of the parties. One implies the other, but the ideas are not identical. The truth that the relation could not exist, unless the parties both existed, will stand forever.

If my opponent gives "breath" as the meaning of pneuma, in a passage, he need not complain because I show it nonsensical and absurd. The language of our Savior to the thief is abandoned finally with a few words, "To-day I say unto you amen. You shall be with me thousands of years hence in, my kingdom." Such is his rendering, when Paradise never means Christ's kingdom. We give it, "Verily I say unto you, you shall be with me to-day in Paradise," the abode of the spirits of the good. Such was the meaning of Paradise.

His attempted reply to 1 Pet. 3:18, et sequens, is merely a cavil at what he assumes to be the consequences of the interpretation. He dare not grapple with the passage, and by an exegesis show that it is wrongly interpreted. Until he does that I need not notice his cavils. The word rendered "quickened or made alive," often merely means alive or quick, or living. Christ's spirit was alive, and in his spirit he preached to spirits in confinement, and not to men on earth. The declaration of Paul that he was a Pharisee is weakly talked over. Luke enumerates the existence of human spirits as one of the features of Pharisaism. The Pharisees mention Paul's claim that Jesus, whom the Pharisees believed to be a spirit, had spoken to him. With these ideas in the council, and with the enumeration of these ideas by the writer of the account, as the tenets of the Pharisees, before us; how can we avoid the conclusion that Paul was a Pharisee, as he was a Roman citizen. He avowed these ideas, and avowed he was a Pharisee.

So also the continual use of the phrases, ideas and terms of the Pharisees by our Savior and his apostles, shows that they were Pharisees in believing these terms, ideas and phrases, that they used without explanation or condemnation. From this there can be no escape. My opponent can only call these phrases and terms and ideas a bad name. They are Pharisaisms. They are tradition. Did not Christ and his apostles use them as though they were true? They clearly taught that they were true. The scores of New Testament passages we have quoted show that they taught the truth of the ideas represented by these terms and phrases. We have thus explained their use by our Savior and his apostles, by their language elsewhere.

We are now glad to call the attention of the reader, who has followed us through the protracted discussion of this proposition, to a summary of our series of arguments. Circumstances have changed the order and length of the discussion, but as this proposition is the most important one of the questions we are to discuss, the reader has lost nothing by it. In our first two articles we had much preliminary work to do. We had to define our terms, explain our proposition, and lay down and establish certain rules of interpretation, fundamental to the whole discussion. Hence we advanced but little in way of argument. This and the greater length of the articles of my opponent, gave him a seeming advantage at first. Whether we have retrieved our side of the discussion or not, our readers must decide.

We began with a definition of man. The Scriptures describe him as a being composed of body, soul and spirit. These are mentioned in such a way as to show that they are different and distinct entities, although united in one personality called the man. Soul and spirit are not phenomena of the body like seeing or smelling. Nor are they functions of the body like the senses. Thought and volition are phenomena of the spirit in man. The body is the material organism in which the soul and spirit reside. Soul is the entity in man that exercises the emotions and passions man has in common with the brutes. It is often used interchangeably with spirit. The expressions soul-like man and spirit like man show its complete or final New Testament meaning.

Spirit is the rational, conscious, thinking, moral, responsible entity in man, that wears the image of God, that is begotten of the Spirit, and that man possesses in common with higher intelligences. In man it resides in a material organism. It is united with soul in a material organism, and with soul and that organism constitutes our personality. The following orders of spirits are mentioned in the Scriptures. (1) God, who is infinite, absolute Spirit. (2) The Logos or Divine Spirit who became incarnate as Jesus of Nazareth. (3) The Holy Spirit or the Divine Spirit, who was the medium of revelation and inspiration. (4) Angels, both good and bad. They are rational, thinking, willing, conscious, moral, responsible beings or entities or persons, lower in scale of being than the Divine Spirits mentioned above, but higher in the scale of being than the spirit of man. They are similar in nature to these spirits, and possess the same attributes. There are those who kept not their first estate, and those who have not sinned. The wicked angels have been cast down to Tartarus, and are reserved under chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day. The good are the messengers of God.

(5) There is a spirit in man like these different orders of spirits in nature, but lower in rank. God is defined as spirit. So is the Logos. So is the Holy Spirit. Angels are said to be spirits. So man has a spirit, and his spirit is spoken of just as these spirits are described. All these orders of spirits are described as possessing the same characteristics and attributes. They are alike rational, conscious, thinking, willing, moral, responsible being or persons. The same acts are attributed to man's spirit as to higher orders of spirits. His spirit or the spirits of the just are enumerated in several mentions of angels and spirits. The spirits of just men and angels make the general assembly of the first born. The spirits of men in heaven and the saints on earth make the family that wears the name of the Christ. The spirits of the just and the angels constitute the glorious assemblies John saw praising God. Consciousness testifies that the knowing mind is distinct from the human body in which it resides, which it knows and uses. The Scriptures recognize this distinction, and all their teachings are based on it. Spirits of men are divided into spirits in the body, and the spirits who have departed from the body. Again they are divided in each case into good and bad.

As preparatory to our work we called the attention of our readers to the well-known fact that man began his career as a race in a state of childish innocence, ignorance and simplicity. Was a full developed man in power, and physically, mentally and morally more vigorous and acute than he has been since the degrading influences of sin have corrupted him, and morally pure, but in acquired knowledge he was in a state of childish ignorance and simplicity. Language has been a development and growth. So has every department of knowledge. So has revelation and all the great ideas of revelation, and every department of knowledge.

There have been Antediluvian, Patriarchal, Mosaic, and Christian dispensations. The Antediluvian dispensation was the infancy of the race, the Patriarchal was the childhood, the Mosaic was the youth, and Christianity is the manhood of our race, in a religious point of view. Revelation had to be and was accommodated to these ages of our race. Man had infantile, childish, youthful and manlike instruction. Each great idea of revelation was gradually unfolded. This is true of the ideas of redemption, atonement, pardon, man's nature, immortality, and future retribution, and indeed all religious ideas and duties. There was first the germ or elementary idea, and this was unfolded, developed, and added to as man was ready to grasp it, until it was perfected in the gospel of Christ.

Man began with mere materialistic ideas and knowledge, and revelation was adapted to his capacity in its ideas and terms. When he was educated to receive higher conceptions, new words had to be coined, or new and higher meanings given to the words in use. The latter course was pursued, especially in words expressing moral, religious or spiritual ideas. Hence soul and spirit in nearly all languages have a variety of meanings. Soul means, air, wind, breath, life, disposition, tendency of mind, mind, principle of animal life, and finally a rational, conscious entity. It is often used interchangeably with mind and spirit. In its final New Testament sense, when contrasted with spirit, it means that part of man that exercises the passions and emotions man has in common with the brutes. In this sense brutes have souls, but not spirits. So likewise spirit means air, wind, breath, life, disposition, tendency of mind, mind, and finally a rational, conscious, thinking, willing, moral entity, or being or person. In the last sense it is applied to God, angels and man's spirit. It is used interchangeably with soul, and in such use is applied to the animal soul sometimes.

Hence we have these rules of interpretation or exegesis. (1) We must bear in mind these various meanings of words, and the growth of language. We must not attempt to confine words in all cases to their root ideas. We cannot do so without making nonsense of every sentence in every language in existence. (2) We must remember that words are used in different senses, in different departments of knowledge. Spirit has one meaning in chemistry, another in ethics, and another in pneumatology. (4) Even in the same department of knowledge, words are used in different senses and with different meanings. The context has to determine the meaning the word has in each sentence. (5) We must not forget the figurative uses of words. We must not confound synecdoche and metonomy with the literal use of words.

Then we must not expect to find the full teaching of revelation in the alphabet of revelation, or the first books of the Bible. The teaching then is carried as far as revelation went but not complete. It is elementary and imperfect. We must not mistake man's erroneous ideas for the teaching of revelation. Their ideas may be erroneous, and may not be corrected, because man was not ready to comprehend the connection, and the true idea. The erroneous ideas of inspired men are not inspiration. We must correct and complete the ideas of the Old Testament by the full teaching of the New Testament. There is no infidelity or disrespect for the Bible in this, but merely common sense.

We must determine by the context the meaning of each word in question. We must not attempt to set aside one set of passages in which words have clearly but one meaning, by means of another set of passages where they have as clearly an entirely different meaning. We must not attempt to destroy passages where spirit clearly means a rational, conscious entity or being, by means of passages where it as clearly means by synecdoche the whole person, or by metonomy life, breath, or disposition of mind or spirit. Nor must we undertake to set aside the idea that the spirit is an entity that wills, thinks, reasons and desires, by referring to passages where, by metonomy, the thoughts, heart, bowels and reins are said to reason, will and think. Such a course is contemptible pettifoggery. In short, we must use common sense and honesty in interpreting the Bible. Again, when we take a position we ought to accept and avow all the logical consequences of that position.

If our position makes man merely a highly organized brute, let us be honest enough to say so. If it extinguishes the conscious existence of the Divine Logos for three days, let us as honest men avow it. Such a course we have unvaryingly pursued. Our chain of argument has embraced the following links of reasoning. (1) There is a spirit in man. (2) This spirit is an entity or existence different and distinct from the body. (3) This spirit is a rational, conscious, thinking, willing, moral, responsible entity or being. (4) While in the body, it acts distinct from and even in opposition to the body and soul. (5) It leaves the body at death and returns to God. (6) It leaves the body and returns to God a rational, conscious, thinking, willing, moral entity or being. (7) It is conscious between death and resurrection. (8) It is eternally conscious and exists as a conscious, rational entity or being forever. The reader will observe that our proposition involves several steps of reasoning, and is a complex question. He will see also the absurdity of the demand of my opponent, that I produce one Scriptural phrase or sentence that affirms or involves all of the above ideas. I might as justly call for one sentence or phrase that affirms or involves the whole idea of the atonement. We sufficiently exposed the sophistry of that favorite juggle of our opponent, by demanding one phrase or sentence that affirmed or involved his affirmation. I hope we shall not have that stale trick in his last rejoinder.

To sustain our first step we quoted the declaration in Jeremiah that God formed the spirit of man within him; Job's declaration that there is a spirit in man; Daniel's declaration that his spirit was grieved in his body; Luke's declaration that Paul's spirit was excited in him; Paul's declaration that the spirit in man knows what are the thoughts and acts of the man, and finally his declaration that man is composed of body, soul, and spirit. Hence there is a spirit in man, and the body, soul and spirit are different and distinct entities.

To prove our position that the spirit that is in man is a rational, thinking, willing, conscious entity or being, we cited several Scriptures. The spirit of man that is in him knows what is in him. The spirits of the disciples were willing, but the flesh was weak. The spirits of the Israelites were willing. The spirit of Daniel grieved. Paul's was excited. Hence the spirit is an entity or being that knows. Also as God, the Logos, the Holy Spirit, and angels are rational, thinking, conscious entities or beings, so the spirit that is in man, and like them in nature, and has the same powers and attributes, is a rational, conscious entity or being.

To prove that the spirit that is in man, and is a rational conscious entity, acts while in the body distinct from and even in opposition to the body, we referred also to the declaration of Daniel that his spirit in him was grieved. Paul's spirit was excited, and the spirit of man knows the things of man; our Savior declares that the spirits of his disciples were willing, but the flesh or body was weak. Paul declares that the spirit wars against the flesh, and the flesh against the spirit, and these are contrary one to the other. Job declares that his spirit within him constrains him. These passages show clearly that the spirit is an entity distinct from the body, that it acts distinct from and in opposition to the body. Consciousness also testifies that the knowing spirit is different and distinct from the human body in which it resides, and which it uses.

If the attempt be made to evade the force of these passages by saying that spirit in them means mind, the attempt only shifts the difficulty. What is the mind, then? Is it an attribute, power, faculty or function, or is it an entity or being? If an entity, our position is conceded. If an attribute, or power or function, then comes the question—a power or function of what? Our opponent dare not say of the body. Then consciousness says it must be a function of the spirit. Then the spirit is an entity distinct from the body, and these powers of willing, reasoning, thinking and desiring belong to and inhere in the spirit as an entity or being. To prove that the spirit leaves the body at death, we cited the declaration in Eccl. that the spirit returns to God who gave it. Also our Savior's and Stephen's language, when dying. There is an entity called spirit then that leaves the body at death. Then death is a separation of these entities, and a departure of the spirit to God who gave it. To prove that it leaves the body a rational, thinking, willing, conscious entity or being, we quoted our Savior's declaration to the disciples—that death cannot kill spirit. God alone can do that. He does not, for he punishes after death. He does not destroy the spirit at death, but after the general judgment, and then the destruction inflicted is not extinction of conscious being, but casting the conscious spirit, now rehabilitated with its body, into gehenna.

As the spirit is a rational, thinking, willing, conscious entity or being in the body, as it acts and reasons, wills, desires thinks, and is excited while in the body, distinct from and even in opposition to the body, so it leaves the body a conscious, rational entity, and exists as such apart from the body. As higher orders of intelligences are rational, thinking, conscious entities apart from and without human bodies, so the human spirit, when it leaves the body, because it is like them, is a rational, conscious entity, and exists as such a part from the body. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, David, Menasseh and Omri died, were buried, and went to their fathers. Death and burial are before going to their fathers, distinct and separate from it. In several cases these bodies were buried with their fathers. Hence sheol cannot mean grave. It was not their bodies that went to their fathers. The language can only mean that they died, their bodies were buried, and their spirits went to the spirits of their fathers. In Eccl. we are told the spirit returns to God who gave it. Our Savior commended his spirit to his Father. Stephen commended his spirit to Christ. Now if we regard the spirit in all these cases as a rational, conscious being, the Scriptures express a sublime truth. If it means breath, or disposition or life, they are the most puerile nonsense, in the most solemn moment of life, and concerning the most awful and momentous part of human experience. I challenge my opponent to give any meaning but that of a rational, conscious entity to spirit in these passages, that will not be an insult to our common sense. Breath or disposition returns to God who gave it! Receive my breath or disposition! Utter nonsense!!

Paul in his Roman letter speaks of his body as the outer man, and his spirit as the inner man. So he does in his Second Corinthian letter. He speaks of living in the body as an absence from the Lord, and of absence from the body as a presence with the Lord. He calls his body his outer man, his tent, tabernacle, house, the clothing of his spirit. His spirit is the inhabitant of this house—the man in it—the wearer of this clothing. In his Philippian letter he speaks of death as a departure. So he does in his second letter to Timothy. He speaks of life as an absence from the Lord, and of death as an immediate presence with the Lord. So Peter calls death a departure, a putting off his tabernacle or tent. By synecdoche the rational, conscious spirit is regarded as the I, the real man. These Scriptures can have but one meaning—the one common sense in all ages as given to them. The spirit as a rational, conscious, thinking entity or being resides in the body, and at death leaves the body a rational, conscious entity, and as such is with Christ immediately after death.

To prove that the spirit is conscious between death and resurrection, we cited what we have already established, and then cited necromancy as consulting the spirits of the dead. This was as real as consulting demons or devils that was condemned with it. One is as real as the other. Paul in Ephesians mentions the family in heaven and earth, which wears the name of Christ. As only men or their spirits wear his name, the part of the family that is in heaven and wear the name of Christ, is the spirits of the just made perfect then. In his Philippian letter he says the knees of all men in heaven, earth and hades must bow to Christ. Those in heaven and hades must be the spirits of departed. In his Hebrew letter he tells us that the spirits of just men made perfect or redeemed from hades, are a part of the general assembly of the first born in heaven.

John, in five instances, saw in prophetic vision the spirits of the just in heaven, in the presence of God. They were conscious then. This was before the judgment in the order of events in the vision.

In Ex. 3, and Lk. 20, we have a conclusive proof of the consciousness of the spirits of the departed. God declares an existing relation, a present relation between himself and the patriarchs. "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." In Gen. 28 God declares, 'I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac.' The relation could only exist when both parties existed, hence both parties existed when the language was used. God was the God of the dead Abraham in the same sense that he was the God of the living Isaac; hence Abraham had as real, and the same conscious existence that the living Isaac had. Our Savior's appeal to this language settles this question. "God is not the God of the dead [such dead as you Sadducees make the dead], but the God of the living [consciously existing], for all [all the dead] live [or consciously exist] unto him." In this language we have an eternal condemnation of soul-sleeping, uttered by the Son of God himself. The appearance of the spirit of Moses to our Savior and his apostles on the Mount shows conclusively the consciousness of the spirits of the departed.

We need not review the weak attempt to set aside these passages. The parable of the rich man and Lazarus shows clearly conscious retribution immediately after death. This is the lesson of the parable. The idea pervades the whole parable. Unite with this parable the declaration of Peter, that God cast down to Tartarus the angels who sinned—Jude's declaration that they are reserved in punishment unto the day of judgment, and that the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah are with them—and Peter's declaration that the unjust are reserved under punishment unto the day of judgment, for such is the meaning of the language—"reserve the being punished unjust unto the day of judgment," and we have the consciousness of both just and unjust clearly taught. There can be no evading these Scriptures.

Then the ideas clustering around the death of Christ clearly teach the consciousness of the spirits of the dead. He told the thief that on that day their spirits would be in the abode of spirits. Peter declared his spirit was not left in hades, nor did his flesh see corruption in the grave. Peter tells farther that the spirit of Christ went and preached to the spirits confined in hades. Paul tells us he came forth from thence a conqueror, and redeemed the spirits of the righteous, and made them perfect, and these perfected spirits are now in heaven, awaiting the redemption of their bodies. All this proves the consciousness of the human spirit after death.

Finally, the fact that our Savior and his apostles used, taught, avowed, and defended the phrases and ideas of the Pharisees, and especially the central idea of the Pharisaic teaching concerning the future state—the consciousness of the dead, proves beyond cavil its truth. Paul, with this idea before him, declared he was a Pharisee. He was a Pharisee in those very beliefs, as the inspired writer shows by his enumeration of these ideas in connection with Paul's avowal that he was a Pharisee. Thus step by step have we showed (1) That there is a spirit in man. (2) That it is an entity. (3) That it is distinct from the body, and acts distinct and even in opposition to the body. (4) That it is a rational, conscious entity. (5) It departs from the body in death. (6) It departs a rational, conscious entity. (7) It exists a rational, conscious entity between death and resurrection. (8) It exists as a rational, conscious entity forever.

Two Proof-Texts for Immersion.

It was remarked in the hearing of ‹ writer that, from our version of the ble, immersion is an inference only. ‹e purpose of this article is to notice ‹o texts, from which only extreme in‹nuity can infer anything but immer‹n to be baptism. (1 Cor. 10:1, 2.) ‹would not that ye should be igno‹t how that all our fathers were un‹r the cloud, and all passed through ‹ sea, and were all baptised unto ‹ses in the cloud and in the sea."

Refusers of immersion have argued ‹t, as the Israelites were not person‹y under the waves, they were not im‹rsed; and some have endeavored, by ‹seemly levity, to escape from a con‹sion which logic can not evade. Oth‹, contending that there was no dip‹g, exult over Baptists, erroneously ‹posing that Baptists rely on the ‹rd "dipping" as a synonym for the ‹rd "baptism."

‹t is only necessary to notice, First, ‹at in this text no support is given ‹he notion that baptism is any indif‹ent form of application of water; for ‹e water is not applied, but withheld. ‹econdly. Though this does not ap‹r in our translation, Paul's language ‹forms to the fact that there was no ‹ministrator of baptism, and that ‹re was a kind of dipping; for he ‹s the middle voice, which should be ‹dered "They immersed themselves." ‹hirdly. If any language can be made ‹ay so, Paul's affirmation is, that the ‹ers were under the cloud and passed ‹ugh the sea, and that this is the es‹ce of a baptism. Of course he does ‹ say that this is Christian baptism, ‹ it is just what he calls it, the im‹sion of a host in a cloud and sea.

‹he second text is, 1 Pet. 3:18 to ‹"For Christ also hath once suffer‹ for sins, the just for the unjust, ‹ he might bring us to God, being ‹ to death in the flesh, but quick‹d by the Spirit; by which also he ‹t and preached unto the spirits in ‹on, which sometimes were disobe‹t, when once the long-suffering of ‹ waited in the days of Noah, while ‹ ark was a preparing, wherein few, ‹ is, eight souls, where saved by wa‹ The like figure whereunto, even ‹tism, doth also now save us (not ‹ putting away of the filth of the flesh, ‹ the answer of a good conscience ‹ard God), by the resurrection of Je‹ Christ, who is gone into heaven, ‹ is on the right hand of God."

‹f this passage it may be said that ‹s one of the hardest to understand ‹ translate in the Greek, and one of ‹ worst translated in our version, but ‹ these difficulties need not obscure ‹eaching about baptism. At least ‹ the following peculiarities of trans‹on need be noticed:

‹eter does not say "by water," but ‹ugh water, and he does not say: ‹e like figure whereunto, even bap‹, doth also now save us," but he ‹," Which also us antitype now ‹s baptism. "In this sentence, ‹ch' is a neuter relative pronoun, ‹ may agree and belong with the neu‹nouns, 'antitype' and 'baptism,' or ‹ay be used substantively and refer ‹he whole fact mentioned in the pre‹ng verse, i. e., the salvation of some ‹ugh the water by the ark, or it ‹ refer to the neuter noun 'water' ‹at verse. The word antitype may ‹sed adverbially, or it may be the ‹ect of the verb 'saves,' the object ‹ng 'us,' or it may be the object of ‹ verb "saves," the subject being ‹ch.'"

‹he sentence may then be rendered ‹er, Which (water, or salvation by ‹ark, or salvation in Christ), in a ‹, baptism, now saves us; or, ‹ich also, as respects us, now pre‹es a type, baptism; or, Which fig‹ baptism, now preserves also for

‹ v. 21, if Peter does not say ‹ baptism is not symbolical of wash‹ he at least says that he is not ‹king of it as being so. The words, ‹swer of a good conscience toward ‹d," have no warrant, the words of ‹er signifying, "The inquiry of a ‹d understanding unto God."

‹ut whichever of these renderings ‹ccepted, Peter's meaning is clearly ‹: Christ, by his death and resurrec‹, carries souls to God and heaven. ‹re is an analogy between this and ‹ warning to the antediluvians, fol‹ed by the subsequent saving of ‹t persons in the ark, which rose ‹n the plain, as it were, through the ‹er.

‹hese being typically alike, or agree‹ in common principle, are again like ‹tism in figure, or principle, which ‹ form a passage through water as ‹ugh a grave to life, and in symbo‹ is figurative of Christ's death and ‹rrection, and of the believer's union ‹h him.—Journal and Messenger.

Chinese Religion.

"China is not outdone by enlightened Europe in the number of its religions. Looking at the subject historically, we find that there was a State religion before Confucius, in which frequent reference is made to Shanter, the Supreme Ruler. In the earlier ages, they seem to have had some idea of God, but not a very true one. This religion antedates Confucianism, Buddhism and Taurism, which are, comparatively speaking, modern religions. Confucius, in his system, which is not, properly speaking, a system, substituted 'Heaven' for 'Shanter.' Montins, many years after, substituted 'Fate' for Shanter. Shanter is the Supreme Disposer of events, and so we find frequent reference made to 'Decrees of Heaven,' 'Calamities of Heaven.' Heaven and Earth are said to be the parents of all creatures.

"Early Chinese Theology, according to some writers, consisted in a belief in

"1. The homogeneousness of matter in all things.

"2. The soul surviving the body.

"3. Existence of spir ts.

"4. One supreme Ruler.

"Kings reign through 'Shanter,' all order is his law and will. Those who obey him are blessed. Those who disobey him are cursed. Kings should be examples of righteousness; if in this fail they should be punished. Confucius had no religious system; his system like his writings for the most part is the product of his followers. If he was to arise from his grave he would be greatly astonished at what was now taught in his name. He did not like to talk of some things, and among them was spiritual existence. His great quest was knowledge. He taught the golden rule, 'what you no wish' no do to man.' They teach that woman should obey man. She is to obey first, her father, second, her husband, third, her son. She should cook, and make clothes; and should not seek to be known beyond her own apartments, either for good or evil.

"In China there are 1500 temples erected to Confucius, and 60,000 animals sacrifice every year to him. The temple in Peki cost $50,000 in silver. You can imagine what that means, when mechanics are paid from ten to twenty cents per day, and material in proportion. Confucius is said to not have hesitated at deception or falsehood. He would instruct his servants to say "not at home," when he was. Taurism is one of the modern religions of China. 'Taur,' the founder, was a contemporary with Confucius. He was called the 'Old Boy,' because he was eighty years old when he was born. He was a gruff ascetic, and did not agree with Confucius in his views of helping men.

"Buddhism is the third modern religion. It is almost a perfect imitation of Catholicism. The priest has his head shaved, wears a gown and girdle, and goes barfoot; he wears a rosary, and has a form of ave maria or pater noster, which he goes through, not as a penance, but as a means of attaining perfection. The more he says it, the more perfect he is. The religion of the common people is a 'melange' of all the rest. The majority of them think that man has three souls—one stays at his home, one goes to the grave, and one aven or hell. They imagine everything to be filled with demons, and prayer is a deprecation of the evil that they might do.

"The Chinese need to be physically improved. His religion is apathetic. The best way to plant religion in China is to do it with as little disturbance as possible of existing institutions. The Chinese that emigrate can not be taken as the sample of the people—they are adventurers, speculators. Christian efforts among them will not evangelize China. You must work in and through the family.—Dr. E. Wentworth.

No Universal Peace.

The absurdity of the cry of Peace! Peace! whether uttered by politicians or religionists sometimes makes itself so evident as to command a passing comment from the press. The Journal of this city in referring to the last meeting of the Peace Society says:

To our mind there can be nothing more touching than the confidence with which the amiable ladies and gentlemen of this society continue to look forward to the day when the evangel of brotherly love shall convert humanity to the dogma of "international tribunals," and when our swords shall be turned into plowshares. But we fear greatly that some monster comet, like the one with which the Swiss Times lately frightened a superstitious generation, will sooner blot out this earth than that war and bloodshed should disappear from among us. The philosophers, from Lucretius down to Hobbes, boldly maintained hostility toward his species to be man's natural state, and all experience tends to corroborate this unpleasant view. The assertion that civilization will tame the savage instinct in man, is a fallacy. On the contrary, civilization develops this instinct, and makes slaughter one of the fine arts. Wars have become more fierce and destructive in an exact ratio with man's so-called progress and culture. Physical strength was at first our sole reliance. Man's arm was his buckler, his fist his mace, and a broken skull the greatest catastrophe. Then came stones and clubs, which made fighting more dangerous. The next step was the helmet and the cuirass; the buckler, the sword, the dart, and the javelin. After that we had gunpowder "dug up from the bowels of the earth;" the rude firelock, the arquebuse, the old Queen Bess, the rifle, Colt's revolvers, seven-barreled Sharp's, and Gattlin guns, which slay at previously unknown distances. In the face of these facts, we repeat, it requires no ordinary faith still to anticipate the idyllic period when peace and good will shall reign on this planet, and might no longer triumph over right, strength over weakness. Much as we may, therefore, admire the noble object of the American Peace Society, we have no confidence in its achieving any practical results.

Ocular Demonstration.

Dr. Fowler, Bishop of Gloucester, in the early part of the eighteenth century, was a believer in apparitions. The following conversation of the Bishop with Judge Powell is recorded:—

"Since I saw you," said the lawyer, "I have had ocular demonstration of the existence of nocturnal apparitions."

"I am glad you are become a convert to truth; but do you say actual ocular demonstration? Let me know the particulars of the story."

My Lord, I will It was, let me see, last Thursday night, between the hours of eleven and twelve, but nearer the latter than the former, as I lay sleeping in my bed, I was suddenly awakend by an uncommon noise, and heard something coming up stairs and stalking directly towards my room; the door flying open, I drew back my curtain, and saw a faint glimmering light enter my chamber."

"Of a blue color, no doubt?"

"The light was of a pale blue, my Lord, and followed by a tall meagre personage, his locks hoary with age, and clothed in a long loose gown; a leathern girdle was about his loins, his beard thick and grizzly, a large fur cap on his head, and a long staff in his hand. Struck with astonishment, I remained for some time motionless and silent; the figure advanced, staring me full in the face: I then said, 'Whence, and what art thou.'"

"What was the answer—tell me—what was the answer? "The following was the answer I received:—'I am watchman of the night, an't please your honor, and made bold to come upstairs to inform the family of their street-door being open, and that if it was not soon shut they would probably be robbed before morning!'"

What do they Celebrate ?

In the last issue of the Universalist we find a very readable article on the Lord's Supper. We read it eagerly, and indorse nealy all of it; yet we could not help asking, "What do they celebrate?" They speak of the death of Christ as the "filling up of a life of self-sacrifice;" but do they see in that death an expiatory sacrifice for sins—an offering to Divine justice, by which the way is made possible for penitent believers to escape the deserved wrath of God? Do they see in it the price, as well as the proof, of an "eternal redemption," without which eternal death had been the portion of sinners? Do they, in a word, see in it any such substitutional sacrifice as was typified by the paschal lamb of the Passover? We apprehend not; but when they reduce the death of Christ to martyrdom, taking from it the elements of a real atonement, and placing it in a class with the death of other martyrs whose death was the culmination of a life of self-sacrifice, the question recurs with redoubled force, "What do they celebrate?" And then we remember that the primitive Church believed that this ordinance was to be celebrated till Christ should come again. It looks forward as well as backward, and thus we receive it looking for his second coming—showing forth his death "till he come." But Universalists teach that his second coming is past, that it occurred when Jerusalem was destroyed; then, why do they celebrate a sacrifice which was not substitutional, and show forth Christ's death, "till he come," after he has come?—Western Christian Advocate.

Three Important Things.

Three things to love—courage, gentleness, and affection. Three things to admire—intellectual power, dignity, and gracefulness. Three things to hate—cruelty, arrogance, and ingratitude. Three things to delight in—beauty, frankness, and freedom. Three things to wish for—health, friends, and a cheerful spirit. Three things to pray for—faith, peace, and purity of heart. Three things to like—cordiality, good-humor, and mirthfulness. Three things to avoid—idleness, loquacity, and flippant jesting. Three things to cultivate—good books, good friends, and good humor. Three things to contend for—honor, country, and friends. Three things to govern—temper, tongue, and conduct. Three things to think about—life, death, and eternity.

An Infallible Cure for Lowness of Spirits.

Take one ounce of spirits of resolution, an equal proportion of the oil of good conscience; infuse into these a table-spoonful of the salts of patience, and add thereto a few sprigs of other's woes, which grow extensively in the garden of life. Gather, also, a handful of the blossoms of hope; sweeten these with the balm of providence, and if possible procure a few drops of genuine friendship, but be careful of counterfeits in the ingredients of self-interest, which grow spontaneously; the least admixture of it with the above would spoil the composition. Reduce the whole to an electuary by a proper proportion of content, flavor with the essence of good judgment, and regulate the quantity according to the virulence of the disease. Having tried the above receipt, we know it to be an infallible cure.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

TRACTS: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Extermination—32 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—46 pp. Restitution—56 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers in to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 472 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 128 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy. by Wm. Sheldon. 211 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting pamphlet [illegible] argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid in the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sold by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL! What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 60c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $1.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 45c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

*ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Con*cordance, with English and Hebrew index. $20 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

*EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; contain*ing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlinear word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlinear translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid

*THE NEW TESTAMENT. Amer*ican Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 18mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 40 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 40 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Goud. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 60.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

*DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Des*truction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; be*ing a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection These articles, which were first published in The Times, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 80 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 30c. every one should have a copy.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, - - - - - - ILLINOIS

Tuesday Afternoon, June 18, 1872.

An inquirer wishes to know if the first word in the phrase, "personal consecration to Christ," should not be spelled purse-and-all. The editor of the Index replies that evidently it should. So we think

Where to work—'Every man over against his own door.' In other words, don't wait for some one to give you work, but take right hold now, 'of whatsoever thy hand findeth to do.' If it is 'a little errand,' do it faithfully and you will receive a greater trust by and by.

Any of our readers who would like to see Thomas Burnett's curious work upon the Destiny of the earth, can obtain a copy by sending 75 cents to P. McGarr, Pittsburg, Penn., 71, Water St.

Burnett lived in the 17th century, and was very much of an Adventist in his views.

A daily paper wonders how many would be left in the church if the Methodists should seriously adopt and enforce the tests of membership proposed by a member of the late General Conference. He proposed abstinence from liquors, tobacco, theater-going, bad temper and, last but not least, evil words. An enforcement of these texts would seriously affect the membership of every church.

Who may administer baptism? is a query proposed to us. We answer usually any recognized minister of the gospel, in good standing. Special cases might call for special action. When a minister cannot be obtained, any person selected by the church may administer the ordinance with perfect propriety. As a rule the administrator should be a regularly appointed minister.

It is stated that some years since it was proposed in Boston by the Natural History Society to have a thoroughly fire-proof building. The venerable Dr. John C. Warren was presiding. When members had presented their views, the doctor put in a closing word. "Of what use is it to attempt the enterprise? All collections have been burnt up, all the precious things of ancient nations have been burned up, and by and by all the world itself will be burned up."

Will not some of those immaterialist writers who derive so much aid and comfort from the psyche illustration—the emergence of the butterfly from the worm, dwell for a while upon the subsequent continuance of the psyche, or rather its duration. Is it an immortal thing of beauty that emerges from the lowly worm? or is it but a perishing thing of dust, like that from which it was transformed? In other words, allowing, for the argument's sake that there is an argument in the analogy, does survival of death at all imply immortality, or endless existence?

Closer union among all professed Christians is certainly a condition of things to be sincerely desired and sought. Some have felt greatly encouraged by certain symptoms of outward union that have been manifested of late. Before taking too much assurance for the future from these facts it would be well to inquire whether these unions are the result of growing love, or the fear of a common enemy. How does it happen that these unions of believers in Christ are all bounded, North, South, East and West by the word Evangelical in its orthodox sense?

Br. Munger says in the Crisis—and his words will apply West:

> Preaching Brethren: We ought to help the Office to spread the light in a different way than this. It costs over two hundred dollars a week in cash to issue the paper. Many good persons do not know this fact. When they do, they will feel as many have expressed by letter, that something ought to be done to stir up the brethren by way of remembrance. Let us all work together to sustain our Advent papers, or we break the main shaft, and the machinery must stop for want of a motive power. Some are doing well, others will soon see it necessary to act, we hope, and pay up, or tell why they do not. All preachers ought to act as agents, by stirring up, and informing about the tardy, poor, etc.

In our scrap box we find the following sensible and sententious paragraph upon one of the fallacies of so-called Christian union:

> Another obstacle to the attainment of Christian union is the attempt to secure it by a compromise or concealment of the views which Christians entertain of divine truth. To an honest, earnest Christian any long continued indifference to his views of the truth of God is impossible; equally so is any protracted concealment of them. He believes them to be the word of the living God. Fidelity to his Christian profession requires him to "Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints." If now he attempts to hide these teachings, as he understands them, from the gaze of his brethren, he has a continual conviction that he is unfaithful to Christ. They become like a "fire shut up in his bones." They clamor for utterance, and they will find it. While therefore a careless, heartless professor finds no difficulty in compromise or concealment, a devout Christian cannot abide it, and in proportion to the depth of his piety, and the stength of his allegiance to Christ will be the brevity of any union built upon such a foundation.

We fail to see any use in building upon an undermined foundation—for instance, after this fashion:

> As additional proof of this theory [the immortality of the soul], the speaker cited the fact that even the most critical intellect finds no reason why man should be created to utterly perish after a short earthly existence. With God and nature, as well as with man, the end must justify the means, and for the reason that he is wise, and suits the end to the means, we must conclude that this existence is only the beginning of life.

—Now won't this astute writer furnish us with some reason why men should live eternally? and more especially why an immense number of them should live forever in wo as unutterable as infinity itself? 'With God and nature as well as with man, the end must justify the means.' No doubt. And is the blissful immortality of even one half or three fourths of the race, a sufficient compensation for the immortal agonies of the millions who are lost? Will this end justify the means? What saint wishes salvation at the price?

Mr. M. Summerbell has preached a sermon on 'Glimmerings of Immortality.' At one point he remarks:

> The transformation of a worm into a butterfly is not more incredible than the existence of the soul after the body is laid aside, death being in fact but a birth into a new world.

—Rather a strong glimmer, that. The passage might do to point a flourish of rhetoric in a verbal discourse, but committed to writing and print, by a Christian minister, it is no credit to his intellect. Look at it!

'Death being in fact but a birth into a new world.'

Death came by sin; so our 'birth into a new world comes by sin.' If man had not sinned, birth into the new world not have passed on him. Are, then, sin, and its consequent, death, but blessings in disguise? It would seem so. But this would be, indeed, 'glimmering light to the Bible student. Death the pledge of deathlessness!!

The Christian Radical, deceased of late, said some useless, some senseless, and some excellent things. Among the last we find in our scrap box the following:

> Every intelligent mind at times has its skeptical thoughts. In the warfare within, they constitute a battery that faith in the Truth alone can silence. As one looks at the selfishness, the fondness for the "uppermost seats in the synagogue," and the want of heart tenderness too often displayed by those who profess to be governed by holy and divine principles, it becomes difficult to separate the chaff from the wheat, and not believe in the entire absence of vitality in truth itself. But to thus wrongly judge, is to discard the only foundation of hope and comfort. No truer question ever escaped the lips of man than that one of old, offered when the battery of unbelief suggested his departure from the living truth: "Unto whom can we go? Thou alone hast the words of eternal life! To depart is to die. To go away from the rock is to lose hold of the only support, and utterly fail of the only victory that brings the rewards of love, joy, and peace. How strange, then, instead of setting to work earnestly in silencing unbelief, men will rather listen to its roar, and be charmed by its smoke, until wounded they fall, perhaps never more to rise.

A Methodist editor, who doubts the propriety of journals devoted entirely to the topic of Sanctification—and he deals some telling blows upon those who make a gain of godliness—says:

> We should hardly be prepared for a school of periodicals to be devoted exclusively to the work of Justification another to the Resurrection, etc.,

—Just here his logic breaks down. Special neglect of any truth justifies the use of extraordinary means to restore that truth to its proper prominence. And we wish some Methodist zealous for the truth—or that the general Conference, would start a periodical devoted to the doctrine of the resurrection. We know of no truth so steadily and thoroughly ignored as this. A revival of this Apostolic doctrine is sorely needed.

A FREE PAPER.

Of late we have been asked several times, whether The Times is "free paper?" So far as our own observation goes this term is used rather loosely. Almost every man esteems that sheet "a free paper" which publishes his articles; nor can he conceive how that can be "a free paper" which declines to give them publicity. This is the doctrine of "Free Paper" in a nut shell.

The Times was established to advocate and, so far as possible, introduce to the public certain principles, commonly known as Adventism. We accepted the position of editor of the sheet because our own principles are such that we can consistently engage in the work for which the sheet was designated. We accepted the place because we understood it to be an Advent paper, not "a free paper"—and we have no idea that any sane man of ability wouldfor a moment, think of accepting the editorial charge of a strictly "free paper."

What is "a free paper?" A paper that will publish anything and everything written by anybody and everybody. Such a sheet must needs be of enormous size, in order to contain the matter offered for its columns. And its contents would match a city sewer for variety, and frequently for quality of contents. Orthodoxy and heterodoxy, materialism and immaterialism, Spiritualism, Infidelity, Nothingarianism, Mormonism, Universalism, Restorationism, and all the other "isms" to the end of the long chapter. For that party in Christendom, or the world, is small or select indeed, which has not one member in whom ability to write well bears no comparison to the desire to appear in print, and who would inequitably take advantage of "a free paper," to get his or her lucubrations before the public.

There is no such thing published as "a free paper;" and it is only prating cant to affirm that there is. In a very proper sense of the term, however, we affirm that The Times is and has been a free paper. Not a free Spiritist journal; not a free Christadelphian sheet; not free for use to lay the foundation or aid in building up Universalism; but a free Advent paper, allowing the largest possible liberty for the expression of opinion consistent with the main object of its publication, which is the extension and wider dissemination of the views with which it is identified. "Well," says one, "that is sectarian." Be it so: but is just as true of every other paper published as of The Times. Every paper is devoted to some purpose, (or it has no excuse for existence.) Its charge is committed to some man or set of men. They may excel in skill and judgment, or be deficient in the talent necessary to the successful conduct of a periodical. But one thing no editor, or editorial committee can do—Please everybody, or publish all the matter they receive. Happy the editor who succeeds in pleasing the most people. He will have the credit of publishing what comes nearest to a free paper!

"AWFUL TEXTS."

THEIR PERVERSION.

The friends of the doctrine of eternal misery sometimes resort to not over-creditable measures in supporting their favorite dogma. They will lay a warp of selected texts whose sense has been perverted by the introduction of the error of natural immortality, and weave in a filling of texts that have no relation to the future punishment, whatever; they will cite figures or symbols, which they know (or ought to) in every connection convey an idea exactly opposite to that they seek to convey. Some time ago we cut from an Advent exchange a brief article of this sort, called Danger Signals. We now purpose to analyze it.

It opens thus: "How many awful texts there are in Scripture! They are like so many great glaring red lamps standing across a railway line when it would not be safe to advance. [This is true.] People think that these texts make God out to be unkind. The opposite is true. God is kind and merciful, but he is not merciful to sin. [It is not the texts but the comments that "make God out to be unkind." Eternal anguish inflicted upon finite beings, "merciful!" What next?] "If we die out of Christ, we must be damned; therefore in love God makes these awful warning texts gleam across our path to stop us in our hell-ward course, that the great day of his wrath come not upon us unawares. [This is true enough, except that the terms used are so generally misunderstood that an idea foreign to the Scriptures is conveyed by the passage.]

"Many shut their eyes, and have been given over to 'strong delusion that they should believe a lie that they all might be damned who believe not the truth.'" [And no error has been more fruitful of strong delusions than the error upon which eternal misery is built—the natural immortality of the soul.]

So much for the introduction; now for the texts.

"How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Judgment or condemnation of gehenna is the sense of the passage, which was simply condemnation to disgraceful death.

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." [Hell here is sheol. There are no references in the original article—a wise provision against investigation.] Jacob is in sheol; David is there. Are they all in orthodox hell-torments?

"Their worm never dies, their fire is never quenched." The reader who cares enough to know the truth to turn to the last of Isaiah will see that this language relates to dead and not living beings.

"I will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh." Only a mind hardened by the hideous doctrine, which we confess we hate, could insert this text in this connection. It is sufficiently monstrous to teach that God will condemn men to endless hopeless torture, of mind, or body or both. Spurgeon's twin-hells" out-do the Inquisition in its most terrible features: but God laughing to see the doors of endless wo close upon his creatures; mocking them as they plunge beneath the waves of an immortal perdition—this is too much! Forbearance is a virtue no longer. The thought is hideously barbarian.

The passage is from the proverbs of Solomon. Wisdom is personified, and the laugh and the mocking are figures of speech whose import is evident to the reader when taken in their connection.

"Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." If Sodom and Jerusalem are still burning, then friends of the ceaseless-wo dogma might find support in the term "everlasting fire." They dare not deny that in every connection it means a quenchless fire, that consumes until spent in the consumption of all it can feed upon. Why then intimate, even, that in this case it means just the opposite, consuming ever, yet never consuming.

"Tormented day and night forever." These words are only spoken of "Satan," "the Beast," and "the false prophet," all symbols, and their doom expressed in figurative language is never employed in a literal statement of "the wages of sin."

"The lake of fire."

"The blackness of darkness forever."

It was a poor logician that placed these two texts together. One or the other must be explained figuratively. Blackness of darkness in a lake of fire? With our view both passages are literally true—the lake of fire terminates in the darkness of the second death—the darkness of eternal non-existence.

"The winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." A symbol of destruction, always.

"The wrath of the Lamb." And in the connection the doomed ones say "who shall be able to stand" before his wrath? The apostle tells them not one; but all shall perish in an "everlasting destruction."

"They gnawed their tongues for pain."

"They have no rest day nor night." A prophecy relating to the living, not dead men: this world, not that to come.

"The cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath." If the reader will turn to Rev. chs. 16 and 18, he will learn that the consequence of the reception of this cup by Babylon was, that it "came to naught," or nothing, and was found no more at all. That will be just the doom, and the just doom of the finally impenitent.

We do not speak to soften any threatening of the divine law, nor remove one of its terrors. Let them stand. But when they are denounced let the simple truth, that must carry conviction, be told, and not the hideous theological falsehood, too monstrous for belief, that frustrates the design of "the terrors of the law," by making such demands upon credulity as to beget skepticism.

"THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT."

There has been considerable inquiry for this work of late, and we had supposed the edition nearly or quite exhausted. Within a few days we fortunately stumbled upon the very last of the edition. We offer them to our readers upon the following easy terms:

A COPY FREE TO ANY PERSON SENDING US A NEW PAYING SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR.

Remember! the work was not stereotyped and will not be republished, perhaps in years. It is a full and complete refutation of Andrew Jackson Davis' "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible," and drives the mists of infidelity back to their native darkness.

The Author's price is fifty cents a copy, post paid. We will furnish single copies at this rate. Six copies $2, or twelve for $3, by express. It will sell readily at 50c.

Only one hundred copies remain and then the edition will be exhausted. Do not lose this opportunity to secure a copy, for nothing. Send us a new subscriber.

Association Affairs.

I was unable to attend the late meeting of the Trustees of the Association. But I have since spent several days in Norwood Park and Chicago, and observed the situation and general management of the affairs of our Publishing office.

And I wish to say that I can fully endorse the report uttered by Brn. Calkins, Davis, Snook and Burr, published in The Times. Indeed I think they rather under estimated than over estimated the work that has been done, and the advantages of the change that has been effected and the present situation of our office.

D. Mathewson.

Having spent some time in Norwood Park, at the office, I freely endorse Br. Mathewson's remarks and the report of the Board of Trustees.

L. C. Collins.

PROGRESSIVE RESURRECTION.

The following article from the Western Christian Advocate, will interest all our readers. Its allusions to our own views require no answer; its attempt to justify the common theology of the soul is unutterably lame; but its justification of the truth that that which dies is the subject of the resurrection, is the kernel worth the trouble of separation from the chaff of accompanying error. The late Editor of the Advocate says:

Paul met with some in his day who affirmed that the resurrection was past. They doubtless argued the subject learnedly, and made their affirmation appear plausible; for the apostle assures us that they had overthrown the faith of some.

It is clear, however, that Paul did not agree with them. Whatever he taught concerning the resurrection of the dead, it is certain that he did not favor any theory that would allow it to be said of the dead of other generations, that their resurrection is past. This is the very point he denied. Then we must not suppose that he himself believed in such a resurrection as is taught by our modern progressives, and is designated by the caption of this article.

In a contribution to the editorial columns of the Star in the West, now before us we have a clear statement of the Universalist idea of the resurrection. We are glad to see it. It gives us hope that our neighbors are beginning to feel the necessity of coming down to specific statements. They will possibly yet seek to explain the processes of salvation, as well as the results, and then they will grapple with the underlying questions of agency, essential freedom, conditionality, responsibility, probation, and moral government. This disposition to particularize ought to be encouraged. It will enable them to feel that their efforts are appreciated, and it will lead them on step by step to the discovery that their brilliant generalizations do not always satisfy the reasoning mind. But to the statement:

"The truth is that the resurrection is a progressive work. It is a translation from the earthly to the spiritual life. It is simply a release of the spirit of man from its corporeal surroundings. He continues to live. The essential element that constitutes man a rational and intelligent entity, does not die when it lays off its tabernacle of clay, but is given greater facility to do its exalted ministry as 'an angel of God.'"

The first sentence in this paragraph in this sentence is explained by the second, the second by the third, and so on to the end. The progressive work according to this teaching, is not to be construed so as to imply that there is progression in the personal experience of the subject of the resurrection, but the matter of passing into the resurrection state is a progressive work, in opposition to the common idea of a simultaneous resurrection. The translation from the earthly to the spiritual life does not take place by degrees, but is accomplished at once as to the individual, while it is progressive as to the race. "It is simply a release of the spirit of man from its corporeal surroundings." It being "simply" this, and nothing more, there is no radical distinction to be made between death and the resurrection. Death releases the spirit from its corporeal surroundings. Death removes the "intelligent entity" from its "tabernacle of clay," and translates it to the plane of spirit-life beyond. In a word, death does all for the man that this theory ascribes to the resurrection; and Paul might just as well have charged his opponents with overthrowing the faith in asserting that the death of the dead was past, as to accuse them thus for saying the resurrection was past. With the advocates of "progressive resurrection," death and the resurrection are so nearly related, if they be not identical, that one never takes place without the other.

This theory denies the resurrection of the dead entirely. It has no room for the idea of the dead living again. Scan it closely. Of the man translated from the earthly to the spiritual life, it says, "He continues to live." How, then, is he dead? Only as to his body—the "tabernacle of clay." But does this tabernacle live again? No; the spirit lays off this incumbrance, and never puts it on again. It passes to a higher plane of life in total separation from the corporeal. That which died never lives again, and that which rises never died. Where then, is the resurrection? Here is a "translation," a promotion, a separation, from the body; but, as yet, we see no resurrection. No intelligible conception of a resurrection can be formed without the idea of something living again which had once been dead. But this radical idea of a resurrection is excluded by this theory.

The language of the Bible is utterly unlike this. It never confounds death and the resurrection. Nor does it speak of the resurrection of that which "continues to live." Inspired men were guilty of no such incongruities. They speak of the resurrection of "the dead," not of the living. And they never make the "spirit," the "intelligent entity," the subject of the resurrection at all, much less the exclusive subject of it. Paul says, "He that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal body." He also says that the Lord Jesus Christ "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." The body, and not the soul, is the subject of the resurrection, as it is of death. The "tabernacle" shall be taken down, but it shall reappear not as a tabernacle merely, but as the "temple of the Holy Ghost." Hence, all who have the first-fruits of the Spirit, "wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

The writer of the article in the Star, from which we quote, indulges slightly in argument. Take a specimen: "If the 'God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob,' is 'not the God of the dead, but of the living,' where can we find evidence of the doctrine that all men who die, sleep on, insensible, for myriads of ages, till the end of the physical world, and till a general resurrection of the dead? And if the resurrection of the dead will take place all at once, at the end of all time—things—to whom did the dead belong during all the ages before that period? Not to God; for he is not the God of the dead, but of the living.'" If this means any thing, it is that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are not dead. They died, but they "lived on." It means, further, that they were already in the resurrection state when the Savior used the language in question. If so, they were "ascended;" for that is about what our "progressive" folks mean by the resurrection, but if they were ascended or in the resurrection, the resurrection with them was "past already," and Paul, instead of controverting it, ought to have admitted it. And if the resurrection "was past already" with these ancient worthies, it ought to have been past also with David, and he, too, should have been recognized as "translated from the earthly to the spiritual life;" but Peter did not so understand it on the day of Pentecost. Addressing himself to the Jews, Peter said, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day ....For David is not ascended into the heavens," etc. (Acts 11: 29–34.) And yet, notwithstanding, "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living;" he was the God of David just as he was the God of Abraham, and David lived unto God just as Abraham did. Hence, when the Jews said to Jesus, "Abraham is dead, and, the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying he shall never taste of death. Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself?" he never disputed the fact that Abraham and the prophets were dead. He admitted all that, and yet made his point. "Before Abraham was I am." As respected their earthly life, they were dead. They saw corruption. They were "not yet ascended." The resurrection was not yet passed with them. But with respect to the "intelligent entity," the soul, they "lived on." They were "absent from the body, but present with the Lord." This living soul did not die, and it does not rise again. The resurrection of the dead is a rising up of that which died, or it is nothing.

This "argument" antagonizes the soul-sleeping theory of Second Adventists, and of all materialists, but it does not so much as touch the issue we make with Universalists. Evangelical Christians entertain no such materialistic crudities as that all who die "sleep on, insensible, for myriads of ages." This cheerless doctrine finds no place in the creeds, or songs, or prayers of the followers of Christ; nor is it at all necessary to an intelligent faith in the future, simultaneous resurrection of the just and of the unjust. On the contrary, the Scriptures afford ample ground for believing in the continued existence of the soul in a separate state, and of its ultimate reunion with the body "at the last day."

Again we say that we are right glad that the Star—even by a contributor—has ventured to speak out on the "progressive resurrection." It will probably do so again. We shall look for its "glimering rays" with pleasant anticipations. Of all people on earth Universalists should be the last to betray timorousness on this subject. They suspend upon it great interests, and profess to have great light.—West. Chr. Advocate.

The Era of Strikes.

It really looks as if the somewhat premature declaration of MAZZINI were about to be fulfilled; "the wars of the dynasties are over, the wars of the people are about to begin." The great nine hours' strike of the industrial population of Tyneside was one of the early features of the year. The move[illegible] spread northwards into Scotland, and [illegible]y embraced all the important trades in England. It extended to Canada, it was felt in the United States, and its latest results are the almost universal eight hours' agitation in New York, now being joined in by the artisans of Boston and Philadelphia; the suggestive union of the servant-maids of Dundee, followed by the serving-men in some parts of England; and the equally novel strike of the clerks which is the latest reported movement of the enterprising Dundonians for shorter hours of labor. Where it is to end, it would be impossible to predict. In any case, what is called the "solidarity of labor," has been very strikingly exemplified, and fair ground has been given for the opinion, that we have heard the first notes of a great social revolution.

In New York a few days sufficed to effect the triumph of the bricklayers, carpenters, painters and joiners' who struck for eight hours. The majority of the cabinet-making firms have already acceded to the demands of the men, so have the majority of the plasterers and the plumbers. A large portion of the piano-forte-makers have just joined the strike after an unsuccessful attempt at negotiation, and the upholsterers have, in considerable numbers, struck for eight hours also. It appears impossible to doubt that before many weeks are over, eight hours will have been fixed as the limit of a day's work from one end of Manhattan Island to the other. This once established, can hardly fail to produce its obvious effect on the working-men of every large city and industrial center in the Union.

The leaders of the movement have chosen their opportunity very judiciously. It is the Presidential year, and politicians high and low have a direct interest in doing everything likely to conciliate the artisan voters. The Federal Government have for some time enforced the eight hour law in their armories and arsenals. In this State, the law has been to a large extent evaded; but under the existing pressure of politics and the unions, it can hardly fail to be very soon universally enforced in all public works, and among the employes of all State and Municipal departments.

The right to demand the establishment of an eight hours' limit of daily labor is uncontrovertible. The wisdom of it is open to question. It will certainly tend to impede the industrial development of this country, in so far as it makes her workshops less able to compete with those in which nine and ten hours represent the amount of a day's labor. It will require more capital to establish, and larger profits to maintain, machinery from whose productive powers 20 per cent. has been suddenly lopped off. To pay ten hours' wages for eight hours' work involves of course an addition of ten per cent. to the price of every product of labor in which time and materials are of equal value, and proportionately more or less as the relative value of materials is more or less than that of the labor necessary to produce a given article. The enhanced cost of buildings, of furniture, of machinery, of all the necessaries of life consequently, and of all the products of manufacture, must inevitably tell in the long run, upon the great body of consumers in moderate means, i. e., workingmen themselves. It is quite possible that a certain portion of this enhanced remuneration of labor may come out of the profits of the capitalist and employer; but in a country where the transfer of capital into new fields is so easy, and where the chances of lucrative investment are so numerous, it is very questionable whether this will happen to any very great extent.

One of the orators of the movement has declared that the working men want more time to watch how they are governed in Congress, in Legislatures and in City governments. If they use the opportunity wisely, they might very easily relieve taxation to an extent fully proportioned to the fresh tax which an eight hour law virtually imposes. The economical doctrines sanctioned by most of the working men's organizations do not, however, lend much encouragement to such a view. In the Eastern States a high tariff is a favorite dogma with artisans, as a class, who think that "Protection" really means what it says. Like nearly all similar movements in the history of the world, this new creed of labor reform is selfish and short-sighted. That it will end, here or anywhere else, in social chaos and general confiscation, we do not believe. The talk of a few Internationalists, who have pressed into the movement, certainly tends that way, but the working class, like every section of the body politic has a strong underlying sentiment of common sense. An industrious workman, who pays his way and tries hard to save money, has as vital a stake in the stability of social institutions as his employer has; and in spite of all superficial signs to the contrary, such men are in majority in nearly every important workshop in the civilized world. A "new deal," and a generable scramble for the spoils would be hailed by the idle, the dissolute and the worthless of every community. As long as the world lasts, it will never find advocates among men who are neither thieves by instinct, nor thieves by profession.—Scot. Am. Journal.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Seven members have been added to the Highland (Mo.) church of late.——The brethren near Arvonia, Kansas, have organized into a church—some twenty members in all——The late meeting at Prairie du Sac is esteemed the best yet held there. Seventeen were baptised. Preaching mostly by Eld. Graft, [illegible] tion, etc.——The Greenland (Me.) church has a fine Sunday School—45 scholars. Meetings largely attended——We learn with regret that Br. and Sr. Fassett's useful career in California is likely to be hindered by ill-health in various forms. The climate seems to affect them unfavorably, and they expect to be compelled to return to Minnesota. We are glad for the latter State, but sorry for the California cause——Illinois leads off in the list of the later Campmeetings with a ringing call for the State to rally to the feast of tabernacles at Amboy, Sept. 7. Let the other States arrange soon.——Don't forget to arrange for, nor to attend, a Fourth of July meeting. Our suggestion has already led to the appointment of several new ones.——We learn by the Crisis that Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to attend the Campmeeting of the Christian Conference of Iowa, at New Hartford, this week. Br. Deyo and other home preachers will also be present.

The Times.

ABROAD.

A correspondent of the London Daily News writes that the topography of Vesuvius is no longer the same as formerly. It is as though an earthquake had altered everything. Hills have appeared where but a few days ago stones stood for visitors to rest upon. Precipices have been formed, which almost prevent further advance. All is altered; the very shape of the mountain has lost its well known outlines, and the view is appalling.

During the late eruption Professor Palmiari remained continuously in the observatory on the mountain, watching and recording the various movements. The observatory is furnished with the most delicate instruments, and also contains an "eruption clock," which stops and rings a signal bell whenever the mountain even trembles. The London Times correspondent says of the Professor:

"Oceans of lava have been surging around him, tempests of dust and pumice-stone have been hurled against him with the utmost violence, yet there he sticks, calculating the degree of volcanic force in action. The authorities sent up two carabineers and a guard of public security, not to defend him, as we may suppose, against the eruption, but against the attacks of thieves. The fine old fellow insisted on their leaving him, as he did not care to put their lives in jeopardy, but the men, with equal spirit, refused to do so, and there they all remain."

A correspondent of the London Times, writing from Zanzibar, in relation to the hurricane which occurred there on the 15th of April, says the shores surrounding the harbor are studded with wrecks. The Sultan has lost all his vessels with the exception of two small steamers. Reports from the interior lead us to believe that not only have most of the cocoanut trees been uprooted, but that all the cassava, the sweet potatoes, Indian corn, rice, and other more important crops forming the property of perhaps 800,000 people, and on which they depend for a mere subsistence, has been utterly destroyed. The effects of the hurricane over the island generally were similar to what occurred in my own house. I have no hesitation in saying that utter ruin prevails, and that famine with all its attendant horrors and dangers, is imminent. If the cyclone has liberated 800,000 slaves something ought to be done for maintenance, for unless their masters expend their all in providing for them, death from disease and starvation must ensue. In Zanzibar there are at present no means for meeting such a calamity. No such disaster as this has ever befallen the island, or was ever anticipated. The loss of life in the town and harbor has been immense. The storm was so terrific and unexpected that means for safety were not used. The native dhows, with their crews, sunk in the harbor, and many inhabitants perished in the wreck of their houses. The damage done on the 15th will probably amount to £4,000,000 or £5,000,000 sterling. That more than half of the commerce of Zanzibar has been destroyed for years, is unquestionable: but what the impending effects on native population may be, one can hardly form an estimate.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

Under the head of "Sunday Reading" in a daily paper we find this: "The ladies of some of the churches in California are giving what they call "Mother Goose parties."

From the immense mass of Eastern traditions and myths, Mr. Baring-Gould has compiled another curious and interesting volume—"Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets." One is struck with the unlikeness of these legends to Scripture history both in moral and literary character, and strong proof is exhibited of their difference of origin.

Mr. Spurgeon does not approve the amalgamation of the Baptists and the Independents of England. He holds that the peculiarity of his church is worth contending for; that truth is at stake, and that Baptists should not be ashamed of their name or their principles.

The Sandwich Island Friend says that the Micronesian missionaries have performed, and published the results of more explorations in the Pacific Ocean than have been made by the British navy since the days of Captains Cook and Vancouver, and by the United States navy since the days of Commodore Wilkes. And yet the entire expense of this mission, up to 1870, including the running of the "Morning Star," would not exceed $150,000.

A Christian sect of unknown origin and antiquity has been discovered by French missionaries in Loodiana, in India. By a voyage which extended thirty miles to the south of that place they fell in with a company of Shikes, who profess to believe the New Testament as a divine revelation, and who consider Christ as the immaculate incarnation of the Deity. Their priest (gooroo) teaches his people that Christ is about to reveal himself from heaven, according to Matthew 24: 35, and Revelation 19: 23, but in his own person. This sect is wholly separate from other Indian tribes, and is considered by them as a truly Christian band. The number of its members was found to be on the increase. They observe the Sabbath, are accustomed to pray, and do not recognize the obligations of caste. The sect extends over the territories of Maharajah and Putteala, and probably belongs to the Kuka race, despite differences in faith.

Recently a discovery of great interest was made in a cavern between Menton and Ventigmillia, on the Italian frontier, not far from Nice. M. Riviera, the French geologist, having been sent by his Government to study the fossil natural history of Liguria, discovered the skeleton of a prehistoric man in a large cave situated in the mountains above Mentone. The skeleton thus brought to light, a photograph of which we have seen, is unique both as to its authenticity and completeness. It has been successfully freed from the earth which covered it, and no unlucky stroke of the pickaxe has injured any part of it, only the weight of the superincumbent earth has caused the fracture of the ribs many years ago. Flint implements lying around it, are mingled with the remains of antediluvian animals. Crowds from all parts of the Riviera, and especially from Nice, have been to visit this curiosity. One of our correspondents has seen it, and declares the fossil man is most complete. Shells with holes bored in them, evidently for purposes of personal adornment, have been likewise discovered in great abundance and flint implements of the age of stone have also been found. The body is recumbent, and one hand is hidden under the skull. The height of the man must have been about six feet, and the bones indicate great power.—Catholic Review.

The Boston Journal remarks: There are few subjects on which such a variety of opinion may be held, and excellent authority advanced to sustain them, as the probable antiquity of the human [illegible] Here are two very scientific opinio[illegible] which the public is welcome to [illegible]. The Abbe Moigno, well known i[illegible]ientific and literary circles as the edito[illegible] Les Mondes, denies emphatically that there is any scientific data for belief in the existence of man upon the earth previous to the data which the Scripture assigns for his creation. According to the Abbe the soils in which human remains have been found, and there have been very few thus far discovered, are movable, not fixed deposits, and give no decisive evidence. He predicts that the arguments in favor of man's existence prior to the age indicated by the Bible have already reached their maximum, and will decrease hereafter until they are utterly abandoned. On the other hand, Prof. Fiske of Harvard, in a lecture delivered in New York, Tuesday, says:

"The extensive spreading of the human race implies its existence from a date long anterior to the great glacial epoch, which cannot have been less than 250,000 years ago—Lyell thinks a million years ago—when it is certainly known that men inhabited Europe and North America. Human bones and implements lately discovered are claimed as belonging to the Miocene epoch, and there is a growing disposition among paleontologists to place the origin of man as far back as this, though the demonstration of this date cannot yet be regarded as conclusive. The minimum antiquity assignable for the Miocene is 5,000,000 years."

—Spite of the Professor's magnificent figures, we think truth and common sense are with the Able.

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, one of the most powerful Christianizing agents in existence, was held a fortnight since, in Exeter Hall, London; Earl Shaftesbury presiding. It was stated that in France no less than forty-seven agencies of the Society are actively at work, and 250,000 copies of the Scriptures were sold or distributed last year. In Germany 470,000 copies were supplied, and a revised edition, nearly identical with the English authorized version, is being printed at Cologne. In Austria the agent distributed 136,000 copies last year, and during the past twenty-five years, nearly two and a half millions. The operations of the Society in Denmark were unsatisfactory, there being less religious liberty in that country than in Spain, and less encouragement for Bible distribution in Copenhagen than was in Rome. In Russia 145,000 copies were supplied. There was distributed in Spain 87,000 copies; in Turkey and Egypt, 29,000; and in China, 59,000. In Italy the New Testament is now being printed. The receipts last year from all sources were the largest in the history of the Society, and amounted to 184,196*l*., of which 99,000*l*. were contributed by the public, and 84,000*l*. resulted from sales of the Scriptures. The payments were 188,175*l* and the Society was under engagements to the extent of 127,079*l*. The issues for the year were: From the depots at home, 384,850 and from depots abroad, 1,199,507, making together 1,584,357. The total issues of the Society from its foundation in 1804 until now amounted to nearly 66 million copies. It should be mentioned also that the printing of the Bible in the Esquimaux language, prepared by Moravian missionaries, has just been completed by the Society.

Poetry.

The Desert Rock.

"They drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and the Rock was Christ."—1 Cor. 10: 4.

Rock of the desert, pouring still
Thy stream the thirsty soul to fill;
Rock of the desert, now as full
Of living water, pure and cool,
We stand beside thy stream.

Rock of eternity, to thee
In thirst and weariness we flee;
Thy waters cannot cease to pour;
Their fullness is forevermore;
Let him that thirsteth come.

Bright water of eternity,
We come, we come, to drink of thee.
The voice of welcome that we hear,
The voice dispelling every fear,
Is—"whosoever will."

River of life, upon thy brink
We sit, and of thy waters drink;
The murmur of thy sparkling wave
Speaks still of him who came to save,
Who bids us drink and live.

River of peace, so full and bright,
Each drop clear-shining with the light;
And still the voice that comes from thee,
The voice that telleth all is free,
Is—"whosoever will."

River of love, so deep and wide,
All heaven is in thy flowing tide;
For all the love of God is here,
The love that casteth out all fear,
Tho—"whosoever will."

River of God, still flowing on,
Thy source the everlasting throne.
River of heaven, translucent stream,
Thy fullness ever at the brim
For—"whosoever will."

River of health, thy current pours,
Its freshness on these leprous shores!
Pure Jordan, bidding all draw nigh,
For health and immortality,
With—"whosoever will."

Dear river, what a sun is thine:
What glories on thy waters shine!
What freshness in each sparkling drop,
And still the voice that cometh up
Is—"whosoever will."

—H. Bonar.

Communications.

Resurrection or Creation: Which?

A prominent supporter of the journal that assumes the office of censor of Adventism, in his eagerness to make a point upon the materialists overreached himself. A letter requesting an explanation was forwarded for publication. Whether it reached the office or not we cannot say: we only know it has not been published.

The writer's anxiety was to prove that if death was a cessation of conscious personal existence, then a dead man is a non-entity, and there can be no such thing as a resurrection but only a new creation. He sought to show that unless the spirit survives as a conscious entity, there will and can be no resurrection at the last day, but only a new creation of persons like those who have lived. It will not be the identical persons raised from the dead, but new persons raised, just like them.

Now this argument has some force in the hands of a consistent immaterialist—by which we mean one that denies the resurrection of the dead, or the thing that dies, altogether; but for one to thus argue, and at the same time teach the resurrection of the body, the "it" that is sown in death, is so palpably absurd as to excite our special wonder; albeit we have quite ceased to wonder at any inconsistency of immaterialism.

Is the resurrection body a new creation? or is it the same body that dies? If it is a new creation, then is it not a resurrection of the dead: for previous to its creation it would be a non-entity, and hence incapable of death. But the resurrection is predicated of something that has lived, has ceased to live, and will live again. Now if a human body can be resolved into its original elements, lose all its vital and, indeed, all its distinctive functions as a body, and still be raised from the dead—the same body be resurrected—why may not a human being be resolved into its original elements, after such sort they shall lose all the [illegible] functions, fall into the con[illegible]th, and the same human being be raised from the dead? If the dissolved body can be raised, the dissolved being can be, also. If the one is a new creation, so is the other. If the resurrection of the dead is simply the re-clothing of a spirit that never died, with a body that never before lived, then the name of the doctrine is a misnomer. But this cannot be. It is a term chosen by the spirit itself, and accurately expresses the mind of the Spirit. Nothing can live again, that has not once lived and ceased to live.

What a pitiable perversion of our Savior's famous argument—"Now that the dead are raised, Moses showed," is is that which says there can be no resurrection without continuity of conscious existence; and that the Savior saved the doctrine of the reliving of the dead, by proving them already alive; demonstrating that they had never died! And that enclosing a disembodied, undying soul in a new body, is the resurrection, living again of the dead!

And, to crown all, for one to teach the resurrection of the same body that dies, but deny the possibility of the resurrection of a being that dies! We would like to know if strictly "evangelical Adventism is drifting into the doctrine that the resurrection body is a new creation. Nemo.

Is the Time of the Second Advent Revealed in the Bible?

THE APOSTLE'S TEACHINGS.

[Second Article.]

The apostles Peter and Paul have left on record prophecies concerning events that should occur in the last days. (2 Pet. 3; 2 Tim. 2.) The coming of the Lord was with them a favorite subject. In none of their discourses, however, concerning this most august event, are they permitted to give the date at which it would occur. On this point they are silent. Paul wrote to the Colossians the comforting assurance that when Christ should appear, then they should appear with him in glory. He was also permitted to write words of comfort to the bereaved brethren at Thessalonica, telling them that the Lord himself should descend from heaven and raise their friends who were sleeping in Jesus, to immortal life; "then," said he, "we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them into the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." All this was truly comforting, but not a word did the apostle write about the date of this glorious consummation of the Christian's hope. In his second letter to the Thessalonians, he charged them not to let any man deceive them by saying that the day of Christ was at hand, for that day should not come except there come a falling away first and the man of sin be revealed. No dates, however, are mentioned. In his first letter he had told them that they were not in darkness, that the day of the Lord should overtake them as a thief. This passage (1 Thes. 5: 4) is often quoted to prove that the saints shall know the time of the Lord's coming. It manifestly proves no such thing. The apostle, as the whole context shows, was making sharp contrasts between two classes of persons—the righteous and the wicked. The former class were not in darkness or in sin. They were all the children of light, and children of the day. The latter class were in darkness, they were the children of the night. Upon this class the Lord should come as a thief in the night—and they should all be destroyed. The apostle exhorts his brethren not to sleep as did others, but to watch, and be sober, "for," said he, "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." Upon this class, who were watching and waiting and praying for the return of their absent Lord, upon them the day of the Lord would not come as a thief. It would not find them unprepared. They were of the day; they were children of the light, and they loved the appearing of him who was emphatically styled the Light of the world. It was uncertain when the Lord would come, hence there was no safety except in a constant state of preparation. To them who thus lived, to them who constantly wore the Christian armor, and delighted in doing good, to them the apostles gave the comforting assurance that the day of the Lord should not overtake them as a thief, but whether they lived or died they should live together with him at his coming. All this, but not a word, not a hint, not an intimation of the date of the Lord's second coming. I might here use an argument that has various applications—Paul told the Elders of the Ephesian Church, that he had kept back nothing that was profitable unto them, that he had not shunned to declare unto them all the counsel of God. But neither in his letter to the Ephesians or elsewhere, has he given the date of the Lord's coming. He has indeed told us of events that should take place in "the last days," and, as I think, very graphically and accurately sketched the state of the world, the church and society in our own times. But he has nowhere given the definite time of the Second Advent, nor has he given the data, periods or events by which such time can be accurately computed.

If, now, we turn to John's testimony, we shall find that in the book of Revelation he deals with events rather than dates. There are, indeed, several periods or spaces of time given, but no one that I know of claims that any of these periods reach to the Second Advent. William Miller claimed that the book of Revelation furnished five distinct proofs that Christ would come in 1843. His first proof was based on the time of sounding the trumpets, beginning with the fifth. (Rev. 9: 5, 15; 10: 5, 7.) The five months he reckoned equal to 150 years. The fifth trumpet he thought ended in 1449. The sixth trumpet he thought sounded through 391 years and 15 days (Rev. 9: 15) ending on the 11th of August, 1840. The sounding of the seventh trumpet he thought synchronized with Dan. 12: 7, and would end in 1843.

His second, third and fourth proofs were based on Rev. 11: 3; 12: 6, 14; 13: 5. He thought each of these periods ended in 1798. His fifth and last proof was Rev. 13: 18. He thought the number 666 stood for years; that these years began B. C. 158, and ended A. D. 508. To this last date he added the 1335 days of Dan. 12: 12, and obtained the desired result, 1843.

Nor do I know of any later writers who carry John's periods to the Second Advent. Most of them agree with Mr. Miller, that the 1260 years and the 42 months ended in 1798. The opening of the seals, the sounding of the trumpets, the pouring out of the vials, and the fall of prophetic Babylon, mark eventful epochs in the world's history that continuously reach to the second advent. But this most wonderful book, the last in the Bible, clo[illegible] without revealing the date of the Lord's coming.

I think therefore, that I am justified in claiming as I do, that our Lord and his apostles have not left on record sufficient data by which we can without doubt name the day, the month, or the year when he will come and take his people home.

OLD TESTAMENT TEACHINGS.

Is the definite time of the second advent taught in the Old Testament? I think it is not. Wm. Miller thought he was able to show that the Lord would come in 1843, from each of nine different passages in the O. T. His proof texts were, Lev. 25: 8-13; Ex. 31: 13-17; Deut. 15: 1, 2; Ezk. 39: 9, 10; Hos. 6: 1-3; Dan. 8: 1-14; 12: 6, 7; 12: 11-13. Later writers mostly base their arguments on the teachings of the book of Daniel. There are two periods in this remarkable book that are said to reach to the second advent. These are the 2300 days of ch. 8, and the 1335 days of ch. 12. It is absolutely necessary to know two things in this connection before any certain and just conclusions can be drawn from these periods in favor of definite time. Let it be shown in the first place that these periods or either of them reach just to the second advent, that they do not end this side, or the other side of that great event, or in case they do, let such deficiency or excess be accurately known. In the second place the precise date at which these periods began be settled beyond a doubt. When these two things are done, then the conclusion can be rapidly and correctly reached. The definite time of the second advent would then be placed beyond a cavil or a doubt. But until both of these things are shown, all arguments for definite time based wholly on these periods must be considered as inconclusive and painfully weak. Examine all history from Herodotus to Froude, and all chronology from Ptolemy to Thurman, and tell me certainly, who can, when according to our system of reckoning the famous periods began? Mind, I do not ask for guesses or plausible conjectures, we have had enough of them already—what we want on this great subject are facts, indisputable and convincing—or nothing.

I know there are those who think they know when these periods began. So there are those, too, who think they know just how many years have elapsed since the creation of the world to the present time, and this notwithstanding the wide difference of opinion between chronologers. Well, evey man has a perfect right to have an opinion on these subjects. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." There are many who believe that the reign of Christ will begin at the expiration of six thousand years from the creation of the world. For this belief many plausible, though perhaps no conclusive reasons, may be urged. But if we accept the reasons offered as valid and conclusive the chief difficulty still remains. When will the sixth millennary expire? Who can tell? Many learned men already place that period wholly in the past. Others equally learned differ while placing it in the future from one to one hundred and fifty years. Is the time revealed? I think not very plainly.

But it is urged that the express assertion of Scripture is that "the wise shall understand." Very true. But this proves nothing to the point. For even if it be conceded that the angel meant that the wise should understand the precise date of the second advent, it by no means follows that that date is revealed in the Bible. By the term "wise" are meant the righteous. There can be no doubt of this. The expression "none of the wicked shall understand," followed by the antithetic clause, "but the wise shall understand," very conclusively proves this to be the angel's meaning. Now I suppose it will be conceded that hitherto, all the righteous have never agreed on any definite time at which the Lord would come. How is it in this very year of our Lord 1872? Do we not find divided councils and various and conflicting opinions among those who give every evidence of being righteous in the Bible sense of that term? Are we at liberty to suppose that some of the righteous, a favored few, will know the time of the advent, and others equally good be ignorant of it? Is it not far more reasonable to suppose that all the righteous who live in the age of the second advent, will be equally privileged with regard to knowledge of the time of that great event?

If the study of the Scriptures, of chronology, and of history be all that is necessary to reveal the mystery of ages, why may not the wicked as well as the righteous understand? Great learning has never been the exclusive possession of the pious. Are not the histories of Gibbon and Hume among the best that have ever been written? If to all this it be replied that the prophecies of Scripture have a spiritual meaning that can only be understood by the righteous, I ask, How does it happen that every time argument relies on profane history to determine the beginning and ending of Scriptural periods? It may be a matter of opinion whether a wicked man can understand the eleventh of Daniel as well as a pious man, but there can be no difference of opinion as to whether an infidel may not write as accurate a history, as the most devoted uninspired saint that ever lived. Indeed it is well known that many writers on prophecy rely on the dates given by infidel historians, and base thereon their conclusions as to the time of the second advent. Again, there are thousands of earnest and devoted Christians who can neither read nor write nor cipher. They could no more analyze a 'time argument,' than they could translate Greek, or Hebrew or Sanskrit. Yet their hearts are as loyal to the King of kings as those of the greatest scholars of the age. They love the Lord and love his appearing. When any of these persons say they think the Lord will come at a certain time which they name, be sure that in their case at least 'the wish is father to the thought.' It will be useless to ask them a reason of their hope in this respect, for they cannot give an intelligible reason for entertaining it. Yet who will say that such persons will be unprepared for the day of the Lord? Let it rather be said that the good, those who are imitating their Master's example and letting their light shine as Christians, let it rather be said of such that they are the only ones who are prepared for the coming of the Lord. There are some analogies between the Lord's coming and the day of one's death. Both events are equally certain. Yet the time of these events is equally uncertain, and probably for the same reason. Again, the day of one's death so far as relative time is concerned is practically the same as the day of the Lord. To the silent sleeper, time and space are alike unknown. A thousand years appear no longer than a second of time. Thus to the Thessalonian Christians, the day of the Lord that they so ardently longed for will appear just as near as to the last saint who shall fall asleep before the Lord comes. To all it will seem but "a little while." All the incentives to virtue and piety that can be urged from the uncertain tenure of life and the admitted certainty of death, may for the same reason be urged as a spur to a constant state of preparation for the second advent. If one's treasure is laid up in heaven no thief can break through and steal it. Holiness of heart is the necessary preparation for the great and terrible day of the Lord. To be the friends of Jesus is to be safe. To be his friend we must love him. To love him we must obey him. One of his last and oft repeated injunctions, to his disciples was to watch. "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." It seems to me that this injunction both in its spirit and letter is opposed to the notion that the definite time of the second advent is revealed in the Bible. If we knew the exact time that our Lord would come, we should certainly know that he would not come before that date, and if we knew that we certainly would not expect him before that time, and when we did not expect him we could not watch for him. This state of expectancy has since the Ascension been the position of the Christian Church. I do not cry peace and safety, but counsel rather a constant state of preparation for the day of the Lord which I believe to be very near. I do not believe our Lord delayeth his coming. I believe at the time appointed the end will be; and though the vision tarry I will wait, for it will surely come at the appointed time. The night is far spent, the day must be near at hand.

The signs admonish us that it hasteth greatly. May we have our loins girt about and our light brightly burning so that when our Lord does come he will say to us "Well done, good and faithful servants: enter into the joy of your Lord." I cannot do better than to give in conclusion the following impressive words of the Lord Jesus:

"But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. Take ye heed, watch and pray: FOR YE KNOW NOT WHEN THE TIME IS. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." (Mk. 13: 31–37.)

JAMES H. WHITMORE.

How Much?

It is often the query with honest Christians, how much it is their duty to sacrifice for Christ and his glorious gospel. To such we would quote Peter's simple and emphatic language: "Lord, we have forsaken all: what shall we have therefor?" All who can apply this to their own experience may share in the sweet response of Peter's Master: "No man having left houses, lands, and all the world deems of value, for my sake and the gospel's but shall have a hundredfold in this present time, with persecution, and in the world to come eternal life." But let us be careful not to claim the promise until we have complied with the conditions.

That we "cannot serve God and mammon" simultaneously is one of the most difficult lessons of the age. There are multitudes that are anxious to be Christians if they may be allowed carry their religion in one hand and the world in the other. They are fully convinced of their duty to "render to God the things that are his," but their heart is so intently set on the gold that perishes, that it requires almost a death struggle for them to shake off the fetters and give up all for Christ. What a sad misfortune indeed, that the fleeting shadows of this life should have gained so fast a hold on the human heart, to the exclusion of those things that are permanent, eternal, unfading!

Is a Christian justifiable in hoarding up the riches of this life? I see no reason why a Christian should not amass wealth if the Lord has favored him with the ability and opportunity. I have no confidence in the religion that leads men to recklessly neglect their secular affairs. Paul admonishes us to be "not slothful in business." We are expected to "provide for our own," in default of which we are worse than infidels. But all of this does not come under my question. My inquiry is in reference to laying up riches with a stingy and penurious hand. And again I ask, can a Christian do it? O my brother, do you profess to be looking for the speedy coming of Jesus and to rejoice in the blessed hope. Let me tell you there are many people all over the land that would rejoice as much as you if they could hear of it. And many of them could hear of it if some of the hoards of gold were spent in publishing tracts and sending out preachers into these new and famishing fields. What a dreadful responsibility! Who feels like bearing it?

Some severe and (generally) distant followers of Christ really think that the minister is a sort of sacrificial pack-horse. If there is any sacrificing to be done, the preacher has it to do. Now this is a mistake. He has as much sacrificing of his own to do as he can attend to; and I assure you he will not be responsible for any of yours. O brethren, you that have this world's goods by the favor of the Lord, come to the rescue. God is marshaling his hosts to stand on Mount Zion. The last chords on the great gospel harp are being struck. Jesus is coming in the clouds of heaven, he is coming to be admired and worshiped. Are we sacrificing for this blessed Master and in view of a glorious reward at his coming, and "how much?"

C. C. MARSTON.

Nearness to God.

Reader, did you ever behold a Roman Catholic, bowing before a crucifix, his whole mind absorbed in his devotions? If so, what were the feelings of your heart as you beheld him? Were they not mingled feelings of sadness and reproach? Sadness to behold a human being so wrapt up in the darkness and superstition of a false system of religion, and reproach that your mind did not oftener ascend upwards on the pinions of devotion? You, my brother or sister, have a brighter and more glorious hope. A more enlightened view of God, and his feelings toward mankind, and his purposes concerning them, yet, I am fearful that you are not as devoted and zealous as that ignorant Catholic.

How many who read these lines could look on the sight alluded to without feeling rebuked? Would not the language of the poet express the feelings of all our hearts at such a time?

"Nearer, my God to thee, nearer to thee."

Many who profess to be looking for the speedy coming of Christ are permiting the light and trifling things of earth to draw their thoughts from him who created them, and is daily surrounding them with blessings. They appear to forget that it is "in him we live," on his earth they tread, under his heavens, which he has spread forth like a curtain, that they dwell; and instead of cherishing a spirit of thankfulness for his bounties, which would cause them to render cheerful obedience to his requirements, they are so overcharged with the cares of earth as to stifle all such feelings of gratitude and devotion. They think of God as afar off, instead of permitting their faith and meditations to bring him nigh to them, where they could meditate on his parental care over them; and instead of being led to please their fellow men, fearing their frown, which brings a sneer, they would fear continually lest they offend the Father of mercies and God of all comfort. Possessing this fear, which is the "beginning of wisdom," they would shun the broad road to destruction, and be led in the narrow way to life.

For my part I would far rather be one of the latter class, even though I be poor as Lazarus in this world's goods, than to be monarch of the world. And who would not make this choice? For he that hath God hath all things, while he that is without him hath nothing.

Let us, dear brethren and sisters, make an earnest effort to get nearer to him. If we but make the effort we shall certainly succeed: for he himself is pledged to aid us; and when time shall end, and the voice of Jesus summons us from earth during the great conflagration, we will joyfully hasten to meet him in the air, and together with all the "pure in heart" "see God" face to face, and ever be with him, while he shall tabernacle with men and dwell with them.

C. H. SWEET.

Theological Spelling.

There is great deal of bad spelling in the world. This is true in a theological sense as well as in a typographical. The Bible is the book from which the student is to select truth, and arrange it to form doctrine, as the alphabet is that from which the writer selects to form words.

The Scriptures declare that doctrine is given, "here a little, and there a little," and a correct arrangement is necessary in order to arrive at the whole truth. This is to "rightly divide the word of truth." For lack of this many come to very erroneous conclusions. For instance, on the doctrine of the destiny of the ungodly, we find the terms death, destroy, perish, burn up, everlasting destruction, everlasting punishment, and many others of like import, which, when put together, teach us the truth. But instead of these, some will find immortality, never die, live forever, torment etc., and spell out a far different doctrine, and directly opposed to the truth. This is bad spelling. So with regard to the saint's inheritance, instead of land, new earth, world, kingdom under the whole heavens, etc., some will use far different terms, not found in the Bible at all, such as spirit land, kingdom above, world above, spirit world etc., and thus pervert the truth.

Let us be careful how we spell in theology, or we may be found guilty of so perverting God's word as to be our own ruin.

F. BURR.

Correspondence.

From B. F. Workman, Sangamon Co. Ill.

I see in the last paper that some brother has given a hint in regard to the publishing of the Quarterly. It does seem to me that our people of the West are strong enough to support such a work, and I am sure the cause demands it. It would certainly reach a class of people that the paper will not, from the fact that it is in a more durable form. It can either be bound or loaned without being destroyed.

Our Sabbath school is prospering under superintendents Brn. L. Henry and E. Williamson. We have large attendence, and good interest.

From D. Mathewson, Menasha, Wis.

We had a very pleasant visit at Fort Howard. Br. Hall procured a hall, and I preached seven times to quite good houses. Some became interested, and I think if I could continue the meetings quite a strong society would be raised up. They wished me to engage to preach there for six months, but I could not. I could find work enough for a number of good men up in this country. I wish we had them and means to send them out.

Last week the Methodist minister of this place invited me to preach for him yesterday. I did so, to a crowded house. I received a line from the Congregational minister, inviting me to preach for him next Sunday. I shall try and do so if the Lord will. I had some out yesterday to hear that had not been to meeting for ten years. Everything seems to show that if some one would preach the word in this place God would bless the effort. People are ready to hear. They are sick of the old theology. I pray the Lord to raise up some one to settle in this part and raise the standard of truth.

Geo. W. Miller, Brownsville, Minn.

I came to this place for the purpose of holding a few meetings, which commenced the same evening. The congregation the first evening was not large, but attentive. On Sunday the interest began to increase and continued to do so until the close. A church was organized with fourteen members, after which two others joined, making sixteen in all. They have made arrangements for building them a chapel, which will be completed I hope the first of July. This place is the residence of Br. Job Brown, from whom the place took its name, he being the first settler. It is twelve miles below La Crosse, on the Mississippi River, and any of our preaching brethren who may be passing that way, would be welcomed by the church.

Br. Brown has been the pioneer of this part of the State, both as to settling and in preaching the glorious gospel of the coming kingdom. He begins to feel encouraged as he sees the fruit of his labors, and to know that it has not been in vain in the Lord. It is mostly by his own means the church is to be built. May the Lord bless him, and the little church of his care, with all the graces of his Spirit and make them a light to Brownsville.

From E. K. Smith, Owatonna, Minn.

DEAR TIMES: Perhaps a few words from this part of the great harvest field may not be wholly uninteresting to the readers of our loved paper. After the visit made to us by Eld. S. C. Welcome, in the early spring, the few scattered Adventists in this section thought best to have him come again; and he did so April 13. The meeting was held at a school house some six miles S. W. of this city. Much interest was manifested to hear, and although in a sparsely settled farming community, yet the house was crowded at each discourse by attentive listeners. The effect was truly cheering to the few who are willing to stand out boldly and squarely for the Bible truths, and arrangements were made whereby Eld. Wellcome came again, May 18, and 19. After the morning sermon May 19, we repaired to the river side where three happy souls were buried by baptism in the likeness of Christ's death, and raised up to walk in newness of life. In the evening a little band of seven believers were organized under the name of the Advent Christian Church of Lemond, by adopting the Bible as our only creed, and making Christian character the only test of fellowship. Others are interested and additions will be made to our numbers soon. Br. Charles Fitzsimmons was chosen clerk and Treas. and E. K. Smith deacon.

Br. W. is a man eminently fitted to win the good will even of those who most bitterly oppose his theology, thereby gaining their attention and inducing them to read and examine the reasons of our faith, where many others would only raise their combativeness or frighten them away altogether. We lack laborers in this part of the country: this is entirely missionary ground, no one can be fully supported from the field at present. Yet I believe churches can be gathered all over this State which will in a short time be partly if not wholly self-sustaining.

From J. C. Overstreet, Arkansas.

I have for some time been thinking that I would write to you to inform you of a few facts in regard to the fruit of your labors in this quarter of the Lord's vineyard. You will understand before you see the end of this letter, that there has been considerable change in my mind since you were here. To make it plain, I will state that I said at one time, that money and popularity were in my opinion the greatest motives that prompted you to wander down into Arkansas, on a hunt of subscribers to the TIMES; which sheet I now love to peruse better than any paper that I have ever taken, or seen, except its sister the Bible Banner. May the good Lord pardon me for such rash expressions, and lead me by his blessed Spirit into the way of truth and holiness, that I may not follow my own inclinations.

I attended one of your meetings while you were at Br. Crosby's, and heard you define the words soul and spirit. You affirmed that soul or spirit, neither had natural immortality; that they did not exist as conscious personalities outside of the body; that soul meant the whole man, and the life of the man; that man was mortal and became totally unconscious in death; and many such strange things, as they appeared to me then. But I clearly see now that it was I that was in the dark, and I must say, that I feel thankful to the all-wise God, that I am privileged to see the light of the Bible as I now see it, for it has made me free.

May the Good Lord bless you, in your efforts to spread the truth, and love you freely for Jesus' sake.

While you were reasoning on the subject I thought it was very strange that theologians for many centuries had been so much in the dark; but I could not see any inconsistency in your argument; and the only difference between our views was, that you claimed a literal, while I held a spiritual sense. I very soon found that this spiritualizing arrangement was a fallacy; for reason stepped in and declared itself in harmony with revelation, and said that anything material was real, while an immaterial thing could not be conceived of or comprehended; for an immaterial nothing existed nowhere.

I once thought that man possessed a principle of immortality that was immaterial, but such an idea is now an absurdity. I asked you what part or principle of man existed between death and the resurrection? You answered that the man died: not a part of him. His body, or the man went back to dust, as say the Scriptures: "Out of it [dust] wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. 3: 19.) The man 'thou' was the one addressed, and was the one that died, whether it was the soul or spirit.

You said, also, that the spirit was the life of the man, and at death it went to God who gave it, not as a conscious personality, but as an element of life.

After examining the matter I see now that most of the superstition and confusion that has agitated the world for many centuries are based upon the notion of the inherent immortality of the soul, which is [illegible] doctrine. It befogs the glory of the resurrection. It takes from God the glory of making dead men live by putting his spirit in man at the last day; for he claims the power to do so. But modern theology teaches that man's spirit is immortal, and will re-inhabit the body. But God says he will put his spirit in man and he shall live. (Ezk. 37: 14.)

This literal and material view of the Bible has served as a key to unlock the Bible to my mind. It shows man to be mortal. (Job. 4: 17; 1 Cor. 15: 33.) It shows that the inner man is mortal, and must put on immortality. (2 Cor. 5: 4.) It has taught me the nature of man, that because he is mortal he is dependent upon God for immortality, who only has it. (1 Tim. 6: 16. It has taught that it is a life and death question, instead of one of happiness and misery. It is etenal life offered for faith and obedience, instead of happiness exclusively. It is death threatened instead of eternal torture in hell fire. Man is dead when he dies, and is unconscious. (Eccl. 9: 10.) For "there is no knowledge nor device in the grave whither thou goest." So time is not known. A thousand years is only a moment with the dead. But they will live again. (Job. 19: 25, 27.) These same eyes shall see the Lord! Oh! glorious thought!

I have learned to take the Bible for what it says. I have been excluded from the Baptist Church for my opinions set forth here; but I glory in the truth above membership in any church.

Conference Minutes

Minnesota Q. M.

The second Q. M. of the St. Paul Dist. of Minnesota, was held with the Cottage Grove Church, commencing Friday eve. May 17. The meeting increased in interest to the very close. It was the confession of all present, that it was good to be there. Preaching by Eld. Raymond and Sr. H. M. Duby. The preaching was practical, and close, and well received by all who attended. We shall hope to see in the future, a greater interest taken by our brethren in the several districts to be in attendance on the quarterly occasions, especially our preaching brethren.

Adjourned to meet with the church at Independence, Sept. 6.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Transmigration of Souls.

The Bonard will case was again up before Surrogate Hutchings, in New York, on a Thursday afternoon, one Dr. Clymer, of the Philadelphia Hospital, who has made a special study of nervous diseases, presented important evidence. The extravagant admiration of Bonard for Mr. Bergh, and his will giving $100,000 to the society with the long name, were not, in the eyes of the doctor, evidence of mental weakness. In response to the question, "Do you consider a man who belives in the transmigration of souls, and frequently expresses an opinion that the bodies of men pass into the bodies of animals irrational?" the Doctor said: "Not necessarily. For this reason; It is a belief held by many of the first minds in the world in ancient and modern times. Pythagoras learned it from the Egyptians, who are thought to be the first who believed in the immortality of the soul, and they believed that, being immortal, the soul, on leaving the man's body, passed into other animals. Some held it returned, purified, after thousands of years, to the human form. The Druids of France, Britain, and Germany held it. The Brahmins hold it and the disciples of Fourrier in France. Some of the fathers of the Church—Origen, for instance—held it. Some theologians try to show from the 9th chapter of John that it is the doctrine of the New Testament, and some have held that the doctrine of Purgatory originated from it. Besides, beliefs are held sometimes as mere metaphysical beliefs. There is a difference between religious conviction and the mere holding of a general belief on a subject. Some Christians think others who believe certain doctrines are under a delusion; but a medical expert, without finding evidence of a delusion in a general way, would not be warranted in saying such persons were laboring under mental unsoundness. And that was an eminently proper answer, damaging as it was to the parties trying to break the will.—Daily Paper.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, June 18, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the millennium; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the mortal nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
J. M. SNOOK, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

Address all communications to JOSHUA V. HIMES, 11 South Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $100 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

We have none of the music Comfort in Affliction. A lot is promised us soon.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers: but a new edition is nearly ready.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 15c. 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, etc., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, Prof. Ives' tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 30c.

To Correspondents.

J. ANDERSON. Don't fail to write us about that matter.....H. G. McCULLOCK. It was 37 ct. It is all right.....V. HUNT. Sent TIMES.....M. A. TIBBETTS. Have added the County to the address.....M. E. MABEY. You are right. The V. was credited to you by a mistake.....H. E. SLATER. We do not know where to get it.....O. THOMAS. 60c.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J W Burroughs
D F Kendall
R H Evans
S O Ketchum
S C Hancock
E A Marsh
L L Ames
O Fox
J R Preston
J S Lawyer
R H Osborne
W Royce
T Davidson
G S Harwood
M Reed
M C Batman
G D Hunter
W Cook
J R S Mowrey
P Williams
B Perham
J H Gallop
I Eby
O Thomas
S K Baldwin
R H McCartney
E Clark
G Boudurant
W F Ballard
J Cartwright
P Williams
O Thomas
I Eby
A F Dugger
B Perham
H Bangs
H E Slater
J R L Mowrey (2)
C C Marston (2)
J A Burlingame
W R Kerns
H J Goodwin
V Seaton
S Baldwin
D F Quimby
E S Mabey
W B Shoemaker
C S Branch
S J Russell
W V Cox
G Thomson
B F Coudray
H Willett
G W Miller
J W Osborn
J W Finn
C C Marston (3)
A Hurd
L S Conner
J A Holton
C Marshal
J M Corey
M M Bishop
L D Boynton
H E Slater

Books and Tracts by Mail.

S Whetstone
V Seaton
W Cook
W Royce
R H Osborn
J Lowrie
J S Lawyer
J A Heaton
R H Hill
W S Taylor
H Willett
G Boudurant
C Marshall
J Cartwright
M M Rose

EXPRESS.

J M Snook J M Blodgett A Himes.

For Expenses of Removal.

M C & M Batman 3 00; H Welty 1 00; J A Burlingame 50c.

To Send TIMES To Poor.

An Adventist Chicago, 3 00

Notices, Etc.

Any of the brethren desiring my services, anywhere within the region of my new home, can secure them, by calling upon or addressing me at Edinboro, Erie Co, Pa. J. A. NEWTON.

To A. F. Dugger.

Br. Jas. Coffey preached for us, eve. June 7, and announced your debate with him to take place June 21, as first arranged. If you are unable to speak, your presence here would save a wrong impression being made. Do not fail to come. J. W. OSBORN.

Special Notice—Minnesota.

To all who are anxious to know about the tent meetings in Minnesota, I would say, that I am anxiously waiting for those who subscribed for the new tent to pay their subscriptions, and then we could tell where and when tent meetings could be held. I would make this my last call upon all who have not paid, to do so at once, that the cause in our State may not suffer on the account of our neglect to do what we promised to do a year ago.

The tent is ordered, but it cannot be obtained for use until it is paid for. Come, Brethren, let this hint be sufficient. Do not subject me to the task of writing each one individually. GEO. W. MILLER,
Millersburg, Minn.

The Kansas Mission Tent.

We the undersigned, desiring as soon as possible to raise means to procure a tent for the Kansas Advent Christian Association, pledge ourselves to pay into the treasury for such purpose the several sums set opposite our names, as soon as the amount of the three hundred dollars shall be pledged.

Previously acknowledged	$ 1 17
R H McCulloch	1 00
J M Barber	1 00
Henry Haines	5 00
G Harwood	25 00
J C Smith	1 00
H. Smith	1 00

PLEDGES.

G S Harwood, $25.

PAYMENTS.

N R Smith 1 00.
J C Smith 1 00. T. BOSLEY, Sec'y.
Crisis please copy.

Direct all pledges to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kas.

All money should be sent to the Treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co, Kas.

Dear Brothers and Sisters, at home and abroad, we need help. May the Lord move upon the hearts of his dear children that they contribute to this good cause, remembering it is good to lend to the Lord.

Your brother in Christ, H. J. MUNSON.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.

2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.

3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Boonerville, 11 a. m. June 29, 3 p. m.
Johnson's Grove, June 30, 3 o'clock, p. m.
L. H. DAVIS.

Rochelle, 10½ a. m. June 23.
Whiterock, Oyleco., 3½ p. m. same day.
Ackerson's, eve of same day.
Amboy, June 30.
Tampico, July 1.
Yorktown Cor., eve. July 2.
In the Grove, July 3 and 4 with Br. S. E. Mabey. C. C. MARSTON.

There will be a Basket Meeting held in the Advent Christian Chapel at Genoa, DeKalb Co., July 4. Hours of service, 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Eld. J. V. Himes of Chicago, and others will be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters in Christ, and friends in all this region are invited to come up to this meeting. Come one, come all! It will continue over the Sabbath, the Lord willing. In behalf of the Church,

E. H. BURINGTON.

Murnan S. H., east of Toulon, 3 p. m. June 30.
HIRAM WILLETT.

Tampico, Whiteside Co., eve. July 1.
Yorktown S. H., eve. July 2.
Yorktown Grove, Br. Morse's place, eve. July 3.
Yorktown Grove, at 10½ a. m. and 3 p. m. All invited to come. C. C. MARSTON,
By arrangement of S. E. MABEY.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and staple provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. E. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Brethren, friends, and all, interested in the cause of Christ, in Neponset District, Northern Illinois Conference, are urgently invited to meet with the church in Oneida, on Thursday, July 4, and reorganize the Quarterly Meeting in this District.

The church has proposed the following services: Wednesday, 7½ p. m., prayer meeting. Thursday, 9½ a. m., love feast; preaching 10½ a. m.; after this service the reorganization to be attended to, arranging for afternoon and evening service in the morning.

If there is not room enough in the house in which we worship to accommodate all who come, the Lord has furnished a good big "out doors," and will doubtless give us the use of it. Come, then, with hearts on fire; be in earnest in the matter, and the Lord will bless.

Can you spend the Fourth to better advantage? All will be welcome.

In behalf of the church, L. F. COLE.

Aurora, with the Colored Baptist, 11 a. m.
As Bro. Spaulding may arrange in the p. m. June 16.
Jericho Church, June 23, 5 p. m.
C. W. SMITH.

Lenox, June 23, a. m. and eve. Subject, the Prophecies. H. G. McCULLOCK.

De Puy S. H. District No. 10, five miles, N. E. of Genoa, 3 p. m. June 16; and every two weeks until further notice. A. A. CROCKER.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. E. MABEY.

MICHIGAN.

The Michigan Campmeeting will be held June 15-24, on the Fair Grounds at Jackson.

This is the most convenient railway center in the State.

Eld. J. V. Himes, Br. and Sr. Mansfield, Br. J. H. Whitmore—and in fact all our preaching brethren expect to be present unless they are providentially detained away.

J. M. SNOOK.

The Fort Wayne Jackson and Saginaw Railroad have consented to give RETURN passes to all who attend the Jackson meeting from the South, providing they do not return until the 23d or the 24th. Return passes can be obtained on the ground. Possibly a like favor may be obtained for the entire length of that Road.

IOWA.

There will be a Basket Meeting on the Fourth of July, in a grove near Young's Mills, where we held one last year, five miles east of Corydon, Wayne Co. It is expected that a number will be baptised at this meeting. Friends of truth, let us have a grand rally on that day around the banner of the Lord.

Corydon, last Sunday in June.

S. K. GIBSON.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

MINNESOTA.

In accordance with a vote of our State Conference a State Campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove called "Cheatham's Grove," in Utica, Winona Co., commencing Thursday, June 27, and holding over the ensuing Sunday, and as much longer as deemed practicable. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with permanent stands and seats; also a good well of water and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground.

Brethren and sisters of the Advent faith throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles and work for God. Come from every quarter; come with hearts burning with the love of God, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs portend the speedy coming of the Master. Shall we not improve these general gatherings, as God requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and for the salvation of others?

Come Christians of every name, and unite with us in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove.

Brethren and sisters in the ministry, all who can come, at home or abroad, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon-coming King. Come endued with power from on high, with an unction from the holy One; with words that burn, that will reach the hearts of the perishing.

☞ Those coming to tarry on the ground will please come prepared with bedding and provisions (and tents if they have them.) We expect to procure a large building erected by the Methodists, on the ground, and also have the Bethel tent if possible, so that all can be accommodated if they have their bedding and provisions.

Arrangements will be made with the R. R. companies for half-fare tickets from all points where the friends notify ME THIS MONTH that they will attend our meeting. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

Eyota, Bliss S. H. 10½ a. m. and 2½ p. m. June 23.
Crook's Hall, St Charles, eve. same day.
S. C. WELLCOME.

ARKANSAS.

The third Q. M. for Blue Mountain District will be held at Flatwood, with the church, at the place selected by Br. Bishop, June 22 and 23.

J. B. BROWN, Sec'y.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, of the $100 pattern, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

"The Home Shuttle." We can give a good bargain on two or three excellent Sewing Machines, if application is made soon. Address this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

When & How; or a collection of the more recent facts and ideas upon raising healthy children. By D. Newcomb, M. D.

A strong, common-sense, and hence valuable work. Sent by mail, post paid, $2. For sale at this office.

Favorable terms to agents by the Publishers, A. W. Penny & Co. 26 South Ca[illegible] St. Chicago, Ill.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume I will commence in June. $2 a year. THE TIMES and Record one year for $3.

H. V. Reed, Publisher, 9 South Canal St. Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her as well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address 14 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $20.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and R. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 24 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ,
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,

1008 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

E. H. WHEELER'S
IMPROVED
AXLE & THIMBLE SKEIN
PATENTED JAN. 12, 1872.
THE LIGHTEST, STRONGEST, AND BEST AXLE BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

Less liable to break, and cannot spring under any amount of weight that can be put upon it.

It takes a smaller sized axle and bolster or sand-board than the same sized skeins of common style; is more simple and easier to fit, the skein being of uniform taper, without shoulders upon the inside a better fit is secured. The axle can be turned in a common lathe to fit the thimble, by putting one end out of center.

The arm, or spindle, is so made as to secure the proper set of the wheels, when moderately dished, with the bottom line of the spindle on a parallel line to the bottom of the axle, an important principle never before attained. The set of the wheels is a perpendicular or right angle to the bottom line of the axle upon the face of the spokes, upon their lower half.

This cut shows the thimble and lug for the tension rod across the bottom of the axle, from thimble to thimble, and the socket for the bolster, or the sand-board, as the case may be. I also use a sand guard to keep the dirt out of the shoulder of the hub; but it is not shown in this cut.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Sample thimble skeins furnished to purchasers of rights, at actual cost. For further information address

E. H. WHEELER, Memphis,
Scotland county, Missouri.

☞ Please state where you saw this advertisement.

WEBSTER'S
UNABRIDGED
DICTIONARY
NEW
ILLUSTRATED
EDITION
3000
ENGRAVINGS

GET THE BEST.
Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.
10,000 Words and Meanings not in other Dictionaries.

3000 Engravings. 1840 Pages Quarto. Price $12.

☞ A National Standard. The authority in the Government Printing office at Washington.

☞ Warmly recommended by Bancroft, Prescott, Motley, Geo. P. Marsh, Halleck, Whittier, Willis, Saxe, Elihu Burritt, Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate, and the best American and European scholars.

Published by G. & C. MERRIAM, Springfield, Mass. Sold by all Booksellers.

THE BIBLE BANNER FREE!

We desire to call the attention of the readers of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES to our offer in the Bible Banner, to send it to every minister of the gospel of any denomination who will send us his address, or otherwise signify his desire to receive it.

ONE YEAR FREE

We request the readers of the TIMES, to aid us in presenting this offer to such ministers as are devoted men of God, and who would probably accept, and be benefitted thereby.

Do not urge any one to accept, for we have not the means, at present, to send very many papers free, but trust the Lord will provide enough to send it where it should go to prepare the way for our weekly papers, and stir up the watchman to sound the alarm to a guilty world. A copy of the Banner from one with whom the minister is acquainted is worth a dozen sent by mail from the office of publication.

THE BANNER AND TIMES.

We will send the Banner six months free to all new subscribers to the TIMES, and to all old subscribers who mention this offer when they remit (to TIMES office) for 1872. We make one condition to this offer, viz. before the close of the six months they must either notify us to discontinue, or remit for the future, as soon as convenient.

We expect to present a large fine engraving in every number of the Banner, hereafter, which will illustrate and add new interest to Bible truth. We have already commenced the series of illustrations. Send ten cents for three sample copies. Address:

H. A. KING,
14 Murray St. New York.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES and the Bible Banner will be sent one year, with a free book, for $4.75, or without book, for $3.50. Address:

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
No. 11 South Canal St., Chicago.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 11 South Canal St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting: any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(3m6) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—34 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—2 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—60 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,300 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 3c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in others into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c. $1.50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2.15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 25c.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Isa. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 10c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 5c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 46. CHICAGO, JUNE 25, 1872. WHOLE NO. 426.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, June 25, 1872.

The Restitution of All Things.

[Continued.]

Another Greek verb and noun translated "defile," "corrupt," "destroy," "destruction," have, when applied to man, two main and primary meanings. One is, "to deprave and corrupt," the other to destroy by depriving of existence. As it would be impious to suppose that God will ever do Satan's work of corrupting, we can only take the words in the second sense. A good example of these different senses is found in 1 Cor. 3: 17, "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy." It is the same Greek word which here first signifies "defile," and afterwards "destroy." The first is the sinner's guilty act, the second is God's punishment hereafter by death. 2 Pet. 2: 12 affords us an excellent example of the Scriptural use of this word. Speaking of the ungodly, Peter says, "These, as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed, shall utterly perish in their own corruption." Here the same Greek word is used of the end of the beasts and of the ungodly. We know what is the end of beasts taken and destroyed. Peter declares that the end of the ungodly will be the very same.

Another Greek verb and noun translated "destroy," "destruction," is properly and primarily significant of utter extermination by death: "Every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people;" "The wicked shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord." (Acts 3: 23; 2 Thes. 1: 9.)

We have brought forward a great variety of phrases from the New Testament. We have now to consider the mighty bearing on their meaning of the fact that this New Testament is written in the Greek tongue. In that tongue all these phrases are to be found. Before the Gospel was preached their meaning was fully established in the cultivated and common mind of the human race. What is more, they were all in common use, and applied to, and their sense established, with reference to this very point now under discussion! The immortality of the soul was a question not for Jewish and Christian thought alone; it was the question of questions for the universal human mind. In particular, it was the question of questions in the various schools of Grecian philosophy. One of the noblest specimens of human reasoning, building its lofty superstructure on uncertain or insufficient data, that has ever charmed, exalted, and, for our part we must add, bewildered the human intellect, is found in the dying discourse of Socrates to his friends, handed down to a deathless fame in the "Phædo" of Plato. Its object was to prove the immortality of the soul—that it could never cease to be, that through whatever changes it might pass, whatever pollutions it might suffer, whatever fearful torments it might endure, there was the deathless principle af the human soul which asserted an eternal life and utterly refused to die. It could never be, according to Plato, a thing of yesterday, an existance of the past but not of the present, a figure once jotted down in the book of life and then blotted out of it forever.

In what terms is the denial of its mortality conveyed? In the very terms in which the punishment of the wicked is asserted in the New Testament! When the latter says the soul shall die, Plato says it shall not die; when the latter says it shall be destroyed, Plato says it shall not be destroyed; when the latter says it shall perish and suffer corruption, Plato says it shall not perish and is incorruptible. The phrases are the very same, only that what Plato denies of all souls alike the New Testament asserts of some of the souls of men. But the discussion of this question was not confined to the school of Plato, or to his times. Every school of philosophy took it up, whether to confirm Plato's view, or deny it, or to heap ridicule upon it. All the phrases we have been discussing from the New Testament had been explained, turned over and over, handled with all the powers of the Master's language, presented in every phase, so that of their sense there could be nor doubt, no could there be any one ignorant of their sense, before Jesus spoke or an evangelist or apostle wrote. The subject had not died out before the days of Christ. It never could or never will die out. In every city of the Roman world were schools of Grecian thought in the days of the apostles. In every school the question before us was discussed in the phrases and language of the New Testament. In Jerusalem, and Rome, and Athens, and Corinth, and Ephesus, and Antioch—wherever a Christian preacher opened his mouth to speak to man of his future destiny—were Platonists, or Epicureans, or Stoics, or Alexandrians, to whom the question of the soul's immortality was a question of constant thought, with whom the phrases in which the preacher addressed them as to their solemn future were familiar household words. And what did the Christian preacher declare, and the Christian writer write, to the world-wide community which was ruled and bound together, not merely by the power of Roman will, but by the scepter of the Grecian tongue? In sermon,and disputation, in Gospel, and history, and epistle, and revelation, the propagators of the new religion asserted of the persons of the wicked that which Plato had denied could happen to any soul. The cultivated intellect of the world, as well as the popular mind, read in the words of Christ, of Paul, of John, of Peter, of James, that what one of its schools of philosophy taught could happen to no soul, and what another taught should happen to all souls, the rising school of the Nazarene taught would happen to those whom its phraseology described as "unjust," "wicked," "unbelievers." Plato's noble conception, itself but the utterance of the longing of the human heart for its original inheritance, was taken up by the New Testament, only that it had here given to it its true direction, and had the eternal life after which it yearned connected with the God of life manifested in his Son. In Jesus Christ was that "life" which Plato fancied might exist in the soul itself. This "life" he would bestow upon his people, realizing for them more than the conception of Plato. But away from him there was no life. On those who would not come to him there would come, finally—after stripes few or many—the end pictured for all by Epicurus. The Gospel brought together the fragments of truth scattered throughout human systems, and in them all poisoned with error. Those who would soar, the Gospel raises to God; those who would revel in the sty of sensuality, or live without God in the world, it sinks to the level of the beasts that perish.

One word more before we pass on. How is it known that there were individuals and schools in apostolic days that denied that there was any future life at all? Simply and entirely from their application to all men alike of the very term which the New Testament applies to the wicked. If the New Testament, by the use of these terms, is supposed to teach an eternal life of the wicked, then the Sadducees and the Epicureans of that same period must also be supposed to have taught such a life for all mankind! For beyond any question, the very language which the New Testament applies to the condition of the wicked hereafter is applied by the Sadducean and Epicurean schools to all mankind! We could with just as much truth and reasonableness establish an eternal life of misery for mankind from the writings of Epicurus and Lucretius as we can from the writings of Scripture, for if "to die" and "perish," and "be destroyed" mean to exist forever in misery, these are the very terms in which Epicurus and Lucretius spoke of the end of all men!

Having seen the various terms used in Scripture for future punishment, we will now draw the attention of our readers to the manner in which the terms are treated by us, and by our opponents of the Augustinian school. For this purpose we will draw out a table of some of the chief of these terms. In the center column we will give a text from Scripture; in the column to the left we will give passages from writers who hold the Augustinian view; in that to the right we will give extracts from writers who agree with us, or who, though they disagree with us, yet describe our views. Our readers will not fail to remark that the Augustinian advocates flatly contradict the declarations of the Bible, while all our descriptions are in perfect harmony with its statements.

If the various words descriptive of future punishment had in human usage one sense only there could be no room for doubt but that the view we advocate was that of Scripture. For it is not questioned that all the words we have been discussing have the sense which we have put upon them. Nor is it even attempted to be denied that this sense is their original and primary sense. Every dictionary in every language of the earth is our witness for this. Our opponents, both of the schools of Augustine and Origen, would deny this if they could, for these words, when taken in their primary sense, overturn both of their systems alike. If the wicked cease to exist in hell there is no room either for Origen's restoration or Augustine's life of anguish.

	AUGUSTINIAN THEORY.	SCRIPTURE.	THEORY OF DESTRUCTION.
LIFE.	"The fact of the never-ending Life of Satan and lost sinners."—Grant, James, Religious Tendencies. "Disbelief affirms what it denies. It unawares asserts immortal Life." —Young's Night Thoughts.	"He that believeth not the Son shall not see Life."—John 3: 36.	"The wicked will not live forever,"—Minton, S., Glory of Christ. "The loss of life is the essence of future punishment."—Constable, H. Duration etc.—"There is no eternal Life in hell."—Do.
LIVE.	"How wilt thou endure to live on forever."—Baxter, R., Saint's rest. "The wicked will live on forever."—J. Angus, D. D., Future Punishment. The Sinner shall "Live on thro' eternity."—Grant, James.	"Lest he eat and Live for ever."—Gen. 3: 22. "If any man eat of this bread he shall live forever."—John 6: 51.	"Only they who eat the bread Christ gives will live forever."—Minton, S.
DEATH—TO DIE.	"No Death will deliver the unrighteous from punishment."—Hippolytus. "How will they call and cry, 'O Death! whither art thou now gone?'"—Baxter, Richard The wicked shall "never die." Grant, James. "What ne'er can Die."—Young's Night Thoughts. "And tried and wished to Die; but could not Die."—Pollok.	"The wages of sin is Death."—Rom. 6: 23. "If ye live after the flesh ye shall Die."—Rom. 8: 13.	"If Death ensue? Then I shall be no more."—Milton. "The doom of the wicked is Death.—Minton, S. "Death is the essence of future punishment."—Constable, Henry.
DESTRUCTION.	"The Evil One will never be destroyed."—Grant, James. "God will not Destroy one single soul or body which he has created."—Do. "Rebuilt, in union Indestructible."—Pollok.	God is "able to Destroy both body and soul in hell."—Mat. 10: 28. "Art thou come to Destroy us?"—Mark 1: 24. "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction."—Matt. 7: 13. "All the wicked will God Destroy."—Ps. 145: 20.	"The heathen considered death to be final Destruction."—Calvin. "The language of Scripture points not to endless misery, but to Destruction."—Minton, S. "The end of the wicked is Destruction."—Constable, H.
TO PERISH.	"God has not made us that we should Perish and be annihilated."—Athenagoras. "From such an idea my very soul turns away with abhorrence."—Grant, James. The soul's imperishable nature."—Do.	"Them that Perish."—2 Cor. 2: 15. "They shall utterly Perish."—2 Pet. 2: 12.	"To Perish rather, swallowed up and lost."—Milton. According to Epicurus, "the entire man Perishes."—Hippolytus. "The heathen think that whatever is taken away from the world has Perished."—Calvin. "The wicked must in due time Perish."—Minton, S. "To Perish is truly descriptive of future punishment."—Constable, H.
CONSUME.	"The fire of hell does not consume."—Bunyan. "The wicked shall never be Consumed."—Edwards, Jonathan. "Their bodies will never be Consumed."—Wesley, John The wicked "shall never be consumed"—Baxter, Richard. "A destruction not consuming."—Baxter, Robert.	"The wicked shall Consume: into smoke shall they consume away."—Ps. 37: 20. "God is a Consuming fire"—Heb. 12: 29.	"Will either quite Consume us, and reduce to nothing this essential."—Milton. "The wicked will Consume away."—Constable, H.
BEING—TO BE.	"If our substance be indeed Divine, and cannot cease to be."—Milton. "The being who has sinned cannot cease to be."—Baxter, Robert. "The eternity of Being in man."—Do.	"The wicked shall not be."—Ps. 37: 10. "Let the wicked be no more."Ps. 104: 35. "He is not."—Job 27: 19.	"The end of sinners is the blotting out of being."—Constable, H. "And that must end us, that must be our cure, to be no more."—Milton.
CORRUPTION.	"The bodies of the wicked shall be rendered incorruptible."—Scott, Thomas. "The bodies of the wicked shall be changed to fit them for eternal torment without Corruption."—Edwards Jonathan. "Their bodies are incorruptible."—Wesley, John. "The corruptible body of the wicked puts on incorruption."—Athenagoras.	"He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."—Gal. 6: 8.	"God shall raise all from the dead, and appoint some incorruptible."—Martyr, Justin. "Corruption represents death or destruction."—Minton, S. "Corruption is the end of the ungodly."—Constable, H.

But most words in common use have several senses. The terms in question have. They are words too important and too much in constant use not to have gathered to them in the course of time several senses derived from and more or less different from their primary sense. These are called their secondary senses, and in certain circumstances are frequently used, and in some circumstances more frequently used than the primary sense from which they were derived. It is in this fact that our opponents take refuge. They assert that the words of Scripture applied to future punishment are not to be taken in their primary sense but in their secondary. The schools of Augustine and Origen here agree; they differ when they come to settle what secondary sense is to be taken, but they unite in saying that some secondary sense certainly is. To this important question we will now attend. We will endeavor to arrive at the true principal of interpretation of these words. Our question is, Are they to be understood in their primary sense, or are they to be understood in one or other of their secondary senses?

This is a most important question. Here are words which bear with awful power upon myriads of beings throughout eternity. These words have different senses. Understood in their primary sense, they consign the wicked to eternal oblivion; understood in one secondary sense, they consign him to eternal evil and misery; and understood in another, they promise him restoration to holiness and to happiness. Are the advocates of these several schools to be forever arraying the various senses of these words against each other without any principle of interpretation, which is, with fair and candid minds, to set the matter at rest by showing that one, and only one, of them is that which God means us to accept? They are not. There is a well-known and universally accepted principle of interpretation which decides that the primary sense can alone be taken, and that the secondary senses are all here to be laid aside.

The principle of interpretation is this, that all language relating to law and jurisprudence, all language descriptive of the sanction of Government, all language setting forth the penalties of crime and disobedience, is to be accepted in its primary sense, and in no other. Examine the terms of any human law, ask the men whose life-study relates to law, whether as legislators or administrators,—all will reply that in all documents relating directly or indirectly to law and jurisprudence no sense but the primary is for a moment allowable. Thus, when death is announced as the penalty of a crime, no controversy would for an instant be admitted as to its meaning. No lawyer, for or against the criminal, would search for dramatic or poetical secondary senses. If the criminal himself were gravely to plead that his physical existence should not be taken from him because he had understood the legal penalty of death in a secondary sense, it is quite possible that he might be saved from the scaffold and the hangman, but it would only be by his being sent to a lunatic asylum as an incurable madman!—To be continued.

justified, so
given.—Zion's Herald.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. HIMES' CLOSING LETTER,

My brother well says he will "briefly review" my last letter. One need not occupy much space to make bare-faced assertions, or say "sheer nonsense," or "insult to common sense." Nor does that kind of debate require very much mental labor. But as we should always judge a man according to what he hath rather than what he hath not, I can easily forgive my brother's resort to that style of discussion. It is low, but is his only available means of defence.

Lexicons and authorities carry but little weight with my brother. He seems to be a sort of embodied "higher law," competent by his mere ipse dixit to set aside the usual laws of faith and evidence. When I adduce positive and competent testimony that analuo does mean return, would it not be in better taste if he should, instead of "repeating his remark," advance an argument, or cite an authority of equal weight in refutation. Of course it is easier to say "sheer nonsense." If The Seventy, and Hink, and McKnight, and Liddell, and Scott, are all wrong, then my brother may be right and analuo may not mean return. Meanwhile I hope to be pardoned if I defer to their authority rather than his.

I know not of what stuff the readers of the Standard are made; but I do know Adventists; and I know that neither my brother or myself can carry any point with them by mere force of blind assertion. The Scriptures sanction their demand to know the reason of any man's hope: and they know, too, how to appreciate an answer given in meekness, even by a direct opponent. I judge from the merits and deserved popularity of the Standard that its readers are a very intelligent class of people. Hence, I feel safe in resting my case in their hands. Whether I succeed in convincing them or not, they cannot fail to discern whether an argument is fairly met, or whether a retreat is effected under cover of such choice epithets as "contemptible pettifoggery."

I would like to know what there is more of sheer nonsense in understanding Paul to refer to the return of Christ and the resurrection in Phil. 1:21-25, than in any other passage. Just before his analuois or dissolution, he referred to that time as the coronation day, and the realization of his hope. In Phil. ch. 3, he speaks of all he endured as cheerfully borne that he "might by any means attain unto the resurrection of the dead"—"thousands of years hence?" "Sheer nonsense," says Eld. Braden. But I think Paul knew best. I have my doubts also about the resurrection being "thousands of years hence;" I would like to know Eld. Braden's authority for the statement. But I do know that if it be ten thousand years away it does not affect the argument. Paul described himself as in a strait between life and death, unwilling to choose either of them. A third thing he did desire; and it was a strong desire; the burning desire of his heart. If he desired to die, above every thing else, then he flatly contradicted himself. If he desired the returning to be with Christ, then this harmonizes with the hope expressed by him as his crowning hope all through his epistles. Even if he were to die, a dozen milleniums in the unconsciousness of the grave would be but a moment of time; and so far as his sense of time would be concerned, his sleep in Jesus would be but an instant.

My brother materially modifies his position upon the parable of Lk. 16. "The imagery describing the retribution, from the nature of the case, cannot be literally interpreted." Indeed! How does he know that? As it cannot be literally interpreted, of course it must be interpreted spiritually; and what is the standard? But this is deliberate evasion of the issue. I have not set aside the parable. I have not made an exposition of it, that is not my business. My purpose is to reply to, and refute if possible my brother's arguments. He brought forward the parable in question, said it referred to conscious punishment immediately after and in death. He attempted to establish his notion by what I will call "the endorsement theory." That is, in the parable Christ used the phrases, terms and ideas of the Pharisees without dissenting from them. Hence, says Eld. Braden, he either endorsed those ideas or he was a deceiver. In the parable Jesus set forth the idea of literal fire in hades. This was a Pharisaic idea, fully believed and explicitly taught by them. Jesus gives no hint of dissent. In my brother's own language, "With this prevailing understanding, our Savior used [this] term and idea. He used [it] in the sense his hearers [illegible] he was a deceiver." Now [illegible] theory makes Jesus and the Pharisees say there is fire in hades. But Eld. Braden says there is none there. Now there is but one way he can save the theory, and that is, admit there is fire in hades. He cannot do this; he must admit that Jesus used one Phraisaic expression without either dissenting from it or endorsing it; and the admission fells his theory with a sledge hammer stroke: for if Jesus could use the fire of hades in parable without endorsing heathen notions, he could use all their other ideas of the place in the same way without endorsing them.

In what a pitiful light this theory places the Master and his disciples. Here they were with a distinct doctrine of their own, based upon the Old Testament, to which they constantly appealed, and yet neither their own ideas and teachings, nor the usage established by their standard of authority and appeal, the Scriptures are to be the test of the sense of their language, but we must try it by the vocabulary of their bitterest opponents in both faith and practice!

I have set aside no parable, no imagery. On the other, I have all the while asserted it was parable, and was imagery, and not literal naration. I remain of the same opinion still. I have no space here for an exegesis of the parable. Those who wish our views can find them elsewhere. It is enough for me here that I have refuted my brother's position, and shown that it does not teach a state of rewards and punishments for dead men.

If the translation my brother gives of 2 Pet. 2:9 is not doubtful, how does it happen that scholars of equal ability with himself, are divided in opinion, and that most of them favor the common version?

His remark upon my inability to distinguish between two ideas, he intended, no doubt, should be very cutting. But my equanimity is not in the least disturbed. I am at least as well off as Moses was—in my brother's estimation of him. If my brother fails to see my point, I am not to blame. I said nothing about the two ideas being identical: I only showed that neither could be grasped without the other. Our readers see the point, and know that if Eld. Braden is right, Moses was little better than idiotic.

The assertion that there can be no relation between God and Abraham unless Abraham is alive and conscious, is pure unalloyed assumption. Its only support is an argument from analogy in which there is no analogy between the point and the illustration. Paul says God can speak of the dead as though they lived, because he fully intends to quicken them. (Rom. ch. 4.) My brother says he can't do it. Readers will take their choice of authorities.

My brother says I have "abandoned the the language of the Savior to the thief." He has tried so long to get me into the affirmative, that he may be pardoned in forgetting for a moment that he has not succeeded. I have abandoned nothing. Whether Christ's kingdom was one year or ten thousand years distant, the thief desired to be remembered, when it came. And the Savior told him the prayer would be granted. Paradise does mean Christ's kingdom. The tree of life is in Paradise, (and the throne of the Lamb of God is in Paradise.) (Rev. 2:7; 22:2, 3.) One's throne would likely be in one's kingdom.

My brother has a new idea. When he urges a passage of Scripture, I am not only bound to reply to his views, but advance my own before he is under any obligations to attend to any objections I may urge to his gloss. I prefer to hold my position in the negative. If he thinks calling my objections 'cavils' effectually disposes of them, I am satisfied. But my opponent has plumed himself that he is always ready to accept and avow all logical consequences of a position taken by him. "Such a course I have unvaryingly pursued," says he. I think not. When I pinned down his accommodation theory, and asked him whether he would give it up or acknowledge that he was wrong in saying there was no fire in hades, he resorted to vague talk about "literalizing symbolic language." When I urge insuperable objections to his gloss of 1 Pet. 3, and ask him to avow the logical consequences of his position, he calls my objections cavils, and wants to know what I think about it. If I would only give him an exegesis, it would give him a chance to draw off attention from his own blunder in an attack upon my position.

Let me state anew some objections to his exposition of the spirits-in-prison passage. First, if the good news of salvation was preached in hades to disembodied disobedient spirits, it was a message of grace, an offer of salvation. Then there is probation after death, and as God is no respecter of persons, Restorationism is, to all intents and purposes true.

(2) There is the difficulty about Christ's spirit. First, the Logos, a pre-existent spirit, was in Christ, or was Christ; and then, beside that, he possessed a human spirit. So my brother has said. Which of these died? Which preached? or was it both? Did one go to one side the unpassable gulf and the other to the opposite chamber of hades? But, says the Elder, quickened or made alive often means already alive! What next?

(3) A majority of translators sustain the common rendering.

(4) Immaterialists themselves are hopelessly divided upon the sense of the passage; and except Restorationists all but very few agree with me. What then must be the inference, when a majority of those who would be glad to appropriate the passage, candidly give it up. There can be only one conclusion.

The endorsement theory is again rehearsed and rehashed. I don't know the exact number of times it is necessary to repeat an error to make it a truth, but if repetition will effect the change, my brother will certainly succeed. Paul never avowed himself a Pharisee save in two points; in their austerity of life, and in the faith of the resurrection. He lived a Pharisee; of "the hope and resurrection of the dead" he was "called in question." True, Luke says the Pharisees believed in spirits, but he does not say Paul did.

My brother says I call the Pharisaic errors a bad name. What is it? "Tradition!" Yes, I do call them that, human tradition! That is just what they are, and all they are Away with them to the waste basket of falsehood, and let us turn to the foundation—the Scriptures themselves, for a pure theology. I can hardly express to my readers the absurdity there appears to me in my brother's attempt to light the word of God by those traditions and doctrines against which the New Testament contains urgent and special warnings. Jesus says "Beware!" Eld. Braden says only by them can we get the true light! A strange position this for a "Christian." I am glad he is still enough of a "Reformer" to admit that "tradition" is a "bad name."

My brother's summary contains nothing new; we have had the same thing several times before. The points stated have not become truthful by repetition. There is not one point that I have not squarely met, and I will not take the reader's time and patience by a lengthy rehearsal of my replies. Let me however, call attention to a few points. What about those schools for primitive innocents where angels taught both sewing and sowing? We asked for chapter and verse. Others are anxious to know where the record is found. But my brother has closed, leaving us in the dark as to the source of his information.

My brother is very glib in announcing that in many passages spirit can possibly mean only a separate, conscious etc., etc., entity. As I have shown that in those very passages it can mean something else, perhaps I need not say more. But the reader will indulge me a moment.

It is a frequent cavil that Eccl. 12:7, and Christ's and Stephen's dying remark cannot refer to "the breath." "Breath, or disposition returns to God who gave it! Receive my breath! Utter nonsense!!" "Puerile nonsense!" "Insult to common sense!" These words of my brother are a fair sample of those frequently indulged by other immaterialists in the same connection. There is no little sound in them, but they, nevertheless, amount to nothing—just nothing.

In the beginning God gave breath. He "breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life. In his hand is the breath [or spirit] of all mankind. (Job 12:10.) Again we read: "If he set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath; all flesh shall prelsh together, and man shall turn again to dust." Eld. Braden and others can write their blasphemous sneers after these and other similar passages of Holy Writ if they like. It is time, however, they searched the Scriptures sufficiently to know who and what they are scoffing at when they so speak. The return of "the breath of life" given by God, to him who gave it, is all that is referred to in Eccl. 12:7, or Acts 7:55. There is nothing ludicrous in the idea of the dying martyr commending his life to his faithful Creator who would restore it again at the last day. It was no "puerile nonsense" with him, but a precious hope. I glory in that same hope, that he who holds in his hand the breath of all mankind will one day quicken the dead. This was "the hope of Israel" and it is mine.

Finally, let me call attention to the demonstrated truth of Mr. Alexander Campbell's remark that "immortality in the sacred writings is never applied to the spirit of man." He also said, "We choose to speak of Bible things by Bible words, because we are always suspicious that if the word is not there, the idea which it represents is not there." "Our doctrine must be in the words of the Spirit," said Eld. Braden, when debating with Hughey; but I have urged in vain that he state the doctrine of his proposition in Bible terms, or "words of the Spirit." When I have requested him to do so he has replied with sneers. I cannot answer a sneer: nor is sneering any answer to my point. The issue remains unchanged and the fact cannot be evaded, that my brother's doctrine is liable to the imputation cast upon it by his great leader; not being susceptible of statement in Bible terms, we have a right to suspect that the idea is unscriptural. If his doctrine be true, the silence of the Scriptures concerning it is an unexplained and inexplicable phenomena. It can be found in the heathen poetry and philosophy, in Pharisaic legend and Patristic tradition. Only from these has my brother been able to cite a direct assertion sustaining his proposition. It is his privilege to take his own choice in selecting authorities for his faith; but never again can he consistently hoist the banner which bears the motto dear to so many hearts, "Bible names for Bible things."

Man's State in Nature.

SHORT SAYINGS FROM REV. DR. GRIFFITHS.

It is allowable to be new in questioning the soundness of human creeds. It is a virtue to be old in maintaining the actual teachings of the Bible.

Experience of itself does not secure discipline and moral elevation. There are tribes and nations of men which have passed through many centuries of severe vicissitude, only to sink into lower depths of barbarism.

The argument in favor of hell-torments, drawn from the majesty and holiness of God, or from the great love wherewith he hath loved us, savors fatally of human resentments. It is not only an eye for an eye, or a tooth for a tooth; but an infinite number of eyes and teeth for one. It is in direct antagonism to the spirit which the gospel requires us to cherish.

The Poet says:

> "Dust thou art, to dust returneth,
> Was not spoken of the soul."

What then is 'thou?' Is 'thou' matter or person? Surely it is a false philosophy which requires such a bold challenge of God's word.

The new charter of life was drawn on the basis of substitution; not however, be it remarked, on a basis of compensation; but one of pure grace and favor. God does not, in the true sense, accept a substitution, but provides it.

I care not then to fulfil any dogmatic definition of the Fall; seeing that it is a conventional phrase, without Scripture support; but original sin, and ative depraitvty—accepted phrases in the same theological schools—I cannot help remarking are almost synonyms for natural selfishness.

It multitudes (born into the world with liability, and living under temptations which convert the liability into actuality) must, as the consequence of sin, suffer through infinite epochs with no prospect of release, then we may well ask what necessity compelled the Divine Being to introduce such an eternal calamity into his universe? It is neither presumption no irreverence which prompts such a question; but simply the constitution of our moral nature. We must inquire into the wisdom and justice of such an appointment. We must ask on whom rests the tremendous responsibility of such inconceivable misery. We are to "judge the world, to judge angels." (1 Cor. 6: 2, 3.) Does not our deepest consciousness that it would be impossible to love a power which had sustained us in torment for ages as its own prescribed method of fitting us for happiness? Could we ever think of that power but with horror and vindictiveness? Is there a sound mind on earth that could consent to have life and ultimate happiness on such terms?"

Our moral nature is repelled by harshness, won by kind treatment. God has given to us such affinities, such antagonisms; and we cannot reverse or extricate them. Moreover he deals with us according to this constitution in the Gospel: "God commended his Son toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." "We love him because he first loved us." "Herein is love." Instead of teaching that we love God because he torments the impenitent in everlasting flames, or that we gain deliverance from sin and depravity by the fires of purgatory, it shows that the mercy of God becomes a constraining power upon us, winning our gratitude, submission and confidence through the self-sacrifice and sin-bearing of his own well-beloved Son, on the cross. The song of salvation is: "Unto him that saved us, and washed us from our sins by his own blood." There is no allusion to purgation by suffering. Indeed such an idea is excluded by the purgation of blood.—Sel. by "C."

The Spirits in Prison.

ORTHODOXY AGAINST ITSELF.

1. They represent this life to be the only time of probation for all men, and its end is at death. Then inasmuch as all men receive their reward at death, how could Christ's preaching avail anything for those confined in the imagined underworld prison? Their state is irrevocably fixed. See their explanation of the Rich man and Lazarus. One cannot pass from either locality to the other. Now, the word cannot, will forever prevent any power from releasing those confined there, however penitent they may become. What! was God less wise then than now? Did he then suffer all men to go by chance to their destination? But says the immaterialist. There was then no place of happiness prepared, save one part of hades. But now the saints go to Paradise at death. But was this place prepared before or when Christ ascended? He says in Jno. 14: 1-3: "Let not your hearts be troubled &c., in my father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again!" No one is simple enough to risk their lives in a bark in the ocean till they know it is finished. We cannot know that this place is prepared till Jesus comes to tell us: for he has not promised to send us word, but declared he would come himself.

2. How could Christ be in hell among the damned, and in heaven or Paradise, at the same time? You tell us that he conducted the thief immediately from the cross to Paradise. Then he was there three days, receiving the praises of the thief. So when he (or his body) was raised from the grave, he descends the second time, which makes a second coming. Thus Universalism is made true by orthodoxy.

3. As that mode of explaining 1 Pet. 3:19, extends probation beyond death, why make such an effort to convert sinners, since they can all have the privilege of redemption hereafter? For God is not partial; and if he preached there, he left the gospel there for the succeeding generations or inhabitants of that locality.

4. If you claim that he went to preach to the righteous who were confined there, I will ask you to read more carefully: for Peter says they "were disobedient;" and if so they were not very righteous. Christ said that he "came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." How will you extricate yourself from this dilemma, brother immaterialist. Your theory cannot stand. God's ways are equal, and do not cross each other. God is his own interpreter, and he can make it plain. Listen to his plain declarations, and those of his apostles, and all those difficulties will give way like mist before the sun.

Who were the Spirits, and where the prison. 1. You must note that a person is not a prisoner unless they realize their prison. 2. They must be placed in a position to comply with the conditions antecedent to reprieve those conditions you know they were deprived of if in hell, or anywhere beyond the grave. Peter says (v. 20) "who some time (not all time) were disobedient." When? "When once the long suffering of God waited, in the days of Noah." How long? While he was preparing the Ark, wherein only eight souls were saved, by water. And he let his disciples know that under any dispensation a few only will be saved.

Then the spirits were living beings or persons. These persons were Noah and his family. But, says the objecter, Noah was righteous. Turn to Heb. 11:7. "By faith Noah being warned of God, of things not seen as yet, moved with fear (Marg. being wary), prepared an Ark to the saving of his house, by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith. Now we see that he became heir of the righteousness which is of God (Is. 54: 17) he same as we become heirs of God and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ.

Again (1 Pet. 4: 6). "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. Now we know that the wicked never can live according to God in the spirit; hence they must have been those seven persons who believed the preachings of Noah, and complied with the conditions of salvation, i. e. went into the Ark.

They were in prison. From the time that Noah began to herald the judgments of God coming on the world he was ridiculed and tormented by a wicked and gainsaying people, and became anxious for his deliverance from that prison of sin and folly and unbelief. And in conclusion let me say that the prison still exists and will to the end of time. Time would fail me to refer to numerous Scriptures bearing on the subject. Christ has finally completed the plans and made known to us the conditions of our eternal deliverance. The Gentile race who could only approach to the outer gate of the Temple, two hundred steps from the altar and leave their sacrifices there, are now assured that made nigh by the blood of Christ, our hearts are cheered with the words falling from the lips of the patriarchs and prophets. See Is. 42: 6: "And give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness of the prison house." (ch. 6: 1.) "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me: because the Lord hath annointed me, to preach good tidings unto the meek, hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to all the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God. (Mat. 4: 14): "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of by the prophet Isaiah." (Lk. 2: 30): "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, a light to lighten the Gentiles."

God grant that we may all comply with the conditions of life, faith in Christ, and so be finally saved, is my prayer. amen. N. C. MILLER.

The Lord is Good.

How good our Lord is to be so mindful of the children of men and to love them so freely after they had disobeyed and forfeited all right to life, and were doomed to lie down in the night of death, to sleep a perpetual sleep. God was so mindful, and loved us so freely as to give his only and well beloved Son to die, and open the way of life and immortality. Now he gives out the invitation to all the ends of the earth to come unto him that they may be saved from the wrath to come, and have eternal life. He gives the invitation to the weary and heavy laden, to come and learn of him to be meek and humble and they shall find rest to their souls. Yes, whoever will, may come and drink of the water of life freely.

How good he is to send his Holy Spirit into the world to call after us, and to incline our hearts to yield and accept the offered mercy; and to adopt us into his family and permit us to call him "Our Father."

Moreover he has told us to come to him as children to a parent, asking for things we need, and he has promised to answer. Praise the Lord for his goodness. He will never turn us empty away, nor fail to prove himself a friend at hand in every time of need, and never a God afar off, but nigh to them that put their trust in him. He gives strength and grace sufficient for every trial, not allowing us to be tempted above that we are able to bear, and when we are tempted makes a way for our escape.

How often, as we pass along through the trying scenes of earth, he meets us by the way and blesses, comforts, cheers. In how many ways he manifests his love, his watch-care over his dear children. He has promised to never leave nor forsake us, but to be with us even to the end of the world, and then save with an everlasting salvation, to ever be with him and meet the great family of God all at home. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the faithful will be there, and we may share his glory, all at home in the City of our God. I long to be there. I expect to be there. I have passed through trials; I may have to pass through more; but he is able to keep me, and none is able to pluck me out of his hands. Brethren and sisters, I expect to meet many of you there too. Although we are living in perilous times, and I am expecting a "sifting time" before Jesus comes, yet fear not. Let us set our faces as a flint Zionward. Trust him as faithful in the future as he has been in the past. How much there is to stimulate us to faithfulness, to perseverance.

Now is the time for decision. No halting now; no looking back, but on, right on to victory. Life, life, eternal life is before us!

Poor sinner, will you live on, careless and unconcerned, notwithstanding all that has been done for you, in spite of all the love manifested in your behalf? God gave his dear Son for you. Jesus died for you. He pleads for and strives with you; and all the glories that are promised are for you if you will accept them. Do you believe? Will you not come?

MRS. J. W. FINN.

Beauties.

We love to see and contemplate beautiful objects. Whatever comes the nearest to our ideals of things and beings, impress us as especially beautiful. And when man rises in the full integrity of his nature, and firmly resolves to forsake the wrong, to cleave, only to the right, we love such men; and the better they live up to these principles, the more we love the good and admire the God-given endowments.

In nature everything pleases the eyes, and rejoices the hearts of men. The rich valleys, the fertile plains, the foliage of the forests, the mighty ancient hills, the fruits of the tropics, the pleasant gardens of the east, the flowery regions of the West, old caves, deep caverns, nature's wonderful retreats, the majestic splendor of the sea, and here and there, solemn and sublime sceneries, which for us to exclaim, beautiful, beautiful!

Now it is certain, that we all love these fading temporal things. But God through his blessed word offers us on easy terms a world, or an inheritance whose supreme loveliness and beauty, shall never, no never fade away. "He will give unto them that mourn, beauty for ashes," and at the end of time their "eyes shall see the King in his beauty." If worthy, "this mortal" shall enjoy the perfection of immortality. He will beautify the meek, with salvation. We may wear the unblemished bridal dress. Our feet shall press only pure gold in eternal carpets; peculiar crowns, shall adorn the brows of the wise and holy ones. The heavenly built and adorned mansions shall be your home. As the curse is lifted, the earth shines in a long forgotten beauty. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the firtree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle-tree. All the earth shall be filled with the glory of God.,, Our eyes will always love to behold the miraculous beauty of that glory furnished realm.

Do we love God's own account of the world that is to come, enough to make the preparation, that will enable us to share in the Good; to know the True, and to enjoy the Beautiful in Christ's kingdom, through the on-coming ages of eternity?

Reader, may God give you strength to do this, and save you, is my prayer.

G. M. BUTTON.

One Faith.

I feel as if every Christian should rejoice in a full triumph over the spirit of anti-Christ which is so clamorous for the life and blood of the saints of God! We can concieve of no more than one Christian spirit among men. The New Testament speaks of only one Christianity; and of that are we all, who are of the true faith. Christianity is the great event of the world. "Now, if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." The Spirit is not the fruits of it, but the Spirit Christianity never bears vicious fruits. We neither gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles.

The fruits of the Spirit are a glorious classification of exalted virtues. "Now the fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance." This shows the unity of the Christian faith. In it there is no divisibility, but a unity of one Lord and one faith. Christianity never slew a man by the sword, never engaged in slander against anyone; never unchristianized even one man because of his church title; never sneered, or mocked, or jeered because one had not the same pet hobby, or darling ism as another. It never hindered a good work, nor yet persecuted the faithful. Christianity never persecuted! Let Huss, Cranmer, Rogers and Latimer tell you if Christianity ever put a torch to one faggot to consume the sons of God!

It is not in the least difficult to tell what Christianity has done for the good of men. Christianity begins in love, centers in love, and ends in love.

"Glorious things of thee are spoken, Zion, City of our God."

All earth - combined cannot overthrow the Christian Spirit, nor yet the Christian faith. "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle, who shall dwell in thy holy hill?....He that taketh up not a reproach against his neighbor."

Oh! let us have the one true faith which ever makes for peace; and in that kingdom we shall have crowns of glory, and of life!

J. A. NEWTON.

Verbal Philosophy

Every man's words and expressions have a peculiar value. To know exactly what a man means, you must know the vocabulary of the man,—his method of verbal measure. Some men and women are full of superlatives for every thing;—hence, as Lavater says—they have no measure for the great or small. Words, like money, are subject to discount; when used above or below the lexicon standard, the discount has to be made to reduce them to par. What is true of individuals is true of denominations. The same word is often employed by them respectively, in very different senses. The word Elder is used, by the Baptists, Presbyterians and Reformers, in a sense, each differing from the other. So of baptism and many other words, some of great doctrinal significance. The vocabulary of religious denominations must, therefore, be studied in order to understand their doctrines. "Words are but lackeys to sense, and will dance attendance without wages or compulsion."

Some persons are prone to censure; they find fault with everybody and every thing. They have carefully studied the law of abuse—its rhetoric—its adjectives, invectives and opprobriums. To listen to them, we should conclude that the world is all wrong.

Others there are who are prone to look at the sunny side—a word of praise to every one and of every thing. Now, to know what importance to attach to what is said by these respective classes, is to know their respective vocabularies. The study of Lexicons may give a man knowledge of words, but if he would know there use and application he must study men.—Western Recorder.

The Cry.

There is to accompany the proclamation, which is to be given with strength of voice, "Behold, the Lord God will come; .... behold, his reward is with him." Is. 40: 9, 10; 62: 6. 7, 11; Rev. 14: 6, 7; 22: 12.

The cry of mortality! "The voice said, Cry. And he said what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field; the grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever. Is. 40: 6–11.

Our mortal race should be made to know and feel that naught of human form, beauty, glory, or goodliness, survives the withering blast of death; but like "the grass" and "the flower" of it in the burning furnace, "which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven." Matt. 6: 30. Man, physical and mental, perishes in death. And the only hope of future reward and future life is dependent upon the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to judgment.

When men see their mortality, then they will desire and seek the immortality the gospel proffers them. When they are made to know that there is no future reward nor recompense without the coming of Jesus, then they will begin to pray for his return, and "love his appearing."

Let us "cry." Let us "cry aloud and spare not." Let us preach the mortality of man and the immortality in Christ. Peradventure some in the darkness may comprehend it and be saved.—O. R. Fassett.

A Pointed Sermon.

More than one hundred years ago, there graduated at Harvard University a man by the name of Grindoll Rawson, who subsequently settled in the ministry at Yarmouth, on Cape Cod. He used to preach very pointed sermons. Having heard that some of his parishioners were in the habit of making him the object of their mirth at a grog-shop, he one Sabbath preached a discourse from the text: "And I was the song of the drunkard." His remarks were of a very moving character, so much so that many of his hearers rose and left the house in the midst of the sermon. A short time afterward, the preacher delivered a discourse still more pointed than the first, from the text: "And they, being convicted out of their own consciousness "went out one by one." On this occasion no one ventured to retire from the assembly, but the guilty ones resigned themselves, with as good grace as possible, to the lash of their pastor.—Memorial of Rawson Family.

The Christian Life.

"'Too late, too late!' who has not said,
The post is out—the train has gone—
The time is fled—the debt not paid—
The aid not sought—the work not done.
Neglect makes up life's weary freight,
And then we cry, 'Too late, too late!'"

INVISIBLE CHRISTIANITY.—"I would not give much for your religion unless it can be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine." True but brother Talk Well does not think so; he "talks well," and that answers his purpose. A few, more than doubt his honesty, but they must be uncharitable as he excels them in talking.

LET amusements fill up the chinks of your existence, not the great spaces thereof. Let your pleasures be taken as Daniel took his prayers—with his windows open; pleasures which need not cause a single blush on an ingenuous cheek.

REMEMBER that God is no curious or critical observer of the plain expressions that fall from His poor children when they are shut in their closets. It is not a flow of words, or studied notions, seraphic expressions, or elegant phrases in prayer which take the ear or delight the heart of God, or open the gate of glory, or bring down the best of blessings upon the soul; but faith, uprightness, holiness, heavenliness, spirituality, and brokenness of heart—these are the things in the saved man's experience that make a conquest upon God and turn most to the soul's account.

The Congregationalist has this good word suited for all Christian papers:—

"It is a delightful thought to us that probably every week some readers find a new interest in our columns, because they have just begun the new life in Christ Jesus. Welcome, blessbrother, to the fellowship of the dear ed gospel! Welcome to the life of faith, the walk with God, the heavenly service, the glorious reward! Walk in the spirit; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks. Let the light shine upon you, and within you, and thus be yourself a light in the world."

We serve a just God, not a hard master. He puts upon us no more task than we can accomplish, but he expects us to do our work well. He gives us materials and tools, and expects us to use our material to the best advantage and to keep our tools in excellent order. He gives us his message to deliver to our perishing fellow-sinners. It does not please him if we give them something else instead of it. It does not please him if we mangle the message so that they cannot understand it, or tell it in such a tiresome way that they go to sleep instead of listening to it.

BELIEVE ONLY.—What had the women who touched the hem of our Lord's garment heard? Nothing of his kindness towards herself, but towards others, and upon this she believed. So a rope is but cast into the sea, to a multitude of drowning men, and all are bidden for their life to lay hold on the rope, that they may be saved. It were unreasonable and foolish curiosity for any of these poor men, commanded to hold fast the rope, to dispute whether did the man who cast down the rope intend and purpose to save me or not? and while my mind is perplexed on that point, I will not put out my finger to touch the rope. Fool! dispute not, but lay hold on the remedy.—Rutherford.

THE WONDERS OF PRAYER.—Abraham's servant prays—Rebekah appears. Jacob wrestles and prays, and prevails with Christ—Esau's mind is wonderfully turned from the revengeful purposes he had harbored for twenty years. Moses prays—Amalek is discomfited, Joshua prays—Achan is discoverd. Hannah prays—Samuel is born. David prays—Ahithophel hangs himself. Asa prays—a victory is gained. Jehoshaphat cries unto God—God turns away his foes. Isaiah and Hezekiah pray—one hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrians are dead in twelve hours. Daniel prays—the lions are muzzled. Daniel prays—the seventy weeks are revealed. Mordecai and Esther fast—Haman is hanged on his own gallows in three days. Ezra prays at Ahava—God answers. Nehemiah darts a prayer the king's heart is softened in a minute. Elijah prays—a drought of three years succeeds. Elijah prays—rain descends apace. Elisha prays—Jordan is divided. Elisha prays—a child's soul comes back. The church prays ardently—Peter is deliverd by an angel.—Rev. J. Ryland.

Have you truly repented? Many are sorry for their sins when their guilt is discovered. Many have sorrow when they see and feel the consequences of their sin. If those results did not follow they never would grieve on account of it; their love of sin would not be destroyed, they never would forsake it. Do you love the sin, and regret the evil it brings? This sorrow ends in remorse and despair. Think of him against whom you have sinned. How does God regard it? He says, "Do not this abominable thing which I hate." However pleasing to you, God hates it. It never can be reconciled to his holiness.

In this light how does it appear to you? How have you forgotten God? How have you trampled on his law, resisting his will? How have you spurned his goodness, disregarded his justice, defied his power, and insulted every attribute of his nature? In every sin, however pleasing, you will find the ultimate element to be, hatred of God. Do not shrink from considering this. See it in all its enormity. Can you be indifferent to its true character?

Think of the love of God in giving his Son to die for your sins. Think of the offers of his mercy, the calls of his word and Spirit; against all these you have sinned. Can you cherish or hide it in your heart? Do you not grieve that you have offended your heavenly Father? Do you not loathe sin, and loathe yourself as polluted and offensive in his sight? Then have you godly sorrow, repentance toward God. This is repentance unto life, as leads to and is followed by spiritual life. It will lead you to Christ.

You are conscious of the burden of guilt, and ask how can it be rer[illegible] what must I do to be saved? T[illegible] earnest inquiry the only and su[illegible] answer is, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." His blood cleanseth from sin. Bring your burdened heart to the cross with humble, hearty, full confession, renouncing all trust in yourself. "See all your sins on Jesus laid." Pray with all your heart, "God be merciful to me a sinner;" and as the publican went down to his house justified, so surely shall you be forgiven.—Zion's Herald.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, ... ILLINOIS

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, June 25, 1878.

A WRITER in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, depicting a death-bed scene, says the dying one saw and conversed with 'angels,' 'among whom were departed relatives.' Won't the good brother tell us what these angels, at present, will be when they are resurrected? Will they turn humans again? And as the resurrection only makes us equal to angels in the point of deathlessness, would it be just as well, if the dead are already angels, to dispense with the 'rising again' of the dead? Undoubtedly. And to denial of the resurrection, in toto, the mass of immaterialists are tending.

FROM Old England comes a word of encouragement. Br. W. K. Colling writes from London: "The balance of the Postal Order you will please accept toward the expense of your removal to Chicago; upon which I congratulate you, being confident that much good will result therefrom, both to your office and the church."

Our brother is fully a believer in the doctrine of Paul: and although well-stricken in years, he is comforted beyond expression in prospect of the glory to be revealed at the coming of Jesus.

A PULPIT orator recently 'clinched' an argument for the immortality of the soul by setting forth 'the fact that the entire New Testament is based upon this belief.' This is simply equivalent to saying that the New Testament is 'based' upon the teachings of heathen philosophy. And if one may judge from evidence, this originally heathen doctrine is now the capstone as well as the foundation of the Christian system. This exaltation of philosophy over the great fact of revelation, as related to a future of life, the resurrection—were it not in most a sin of ignorance—would be little better than sacrilege. The assertion that the Scriptures assume the immortality of the soul is an assumption sorely in need of a few fig-leaves of argument to cover its illy-concealed nakedness.

THE progress of sectarianism seldom finds a better illustration than in the following anecdote from the Spectator. The reviewer calls it the sublimest flight of logical daring in the whole history of the church universal, is related of an old woman who formed one of a band of seceders who had come out from communion with another band of seceders, from one of the sections of the national church. The process of mutual separation did not stop even here, however, but the faithful remnant dwindled away till the old woman and her husband were left forming a dogmatic fellowship of their own.

"I suppose, Janet," said an intellectual Sadducee to the dame who thus sat in the Olympian solitude of Calvinism, "that you believe yourself and John to be now the only true members of Christ's Kirk." "Weel, mon," replied the intrepid theologian, "I'm nae so sure o' John!"

THE New York Tribune says:

We are somewhat inclined to believe that the Earl of Shaftesbury should be shut up as a person dangerous to invalids of weak nerves and morbid minds. This singular nobleman lately stated in Exeter Hall that he had consulted with several of the most eminent British geologists, and was fully authorized by these learned persons to state that England was but the lid of a dreadful well of fire; that there might at any time come a crumbling of the surface, which would convert the whole island into one huge volcano! His object in making these warm statements was undoubtedly the good one of startling everybody into repentance of their sins; but if he only succeeded in making a great many maniacs, we think that he had better have kept his volcano to himself.

—The man who conducts the minor editorial department of the Tribune evidently carries a bad conscience: about once a month, regularly, he pleads that nobody will say a word about the end of the world, or the judgment, or possible great physical convulsions, for fear somebody will go crazy. He is evidently of the class who want smoothe things, even if they must be indulged at the expense of the truth. What is he afraid of?

'HERMON church has lost a member. The heavenly host has one added.' So writes an enthusiastic immaterialist near the close of a lengthy obituary, which he closes by saying—'God grant to all readers of this so glorious a death!' The resurrection is not hinted at. It is considered of no account. The thought of it does not even intrude upon the mind. We recently carefully scanned more than one hundred successive obituaries in some half dozen orthodox papers, and found not one allusion to 'the hope and resurrection of the dead.' This is the legitimate fruit of the perversion of two or three passages like Phil. 1:21-25, making them teach a blissful, conscious state in death. The resurrection, which in the New Testament is a fundamental truth of the gospel, without which the scheme of salvation is a failure, has become literally a thing of no consequence. It would be well if every Christian church in the land could have posted in large letters in its place of worship, these words of Paul:

IF THE DEAD RISE NOT, THEN THEY THAT FELL ASLEEP IN CHRIST PERISHED WHEN THEY DIED!

Possibly the attention of some might be arrested, and the blasphemous neglect of a God-honored truth be to some extent remedied.

OUR CHICAGO OFFICE.

We are happy to announce to our friends that we have secured a neater, more commodious, and far more pleasantly situated office for the transaction of our business in Chicago.

Our Canal street office had become almost unendurable. A neighboring hotel (after we had leased our room, expecting the other rooms in the building would be occupied as offices) leased all the rooms around and above us, and all of the cooking department was located next door. The noise of dishes, pans, and tongues became quite intolerable. Mr. Swallow, proprietor of the Barnes House (which by the way is a good house to stop at), purchased our lease, and we have taken a room in Newhall and Stewarts' new building, No. 25 West Lake Street. We will welcome our friends as cordially as at the old quarters, and afford them a far pleasanter reception so far as room and resting place is concerned. We hope none of our friends visiting the city will fail to give us a call.

Rememember the place: one block north of the old office; corner Canal & Lake streets. Entrance 25 West Lake. Room 7.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

LEXINGTON, THURSDAY, May 23. After the heavy rain the sun shines today and all is beautiful. We have dried and cleaned our garments from wet and mud, and are ready for another drive, and all in good health. We came eleven miles to Port Sanilac. On arrival we found a good congregation waiting to hear the word. I spoke from Joel 2:28, 29, on the out-pouring of the Spirit. There was deep feeling on the part of many, which led us to hope for good in our efforts here. We hope to see some souls brought to Christ.

I find that Eld. Lyons, the Methodist pastor here, has been rather a reckless opponent, and has by his unwise course injured himself and people, and helped Br. Wright and the Advent church. Men have the right to reject our views of truth and put them down by fair argument if they can. But sooner or later they will find that lying, deception, and persecution are not the best means to kill Adventism. We give them fair warning that we shall not be cowed or crushed by popular wrath. Let them meet us with the word of God, before the people, and we will quietly abide the result.

Since I was here last week, both the Methodist and Congregationalist pastors have given countenance to a Mormon Elder, by attending his meeting with their members and giving him their sympathy because he advocates the immortality of the soul against the Adventists. With these professedly orthodox Christians, Mormonism is preferred to Adventism. Well, we are content. If they can support Mormonism, a well known imposture of the last days, we have nothing to say. The head of the Mormon Church, Joseph Smith, claimed that the ghost of John the Baptist ordained him to the priesthood of Aaron, and that the ghosts of the apostles, Peter, James and John, also ordained him to the Melchizedek priesthood. And so the two priesthoods were blended in one in the person of Smith, who was thereby authorized to organize a new church. Was there ever a greater delusion, or lie? Surely, Christian men following the word of God, cannot give countenance to such imposition and be blameless. And yet, to sustain the dogma of the immortality of the soul, and eternal misery, men will associate with Spiritism, and the advocates of immaterialism in all its forms, from the Papacy down to Mormonism. Such is human nature.

FRIDAY, May 24. We visited the sick, of which there are quite a number in the church at the present time. How sad for the benevolent mind to witness the sufferings of the sick. The cough, the fever, and complicated diseases of humanity fastening upon their victims, lingering in wretchedness, fills us with sympathy. No wonder that when God would describe to us the happy state of the good, in the future life, he should say there shall be no pain or sickness there.

We conversed with many and read the word of God to them, and made supplications in their behalf. But this is only a part of the duty that Christians owe to the sick. Care and good nursing to the weak and helpless is another part of our Christian and humane work. And more attention should be paid to the suffering in this direction. Are we doing our whole duty to the sick and helpless?

At night I spoke again to a good company of anxious ones. But we can have no fire in the new chapel, and the air being cold and damp, and as many of the people are sick, we shall close our meetings here on Sunday night.

Sanilac is a fishing point. Some eight or ten fishing boats, and about thirty men are engaged in the business. The best of their fish are trout and white fish. They are taken in gill nets, set in deep water about thirty miles from shore. I made a visit to the wharf this a. m. and saw what they call a "lift" of some eight hundred pounds, brought in last night. The fishermen make a fair living in this business. Most of these men are believers in, or friendly to the Advent faith, and they highly esteem Br. Wright. Their nets are always open to him to take out the best fish for his table. The scenes of Galilee, on the Lake shore of Gennesareth, eighteen hundred years ago, were brought fresh to my mind as I visited these fishermen on the shores of Lake Huron. The Savior visited and talked with the fishermen there, and preached from their boats, and chose from among them Peter, John, and others, and made them "fishers of men."

SATURDAY, May 25. We visited the County House, now kept by Br. Harris. The buildings put up under the direction of Br. Arnot, are arranged for the benefit of the paupers, and the convenience of those having the care of these unfortunate ones. They have an excellent farm connected with the house; and the whole concern is managed with wisdom and humanity. These poor people could not have more kind and attentive care than is given them by Br. and Sr. Harris. "The poor ye have always with you," said the Savior. Many of these have seen better days. Here they are left to many painful reflections. But there is no remedy. Some of them find comfort in the "blessed hope," which, when realized will blot out all distinctions of condition, and make us alike heirs of the kingdom of God.

I put up at night, with Mr. Arthur Clark, who has arranged for me to speak in Lexington. The door is opening here for a church, which will be organized in good time.

SUNDAY, May 26. Preached this a. m. in Port Sanilac to a good audience, on the subject of peace and Christian blessedness, from Is. 26:3. And this closed my labors with this dear people. I felt sad to leave them, but duties elsewhere require it. Br. Wright spoke to them at night. Their house will soon be finished, and under the labors of Br. W. they cannot fail to prosper.

Rode ten miles to our next appointment, at 3 p. m., on Lexington Ridge. I endeavored to show that the Advent was much nearer than most, even among believers in its proximity, were expecting. There is but one event, that with our views of prophecy, is to take place before the Lord's coming. Turkey, being king of the North, is to "come to his end, and none to help him." (Dan. 11:45.) Then Michael, or Christ, is to stand up in the resurrection, and his kingdom. (Dan. 12:1-3.) We look with intense interest to the movements of the nations in the East, as being connected with the advent of the Son of God. And so we watch and wait events, knowing our Lord's coming "is nigh, even at the door." Lk. 21:25, 31.)

At night I spoke from 1 John 3:8. "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." I showed that the "seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head" (Gen. 3:15); and this would not be the perpetuation of his life, but its extinction, with the extinction of all evil beings, and sin and suffering also. At the close, a member of the Church of England asked me a question. He said: "Did I understand you to say that the Church of England taught the doctrine of eternal misery of the lost?" I replied that I did not. But the Church of England did hold that doctrine in her forty-two articles of faith, before 1552. But it was then left out, and is not now in her creed of thirty-nine articles. And lately, the highest court of the church has decided that endless pain is not a doctrine of the Church of England.

We rode to Lexington, six miles, in the darkness and storm, and found a shelter under the hospitable roof of Br. Arnot.

MONDAY, May 27. While at Br. Arnot's this a. m., my attention was called to a copy of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, which is now published in Dayton, Ohio, by the Christian Publishing Association, and edited by H. Y. Brush. It is the principal organ of the Christian denomination. It was originally started and published by Eld. Elias Smith, who with Eld. Abner Jones was the first to take the Christian name in New England, about sixty-five years ago. They came out from the Baptists with a view to come out from all creeds, and sectarian bodies. Eld. Smith was the chief scribe, and wrote much, and really started the first religious newspaper ever published, of which I have the first volumes, dating from 1808. Among the views that he advocated at that time, were the sleep of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. These views were rejected by Eld. Jones, but they agreed to disagree, and so they continued to work on together. But the materialistic views of Mr. Smith made the most progress, and the great majority of the preachers and churches adopted his theory of life and death. I united with the denomination in 1824, and labored with them until I embraced the Advent faith with many others of the denomination. But after 1844, many turned back, and finally I was requested by them to withdraw from the Conference because of my views; a thing I did not before think to do. There has been two classes from the beginning among the "Christians;" one holding with Eld. Jones, to the immortality of the soul, and the conscious intermediate state and eternal misery. The other holding with Eld. Smith, the mortality of man, sleep of the dead and entire destruction of the wicked. When I united with them in New Bedford, Mass., about 1824, I took Eld. Jones' view of the subject, and was then prejudiced against what was called "annihilation," though a majority went that way. But now the great mass of the preachers and people of that sect have gone over to spiritualistic views. I know of no people more given up to the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead between death and the resurrection, with the doctrine of eternal misery, than they. Indeed, one writer in the Herald lately advocated the doctrine of preaching to the spirits in prison, now in hell, to save them. It would not take them long to get back to the mother church in the strides they are now making in that direction. I am glad I made my escape in time from this apostacy, and have, by the grace of God given up old prejudices, and the Platonic philosophy, relating to the true nature of man.

I spoke this evening on the soul, giving the Bible view to a good audience of the citizens of Lexington. The Episcopal minister was out. The interest is intense.

THE MODERN APOSTLES.

A correspondent of the Detroit Tribune says:

One of the leading laymen of the city of New York, a few days since, in presenting a memorial before the Committee on Boundaries, urged, as a reason for it being granted, that it was from the heathen city of New York. He said that there were 600,000 people in the eastern portion of the city, and that there were but 5,000 Methodists in it, and gave the committee to understand that other denominations were in about the same ratio—that the ratio of Christians to the population of the city is far less than it was years ago. This is a startling fact—one that may well suggest the inquiry: "What is the matter?" I suppose many answers could be given. Does it not result from the selfishness of wealth? I do not say that New York and Brooklyn are not generous, but in all of the churches I have tried to visit, the pew-holders must be accommodated whether anybody else is or not. The churches seem to be built for the accommodation of the pew-holders—not for the salvation of sinners. I went to hear Henry Ward Beecher—than whom as a preacher none stands higher on the American continent. That night his address was on the strike of the working men—and he approved them as combinations against capital. He spoke almost bitterly about the wickedness of capitalist and the crimes perpetrated by the holders of property, and cognate matters. But who could hear him? Persons went to his church early. Unless they had pews, they must wait in the vestibule or in the street, no matter where, but not in the church.* A non-pew-holder in Plymouth church—a professedly Christian church—seems to have no rights. He could not buy a pew nor rent a pew—what business had he then—except to wait until the rich pew-holders were seated. I visited Dr. Storr's church—the church of the Pilgrims—last Sunday. There I encountered the same scenes. Aged men and frail women, as well as stalwart men and strong women and strangers, who desired to hear Dr. Storrs, could not enter that church of Christ until the pew-holders had been seated. There some of us stood for more than half an hour at the door of a church of Christ and no offer of a seat. A similar scene met us at Talmage's at night. Although the audience did not seem quite so richly dressed as at either of the other churches alluded to we were kept waiting. May there not be some fault here? May not these facts, if they attach to most of the churches as I am told they do, account in part for the failure of the church of Christ in New York? I know their churches are fine ones, well carpeted, softly cushioned, their organs are large, grand-toned, well played, preludes, interludes and voluntaries—their congregations finely dressed, intelligent, and more or less fashionable—their alters and pulpits and platforms and galleries festooned with flowers—the preachers are popular, drawing and world-renowned; but what of these? Are they filling the mission of a Church of Christ? Have they not all lost their aggressive power? The pew-holder can be accommodated; the outside sinner can wait until the pew-holder is seated, and then, and not till then, can he be even admitted to the house of God. No wonder it is a heathen city. No wonder the number of professing Christians does not keep pace with the growth of the city. No wonder that the neglected and the non-pewholders cry out, "No man careth for our souls!"

—It may be urged that there are other places where the seats are free, and that the people could go to them if they wished. Very true. But the apostles placed themselves in such relations that the common people could get at them, and they in turn could reach the people. Has any minister with power to reach the masses any right to hedge himself in with pews and pew-holders? Is not this misimproving his talent? Should he not seek a place where all may have an equal chance to listen to whatever gracious words his Lord may give him? We think so. Let the pewholders have the ministers who can only command the pew-holders; and let those who have power to move the masses be consecrated to the service of the masses. Would that we might have a reform.

Saint Gregory the Great.

In our late numbers we have given brief notices of the engrafting of Popery on the church of Rome, and of some of the agents employed in this work. Its consummation was witnessed in the year 606, when the Emperor Phocas constituted Boniface III., the Head of the Church, and the Spiritual Ruler af the world. The powers assumed by this first supreme Pontiff, are the powers now claimed by Pius IX., as if they were his rightful inheritance. It may be well for the people of our country to read and know more of the spirit and character of this priestly government, whose leaders boast of fifty thousand majority in New York, and that they will at length rule America. The deep humiliation of their poor old Pope has not suspended their boarting.

Gregory "the Great" as papists call him, whom they have also made "a saint" war one of the prominent actors in the drama enacted at Rome, at the beginning of the seventh century. He was the bishop of Rome, and before Phocas usurped the imperial scepter, he wrote to the emperor, Mauritius, denouncing in the strongest terms, the assumption of pontificial authority by a bishop, as "vain," "execrable," "anti-Christian," "blasphemous," "infernal," and "diabolical." He wrote also to John, bishop of Constantinople, condemning the title of Universal Bishop in the terms just cited, as if he were appalled by the wickedness of his rival in aspiring to the honors of a pontiff. At the same time, Gregory was earnestly seeking these honors for himself, and to aid him in securing the prize, he invented the "fiction of the keys," by which Peter, as the story goes, transmitted the power of opening and shutting the kingdom of heaven to his successors.

This Gregory was a representative character—the type of ecclesiastical politicians of every age, formed after the model found among the prophets in the notable person of Balaam. Such men are worth studying. They reveal to us the moral qualities of human nature in its true colors. While denouncing the "execrable" ambition of his rival, priest John, in seeking the title of 'Universal bishop,' he says in one of his letters to Mauritius: "The care and principality of the whole church is committed to St. Peter," and of course it belonged to him as Peter's successor in the bishopric of Rome. "Do I, (he says) most religious sovereign, in this, plead my own cause? Do I vindicate a wrong done to myself, and not maintain the cause of almighty God, and of the Church Universal?—In another letter to this emperor, (Mauritius) he compliments him on his "pious zeal, solicitude and vigilance for the preservation of the Christian faith as the glory of his reign, a subject of joy, not to the pontiff only, but to all the world." In another, he offers the warmest expressions of gratitude for the "pious liberality and munificence of his imperial majesty," and after telling him how much the priests, the poor, the strangers, and all the faithful, are indebted to his paternal care, he says that "all should pray for the preservation of his life, that the Almighty may grant him a long and quiet reign, and that after his death, as a reward of his piety a happy race of his descendants may long flourish as sovereigns of the Roman empire."

Yet, no sooner did the same saint Gregory hear of the successful treason of Phocas and his barberous murder of Mauritius and his family, than he exclaims, like one in raptures, "Glory to God in the highest," and invokes heaven and earth to rejoice in the general triumph over the extermination of the royal family for whose long continued prosperity he had just been offering his tearful prayers.* This is not the worst—he writes to the ruffian Phocas in words of the basest flattery, canonizing his crimes as if they were virtues, and transforming the criminal into a second Messiah, who had come for the comfort and salvation of God's people. All this is his bribe to the usurper to secure the smiles and honors of his imperial favor.

Such was the bishop, who was to hold the keys of St. Peter, and aided efficiently in laying the foundation of Papalt yranny in the heart of Christendom.

---

* Lachrymabile prece" is one of his expressions.

Have Mercy.

The fact that you invite your minister to the social board is evidence sufficient that you love and respect him, and let this suffice. Do not attempt to kill him with kindness, but leave him free to select such viands as he may desire. Remember that he has not the stomach of an ostrich with the power of a grist mill, that his body and brains are not made of whalebone or even hickory, but that he is somewhat like yourselves, subject to all the "shocks that flesh is heir to." Then as you love yourselves, have mercy on him, and heap not his plate even with the delicacies which you love most yourselves, for they may prove to him the horror of horrors. Something which you may regard as very nice may be to him a reminder of dismal visions and undescribable agonies—a universe in ruins with hope forever fled. His hair stands on end at the awful salad as it is tendered him; he is speechless but before he is aware of it this key to "the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds" is placed before him within smelling distance. No wonder the cold sweat is on his brow, and that his tongue cleaves to the roof of his mouth. A poor minister once remarked that he could endure toothache, tight boots, corns, yea even an empty purse, with comparative composure, but a lobster salad, the very smell of it was madness. He once liked it, but in an evil hour, while dining with one of his parishioners, partook of it too freely. For three months afterward in the pulpit and in the prayer meeting, he preached and prayed the terrors of the law with such awful seriousness that his people thought he was a little too doctrinal. He did not tell them that in the visions of the night he had been born, brought up and boiled alive as a lobster, with all the attendant feellings of a man. He felt himself man and lobster in two distinct natures, yet blended together. Since then he has lived on the plainest food, and whenever invited to dine, has privately requested the lady of the house not put anything that even looked like lobster on the table. No doubt an overloaded stomach has been the parent of many a gloomy sermon and dismal prayer. Have mercy then, good people all, and leave your minister to eat and drink as he may desire.—Sel. by W. S.

Departing and Being with Christ.

The following good illustration of the language of the apostle, expressing his desire to depart and be with Christ, is found in Gilfillan's work on the Sabbath, p. 450. It is given by Rev. John Jameson of Methven, Scotland. "A man," says Mr. Gilfillan, "at once of high genius the most saintly character, and the warmest, tenderest heart."

"For some time before his death, his mind on these occasions turneb frequently to the doctrne of the resurrection; and at one time, with the view perhaps of apologizing for this he sboke nearly as follows:—'My children, I never like to dwell long on the thought of death; that is a gloomy subject; my mind is always for bounding off to the bright morning of the resurrection, a morning so full of life, and peace, and joy. Ah! that is the morning which will vanquish death, and swallew up in perfect victory all the ill it has ever done to this poor heart of mine, by tearing asunder the finest ties which bound it to the earth and sending some of our fairest flowers to the dull, cold grave. Why should death, hold so many, all their days, in the bondage of its fear? What is it to die, but just to wink and be with Christ?' This thought seemed to dwell in his mind, and to yield him much enjoyment. When, not long before his death, a Christian friend spoke to him rather despondently of the long and weary ages that the body must lie in the grave, he replied in his usual hearty way, 'It is just as tomorrow morning; you never think the night is long when your sleep is sound.'"

This eminent minister could understand that, to the utterly unconscous, the period of time from death to the resurrection was as nothing; like a wink of the eye, or like the coming of the morning to one whose sleep is sound. It is evident that he saw no necessity for the modern spiritualistic view, that men go to their reward at death. His mind, like Paul's, was "for bounding off to the bright morning of the resurrection." Then the crown is to be given. "Henceforth [from the time the earthly course is finished] there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Neither the apostle, nor Mr. Jameson, looked to death for their rewardr but to the resurrection, which should give the victory over death. Yet those whose minds are filled with the idea that the real man escapes death wholly, may still contend that both held the now popular view.—Ad. Review.

Tendencies of Humanity

Canon Kingsley, the President of the Devonshire Association of Science, Literature and Art, this year in session at Bideford, England, in his opening address combatted the idea of a natural progress towards civilization and asserted that facts show that degradation in mankind was as easy and as common as progress.

You have only (he said) to leave civilized human beings to themselves for them to become savages, and the struggle of all wise and good men is to counteract that tendency in man to fall and not to rise. If I am asked for my facts on my side I answer, Facts! why we have hardly any facts which are not on that side. May God—for man will not—deliver us from the facts, they are so many. Are not all the philanthropists in the world working day and night to prevent the facts spreading and breeding by natural laws, and so ruining society? Go into any of our great cities and see what human beings become if left to themselves. Is not an average street Arab as very a savage as a Fijian, and far more of a savage than an Esquimaux? That is the natural tendency of man by the laws of his nature—not to become a Shakspeare, still less a Moses—but to become a dirty lying ruffian, like an average savage, and like alas! too many English men, and women, and childern. And I hold that if it were proven that men did begin in that low animal state then I must hold, in spite of all that has been said against my view that man never would have risen out of that state without some special influence—supernatural if you will (I am not afraid of the word) which has made him what he never could make himself—a moral and civilized and evenly a decently decent being. I heartily wish you would read what the Duke Argyll has said on this and other matters in his little book, "Primæval man." You will at least see why I couple moral and civilized. Because I attach a different meaning to civilization from that which most people, and I am sorry to say most phliosophers, now attach to it. They think too exclusively that civilization consists in mechanical appliances. Railroads and penny posts are now the great marks of civilization with some, just as billiard-rooms and the ballet are with others. But these are at best only the tools of civilization, and may become hereafter the tools of barbarism. Do not be startled. The civilization of a people is as independent of its steam engines and its ironwork as it is of the cut of its clothes, or even of its wearing any clothes at all. Civilization is not of the outer but of the inner man. The old Hebrew patriarchs were—according to the records—more civilized men than an average Parisian. Homer's heroes, as they stand in the Iliad and Odyssey, a thousand years, before the Christian era, with very few clothes indeed on when their armor was off, were more civilized men than their so-called descendants of the Greek Empire a thousand years after the Christians era. Civilization, I say, is within a man, and from within a man; and railroads no more make civilized men than billiard-tables do. They may use both; but they might be just as civilized if the two arts of steam and billiards had never been discovered.

Spurgeon and the Damned.

From a sermon by this great London preacher, having the caption "Regeneration," and preached from the text, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," I have culled the following sentences on lost souls:—

"The damned are lost forever, they cannot be born again; they go on cursing, ever being cursed; ever fighting against God, and ever being trampled beneath his feet; they go on ever mocking, ever rebelling, and ever being tortured with the whips of conscience, because they are ever sinning. They cannot be regenerated, because they are dead!"

With reference to the above, it is preached of men who are dead, and not of the last-day punishment. But how men can be dead, and yet at the same time be performing the actions of living men, in the way described by Spurgeon, is a wonder, since the second death is death both of body and soul. That passage in 23d Eohesians, and one or two others, need not be quoted; for their distortion, as explained by Calvinists, will appear to many who will carefully study the text. Further on, in the same discourse, Mr. S. makes remarks concerning "Baptismal Regeneration," which may be easily adapted to his own language as above. Says he:—

"Ah! that doctrine [of baptismal regeneration] only needs to be stated to sensible men, and they will at once reject it. Gentlemen who are fond of a filagree religion, and like ornament and show; gentlemen of the high Beau Brummel school, will very likely prefer this religion, because they have cultivated their taste at the expense of their brain, and have forgotton that what is not consistent with the sound judgment of a man, cannot be consistent with the word of God."

I think if Mr. Spurgeon would only look at these two sentences together, and think calmly of what he says of Dante and his "Il inferno" in the same sermon, he would be more chaste in his remarks on the lost, and would not assert that he seemed as if he had been in hell.—W. Kellaway, in Crisis.

"Berean" Christians are not as numerous as they should be; those who, when they hear a discourse from the pulpit, "search the Scriptures daily, whether these thngs are so," even when it is an apostle who has preached. Indeed, testing sermons by the Bible has so far gone out of fashion, that, in many churches, hardly a Bible is now to be found in all the pews! We were not a little pleased, therefore, the other evening, at the exercises of a certain "Conference meeting" in one of our city churches. A popular preacher from a distance, on the preceding Sunday, had delivered certain novel views to a crowded audience, and the sentiments uttered had been favorably recieved by not a few. But the "Bereans" had been at work with their Bibles, during the three intervening days, and the prayermeeting night brought out the result. One of the brethren opened a battery of heavy artillery on the preacher's position, from the word of God; several others unlimbered similar guns, and brought them to bear; and soon a connonade along the whole line swept away the last vestige of the alleged erroneous impression of the popular sermonizer. The truth was vindicated, Christian liberty had asserted itself; the Scriptures had been elevated to their true rank, above the dicta of human authority and human applause, and the church meeting had proved a happy balance to the pulpit. We commend afresh the Berean example?

Why should you not, my dear brother, live hourly in the power of full faith? Are there degrees in justification? Can God see the blood and yet see the sins it has washed away? There may be, indeed, differences of apprehension of the work of Christ; but is there any difference in the actual security of any who are standing under the sprinkled blood? If you trust in Christ, are you any less truly saved than the failing Peter, the prudent James, or the loving Apostle John? Do you expect to be more than saved? Are you any less than safe now that you trust in Jesus? I pray you to honor the testimony of Jesus so much, as to confess, even in the midst of your weakness, his strength and power; remembering that, though you be poor indeed, yet are you partakers of the riches of him in whom all fulness dwells.

Is it better to have such faith once only, and that not until the hour of death,—or to live all your life in the sanctifying power of it? Which honors Jesus the most? Let a dying Scotch saint answer you

As he lay on his sick bed, filled with joy and peace in the known and realized presence of his Savior, a dear friend entered and said to him with much concern,—"I trust you have a glimpse of the glory now, my brother?"

I'll hae' nane o'your glimpses noo that I'm dying," was the energetic reply, "since that I've been having a full look at Christ thae forty years past."

A young man under deep concern for his soul after long seeking, apparently in vain, complained to a friend that he did not know what the reason was why he did not find peace. This friend replied, "I can't tell you, but if you ask the Lord, he will." He accepted the advice, and on retiring for the night, asked the Lord to show him the difficulty. He believed in Christ, was willing to do anything, but found no peace. He fell asleep and dreamed. He thought he saw at a little distance a dense smoke rising, and went forward to ascertain from whence it came. He found it rose from a deep gulf of fire. He stepped to the edge of the precipice to look, and the crumbling edge on which he stood gave way and he fell toward the fiery billows below. He caught a bush which grew from the side of the precipice and his fall was stayed. There he hung with no way of escape. He looked up and thought Christ stood and looked on him. He cried, "O, Jesus help me." He replied, "then let go the bush." To do that seemed to him to be death: he hesitated, but looked and cried again, and received the same answer. And the third time he cried and Jesus said, "then let go the bush." He did it; and began to rise to the embrace of that Savior. He trusted. The lesson was perfect, he was saved. Then trust all to Christ. He saves.—From a Tract by the Am. Millennial Association.

Good, kind, true, holy words dropped in conversation may be little thought of, but they are like seeds of flower or fruitful tree falling by the wayside, borne by some bird afar, haply thereafter to fringe with beauty some barren mountain-side, or to make glad some lonely wilderness.

Beware of evil thoughts. They have done great mischief in the world. Bad thoughts come first, bad words follow, and bad deeds finish the progress. Watch against them. Strive against them. Pray against them. They prepare the way for the enemy of the souls.

Bad thought 's a thief; he acts his part;
Creeps through the window of the heart;
And if he once his way can win,
He lets a hundred robbers in.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The church at Montreal has had two accessions lately. Br. Chadwick has preached for them some of late. The cause is in health.——Br. Adrian has accepted an invitation to labor with the Iowa A. C. Conference. He will probably travel with the tent. See appointments. His address will be Cascade, Iowa. Those who wish meetings cannot apply too soon.

The Times.

ABROAD.

- - - According to the report recently presented in the Reichstag at Berlin 35,000 000 thalers will be required for the purposed establishment of the German navy, in addition to the 8,000,000 which already have been voted. For completing the ships now constructing, and to build new ones, 20,188 230 thalers will be needed for frigates; 6, 000,360 thalers for corvetts, and 370,800 thalers for avisos. The acquisition of some new naval stations abroad is also urged as an imperative necessity. The establishment, as proposed, should be complete in the year 1877.

- - - A Madras correspondent of the London Times sends to that Journal an account of the recent terrible hurricane. He says, "As well as can be known, it appears that thirty ships in all have been wrecked. Of these sixteen are visible. The disjecta membra line the shore. Two country ships struck the pier nearer the shore doing little damage, as they grounded at the same time, and they now hang out against the pier as if they were discharging cargo at a wharf. Not one will ever be got off—at least experience makes us judge so. It is not known how many lives were lost, for their is no register of native crews, and it is therefore impossible to say how many are missing. The number must be great. Eighteen Europeans are known to be lost; there may be others. Of the European survivors twenty-five or twenty-six are in the hospital grievously wounded by spars and the like.

"While we write, the news has come in that the storm has been very severe inland. A telegram from Vellore says the town is wrecked, and that 400 persons lie dead under the ruins, or have been carried away by the floods. We hope this is an exaggeration

"Madras itself is like a city that has been whipped. Trees lie every where about the roads. The native theaters of immense size are blown down. The ruins of poor native houses stare us in the face on all sides. There has been very little loss of life, although great loss of property.

Poetry.

The Old Man in the Stylish Church.

Well, wife, I've been to church to-day—been to a stylish one,—
And, seein' you can't go from home, I'll tell you what was done;
You would have been surprised to see what I saw there to-day;
The sisters were fixed up so fine they hardly bowed to pray.

I had on these coarse clothes of mine—not much the worse for wear—
But, then, they knew I wasn't one they called a millionaire;
So they led the old man to a seat, away back by the door;
'Twas bookless and uncushioned; a reserved seat for the poor."

Pretty soon in came a stranger, with gold ring and clothing fine;
They led him to a cushioned seat far in advance of mine;
I thought that wan't exactly right to seat him up so near,
When he was young, and I was old and very hard to hear.

But, then, there's no accountin' for what some people do;
The finest clothing now-a-days, oft gets the finest pew.
But when we reach the blessed home all undefiled by sin,
We'll see wealth beggin' at the gate while poverty goes in.

I could not hear the sermon, I sat so far away,
So, through the hours of service, I could only "watch and pray;"
Watch the doin's of the Christians sitting near me 'round about;
Pray that God would make them pure within as they were pure without.

While I sat there, lookin' all around upon the rich and great,
I kept thinkin' of the rich man and the beggar at his gate;
How, by all but dogs forsaken, the poor beggar's form grew cold,
And the angels bore his spirit to the mansions built of gold.

How, at last the rich man perished, and his spirit took its flight
From the purple and fine linnen to the home of endless night;
There he learned, as he stood gazin' at the beggar in the sky,
"It isn't all of life to live, nor all of death to die."

I doubt not there were wealthy sires in that religious fold
Who went up from their dwellings like the Pharisee of old;
Then returned home from their worship with a head uplifted high,
To spurn the hungry from their door with nought to satisfy.

Out, out, with such professions; they are doin' more to-day
To stop the weary sinner from the gospel's shinin' way
Than all the books of infidels; than all that has been tried
Since Christ was born in Bethlehem—since Christ was crucified.

How simple are the works of God, and yet how very grand—
The shells in ocean caverns—the flowers upon the land—
He gilds the clouds of evenin' with the gold light from his throne,
Not for the rich man only, but for the poor alone.

Then why should man look down on man, because of lack of gold?
Why seat him in the poorest pew because his clothes are old?
A heart with nobler motives—a heart that God has blest—
May be beatin' heaven's music 'neath that faded coat and vest.

I'm old—I may be childish—but I love simplicity;
I love to see it shinin' in a Christian piety;
Jesus told us in his sermons, in Judea's mountains wild,
He that wants to go to heaven must be like a little child.

Our heads are growing gray, dear wife—our hearts are beatin' slow—
In a little while the Master will call for us to go;
When we reach the pearly gateways, and look in with joyful eyes,
We'll see no stylish worship in the temple of the skies.

—J. H. Yates.

—A friend of ours tells us that in a popular Chicago church, he has actually been treated differently at different times according to the clothes he wore. A new and fashionable suit would secure him an excellent seat; while a rusty or work-day dress would secure a back seat. He once saw a poorly dressed man waved back by the usher, with the remark that the house was full, while scores of "genteel" people were afterwards politely and comfortably seated.—Ed. Times.

Communications.

Biographical Notice of Edward Waite.

Editor Times: Would you read some stirring and edifying sermons from the pen of one of the ablest of English divines, who holds to the Scripture doctrine of destruction? Send for the Hawley Road Pulpit. The sermon tracts are printed by Messrs. Warren, Hall & Co., 88 Camden Road, N. W. London, and cost one penny each. "No. 3," is entitled as follows: "Twenty year's teaching at St. Paul's chapel, Hawley Road, Kentish town." The substance of two discourses delivered March 17, 1872, by Rev. Edward White. On p. 8, the third section of the tract opens with an interesting biographical sketch, as follows:

"We now reach a subject where our divergence from ordinary opinion begins. The not far from universal teaching in the churches of Christendom for many ages has been that man's nature consists of a mortal body, and an immortal soul. It has been held that man's moral instincts teach him that his spiritual part survives dissolution, and goes forward for judgment, and it is further held that the Revelation of God deals with man in judgment as an undying intelligence, made in the image of God's eternity, and destined to an endless existence. Thirty-two years ago I picked up, by accident, a book in a Holborn bookstall,[1] written in 1817, by an Anglican layman, a Mr. James Fontaine, and dedicated to Bishop Herbert Marsh, in which it was stoutly maintained that this mode of regarding human nature has no solid foundation in nature or revelation; but, on the contrary, that the Bible, which never once from Genesis to Revelation speaks of man as an immortal being since the fall, teaches that sin brought the sentence of destruction of both body and soul upon man, from which he can be delivered only by the redemption in Christ. I had then never before heard of the doctrine of Conditional Immortality, and was at first revolted by it as contrary at once to my own prepossessions, and to the general faith of Christendom. I determined, however, to study the question with the utmost care, and soon found that in almost every generation there had existed advocates of it, including Archbishop Whately in our own century. Irenaeus, the scholar of Polycarp, the disciple of St. John, distinctly teaches the doctrine of literal death by sin, and eternal life in Christ only, and I found also that both in Europe and America, there are many in modern times who held it for the truth. Irenaeus was but one remove from the Apostles of Christ; and he thus writes in his second book against Heresies, ch. 64: "For life is not from us ourselves, or from our nature, but it is given or bestowed according to the grace of God; and therefore he who preserves this gift of life and returns thanks to him who bestows it, he shall receive length of days for ever and ever: but he who rejects it, and proves unthankful to his Maker for creating him, and will not know who bestows it, he deprives himself of the gift of duration to all eternity. And therefore the Lord speaks thus of such unthankful persons: 'If you have not been thankful in that which is least, who will commit much to you? intimating thereby unto us, that they who are unthankful to him with respect to this short transitory life, which is his gift—the effect of his bounty—shall be most justly deprived of length of days in the world to come.'"

"Further study and protracted inquiry revealed the strength on critical and theological grounds, of this doctrine—too often disguised under the one-sided form of a revolt against the tenet of eternal misery. After seven years of incessant labor in examination of the question, I was compelled to settle down to the belief that this indeed was the truth of God; and a truth so great that the main endeavors of a life-time might well be devoted to its promulgation, at whatever cost of personal suffering or professional advancement. I remember on one splendid starlight night, when the whole import of this enterprise, and the glory of this truth, seemed to burst upon my view, vowing to God, that if he would spare my life I would willingly endure all things if he would permit me to have a share in making this truth, if it were a truth, or its falsehood, if it were a falsehood, known among men. I now look back through these many years of labor and sorrow and joy, with thankfulness to the result. When we first opened this church for the purpose of preaching and teaching in London, there were but two or three persons who promised to assist me in the enterprise. But we can say to-day that partly through our conjoint endeavors, and partly through those of many other faithful laborers, all England now knows, at least of the idea of Conditional Immortality in Christ, and there is scarcely a missionary station upon earth where men have not at least set thinking upon its Scriptural evidence."

"The ground on which we have gone is that the orthodox rule of interpretation requires us to take the main current of language in all historic and legislative writings of Scripture in its literal sense, and that this acknowledged principle requires us to believe that when Scripture speaks of sinners perishing, it signifies the same thing as when it speaks of the heavens perishing; or the bread of this world perishing; that is, being organically 'destroyed,' and 'brought to nought.' And by the same rule we have taught that the eternal life, promised to believers only, signifies that they alone will 'live forever.'

'If ye live after the flesh ye shall die, but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.' We have taught that as God gave himself the name of Jehovah, or The Being,—He who is,—because only eternal being is real, so they only are said to live, who will live forever; while natural brute beasts (and men who are like them) made to be taken and destroyed, shall utterly perish in their own mortality. (2 Pet. ch. 2.) 'The world passeth away and the dust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever.' This truth we we have maintained on this spot for twenty years, and now 'great is the company of the publishers' of it in every land; and we thank God for it."

When I think of the hordes of egotistical politicians, and so-called philosophers, who parade their labors in large volumes of "Recollections," etc., who have not even maintained the wholesome secular truth with anything like consistency or honor, and contrast their self-laudatory tomes with the simple biographical chapter which this man presents, (after the manner of Paul,) my contempt for the former rises to the temperature of scorn; and I pray that I may be thought worthy, one day, to enter upon an eternal home, even an heavenly, with the humble Christian missionary.

The writings of Rev. Mr. White command the highest eucomiums, from the most accomplished Christian critics. Witness the following from the Evangelical Magazine, on Mr. White's Mystery of Growth. "For instruction, for suggestiveness, for originality of treatment, and for occasional felicity of style, these discourses have few equals in modern literature."

After recently reading Mr. White's little book entitled "On Some of the Minor Moralities of Life," I asked a friend, and one of the most appreciative scholars in this city (Dr. David Wooster, Superintending Surgeon of the Marine Hospital) to listen while I re-read aloud the essay entitled "On certain occasions for silence." And from that nothing would do, but we must enjoy the whole book together, in alternate recitals. Dean Alford, than whom there was no higher authority in all England, said of this work: "We confess to have taken great delight in the reading—we hope in the digesting—of this pleasant little book. There is a sparkle of real humor, a dry light, in the style. Mr. White is one of our choicest thinkers."

To quote from the index of his Minor Moralities is enough to excite one's appetite:

"On the duty of returning borrowed articles."
"On simplicity and affectation; on the natural history of the minx and the swell."
"On the love of flowers."
"On punctuality."
"On the duty of delivering kind messages."
"On keeping secrets."
"On ventilating houses and churches." [This last I especially commend in case anyone has read the pointless advice conveyed in the flabby English of Dio Lewis.]
"On defiance of the weather when we ought to go out."
"On some acts of wasting time."
"On reading too much."
"On the duty of sometimes hearing your children's lessons."
"On attention to the festive element in life."
"On fireside amenities, or thoroughness in home affection."

I hope I have not trespassed too much upon your limits for space in these quotations. All the goodly literature that is being built up by men of the true doctrine deserves our notice and proportionately our support. And I can speak from a full heart in respectfully advising your readers to consult the writings Edward White, the incumbrant of St. Paul's Church; Hawley Road, London.

C.

---

[1] For copious extracts from Fontaine see p.[illegible] and on of David Wardlaw Scott's "God Misunderstood."

The Ten Tribes of Israel.

These tribes revolted from David's kingdom under the leadership of Jeroboam, in the reign of Rehoboam, son of Solomon: Jeroboam centered his kingdom in Samaria, which kingdom, was distinguished by the names Israel, Ephraim or Samaria. Jeroboam built Shechem, in Mount Ephraim and dwelt therein, and went out from thence, and built Penuel. (1 Ki. 12: 25.) He reared two Calves, one in Bethel the other in Dan. (vv. 28 29), which led to great sin, and proved their ruin.

After the usual vicissitudes, of kingdoms, for the space of about 150 years, from the revolt, came Shalmanerer, King of Assyria, and carried Israel into Assyria, and placed them in Halah, in Harbor, by the river Gozan: and in the cities of the Medes. (1 Ki. 17: 3, 6.)

It is quite an essential thing in the theory of the "future age" to have these ten tribes "lost." The words, "The lost ten tribes" occurs in many books, and sermons. They are—nobody knows where! I have seen a book called, The Star in the West, which finds them in the aborigines of this continent. Mr. Wilson finds them in the Anglo-Saxons. They are heard from in remote Africa and China, etc. Thence, they must be returned to their own land.

There are vague speculations. We may say more. If they are not certainly false: they are very uncertain.

But the fact is these tribes were not lost: and the wonder is, that the fact has been overlooked by any. Let us look into this matter. In the first place, they could not have been allowed to go outside of the Assyrian dominion. Second. Left to themselves, migration would have been problemitical. Third. They were located in the cities of the Medes, which cities, it is no wise likely were in the outskirts, of the kingdom, affording an easy escape, if they had the mind for it. These localities, were not very remote, from Judah itself. Gidion fought the Medes (Jud. 6: 7.) Moses fled to their land from Egypt. Darius and Cyrus came from there. One can soon satisfy himself of the impracticability of an emigration by them by reading Dan. 2: 38; 1 Chron. 36: 23. Nebuchadnezer possessed these tribes in his reign: "Israel is a scattered sheep. The lions have drawn him away. First the king of Assyria hath devoured him, and last, this Nebuchadnezar, king of Babylon, hath broken his bones." (Jer. 50: 17.) Isaiah speaking of this calamity, says: "The Assyrian before, and the Philistines behind; and they shall draw Israel with open mouth." (ch. 9: 12.) That the king of Babylon had them in his costody, is beyond question. (Jer. 50: 17.)

The prophecies, restore Israel, as Judah from Babylon. "And I will bring Israel again to his habitation: and he shall feed on carmel." (Jer. 50: 19.) But when was this to be? "In those days, and at that time." This is not satisfactory: What days and what time? When Babylon shall be destroyed, and when the captivity shall be released. (Jer. 50: 18, 24–31.)

This form of words is used by all the prophets, and always was meant to apply to the times of the end of the seventy years. Joel is definite. "Behold! in those days and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah, and Jerusalem." (ch. 3: 1.)

Now if we will allow the book of Joel the coherence, that we allow to modern authors, we will accept of those days, and that time—and the captivity according to the intention of the author. He has previously spoken of terrible calamities upon his people embracing every variety of distress, with overthrow and captivity. For a nation is come up, upon my land, strong, and without number; whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek teeth, of a great lion. He hath laid my vine waste, and barked my fig tree: he hath made it clean bare; and cast it away." Joel 1: 6, 7.) Here is captivity, and doubtless this is the captivity referred to as above. But the great trouble in most minds, is to make this reading of Joel, and the other prophets harmonise with the existing fact, that we are living in a later time by thousands of years, and that the gathering of all nations into the valley of Jehoshaphat, has not occurred yet, and that great battle has not been fought yet, notwithstanding these things were set down to be at the end of the Jews' captivity in Babylon. Isaiah says the Assyrian should be destroyed at the end of the captivity. (ch. 10: 12, 25, 26; Jer. 25: 12, 15, 33; Ezk. 29: 8; Obd. 18: 21; Mic. 4: 13; Zeph. 3: 8; Hag. 2: 5–7.) As to the time when, see Zech. 9: 13–16. In Isaiah last chapter and last verse, this work of judgment is supposed to be done.

To resume the testimony of Israel's return. "The children of Israel, and the children of Judah, were oppressed together, and all that took them held them fast. They refused to let them go." Could they leave for parts unknown under such circumstances? "They held them fast!" "But their Redeemer is strong. He will give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon." (Jer. 50: 33.) This "rest" is at the time of Babylon's disquietude. At this time Israel and Judah go up, if they choose: Babylon goes down, whether she will or not. One other text. "In those days and at that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel and the children of Judah together, going and weeping. Would not such a case in our day be very like a farce? to see a procession of rich Jews, or poor ones, on foot, tramping for Jerusalem, weeping as they go, and "asking the way." Such a necessity could never occur. Any one can see, that the circumstances of these times and those, are very unlike, The names of nations, and means of transportation and such like are all peculiar to that time, the time when they were captives, poor, dependent, despised.

The Jews at this time, are in condition in all their circumstances altogether unlike those signified by the prophets, not being slaves any where. If they were to be restored to their land it would not be, and could not be as the prophets described—"to go weeping," or "on swift beasts," or on the "shoulders of Philistines," nor "asking the way to Zion," or in "ships of Tarshish," or on a "highway" constructed from the capital of Assyria to Jerusalem for their accommodation, when it would accommodate no Jew, because there are none there. To restore the Jews of this time, would be the third instance, not the second. Isaiah says, "The Lord will set his hand the second time, to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria" and other nations. The "second time" from the captivity of Egypt. (Is. 10: 11–16.) The futurists rely most or all upon Is. 11. But it will not answer. "Second time," is fatal to their interpretation.

The Septuagent was translated into the Greek by seventy-two learned elders—six taken from each tribe. How could this have been, except the ten tribes had been numerously represented after the captivity.

B. Matthias.

"Only a Little While."

Oh! how much there is in this short sentence—"Only a little while!" Then he that is to come will come and will not tarry. And with him will come that glorious retinue of holy angels, who now shout Hosannah to the Son of David. Also that holy city that shall rest upon the earth throughout the endless cycles of eternity. Within whose walls no ingruity shall enter. None but hallowed feet shall walk its golden streets. No polluted mind can ever pass its pearly gates. No thought save that of purity can dwell within its beautiful realm, while one perpetual day sheds its glorious radiance over all its inhabitants. The world redeemed from sin becomes the blissful home of the "blessed of the Father." "Only a-ttle while," and "whether we sleep r wake," we shall see the earth open ts scores of sepulchres, see it cast out ts dead, see them change from dust to uman forms. The wind breathes upon hem and they live. Oh! miracle of niracles! And their number is countess. Count the sands of the sea shore and the leaves of the forest, and the number is far inferior to this great and nighty army.

As I gaze in wrapt admiration upon this great and mighty host, I behold earth's honored ones, kings, and nobles, warriors and statesmen, with rich and poor, bond and free, all summoned to the bar of God. "Only a little while" and the great decision will be rendered. The just will inherit eternal life. The sinner will enter an eternal tomb.

"Only a little while" until all the ransomed will sing praises forevermore, having left the vale of mortality far behind. Then we can look back and cry, "O grave where is thy victory! O death where is thy sting!" "Only a little while" and all pain will be forever banished. No aching void will reign in any breast. Trials and troubles will be o'er and this whole universe, uncontaminated, wrapt in eternal wedlock with God and the Lamb. Yes only a little while and all these things will be. Short is the time, indeed, to warn a wicked world that eternity is at hand!

Who is ready for the eventful crisis? Christian are you ready to grasp the hand of Abraham, ready to lean upon the breast of Jesus, ready to walk the streets of New Jerusalem? Father, are you prepared to share eternity with those loved ones now in the land of the enemy, "who in a little while" will be bright jewels in glory? Mother, are you ready to be united to that little cherub who was wrenched from your arms by the cruel hands of death? Are you waiting with it to be clothed with immortality. Brother, sister, are you journeying on the road to endless life, to a home with all the redeemed?

I hear many voices exclaiming, yea and amen. O children of the Father. There is work for you, momentous work, and "only a little while" in which to labor. Then let us labor earnestly during the expiring moments of this "little while."

M. D. Peavy.

Our Warfare.

War terms are used to illustrate the Christian's various work. There being a necessary variety of armament for use on the field of battle we shall do well to study the illustration. In so doing we shall have our attention called to the variety of gifts in the church which is often overlooked. Take the call for enlistment. Those who do enlist are loyal to the government that calls them as volunteers, and are subject to obey orders, and take their proper place, but not all the same position. Some are qualified to train the troops to know how to handle the different pieces of armament. We see the engineer with his instrument for laying out the ground; the workmen throwing up entrenchments; the generals in proper place to supervise the whole; the cavalry with weapons of offence and defence, while the footmen have their appropriate equipments for the day of battle. The heavy artillery have accouterments and engines different from all the rest. From the highest officer to the privates in the ranks, each man in his appropriate position insures harmony in action and drives the enemy. The honors and benefits of victory belong to every loyal subject that took part in the effort. The men that laid out the works, those who dug in the ground, they who cast the bullets and balls, were all helpers. And after the battle, the surgeons and their helpers caring for their wounded, and the nurses in hospitals making bandages and scraping lint are entitled to a share in the honors of war according to their position, skill and efficiency.

A variety of work and workers is necessary. For any one man to put on the whole of "Uncle Sam's" armament at once—he could not carry it. Neither is it expected that any man shall put on the whole of God's armor at once. There is variety in work, and positions and weapons of defence and warfare. Some act as pickets, and are furnished for picket duty. Another is corporal or a sergeant. Others fill more or less responsible positions. If all are loyal and work faithfully in their sphere, everything will be harmonious in any church. But when we undertake to occupy a higher position than we can fill, then is trouble at once. There is more trouble arising from contention by some for their supposed rights and honors due them from among the causes. Suppose we should suddenly reverse some positions in time of war and put the general in charge of the hospital and the woman who had occupied these should take the field and saddle. What confusion would result! The excellent nurse cannot guide her horse, wield her sword or speak loud enough to be heard. She has got out of her place. So the general sewing bandages, scraping lint, and washing sore limbs, makes the soldier wish that the good woman that cared for them so efficiently and tenderly, were back again, and the general were once more on his horse, and that the experiment of putting the nurse at the head of the army was at an end.

We shall find that God always sets such at work as can do the work he sets them about.

Hiram Munger.

Fence In Your Fields.

It is of little use to plow, plant, and sow, if the field is not enclosed. Though the seed may take root and grow, there are plenty of cattle and swine always prowling around to destroy the crop. There are some men that run over a large amount of land, they say, to cultivate it. Their farms are not fenced, or half cultivated. The result is, what they sow and plant is destroyed. In the harvest time they have no crop.

So it has been with us, to a great extent, as a people for the last few years. Many fields have been broken up, the seed sown and then left for destruction. No church organized, no one to look after the lambs or the sheep. They are left to scatter, while the minister hastens to another section, puts in the gospel plow, breaks up a new field, and leaves it, also, without a fence or any one to watch it. This is all wrong. One acre of land well tilled and fenced is worth more than ten, half taken care of. Every one will admire the well cultivated "patch," while they will look on the other with disgust.

I was glad to see Br. Field's article in the Times on disorganizers. It is time to speak plain on this subject. We need order. We have been imposed upon altogether too much. I am glad to see the brethren waking up to the subject of organizing Conferences and churches. If we succeed in spreading the gospel, we must have order and system. Where a field is opened, organize a church, set then to work, appoint proper officers, and proper men to look after the interests of the cause. Let there be "elders and "deacons" as in the apostolic church. If it was right to have churches in Paul's time, and elders and deacons, it is right to have them now. We need pastors as well as evangelists; men who will look after the flock. May the Lord help us to be a united people, working together as one man to build up the cause of truth.

M. R. Miles.

They who are the fullest of faith and richest in good works make the least sound; when their hearts and lives, like the face of Moses, shine brightly with grace and holiness, they do not, they will not know it. They consider their greatest light and lustre is but a reflection from the Father of lights, and therefore they have no reason to boast at all of borrowed goods.—Swinnock.

Our Young Folks.

A Hint to Boys.

Richard is a boy of sixteen, or thereabouts, and a week ago he came to the city to find something to do. He is strong, active, intelligent, willing to work, and a Christian. But last evening when he came into the room it was evident that he and his cigar had but just parted company.

"Why, Richard, do you smoke?" was asked, in surprise.

"Well, yes, occasionally; not much, though—only about two cigars a day," he stammeringly replied.

When he was urged to give up the practice he said that he would give a great deal if he had never begun it, but he had smoked ever since he was twelve years old, and it seemed as if he could not stop now. He had begun it in play, and never thought but he should be able to stop when he wished to; but a few weeks before he had tried, and found that it was not so easy as he had imagined. Think of it once—only sixteen, and already bound by fetters that are so hard to break. To say nothing of the expense, which he can ill afford, if he keeps on as he has begun, what chance has he of ever getting out of this bondage into a free manhood? If his will is so feeble now, what will it be in the years to come? And all those other boys whom we see going about the streets with pipes and cigars in their mouths—the time will surely come when they will deeply regret that they had ever begun the practice. We never knew an old tobacco user who could say he was glad he begun to smoke or chew. The only safe rule is never to touch such things. If you never begin, you will never have to stop.

In some places the boys are forming societies called Anti-Tobacco Leagues, pledging themselves to abstain from its use and to try to influence others to do likewise. To forward this movement, Miss Julia Coleman, 139 Park avenue, Brooklyn, has issued a little pamphlet giving full particulars and directions for organizing and carrying on these societies, which, with a pledge-book, will be sent to any one enclosing his address with ten cents.

Bonnie Christie.

Two boys were in a school-room alone together, when some fire-works, contrary to the master's express prohibition, exploded. The one boy denied it; the other, Bonnie Christie, would neither admit nor deny it, and was severely flogged for his obstinacy. When the boys got alone again—

"Why didn't you deny it?" asked the real delinquent.

"Because there were only we two, and one of us must then have lied," said Bonnie.

"Then why not say I did it?"

"Because you said you didn't, and I would spare the liar."

The boy's heart melted—Bonnie's moral gallantry subdued him.

When school resumed, the young rogue marched up to the master's desk and said, "Please, sir, I can't bear to be a liar—I let off the squibs," and burst into tears.

The Master's eyes glistened on the self-accuser, and the unmerited punishment he had inflicted on his schoolmate smote his conscience. Before the whole school, hand in hand with the culprit, as if they two were paired in the confession, the master walked down to where young Christie sat, and said aloud with some emotion: "Bonnie—Bonnie, lad—he and I beg your pardon—we are both to blame!"

The school was hushed and still, as older schools are apt to be when anything true and noble is being done—so still they might have heard Bonnie's big-boy tear drop proudly on his pocket-book, as he sat enjoying the moral triumph which subdued himself as well as the rest; and when, for want of something else to say, he gently cried, "Master forever!" the glorious shout of the scholars filled the old man's eyes with something behind his spectacles, which made him wipe them before he resumed his chair!—The Dayspring

Fish.

"While living at Durham," says Dr. Warwick, "I took a walk one evening in Lord Stamford's park. On reaching a pond in which fish were kept ready for use, I observed a fine pike of some six pounds weight. At my approach he darted away like an arrow. In his hurry, he knocked his head against an iron hook fixed in a post in the water, fracturing his skull, and injuring the nerve optic on one side of his head. He appeared to suffer terrible pain; he plunged into the mud, floundered hither and thither, and at last, leaping out of the water, fell on the bank. On examination, a portion of the brain was seen protruding through the fractured skull.

This I carefully restored to its place, making use of a small silver toothpick to raise the splinters of broken bone. The fish remained quiet during the operation; when it was over, he plunged into the pond. At first, his sufferings appeared to be relieved; but in the course of a few minutes he began rushing right and left, untill he again leaped out of the water.

I called the keeper, and with his assistance applied a bandage to the fracture. That done, we restored him to the pond, and left him to his fate. Next morning, as soon as I reached the water's edge, the pike swam to meet me quite close to the bank, and laid his head upon my feet. I thought this an extraordinary proceeding. Without further delay I examined the wound, and found it was healing nicely. I then strolled for some time by the side of the pond. The fish swam after me, following my steps, and turning as I turned.

The following day, I brought a few young friends with me to see the fish. He swam towards me as before. Little by little he became so tame as to come to my whistle and eat out of my hand. With other persons, on the contrary, he continued as shy and wild as ever.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

Tracts: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen.

Our Book and Tract Column

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection These articles, which were first published in The Times, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—48 pp. Restitution—46 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 3c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—25c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $1.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 45c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Gould. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 15c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

THE NATURE and DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 126 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 217 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 46 pp. 10c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul, Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 20c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 9c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $10 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, - - - - - - ILLINOIS.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 25, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh ... "; his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed, the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil: the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
J. M. SNOOK, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

Address all communications to JOSHUA V. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Our P. O. Address.

All letters for this office should be directed to 25 West Lake st, Chicago, Ill.

Don't send them to Norwood Park. Send to Chicago, as directed above.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $150 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

We have none of the music Comfort in Affliction. A lot is promised us soon.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers: but a new edition is nearly ready.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, etc., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, Prof. Ives' tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 30 sheets, 30c.

To Correspondents.

C. M. DAVIS. You must give us your P. O. ADDRESS, or we cannot send your books.

Communications.

ACCEPTED: Why is it? Heresy; Nameless Nature.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

P Baker
H Hightmire
C H Sawin
W Lindsay
M McCulloch
A H Briggs
C L Ives
A Haagland
W Johnson
J A Smith
A J Fosdick
W P Paxson
P Townsend
I Boddy
S C Wellcome
J Eaton
C C Marston
E A Williams
J A Bocnham
D Deland
S Campbell
E B Patton
C E Barnes
S Hall
J Brown
E Morrison
H G McCulloch
S Kingman
W S Bates
J C Roberts
C W Smith
C W Connolly
F Hitchcock
M D Peavy
A Kenoe
J F Ghormley
O D Gibson
C S Hyde
M A Tibbetts
B H Brown
C M Davis
J F Reese
L S Conner
J L Russell
J W Ackerman
I Adrian
W Royce
R M Rowell
I Dresser
D Shatwell
M Alexander
E Stephens
M B Hubbell
H Guernsey
W B McDowell
I Bergen
J W Falwell
G Barry
B Baker
S C Wellcome
S K Gibson
J B Parkis
A H Barrington
T Howells
J Grice
C Marshall
E Cornison
A Hine
M F Whitrom
W A Penn
B H Boon

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J M Hoffman C Marshall H Hightmire W S Bates D Deland J Luttrell J L Cox W Johnson L S Mathewson B H Boon

EXPRESS.

S C Welcome E A marsh W P Paxson J O Conner J A Smith.

Trust Fund.

I Boddy, 50c.

Obituary.

FADDEN. Died at New Auburn, Sibley Co., Minn. April 6, 1872, of Consumption, Margaret, wife o James Fadden: aged 48 years.

Sr. Fadden embraced the hope of a soon-coming Savior about twenty years ago, under the labors of Brn. Himes and Orrock in the Stone Settlement, town of Stanbridge, C. E. Calmly she fell asleep, trusting in the promise of our Savior that he would come again and raise his own dear sleeping ones and give them eternal life. E. BACON.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

I am compelled to give notice to those dear brethren in Wis. who expect me to be with them in a few weeks, that I shall not be able to attend my appointments.

ISAAC ADRIAN.

Manchester, June 18, 1872.

Any of the brethren desiring my services, anywhere within the region of my new home, can secure them, by calling upon or addressing me at Edinboro, Erie Co. Pa. J. A. NEWTON.

The Kansas Mission Tent.

We the undersigned, desiring as soon as possible to raise means to procure a tent for the Kansas Advent Christian Association, pledge ourselves to pay into the treasury for such purpose the several sums set opposite our names, as soon as the amount of the three hundred dollars shall be pledged.

Previously acknowledged	$ 1 17
R H McCulloch	1 00
J M Barber	1 00
Henry Haines	5 00
G Harwood	25 00
J C Smith	1 00
H. Smith	1 00
N B Smith	1 00
J C Smith	1 00

PAYMENTS.

G S Harwood, $20. T. BOSLEY, Sec'y.
Crisis please copy.

Direct all pledges to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kas.

All money should be sent to the Treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Baro, Cherokee Co. Kas.

Dear Brothers and Sisters, at home and abroad, we need help. May the Lord move upon the hearts of his dear children that they contribute to this good cause, remembering it is good to lend to the Lord.

Your brother in Christ, H. J. MUNSON.

Special Notice—Minnesota.

To all who are anxious to know about the tent meetings in Minnesota, I would say, that I am anxiously waiting for those who subscribed for the new tent to pay their subscriptions, and then we could tell where and when tent meetings could be held. I would make this my last call upon all who have not paid, to do so at once, that the cause in our State may not suffer on the account of our neglect to do what we promised to do a year ago.

The tent is ordered, but it cannot be obtained for use until it is paid for. Come, Brethren, let this hint be sufficient. Do not subject me to the task of writing each one individually. GEO. W. MILLER,
Millersburg, Minn.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Johnson's Grove, June 30, 3 o'clock, p. m.
L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, June 30.
Tampico, July 1.
Yorktown Cor., eve. July 2 and 3.
At or near Mineral, as the friends may arrange, July 4. We hope to see the brethren and sisters from all the region round about at this meeting.
C. C. MARSTON.

There will be a Basket Meeting held in the Advent Christian Chapel at Genoa, DeKalb Co., July 4. Hours of service, 10: 30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Eld. J. V. Himes of Chicago, and others will be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters in Christ, and friends in all this region are invited to come up to this meeting. Come one, come all! It will continue over the Sabbath, the Lord willing. In behalf of the Church,
E. H. BURINGTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCulloch, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Brethren, friends, and all interested in the cause of Christ, in Neponset District, Northern Illinois Conference, are urgently invited to meet with the church in Oneida, on Thursday, July 4, and reorganize the Quarterly Meeting in this District.

The church has proposed the following services: Wednesday, 7½ p. m., prayer-meeting. Thursday, 9½ a. m., love feast; preaching 10½ a. m; after this service the reorganization to be attended to, arranging for afternoon and evening service in the morning.

If there is not room enough in the house in which we worship to accommodate all who come, the Lord has furnished a good big "out doors," and will doubtless give us the use of it. Come, then, with hearts on fire; be in earnest in the matter, and the Lord will bless.

Can you spend the Fourth to better advantage? All will be welcome.
In behalf of the church, L. F. COLE.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

Milroy, 11 a. m., and 8 p. m., Sabbath, June 30.
Galva, 8 p. m., June 29, as Br. Runquist may arrange.
Afton, July 7, 11 a. m., and 4 p. m.
Squaw Grove, 10½ a. m., July 14.
C. W. SMITH.

Ionia, 10½ a. m., June 23, and every alternate Sabbath.
S. H. near Br. C. Ryner's 10½ a. m. June 30.
S. H. near Br. Jonas Smith's 4 p. m. same day, and once in two weeks until further notice.
M. McCULLOCK.

IOWA.

There will be a Basket Meeting on the Fourth of July, in a grove near Young's Mills, where we held one last year, five miles east of Corydon, Wayne Co. It is expected that a number will be baptised at this meeting. Friends of truth, let us have a grand rally on that day arround the banner of the Lord.

Corydon, last Sunday in June,
S. K. GIBSON.

There will be a Basket Grove Meeting held in Pilot Grove, five miles south-east of Dexter, and five miles south-west of Earlham. Preaching by D. S. Clark of Amboy, Ill.
M. B. HUBBELL.

P. S.—The meeting to commence on July 6, at 11 a. m., and 3 p. m.; and on Sunday at 11 a. m., and at 3 p. m.

Manchester, June 30.
Cascade, eve., July 6, and over Sunday.
From thence to Iron Hill, and so on to Clinton Co. Brethren there can write to me at Cascade, care of D. A. Dickinson. I will visit churches through the Conference before commencing the campaign with the tent. I. ADRIAN.
By D. A. Dickinson.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.
Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.
Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.
Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

White S. H. in Burnham Valley, LaCrosse Co., Saturday evening, June 29, at which time the Lord's Supper will be administered. Let there be a grand rally of the brethren and sisters in W. Salem, Burns, LaCrosse, and the region around. If Eld. Hough could arrange to be with us at this meeting it would gladden our hearts very much.
June 30, at 10 1-2 a. m. at the Methodist Church in Burns and so on every two weeks.
June 30, in the evening at Music Hall, W. Salem, and so on every two weeks.
RUTH M. ROWELL.

There will be a Tent Meeting at Mifflin, Iowa Co., Wis. commencing Friday evening, June 28, holding as long as interest may demand. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to preach the word. As this is a new field let there be a general rally of the friends of the truth from the different churches around. Come from Fenimore, Wingville, Arena, Helena and elsewhere. Come to work for God and the perishing.
PHILO HITCHCOCK.

MINNESOTA.

Freedom, Waseca Co., Converse S. H. 8 p. m. July 6, 10½ a. m. July 7.—Meet me at Jaynesville Station, July 6, at 2 p. m.
Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ and 7½ p. m. July 7.
Shelbyville, Grove Meeting near Brown S. H., Wednesday 10 1-2 a. m., and 2 1-2 p. m., July 10.
Kasota S. H., 8 p. m. Friday, July 12.
Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Sat. eve., and Sunday, July 13-14.
—Meet me at Owatonna Station 10 1-2 a. m. July 12. S. C. WELLCOME.

July 7, at the Baptist Church, Money Creek Valley, Winona Co.
RUTH M. ROWELL.

In accordance with a vote of our State Conference a State Campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove called "Cheatham's Grove," in Utica, Winona Co., commencing Thursday, June 27, and holding over the ensuing Sunday, and as much longer as deemed practicable. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with permanent stands and seats; also a good well of water and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground.

Brethren and sisters of the Advent faith throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles and work for God. Come from every quarter; come with hearts burning with the love of God, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs portend the speedy coming of the Master. Shall we not improve these general gatherings, as God requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and for the salvation of others?

Come Christians of every name, and unite with us in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove.

Brethren and sisters in the ministry, all who can come, at home or abroad, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon-coming King. Come endued with power from on high, with an unction from the holy One; with words that burn, that will reach the hearts of the perishing.

☞ Those coming to tarry on the ground will please come prepared with bedding and provisions (and tents if they have them.) We expect to procure a large building erected by the Methodists, on the ground, and also have the Bethel tent if possible, so that all can be accommodated if they have their bedding and provisions.

Arrangements will be made with the R. R. companies for half-fare tickets from all points where the friends notify ME THIS MONTH that they will attend our meeting. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

The A. C. Church of Honeoye, Ontario Co., N. Y., will hold its third Q. M. Saturday and Sunday, July 13, and 14. Sr. E. S. Jennings and others are expected to be present. Brethren and sisters in the region are cordially invited.
For the Church,
H. H. BROWN, O. B. BROWN.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $800, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume I will commence in June. $2 a year. THE TIMES and Record one year for $3.
H. V. Reed, Publisher, 9 South Canal St. Chicago.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, of the $160 pattern, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

When & How; or a collection of the more recent facts and ideas upon raising healthy children By D. Newcomb, M. D.

A strong, common-sense, and hence valuable work. Sent by mail, post paid, $3. For sale at this office.

Favorable terms to agents by the Publishers, A. W. Penny & Co. 66 South Canal St. Chicago, Ill.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $15.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 26 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 11 South Canal St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(3mos) Box 161, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

"The Home Shuttle." We can give a good bargain on two or three excellent Sewing Machines, if application is made soon. Address this office.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

E. H. WHEELER'S
IMPROVED
AXLE & THIMBLE SKEIN
PATENTED JAN. 12, 1872.

THE LIGHTEST, STRONGEST, AND BEST AXLE BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

Less liable to break, and cannot spring under any amount of weight that can be put upon it.

It takes a smaller sized axle and bolster or sand-board than the same sized skeins of common style; is more simple and easier to fit, the skein being of uniform taper, without shoulders upon the inside a better fit is secured. The axle can be turned in a common lathe to fit the thimble, by putting one end out of center.

The arm, or spindle, is so made as to secure the proper set of the wheels, when moderately dished, with the bottom line of the spindle on a parallel line to the bottom of the axle, an important principle never before attained. The set of the wheels is a perpendicular or right angle to the bottom line of the axle upon the face of the spokes, upon their lower half.

This cut shows the thimble and lug for the tension rod across the bottom of the axle, from thimble to thimble, and the socket for the bolster, or the sand-board, as the case may be. I also use a sand guard to keep the dirt out of the shoulder of the hub; but it is not shown in this cut.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Sample thimble skeins furnished to purchasers of rights, at actual cost. For further information address

E. H. WHEELER, Memphis,
Scotland county, Missouri.

☞ Please state where you saw this advertisement.

THE BIBLE BANNER FREE!

We desire to call the attention of the readers of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES to our offer in the Bible Banner, to send it to every minister of the gospel of any denomination who will send us his address, or otherwise signify his desire to receive it.

ONE YEAR FREE

We request the readers of the TIMES to aid us in presenting this offer to such ministers as are devoted men of God, and who would probably accept, and be benefitted thereby.

Do not urge any one to accept, for we have not the means, at present, to send very many papers free, but trust the Lord will provide enough to send it where it should go to prepare the way for our weekly papers, and stir up the watchman to sound the alarm to a guilty world. A copy of the Banner from one with whom the minister is acquainted is worth a dozen sent by mail from the office of publication.

THE BANNER AND TIMES.

We will send the Banner six months free to all new subscribers to the TIMES, and to all old subscribers who mention this offer when they remit (to TIMES office) for 1872. We make one condition to this offer, viz, before the close of the six months they must either notify us to discontinue, or remit for the future, as soon as convenient.

We expect to present a large fine engraving in every number of the Banner, hereafter, which will illustrate and add new interest to Bible truth. We have already commenced the series of illustrations. Send ten cents for three sample copies. Address:

H. A. KING,
14 Murray St. New York.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES and the Bible Banner will be sent one year, with a free book, for $3.75, or without book, for $3.50. Address:

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
No. 11 South Canal St., Chicago.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—44 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,300 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 126 pp. Paper covers, 15c: $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 477 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge s increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 47. CHICAGO, JULY 2, 18 WHOLE NO. 4.30

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, July 2, 1872.

The Restitution of All Things.

[Continued.]

Here then is a great principle of interpretation in use among all mankind. It is that all documents and terms relating to human conduct as affected by law are only to be interpreted in their primary sense. A secondary sense may be more usual and more proper elsewhere, but not here. Poetry and the drama, the literature of passion, imagination, and feeling, may use these terms differently, but their use is not to affect in the smallest degree the interpretation of a law. Here we take our stand. Here we are on sure and steady ground. The terms we have been discussing are the terms of the divine law; the jurisprudence we have been discussing is God's jurisprudence. We only claim that God's penalty for crime against God's law should be interpreted in analogy with all law. It would be an outrage upon human law to interpret its sanction in some figurative and secondary sense; but that God's jurisprudence should be interpreted in this way, his awful penalty of sin explained by the tropes of poetry and the hyberbole of grief, is an outrage of a graver kind, because mixed up with a higher destiny and the Great Judge of the Universe. On this principle, then, we set aside every secondary sense from the terms relative to future punishment. On this principle we accept their primary as here their only possible sense, and on this principle the theories of Augustine and Origen fall together—the theory that inflicts eternal misery on man, and the theory that brings him back through a death to sin to holiness and happiness.

If any justification of this principle were required it is readily found. The primary sense is one unchanging sense, universally understood by every reasonable being of every stage of civilization and every variety of religious belief. The secondary sense is various, changing, differently regarded by different minds. Thus death in its primary sense is always one and the same. Down from its first example and enunciation to the present day it has preserved this sense unbroken and unchanged, and is understood alike by the savage and the civilized, by the ignorant and learned, by the degraded and the sensitive mind. But when we come to the secondary sense all this is changed. There are several secondary senses! These secondary senses are ever varying with the opinions and circumstances of men! Some of these secondary senses are absolutely unintelligible to multitudes of minds, as those of little children, persons of blunted moral feeling, and savages, who yet were all intended to be affected by the terms used!

In order to show the uncertainty which arises the moment we leave the primary sense of these terms and try to fix on their proper secondary sense, we will just show how one of the most important of these terms, Death, is regarded by two opposing schools, who both insist on the propriety of taking it in a secondary meaning. The Augustinian fixes upon a sense, and interprets the word as signifying "death to all holy feeling," "death to all happiuess"—i. e., miserv and moral corruption! But this is not its only secondary sense. The Universalist claims it in another! With him it is "death to sin," a process resulting in happiness! Who is to decide which of these is right? Scripture simply calls it death. If the Augustinian tells us that it is a punishment, and is therefore to be taken in an evil sense, the Universalist will reply that punishment is at least as often inflicted for the correction of the criminal as in vengeance, and that it is therefore at least as probable that it is here to be taken in a good sense. If the Augustinian will remind us that pain accompanies the death mentioned in Scripture, and that it is therefore evil, the Universalist will reply that pain and anguish also accompany the process of repentance and recovery, and that his view is therefore probable. If the Augustinian will urge that sin is of an infinite demerit, and should consequently receive infinite punishment, the Universalist will set in opposition that love of God which is much more certainly infinite, that compassion of His which is boundless, that yearning which the Creator feels for the work of his own hands, and will argue hence with an infinitely greater force that he who brought back blood stained David, and the sinful woman, and Saul the persecutor, will in the vast Æonial period bring back Balaam, and Judas, and Demas, and even the Archangel, now dark, but once a son of the morning. In a contest such as this it were indeed difficult to decide. The adoption of the primary sense puts all such contests to an end. It removes dispute by removing ambiguity. It is essential to all law, most of all to the law of God. The graver the penalty for disobedience the greater the necessity for certainty.

As it is in all legal documents absolutely, so it is to nearly the same extent in Historical composition. A secondary sense is all but banished from its terms. When we read of Lord William Russel losing his life through a prosecution instigated by the Court we never dream of its meaning his becoming very unhappy, losing his "well-being" from the cessation of Court favor. Or when we read of the loss of such a number of lives in such a battle we never dream that twenty thousand men on one side became very unhappy at some national calamity, and and that ten thousand men on the other side in generous sympathy also became unhappy at sight of their foemen's tears. Such interpretations of mens writings are simply ridiculous. Yet such are the interpretations which learned theologians, and right reverend bishops, and long robed preachers put upon writings which, while we rejoice to know them to be divine, are also as purely human as the writings of Coke or Lyttleton, of Macaulay or Hume.

For Scripture, while it gives us in its wonderful variety specimens of composition from the sublimest poetry to the baldest prose, is pre-eminently the code of Divine law, the history of God's dealings with man. To insist that in writings of this kind the primary sense of words is to be abandoned and the secondary figurative sense substituted is just as absurd, as unreasonable, as inadmissable, as to interpret the language of Coke or Hume by the tropes of the highest poetry. When God gravely and solemnly tells us how he will deal with us in the future world for our conduct in this we are not only justified but we are imperatively compelled to take his solemn words explanatory of our future condition in their primary sense. So interpreted "Life" is "animal existence;" and death is 'the loss of animal exhistence;' and so interpreted away fly in to the cloud sall those secondary senses which writers, from Tertullian, and Origen, and Augustine, to Messrs. Grant and Jukes, and Angus, have been putting on them with such pertinacity and assurance that the Christian world has all but universally believed that the sense universally attached to these expressions in common language of mankind is never attached to them in the most awfully solemn documentsthat ever a ddressed their teaching to the human ear. But this we need not suppose, we cannot suppose. Addressed to human ears, to man's highest hopes and his profoundest fears, these terms have the sense commenly attached to them by those to whom they are addressed. God does not describe the awful penalties of violated law under the figures of poetry.

That the wicked will come to an end and cease to exist in hell we have thus seen to be the direct teaching of Scripture in what we have called its legal terms. We now proceed to support this view by its illustrations. These are very numerous, present the subject in every variety of aspect, and are every one of them harmonious with the rest. We will compare them with the illustrations selected by men who held every variety of opinion as to the future of man, from the Augustinian who gives to the wicked an endless life in anguish, to the Epicurean who holds that there is nq future life for any man at all. We have no hesitation in saying that the illustrations of Scripture, so varied, so numerous, so harmonious, are byt hemselves sufficient to decide this great question in our favor. They overthrow alike the theory of eternal misery and of universal restoration. It may be remarked that the apvocates of these opposite errors are wonderfully chary in their references to this leading feature of Scripture.

We find in the old Testament the following illustrations of future punishment;—The wicked shall be dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel; they shall be like the beasts that perish, like the untimely fruit of a woman, like a whirlwind that passeth away, like a waterless garden scorched by an Eastern sun, like garments consumed by the moth; they shall be silent in darkness, like a lamp put out, like a dream which flies away. The wicked shall consume like the fat of lambs in the fire, consume like smoke, melt like wax, burn like tow, consume like thorns, vanish away like exhausted waters.

The illustrations of the New Testament are of the same character. The end of the wicked is there compared to fish cast away to corruption, to a house thrown down to its foundations, to the destruction of the old world by water and that of the Sodomites by fire, to the death and destruction of natural brute beasts. They shall be like wood cast into quenchless flames, like chaff burnt up, like tares consumed, like a dry branch reduced to ashes.

Such are the illustrations of Scripture. These are the images which God has selected from the world that is open to our inspection, in order to let us know what shall happen to the ungodly hereafter. We have no hesitation in saying that they are, one and all, irreconcilable with both Augustine's and Origen's theories of hell. If it was true, which both these theories insist on, that the wicked never cease to exist, these illustrations would be every one of them unsuitable and false. The wicked would not be, according to either theory, like beasts that perish, or a whirlwind that passeth away, or garments consumed by the moth. They would not consume like the fat of lambs in the fire, or consume into, smoke or melt like wax. They would not be like wood cast into quenchless flames, or like chaff burnt up, or like tares consumed, or like a dry branch reduced to ashes. All these lose their form, substance, and organization, and become as though they had never been, which the wicked never do according to either the theory of their eternal misery or their ultimate restoration. The illustrations of Scripture are therefore fatal to both views alike. Every one of its images points, not to the preservation [illegible] being in any state whether good or [illegible] but to the utter blotting out of existence and being and identity.

Let us now compare these illustration of Scripture with those of ordinary writers, and see if the comparison does not fully bear out our view. We will first examine the images which writers who hold the theory of eternal misery select as suitable to illustrate this theory. We will take our exammples from the writings of the Christian fathers Augustine and Tertullian, both of them men of great power of mind and force of language. Is it not most significant that these men, perfectly familiar with the illustrations of Scripture, turn away from them as unsuitable to their purpose, and select with much pains, from a survey of nature as it was understood by them, a series of illustrations not only absent from Scripture but of a nature diametrically opposed to those of Scripture! According to Tertullian the wicked will be like mountains which burn but are not consumed; like a body struck by lightning whose organization is uninjured and itself not reduced to ashes. According to Augustine the wicked will be like worms that exist is hot springs; like salamanders which are not destroyed in the fire; like diamonds which are indestructible in scorching heat; like Vesuvius and Etna, which burn but do not consume. These are not the illustrations of Scripture, they contradict those of Scripture. According to Scripture the wicked will not be like salamanders, and boiling-water worms and burning mountains of Tertullian and Augustine .They will, on the contrary, be destroyed, consume away, be reduced to ashes, as the fat of lambs, or the dry wood and thorns.

We have thus seen what kind of illustrations the advocates of eternal life in pain select as suitable to their theory. We will now draw attention to the fact that the avocates of this view, when off their guard, and desirous to express clearly their sentiments by showing what the wicked are not like, constantly contradict the very illustrations which Scripture has selected to show what they are like. God has not made us, says the Christian Father Athenagoras, like beasts to perish; and Mr. James Grant repeats the Father's renunciation of a Scriptual illustration in still more emphatic terms, by telling us that from the idea that the wicked should become like beasts that perish his "very soul turns away with abhorrence!" ("Religious Tendencies," 1. 132). The celebrated author of "The Night Thoughts," one of the great masters of the English tongue, rejects disdainfully another of the illustrations of Scripture:—

> "To toil, and eat,
> Then make our bed in darkness," is his'description for that state of nonexistence of the wicked against which he directs a great amount of poetry but no logic.

We have here seen how the advocates of eternal evil unconsciously contradict the illustrations of Scrpture. We will now show how men held the Epicurean notion of the utter extinction of being at death, or who wished to describe this Epicurean idea, have used the very same illustrations which Scripture uses for the destruction of the wicked after judgement. Thus one illustration of Scripture is that the wicked "shall consume like smoke." This we are told in the Phædo of Plato (par. xiv.) was the usual illustration used by Epicurean theorists to express their idea. It vanished, according to them, "like a breath of wind or smoke." Accordingly we find the Epicurean poet Lucretius using this very illustration:—

> "As the smoke disperses into the air,
> So believe that the soul also is dissolved."

The ending of the wicked "in darkness" or "night" is another illustration in common use in Scripture; it is the illustration which Titus uses in his address to his soldiers when he speaks of "souls that wear away in and with their distempered bodies, on which comes a subterranean night to dissolve them to nothing;" and is also the very image which that consummate master of language, our own Tennyson, uses to express the same idea:—

> "'Twere best at once to sink to peace,
> Like birds the charming serpent draws,
> To drop head-foremost in the jaws
> Of vacant darkness and to cease."

The comparison of the destruction of the wicked to a dream or vision that flies away is also an illustration of Scripture. We find the very same illustration used by Homer in one of those moods of his when he abandoned the Platonic idea of the immortality of the soul for the Epicurean idea of its dissolution:—

> "Like fleeting vision passed the soul away."

Once more we will find in one of the Apocryphal books that the most usual illustrations of Scripture of the end of the wicked were the very ones used by Epicurean theorists:—"We are born of nothing," they said, "and after this we shall be as if we had not been; for the breath in our nostrils is smoke, and speech a spark to move our hearts, which, being put out, our body shall be ashes, and our spirits shall be poured abroad as soft air, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dispersed as a mist, which is driven away by the beams of the sun. For our time is as the passing of a shadow (Wisdom 2. 2-5). (To be continued.)

Communications.

A Letter to P. G. Bowman.

Open thy mouth and I will fill it, saith the Lord. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Liberty to speak the truth in the love of it,—to hate and abhor lying or evil in all its protean phrases; Liberty to practice all the Lord commands, to live soberly, righteously and godly,—to love our enemies, to forgive one another and to do good to those who hate us. Liberty to preach the gospel that Paul preached, liberty to expose all the fallacies of pseudo-teachers or theologasters; liberty to preach the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ showing, there is no future life out of Christ,—that the second advent of Christ is the hope of the Christian, with all the culminating glory, honor, and immortality of the redeemed, on the new earth under the whole heavens, where the saints will reign with Christ eternally, and be like him.

Alas! alas! Behold pseudo-orthodoxy, Protestant orthodoxy of every sect and creed, for upwards of three centuries, denouncing Catholicism, and claiming its own creed as divine—and its teachers, doctors of divinity! The Pope is always right, infallible! and each sect never in the wrong. Hear the language of Dr. Lees (of England):

Sectarian divinity: "Its dogmas are all stereotyped, and its prophets all infallible! The sects, little and big, have all some pope or other, or some final council or creed, to act as an extinguisher upon reason and evidence. If there be any essential between Roman orthodoxy of one sort and British orthodoxy of all sorts, it is only that slight one remarked by Steele, namely, that the Roman Pontiff is always in the right, and the Protestant Pastor never in the wrong! The Roman Pope is unfailable, the Protestant Bigot un-errable!

The South Carolina Conference, the Minnesota Conference—both un-errable! The former would have extinguished P. G. Bowman, the latter would have paralyzed the tongue of Collins, the best man among them! "How is it," said a Methodist (on the 24th of March last), "that our best, ablest men are leaving us? I cannot account for it?" Had I heard him, I would have answered him in something after this manner:

They leave you sir, because they have seen their errors, and would not any longer preach a doctrine that sullies or slanders the character of God; because they know God is love; that he is neither cruel or vindictive; that we can truly worship only what we love; that we dare not darken the Divine aspect or destroy our deepest feelings of reverence towards God, who does not wish even the death of the sinner. They leave you, sir, because they love the truth, and abhor lying! They leave you, oh! with what anguish and sadness, because you will not tolerate the truth of God, and dare to silence such men as Bowman, Collins, White, and a hundred others whose unsullied lives and melting eloquence in their utterance of truth, have left your presiding Elders, Bishops, and Doctors of Divinity without excuse, or even the shadow of Scripture truth to palliate their Sectarian virulence, bigotry and ignorance. They leave you, sir, because they know the truth, and that truth has made them free. They leave you, because they love God, and cleave to that which is good—the truth as proclaimed by Moses, the prophets, and Christ and his apostles. Alas! sir, they do regret and rejoice. Regret that when they first embraced religion they did not know that gross errors were in their beloved church. Rejoice now, that God has illuminated them, opened their eyes to see the wondrous things contained in his Holy Book, and to see the wondrous errors contained in all sectarian creeds. Oh! yes, they do regret their former blindness, and regret that so many of their brethren are in the dark, and ignorantly preaching, in effect, the first lie on record—"Ye shall not surely die,"—as an infallible truth! O, how their hearts throb with sadness—the sequence of love—at the remembrance of the past, and palpitate with ardent desires that those whom they love as well as those (their) enemies who voted for their exclusion from their company, may yet be led by the Spirit of God to see their mistakes, to repent, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance. Oh! yes, they feel the Spirit of Christ and say, Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. Yes, these and many more reasons might be assigned why they left your church. It was the will of God who brought it about. Some of us, think with Lord Bacon, that it is better to have no opinion of God at all, than one which is dishonoring to him and degrading to us; and all misconceptions of Deity are degrading. The lovely truths of Christianity are hidden by the clouds of darkness and fallacies, which arise from man-made creeds. The pure and lovely character of truth is turned into an odious fallacy. If any man preach another gospel than that which Paul preached, he entails upon himself a curse. Let him, says Paul, be accursed. Alas! how many do it ignorantly. May the Lord forgive them.

I fear greatly that such perverters of Christianity are guilty of much of the infidelity in the world. Nor am I sure but their hearers learn to swear and blaspheme by hearing such preachers. In other words, some preachers teach the art of swearing, and slander, and blasphemy, in some of their sermons. Is this true? Do they sometimes slander God, and blaspheme him, turn his truth into a lie, represent him as cruel vindictive, revengeful, unmerciful, unforgiving. I have no doubt that many of them are sincere in their notions. I pity them, but in mercy, because I still love them, and do not wish them death. I am determined to know nothing among them but Christ and him crucified. And I never will pander to their prejudices, but on the contrary, expose to their view, in all its odious unutterable deformity, the manner in which they plainly contradict God, and his word. This is easily done. A babe in Christ may do it. A child five years old may do it. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." It is false, says the preacher! What! false, do you say? Yes, I say, says the church. (Luther, Lee, and all the Bishops, and D. D's, cry, Amen.) Yes, I say, says each one of them. It is false, the soul is immortal; the soul will never die, it will live forever! Here is a most mountainous, stupendous blasphemy. Behold a poor finite mortal! Look at him. Contrast him with the High and Lofty One who inhabits eternity. Gentlemen of the jury, I give you the law, now judge by the facts:

TESTIMONY: First Witness. For the truth, God. "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "The wages of sin is death."

Second Witness. For the Blasphemy. The Serpent. "Ye shall not surely die." "The soul [Adam was a living soul] can never die." "The soul is immortal—it can never die—it never will die."

What say the Scriptures? Did God tell the truth or did the Serpent tell the truth? Weigh well the facts; here they are: "Adam died." You have the record. This grave question demands a candid investigation. Sacred and profane, modern and ancient history; our graveyards and tombstones testify that men, women, boys and girls have died since the days of Adam, and since you were born. Did God then speak truly, or did the Serpent tell the truth when he told Eve, "Ye shall not surely die?" Did Adam and Eve die? Oh Yes! Then I suppose I need not state any more relative to the facts in the case. Now, gentlemen of the jury, decide, when you retire, who tells you the truth, God or the Serpent.

Excuse the simplicity of such a presentation of things. It seems so ridiculous to have a jury to decide so plain a matter; to behold a court room or Conference room full of preachers, elders, and a bishop, ready and willing and determined to prove that God, and Moses, and his prophets, and Christ, and the apostles, were all mistaken; and that Peyton G. Bowman has preached lies, and therefore must be rejected for preaching false doctrine. In the sight of God, under the effulgent blaze of divine light, the conduct, acts of such men, must be viewed with astonishment and regret.

How comes it to pass, that preachers of every sect continue steadfast in error, and are satisfied to hold on to their respective denominations, even when the light of truth illumines their minds, and convinces them that there are numerous fallacies and myths in their theology? Some are catechistical, some theological Christians; and many through the ritual of education and "progress of religion."

There is such a thing as false trust which pretends to find in religion motives to justify it, and lead men sometimes to mistake the most criminal of all dispositions for a sentiment of salvation, and a fruit of faith and of grace. There is certainly a mystery in Godliness, a mystery in iniquity. There is such a thing as faith, and such a thing as unbelief. There are two passions, love and hatred. The objects that engross love, and those that excite or occupy hatred, lead us to know the character of mankind; for no man exists who is destitute of love and hatred. They dwell in the hearts of all men. But their nature may be ascertained by the objects of their love and hatred. The saint and the sinner alike possess both, but the love and the hatred of the one are different in many respects. The converted and the unconverted agree in harmony in many respects as natural men who have feelings naturally peculiar.

The Christian loves God and abhors evil. He loves the truth and cleaves to it. He is taught of God, he learns of Christ, calls no man "Master." I say, he loves the truth, the word. If he is called of God, moved by the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven to preach the gospel of the Son of God, will he knowingly preach the notions of men, contrary to the utterances of God whom he loves, and whose truth the Holy Ghost moved him to proclaim? This is a serious question that does not admit of equivocal answers. If God has commissioned him, taught him, will he suffer him to continue in error, and maintain that that error is infallible truth, and that the wicked will live forever in eternal wo and misery? I know there is such a thing as fastidiously pure charity. It is quite common. The wickedest mortals are quite liberal, very catholic indeed upon religious subjects, and so are some professed Christians. But how is it with Christians, true believers who love Jesus, who have the spirit of Jesus? What is their verdict? Do they exercise charity contrary to truth, and say that a preacher of the gospel who contradicts God turns truth into a lie, may do it with impunity, and inherit eternal life; that he will not be punished nor accursed? In other words is such an one a Christian minister, or will he continue in sin (error) though the truth may be offered, presented to him in its lovely, simple, grammatical construction, its true Scriptural terminology? If he embrace it not, what then? I hope all who love the truth will come out from among the sects. Think of these things.

J. F. LEE.

The Power of the Cross: Where is it?

The power of the cross was once an irresistible power, given forth conquering and to conquer, subdueing alike king and peasant, rich and poor, Jew and Greek, bond and free, and making them willing and faithful subjects of the meek and lowly Nazarene. And though their names were cast out as evil and they were hated of all men, yet they forsook not the Standard of Truth, but with their great commission of bearing the joyful news of life and pardon to condemned and dying millions, they pressed fearlessly on to victory or to death, the invincible army of king Emanuel.

Oh! what mighty conquests have been gained and what victories achieved, under the banner of the cross. The king of darkness himself has often trembled and fled before the triumphant, believing host, as clad with the armor of God, and armed with truth, which is the sword of the Spirit, they have gone forth to battle, in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. How the darkness and gloom of prison walls, and solitary caves have been chased away, and their inmates made to rejoice in hope of eternal deliverance, when the bleeding victim of Calvary was offered in living faith upon the altar of the heart. Death scenes most horrible have been rendered sweet and glorious, by manifestations of the power of the cross, when the humble fol- followers of the Lamb, have exultingly shouted victory! while wrapped in devouring flames. Yes, the gospel as it was preached by the apostles, and received by their hearers, was a power divine, and they who imbibed its spirit, "loved not their lives unto death." They knew nothing, but entire consecration to the cause of truth, and though their only earthly laurels were shame and strife and blood, they could not think of spending the few precious moments of their probation, in the enjoyment of sensual pleasures, while the world was wrapped in moral darkness, and the dying agonies of the perishing race were borne upon every breeze.

Yes, this was the gospel spirit of the first century. But does it comport with the gospel spirit now? Alas! how great the contrast! What a mighty change has been silently and secretly coming over the principles and practices of Christianity. Instead of the stern, unyielding, uncompromising love of the then, we now have a gospel made up of revelation and romance, fact and fiction, a little Bible and a little heathen philosophy, mixed together with a sufficient quantity of speculation, to form a mass, which is made into a pill, and sugar-coated with the term, "Orthodoxy," and handed out to dying men, by the Doctors of Divinity, as the antidote of sin and death. Yes, this mixture contains the influence divine, which is to conquer the world to Christ, and bring upon the world that universal peace, known as the "Millennial Age," when wars and rumors of war shall cease, and the whole earth shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest.

But, it seems to me, that if it is ever going to bring about this great change in the condition of the world, we might see some indications of it, at least, after a fair trial, for sixteen or seventeen centuries.

Is it really triumphing over the stormy passions of the human heart, silencing the thunders of battle, and liberating our race from diabolical rule? An emphatic no, comes up from every quarter of the globe. Each day continues to bring the sad news of strife, bloodshed and carnage, from warring nations, most of whom profess Christianity, and claim to have the spirit of the gospel incorporated with their lives, Oh! fatal delusion! dire messenger of destruction!

The cross is robbed of its power, and the gospel of its charms. Instead of making the world better, it grows worse and worse, and is less ready for the coming of the Son of man, at this time, than it ever was before. Religion is a form, and its power is not known.

This lethargy seems to be almost universal, though prophecy declares that "the day is at hand" when the earth must be summoned to judgment. How alarming the condition of the world to-day. The unmistakable evidence of a fast approaching judgment increasing every day, and the church and world all asleep! Reader: how is the case with those professing Christ, in your neighborhood? Are they consecrated wholly to him, and are their lives a living epistle, "seen and read of all men?" Or is religion a cold and barren thing? and has stiff formality superseded that warm and earnest devotion al "faith that works by love and purifies the heart?"

How is your own case? Do you belong to Christ? Are you led by his blessed Spirit? Do you humbly bow at the foot of the cross, and wash your robe in the crimson fountain that flows from its bleeding victim? Are you looking to the throne of the Eternal within the vail, where the Lamb of Calvary, with his own blood as an offering, is pleading in the presence of the Father for you? Do you "endure as seeing him who is invisible?" In short are you a conqueror, 'through the power of the cross.' Do you overcome the world and the besetting sins of your own life, and magnify Christ in your spirit and your body, which are his?

Or is it with you dear reader, as it is with the greater portion of the professed Christian world? Have the sufferings of the cross lost to you their sanctifying influence; and do you listen as to an idle tale, to the sweet murmurings of the crystal stream of Life, as bursting from the fountain of eternal love, it comes, the wonderful gift of God, to satiate the thirst of dying millions? Has the gospel, the sweet messenger of grace, lost to you its charms, and are you prostrating yourself at the throne of Baal, giving to him the offerings of your heart? Let me urge you into a speedy self-examination. Find out what your condition is. See whether you really have communion with Jesus, or whether you have been deluded, and instead of having an interest in the soon-coming life of God, you are "without hope and without God in the world." If you are not clothed upon with the power of the cross, how can you expect to be an overcomer in the great day, and reign in peace at last? You cannot! And when the master of the house rises up, and his suffering, waiting children are made glad and rejoice in his presence, you will miss a place in the kingdom of immortality, and sink beneath the wrath of God with the wailing millions of unconverted souls, into oblivion's unmeasured depths, and be known no more forever.

If you do not belong to Christ, may the Spirit of the ever-blessed One arouse and quicken you. Awake! Arouse now from the sleep of death, and gird your mantle about you, and with your whole soul ablaze with hope and love, prepare to meet the Bridegroom. "For behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him;" and "his reward is with him to give every man according as his work shall be."

Brethren and sisters in Christ, arise, look around you. Hear the cries of the perishing thousands, as they rush with maddened rage into the falling ranks of Armageddon's warring host. Can you not do something to save them from destruction? Yes, I know you can if your heart is given to Christ. You may feel your own weakness and insufficiency in withstanding the great red dragon's battling legions: but do not sink in despair. Jesus still lives, your hope, your life, your all, and his

Communications.

A Letter to P. G. Bowman.

Open thy mouth and I will fill it, saith the Lord. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Liberty to speak the truth in the love of it,—to hate and abhor lying or evil in all its protean phrases; Liberty to practice all the Lord commands, to live soberly, righteously and godly,—to love our enemies, to forgive one another and to do good to those who hate us. Liberty to preach the gospel that Paul preached, liberty to expose all the fallacies of pseudo-teachers or theologasters; liberty to preach the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ showing, there is no future life out of Christ,—that the second advent of Christ is the hope of the Christian, with all the culminating glory, honor, and immortality of the redeemed, on the new earth under the whole heavens, where the saints will reign with Christ eternally, and be like him.

Alas! alas! Behold pseudo-orthodoxy, Protestant orthodoxy of every sect and creed, for upwards of three centuries, denouncing Catholicism, and claiming its own creed as divine—and its teachers, doctors of divinity! The Pope is always right, infallible! and each sect never in the wrong. Hear the language of Dr. Lees (of England):

Sectarian divinity: "Its dogmas are all stereotyped, and its prophets all infallible! The sects, little and big, have all some pope or other, or some final council or creed, to act as an extinguisher upon reason and evidence. If there be any essential between Roman orthodoxy of one sort and British orthodoxy of all sorts, it is only that slight one remarked by Steele, namely, that the Roman Pontiff is always in the right, and the Protestant Pastor never in the wrong! The Roman Pope is unfailable, the Protestant Bigot un-errable!

The South Carolina Conference, the Minnesota Conference—both un-errable! The former would have extinguished P. G. Bowman, the latter would have paralyzed the tongue of Collins, the best man among them! "How is it," said a Methodist (on the 24th of March last), "that our best, ablest men are leaving us? I cannot account for it?" Had I heard him, I would have answered him in something after this manner:

They leave you sir, because they have seen their errors, and would not any longer preach a doctrine that sullies or slanders the character of God; because they know God is love; that he is neither cruel or vindictive; that we can truly worship only what we love; that we dare not darken the Divine aspect or destroy our deepest feelings of reverence towards God, who does not wish even the death of the sinner. They leave you, sir, because they love the truth, and abhor lying! They leave you, oh! with what anguish and sadness, because you will not tolerate the truth of God, and dare to silence such men as Bowman, Collins, White, and a hundred others whose unsullied lives and melting eloquence in their utterance of truth, have left your presiding Elders, Bishops, and Doctors of Divinity without excuse, or even the shadow of Scripture truth to palliate their Sectarian virulence, bigotry and ignorance. They leave you, sir, because they know the truth, and that truth has made them free. They leave you, because they love God, and cleave to that which is good—the truth as proclaimed by Moses, the prophets, and Christ and his apostles. Alas! sir, they do regret and rejoice. Regret that when they first embraced religion they did not know that gross errors were in their beloved church. Rejoice now, that God has illuminated them, opened their eyes to see the wondrous things contained in his Holy Book, and to see the wondrous errors contained in all sectarian creeds. Oh! yes, they do regret their former blindness, and regret that so many of their brethren are in the dark, and ignorantly preaching, in effect, the first lie on record—"Ye shall not surely die,"—as an infallible truth! O, how their hearts throb with sadness—the sequence of love—at the remembrance of the past, and palpitate with ardent desires that those whom they love as well as those (their) enemies who voted for their exclusion from their company, may yet be led by the Spirit of God to see their mistakes, to repent, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance. Oh! yes, they feel the Spirit of Christ and say, Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. Yes, these and many more reasons might be assigned why they left your church. It was the will of God who brought it about. Some of us, think with Lord Bacon, that it is better to have no opinion of God at all, than one which is dishonoring to him and degrading to us; and all misconceptions of Deity are degrading. The lovely truths of Christianity are hidden by the clouds of darkness and fallacies, which arise from man-made creeds. The pure and lovely character of truth is turned into an odious fallacy. If any man preach another gospel than that which Paul preached, he entails upon himself a curse. Let him, says Paul, be accursed. Alas! how many do it ignorantly. May the Lord forgive them.

I fear greatly that such perverters of Christianity are guilty of much of the infidelity in the world. Nor am I sure but their hearers learn to swear and blaspheme by hearing such preachers. In other words, some preachers teach the art of swearing, and slander, and blasphemy, in some of their sermons. Is this true? Do they sometimes slander God, and blaspheme him, turn his truth into a lie, represent him as cruel vindictive, revengeful, unmerciful, unforgiving. I have no doubt that many of them are sincere in their notions. I pity them, but in mercy, because I still love them, and do not wish them death. I am determined to know nothing among them but Christ and him crucified. And I never will pander to their prejudices, but on the contrary, expose to their view, in all its odious unutterable deformity, the manner in which they plainly contradict God, and his word. This is easily done. A babe in Christ may do it. A child five years old may do it. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." It is false, says the preacher! What! false, do you say? Yes, I say, says the church. (Luther, Lee, and all the Bishops, and D. D's, cry, Amen.) Yes, I say, says each one of them. It is false, the soul is immortal; the soul will never die, it will live forever! Here is a most mountainous, stupendous blasphemy. Behold a poor finite mortal! Look at him. Contrast him with the High and Lofty One who inhabits eternity. Gentlemen of the jury, I give you the law, now judge by the facts:

TESTIMONY: First Witness. For the truth, God. "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "The wages of sin is death."

Second Witness. For the Blasphemy. The Serpent. "Ye shall not surely die." "The soul [Adam was a living soul] can never die." "The soul is immortal—it can never die—it never will die."

What say the Scriptures? Did God tell the truth or did the Serpent tell the truth? Weigh well the facts; here they are: "Adam died." You have the record. This grave question demands a candid investigation. Sacred and profane, modern and ancient history; our graveyards and tombstones testify that men, women, boys and girls have died since the days of Adam, and since you were born. Did God then speak truly, or did the Serpent tell the truth when he told Eve, "Ye shall not surely die?" Did Adam and Eve die? Oh Yes! Then I suppose I need not state any more relative to the facts in the case. Now, gentlemen of the jury, decide, when you retire, who tells you the truth, God or the Serpent.

Excuse the simplicity of such a presentation of things. It seems so ridiculous to have a jury to decide so plain a matter; to behold a court room or Conference room full of preachers, elders, and a bishop, ready and willing and determined to prove that God, and Moses, and his prophets, and Christ, and the apostles, were all mistaken; and that Peyton G. Bowman has preached lies, and therefore must be rejected for preaching false doctrine. In the sight of God, under the effulgent blaze of divine light, the conduct, acts of such men, must be viewed with astonishment and regret.

How comes it to pass, that preachers of every sect continue steadfast in error, and are satisfied to hold on to their respective denominations, even when the light of truth illumines their minds, and convinces them that there are numerous fallacies and myths in their theology? Some are catechistical, some theological Christians; and many through the ritual of education and "progress of religion."

There is such a thing as false trust which pretends to find in religion motives to justify it, and lead men sometimes to mistake the most criminal of all dispositions for a sentiment of salvation, and a fruit of faith and of grace. There is certainly a mystery in Godliness, a mystery in iniquity. There is such a thing as faith, and such a thing as unbelief. There are two passions, love and hatred. The objects that engross love, and those that excite or occupy hatred, lead us to know the character of mankind; for no man exists who is destitute of love and hatred. They dwell in the hearts of all men. But their nature may be ascertained by the objects of their love and hatred. The saint and the sinner alike possess both, but the love and the hatred of the one are different in many respects. The converted and the unconverted agree in harmony in many respects as natural men who have feelings naturally peculiar.

The Christian loves God and abhors evil. He loves the truth and cleaves to it. He is taught of God, he learns of Christ, calls no man "Master." I say, he loves the truth, the word. If he is called of God, moved by the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven to preach the gospel of the Son of God, will he knowingly preach the notions of men, contrary to the utterances of God whom he loves, and whose truth the Holy Ghost moved him to proclaim? This is a serious question that does not admit of equivocal answers. If God has commissioned him, taught him, will he suffer him to continue in error, and maintain that that error is infallible truth, and that the wicked will live forever in eternal wo and misery? I know there is such a thing as fastidiously pure charity. It is quite common. The wickedest mortals are quite liberal, very catholic indeed upon religious subjects, and so are some professed Christians. But how is it with Christians, true believers who love Jesus, who have the spirit of Jesus? What is their verdict? Do they exercise charity contrary to truth, and say that a preacher of the gospel who contradicts God turns truth into a lie, may do it with impunity, and inherit eternal life; that he will not be punished nor accursed? In other words is such an one a Christian minister, or will he continue in sin (error) though the truth may be offered, presented to him in its lovely, simple, grammatical construction, its true Scriptural terminology? If he embrace it not, what then? I hope all who love the truth will come out from among the sects. Think of these things.

J. F. LEE.

The Power of the Cross; Where is it?

The power of the cross was once an irresistible power, given forth conquering and to conquer, subduing alike king and peasant, rich and poor, Jew and Greek, bond and free, and making them willing and faithful subjects of the meek and lowly Nazarene. And though their names were cast out as evil and they were hated of all men, yet they forsook not the Standard of Truth, but with their great commission of bearing the joyful news of life and pardon to condemned and dying millions, they pressed fearlessly on to victory or to death, the invincible army of king Emanuel.

Oh! what mighty conquests have been gained and what victories achieved, under the banner of the cross. The king of darkness himself has often trembled and fled before the triumphant, believing host, as clad with the armor of God, and armed with truth, which is the sword of the Spirit, they have gone forth to battle, in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. How the darkness and gloom of prison walls, and solitary caves have been chased away, and their inmates made to rejoice in hope of eternal deliverance, when the bleeding victim of Calvary was offered in living faith upon the altar of the heart. Death scenes most horrible have been rendered sweet and glorious, by manifestations of the power of the cross, when the humble fol- followers of the Lamb, have exultingly shouted victory! while wrapped in devouring flames. Yes, the gospel as it was preached by the apostles, and received by their hearers, was a power divine, and they who imbibed its spirit, "loved not their lives unto death." They knew nothing, but entire consecration to the cause of truth, and though their only earthly laurels were shame and strife and blood, they could not think of spending the few precious moments of their probation, in the enjoyment of sensual pleasures, while the world was wrapped in moral darkness, and the dying agonies of the perishing race were borne upon every breeze.

Yes, this was the gospel spirit of the first century. But does it comport with the gospel spirit now? Alas! how great the contrast! What a mighty change has been silently and secretly coming over the principles and practices of Christianity. Instead of the stern, unyielding, uncompromising love of the then, we now have a gospel made up of revelation and romance, fact and fiction, a little Bible and a little heathen philosophy, mixed together with a sufficient quantity of speculation, to form a mass, which is made into a pill, and sugar-coated with the term, "Orthodoxy," and handed out to dying men, by the Doctors of Divinity, as the antidote of sin and death. Yes, this mixture contains the influence divine, which is to conquer the world to Christ, and bring upon the world that universal peace, known as the "Millennial Age," when wars and rumors of war shall cease, and the whole earth shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest.

But, it seems to me, that if it is ever going to bring about this great change in the condition of the world, we might see some indications of it, at least, after a fair trial, for sixteen or seventeen centuries.

Is it really triumphing over the stormy passions of the human heart, silencing the thunders of battle, and liberating our race from diabolical rule? An emphatic no, comes up from every quarter of the globe. Each day continues to bring the sad news of strife, bloodshed and carnage, from warring nations, most of whom profess Christianity, and claim to have the spirit of the gospel incorporated with their lives. Oh! fatal delusion! dire messenger of destruction!

The cross is robbed of its power, and the gospel of its charms. Instead of making the world better, it grows worse and worse, and is less ready for the coming of the Son of man, at this time, than it ever was before. Religion is a form, and its power is not known.

This lethargy seems to be almost universal, though prophecy declares that "the day is at hand" when the earth must be summoned to judgment. How alarming the condition of the world to-day. The unmistakable evidence of a fast approaching judgment increasing every day, and the church and world all asleep! Reader: how is the case with those professing Christ, in your neighborhood? Are they consecrated wholly to him, and are their lives a living epistle, "seen and read of all men?" Or is religion a cold and barren thing? and has stiff formality superseded that warm and earnest devotion al "faith that works by love and purifies the heart?"

How is your own case? Do you belong to Christ? Are you led by his blessed Spirit? Do you humbly bow at the foot of the cross, and wash your robe in the crimson fountain that flows from its bleeding victim? Are you looking to the throne of the Eternal within the vail, where the Lamb of Calvary, with his own blood as an offering, is pleading in the presence of the Father for you? Do you "endure as seeing him who is invisible?" In short are you a conqueror, 'through the power of the cross.' Do you overcome the world and the besetting sins of your own life, and magnify Christ in your spirit and your body, which are his?

Or is it with you dear reader, as it is with the greater portion of the professed Christian world? Have the sufferings of the cross lost to you their sanctifying influence; and do you listen as to an idle tale, to the sweet murmurings of the crystal stream of Life, as bursting from the fountain of eternal love, it comes, the wonderful gift of God, to satiate the thirst of dying millions? Has the gospel, the sweet messenger of grace, lost to you its charms, and are you prostrating yourself at the throne of Baal, giving to him the offerings of your heart? Let me urge you into a speedy self-examination. Find out what your condition is. See whether you really have communion with Jesus, or whether you have been deluded, and instead of having an interest in the soon-coming life of God, you are "without hope and without God in the world." If you are not clothed upon with the power of the cross, how can you expect to be an overcomer in the great day, and reign in peace at last? You cannot! And when the master of the house rises up, and his suffering, waiting children are made glad and rejoice in his presence, you will miss a place in the kingdom of immortality, and sink beneath the wrath of God with the wailing millions of unconverted souls, into oblivion's unmeasured depths, and be known no more forever.

If you do not belong to Christ, may the Spirit of the ever-blessed One arouse and quicken you. Awake! Arouse now from the sleep of death, and gird your mantle about you, and with your whole soul ablaze with hope and love, prepare to meet the Bridegroom. "For behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him;" and "his reward is with him to give every man according as his work shall be."

Brethren and sisters in Christ, arise, look around you. Hear the cries of the perishing thousands, as they rush with maddened rage into the falling ranks of Armageddon's warring host. Can you not do something to save them from destruction? Yes, I know you can if your heart is given to Christ. You may feel your own weakness and insufficiency in withstanding the great red dragon's battling legions: but do not sink in despair, Jesus still lives, your hope, your life, your all, and his mise is firmer than the everlasting it: "my grace is sufficient for thee; my strength shall be made perfect weakness."

O thou conquering power of the ss, thou life giving spirit of Imman-, come now and reign over us. vest our hearts of selfishness and rldly-mindedness, and prepare them a temple for thine own indwelling. icken our cold and lifeless affections. spire us with a warm and earnest e of the truth, as revealed in thy rd. O blessed Spirit! spread thy vering about us, and hide us behind cross of the Living Lamb "who over all, God blessed forever: en."

G. W. Crosby.

California Correspondence.

Ve are now in the mountains, at rtlett Springs, Lake Co., a very d and solitary place, except right in canyon, where the healing waters this noted spring bubble up, and ere the rude cabins, and tents are ched to accommodate the afflicted s who gather here in quest of health. reminds me of the pool of Bethesda. e lame, the halt, the blind and many er afflicted ones are here. And ne wonderful cures have been effect- by drinking the waters.

The mountains are very steep, tow- g one above another, whilst the ar and deer, and other wild animals m freely over them.

There are three hundred people here present and they expect a thousand wo in the fall. Br. Wilson and e are here. He came for his health to preach the gospel. There are or eight ministers on the ground, different denominations, one a Catho- priest. We have all kinds of aching. We hold our meetings out loors, under a large oak tree. We turns in preaching. Two meet- on Sunday, and one Wednesday rnoon.

One of the United Brethren spoke Sunday morning, on going to ven when we die, and said the New usalem was the kingdom of God. I ke in the afternoon and showed the ple, that this earth was to be the gdom of God, when the king comes ake possession of it.

We expect Br. and Sr. Fassett here week for their health, as her eyes troubling her yet, and he has re- tly been afflicted with a similar dif- lty.

We shall probably have a hot battle e between Bible doctrine and fables, they are arrayed against each other. s great Advent truth brings out in- lity, and the unprepared state of heart to meet God. We expect to some fruit here that will be gath- d in at Christ's coming.

Br. Wilson is a true man and God with him. I am glad he is here to p sound some of the last notes of rning to this last generation. We rejoice in the truth.

D. D. Reed.

A Post-Mortem Gospel.

Dear Br. Errett.—I see in your e of the 4th inst. that Clark Bra- n has got hold of a post mortem spel—has taken himself to purgato- , and is preaching to the spirits now prison there, who were disobedient the time of Noah.

Now, as Br. Braden has engaged this foreign mission without consult- the brethren, I do not see that any e should desire his recall, and since I no chance of his getting out of lim- , now that he is there, unless he call the aid of Pio Nono, I think it uld be well for him to consider him- f dead, and to continue the prose- tion of his mission there. But our othren have been rather in favor of me than foreign missions; and as the ission is rather more foreign than y hitherto contemplated by our breth- , I do not think they are under any special obligation to sustain it. Their business, heretofore, has been with the living and not with the dead. Have you any subscribers in those parts? If you have, I don't see how the Standard, with the present mail arrangements, is to reach them. And since this post mortem gospel can be of no possible use, save to the inhabitants of Br. Braden's diocese, I do not see why the columns of the Standard should be encumbered with a gospel wholly intended for another world. Besides, it might induce some of the living to postpone obedience until they get to purgatory, that they may there hear and obey the gospel under the ministry of Br. Braden. Instead then of encumbering the columns of the Standard with the post mortem gospel, would it not be better for Br. Braden to publish some tracts upon the subject and distribute them to the parishioners of his charge, as he goes his rounds preaching his gospel to the spirits in prison.

Now, in my utter ignorance of the prisoners to whom he feels himself called to preach, and of the nature of the gospel which he preaches, it is with extreme diffidence that I venture to suggest whether he could not enlarge his mission, and preach also to other spirits in prison than those who were disobedient in the time of Noah. I know it is officious in me, and quite impertinent, to make any suggestion upon a subject about which I am so utterly uninformed, but I really do not see why those who were disobedient in the time of Noah should have any special claims upon the ministry of Br. Braden over and above their fellow spirits in limbo.—John Taffe, in Standard.

"Religious Notices."

The Rev. Flight will preach in the Fancy church in Oliver street, next Sunday A. M., at 10 1-2, and in the evening at 7 1-2 o'clock. Subject in the morning, The Fixed Stars: in the evening, The Man in the Moon.

The Rev. Dr. Swell will preach in the church of St. Sebastian next Sunday, morning and evening. Subject in the morning, Church Architecture; in the evening, A Question which no one can Answer.

The Rev. Mr. Draw will preach in the Tabernacle on Broad street, next Sunday evening. The Rev. Mr. Draw is a new pulpit light, and crowds are wishing to hear him. Come early.

The Rev. Dr. Antiquity will breach in the church of the Patriarchs next Sunday morning and evening. Subject in the morning, Job's Oxen; in the evening, Job's War Horse.

The Rev. Mr. Plain-Spoken will preach in the Progressive church, corner of Independent and Jolly streets, Sunday morning and evening. Subject in the morning, The Devil's Funeral Sermon; in the evening, Where Cain got his Wife.

The Rev. Mr. Great will preach in the church of St. Crispin next Sunday morning and evening. Subject in the morning Shoemakers; in the evening, Strikes among Laborers. After the sermon, the ordinance of baptism will be administered in the marble baptistery, which is well worth seeing. The Lord's supper will be administered. A new silver communion service has been provided by a wealthy parishioner, and will be used for the first time.

It is expected that two advantages will arise from the above notices. 1. Some men will be brought into public notice who were long unappreciated. 2. Some people will go to meeting next Sunday, who otherwise would stay at home.

It is also quite certain that they will be productive of serious disadvantages. 1. The people who are drawn to church by the above notices must be drawn, if at all, by a repetition of similar notices.

2. The public impression is that they are pressed hard for hearers, and seek a crowd, even at the expense of selling off at cost.—Examiner.

The Human Ear.

Professor Tyndall concluded one of his recent lectures by giving a minute description of the human ear. He explained how the external orifice is closed at the bottom by a circular tympanic membrane, behind which is a cavity known as the 'drum;' the drum is separated from the brain by two orifices, the one round and the other oval. These orifices are closed by fine membranes. Across the cavity of the drum stretches a series of four little bones, one end of which acts as a hammer and another is an anvil. Behind the bony partition, which is pierced by the two orifices already mentioned, is the extraordinaty organ called the labyrinth, filled with water; this organ is between the partition and the brain, and over its lining membrane the terminal fibers of the auditory nerve are distributed. There is an apparatus inside the labyrinth admirably adapted to respond to these vibrations of the water which correspond to the rates of vibration of certain 'bristles,' of which the said apparatus consists. Finally, there is in the labyrinth a wonderful organ, discovered by the Marchese Corti, which is, to all appearance, a musical instrument, with its chords so stretched as to accept vibrations of different periods, and transmit them to nerve filaments which traverse the organ. Within the ears of men, and without their knowledge or contrivance, this lute of three thousand strings has existed for ages, accepting the music of the outer world and rendering it fit for reception by the brain. Each musical tremor which falls upon this organ selects from its tensioned fibers the one appropriate to its own pitch, and throws that fiber into unisonant vibration. And thus, no matter how complicated the motion of the external air may be, these microscopic strings can analyze it and reveal the constituents of which it is composed; at least such are the present views of those authorities who best understand the apparatus which transmits sonorous vibrations to the auditory nerve.—London Paper.

I never knew a good horse which had not some odd habit or other, and I never yet saw a minister worth his salt who had not some crotchet or oddity. Now, these are the bits of cheese that cavillers smell out and nibble at: this man is too slow, and another too fast; the first is too flowery, and the second is too dull. Dear me, if all God's creatures were judged in this way, we should wring the dove's neck for being too tame, shoot the robins for eating spiders, kill the cows for swinging their tails, and the hens for not giving us milk. When a man wants to beat a dog he can soon find a stick, and at this rate any fool may have something to say against the best minister in England.—John Ploughman.

The pious Herrington used to say that he never composed himself to sleep, except in the consciousness that every sin he had ever committed was forever put away; "for I believe God's Word," he said, "and that assures me that if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. I do confess my sins, and can I presume to doubt that through Christ they are forever forgiven?"

Our Young Folks.

First Things.

Some questions about first things, the answers to which are found in the first book of the Bible:

1. What is the name of the first book of the Bible?
2. Who was the first cause and Creator of all things?
3. What did God make in the first day of Creation?
4. Who was the first man?
5. Who was the first woman?
6. Who solemnized the first marriage?
7. What was the first lie told on earth?
8. Who told the first lie?
9. What was man's first sin against God?
10. When was the first promise made about the coming of Christ?
11. What was the name of the first child born in the world?
12. Who was the first murderer?
13. What man was first translated?
14. What was the name of the first city?
15. Who built the first city?
16. Who first married two wives?
17. Who first dwelt in tents and kept cattle?
18. Who was the first musician?
19. Who was the first worker in iron and brass?
20. Who was the first great hunter.
21. What did Noah first send forth out of the ark?
22. What is the first kingdom mentioned in the Bible?
23. What was its monarch's name?
24. What chapter tells of the first battle of Kings?
25. Who was the first Priest mentioned in holy writ?
26. In whose family did God introduce circumcision?
27. Who is first spoken of as buying land?
28. For what use did he buy this ground?
29. What is the name of the first burial place mentioned.—True Presbyterian.

Don't, Boys.

Don't be impatient, no matter if things do sometimes go wrong.

Don't give the ball a kick and send it into the nearest mud-puddle, because it won't go straight when you throw it. Don't send the marbles against the fence and break your best glass alley, because your clumsy fingers could not hit the center. Don't break your kite string all to pieces because it will not bring your kite down from the tree with the first jerk; it will take you full three times as long to get it down afterwards. Don't give your little brother an angry push and a sharp word if he can not see into the mysteries of marble-playing or hoop-rolling with the first lesson. You were once just as stupid as he, though you have soon forgotten it.

What in the world would become of you if your mother had no more patience than you; if, every time you came to her when busy, thrust you off with a cross word?—dear loving mother, who never ceases to think of you, to watch over you, to care for you, who keeps you so nicely clothed, and makes such nice things for you to eat. What if she were to be so impatient that you would be half the time afraid to speak to her, to tell her about your troubles in school and at play. Ah, how you grieve that mother by your impatience and crossness!

An Irishman applying for a licence to sell whiskey, was asked if he possessed a good moral character. "Faith yer honor," replied Pat, "I don't see the necessity of a good moral character to sell whiskey."

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

Tracts: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 6c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath. Everlasting Punishment—64 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—40 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—46 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1 paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in The Times, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c, every one should have a copy.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 20c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of [illegible] Punishment. By Henry Constable. [illegible] [illegible] Irrefutable arguments.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 35c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—25c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $1.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 50c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $3 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2, leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Goud. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 60.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. M. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 130 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 12. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

7

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, July 2, 1872.

A FRIEND called our attention to the article, given in another place, entitled A Post Mortem Gospel, which appeared in a late issue of the Christian Standard. We reproduce it withoutcomment. When Br. Braden's own brethren are after him with such sharp sticks it would be cruel for us to goad him by allusions to his "foreign missions."

ONE kind of repentance is well illustrated in the story of 'the young woman who, on joining the Church, said that she found that wearing jewelry and feathers was dragging her to destruction, and so she took them off and gave them to her sister.' We confess to a weakness for the kind of repentance that was exhibited in Paul's day at the notable bonfire of Spiritist publications. (Acts 19: 18, 19.)

In another place we give an interesting—perhaps severe—letter from Dr. J. F. Lee of North Carolina, formerly a Baptist minister in that State. He was converted by Eld. Storrs' Six Sermons, and received letters as an Adventist minister. He has never attempted to organize churches, but has spread much light through North Carolina, and within the last year aided Br. Bowman in several meetings. Dr. Lee is now over seventy years, in fine health, and stands at the head of his profession in his country—a strong-minded, bold, brave man.

THE DISCUSSION.

Last week after the first articles upon the second proposition were in type, and three letters of each disputant in manuscript, we received notice that the columns of the Standard were closed to the debate. We give elsewhere Eld. Errett's letter announcing this determination. It is but just to say that throughout this debate, Br. Errett has treated both Eld. Braden and myself with the most scrupulous impartiality, and I have nothing to complain of except that this final decision was not rendered at an earlier date.

Although deprived of the privilege of presenting an affirmative argument to the readers of the discussion, we feel that our labor has been, by no means, lost. Seed has been sown that will one day bear fruit. Choking public discussion will not smother private judgment, nor prevent the germination of seed-truths we have been able to develop in our negative arguments. Real thinkers, whose attention has been aroused, will not rest contented until they have sifted the subject thoroughly. We have already heard from some of these and shall hear from more by and by.

"THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT."

SOME years ago we remarked of Mrs. Reed's able effort: "We have been interested in an examination of this work. The so-called 'self-contradictions of the Bible' are so readily explained and harmonized as to make one wonder that men will allow themselves to be deceived by the unscrupulous statements of infidels. The apparently real difficulties are fairly met and disposed of." To-day we re-affirm this judgment, and do it emphatically. It is a book every Christian should read. Many who are confident that the Bible does not contradict itself are still unable to prove that it does not. This handy book of reference contains the arguments in lucid, condensed form that show the celebrated "144 contradictions" to be no contradictions but perfect harmony.

As before remarked, we have secured the last hundred copies of the edition for the benefit of our readers. And although it is a fifty cent book, we will send a copy free to any new subscriber, or the person procuring a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year. The work will soon be out of print, and then be exceedingly valuable. Do not neglect this opportunity to procure it on such easy terms.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

THURSDAY. June 7. Came to Buchanan, where I found Mrs. Himes improved in health, and she will soon be able to make her proposed journey East, to visit her old friends after an absence of about ten years. Her work, like mine for the Advent cause is about done. And we wait for the promise made to the fathers, of the resurrection to the endless life.

FRIDAY, June 7. Calls for help all over the land were never more numerous or urgent than now. And while my heart burns with zeal to spread the truth far and wide, I can only do a small part of what is required. And my fellow-laborers find themselves in the same condition. The Lord help us to "do what we can."

I have received a note from South Pendleton, Cincinnati, where I gave lectures a short time since, informing me that the Baptist and Congregational pastors had replied to me. The Baptist minister took the ground that nearly all the heathen, together, with most of Christendom, believed in the immortality of the soul. And besides, he himself felt conscious that he had an immortal soul; and as the Bible taught it, he said, therefore, the soul was immortal! But the heathen believe in idols and idol worship also, therefore idol worship is true. And most of the Christian world believe in infant sprinkling; therefore by the above reasoning, the immersion of believers is unscriptural and false, and sprinkling is true! But the Bible teaches the of idolatry, and sprinkling is a fruit of the apostasy. And yet those wedded to their sects will swallow these fables as a legitimate reply to clear Bible arguments. There is no help for such. They have stopped their ears against the truth.

The Congregational pastor replied on Scriptural grounds. Of hades and sheol, he said in public, they did not mean the grave, but the place of departed spirits! When questioned in private, he said the terms meant the grave in some places. He also said the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, was a literal narrative, and the rich man was now in the flames, suffering and crying for a drop of water to cool his tongue; while Lazarus was in the bosom of Abraham, happy. But he did not tell his hearers of the locality of the place. This is assumed as he says like the existence of God, and the immortality of the soul. And after he had argued that the words destroy, consume, devour, etc. did not mean annihilation, one of the brethren, in prayer besought God that he would save immortal souls from the death that never dies! And so they settle back on heathen philosophy and the "doctrines and commandments of men, making the word of God of none effect. But not all: a goodly number cling to the truth, and all the more for these replies. Some, not all, will receive the truth in every place. This has been the case always.

This p. m. I attended with Dr. Berrick, the funeral of a very interesting grandchild of Br. S. C. Raymond, of Chicago. These beautiful children, so dear to the hearts of parents, are often rent from them by the cruel hand of death. But the promise is, "they will come again to their own border," in the resurrection. God says they shall come again from the dead. Blessed hope. May it be the comfort of Br. and Sr. Hammond.

SABBATH, June 9. I spoke in the p. m. at the School House at Norwood Park to a good audience of candid hearers, on the kingdom. (Mat. 25: 34.) "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom, prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The earth in its Eden state was the first kingdom at the beginning, and the earth in its restored state will be the final home of the saints.

Everything is new here and somewhat unsettled, if not confused, at present. And we are not doing a great deal as to meetings. But our number is increasing, and prospects growing better.

TUESDAY, June 10. A day of care and duty. Oh how much grace we need to help us in our work. And this is promised. "My grace shall be sufficient for you." And the Lord invites us, to "come boldly to the throne of grace, and find mercy and grace to help us in every time of need." It is of no use to sit down and repine, and be discouraged, when God opens a wide door for help. And such help. Ah, when God helps, we have help indeed. Yes, "What a friend we have in Jesus," to help in every time. Every time. Does it read so? Well, no. How then? "In time of need." This is all we can ask. In "time of need," God says he will help. Let us trust him. I have done so and have found him true, and faithful. He gives sometimes more than we ask or think.

WEDNESDAY, June 11. We are favored with a visit from Elder Darius Mathewson, of Union Mills, Ind, and Elder L. C. Collins, Monticello, Minn. These dear and tried brethren are true reliable friends of the cause in the West. And their presence and counsels have given us good cheer in our work.

SATURDAY, June 15. Have visited many of the church in Buchanan, to-day. They are holding fast to the faithful word. I dined with Br. Richards. He is something of a fruit-raiser. He showed me one of the finest strawberry patches that I ever saw. The yield will be very large, and the fruit is of the best quality, I also went into the country with Mrs. H. to visit among the friends. Brn. Harding, Mead, and Hudson, are among our best farmers. They know how to till the soil, and are among the industrious and economical ones who in the sense of modern theology "inherit the earth," that is, they enjoy it. But they expect to really inherit it, in its restored state when Jesus comes. Our farmers are the most independent people, and at some seasons have more time for reading and reflection than our city people; and they should be the most happy.

At night I returned to town, passing the white fields of wheat. New buildings, and manufactories are being put up and are prospering in temporal matters. In religious things there is less prosperity.

SABBATH, June 16. I spoke at the Advent chapel this a. m. from Rom. 8: 28–39. Fore-knowledge and predestination in reference to the salvation of believers. To such as love God, all things shall work together for good. And nothing shall separate them from the love of God. The Lord give us a blessing. At night I spoke on patience (Heb. 10: 36.) I spoke of the grace and offices of patience. (Jas. 1: 3; Col. 1: 10, 11.) Also that it inspires the Christian with confidence and calmness, in affliction. (Job. 2: 9, 10.) It helps in time of provocation. (2 Sam. 16: 5–12.) It will help the church just before the Lord's coming. (Jas. 5: 1, 11.) "Be patient brethren for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." We had a good day with this people. I was greeted warmly and trust that my visit will be a blessing to them.

Close of the Discussion.

EDITOR ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.
Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Sir: As I suppose your tenth reply closes the discussion with Eld Braden on the first proposition, I write to say that I have concluded to close with this number the publication of the discussion in the STANDARD. My reason is, that the discussion of the first proposition has been extended so far, and time and space have been occupied so much beyond the limits originally agreed upon, that it will altogether derange my plans to continue such a discussion and give up my columns for several months to come. You are aware that, originally, it was understood that the entire discussion would take about six months; nearly that time has been given to the first proposition. Two columns were to be given to each disputant, and a letter from each was to appear in every number. Instead of this the letters were three and four columns long, and so far from appearing regularly, two every week, it has been impossible to obtain one every week. The letters have been ten instead of six. In all respects the original agreement, on which I consented to to the publication of the discussion, have been so far departed from, that I find all my plans interfered with, and feel under no moral obligation to continue to publish. I do not raise the question as to who is to blame, or whether blame justly attaches to ony one. I simply give the facts. As the first proposition is that in which our readers have most interest, and as it seemed impossible to secure a conformity to the original argument, I concluded to let the disputants have their own way; but this being at an end, I have now to say that I cannot consent to load my columns in this way any longer. I have no assurance that the irregularities and procrastinations will not be as great in the future, as in the past; but even were the future discussion to come within the prescribed limits, it would have to run at least three months longer;—and this, had I known it at the start, would have prevented me from admitting the discussion at all, and requires me to put a stop to its publication now.

I regret this necessity. I was anxious that the entire discussion, as proposed, should be laid before our readers. But it is no fault of mine that it has not been done, and I am not responsible for the failure. I have sought to be just and impartial in my dealings with the disputants and with my readers, and have already given up the time to the discussion of the first proposition that was allotted to the entire series of propositions, I am constrained to dismiss the controversy at this point from my columns.

With best wishes, Truly Yours,
ISAAC ERRETT.
Cincinnati, June 25.

From Indiana.

Our tent meeting at this place was excellent. Our tent, though a large one, was filled to its utmost capacity, with three or four hundred standing without.

Br. Mansfield spake the word with great clearness, and many became interested in the things set forth.

Several calls have already been sent in from other places for such meetings, but we now lack the force to keep the tent in the field. One man cannot conduct it alone. Who will lend a helping hand? E. C. ANDRUS.

Big Indian, Ind.

"Personal Pre-Existence."

Relative to the 'personal pre-existence" of Christ, I find the following statments:

1. "It is a fact that the Son had 'glory with the father before the world was.' "

2. "It is a fact that 'though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor.' "

3. "It is a fact that 'God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of Angels, preached unto the Gentiles, pelieved on in the world, recieved up into glory.' The philosophy of these wonderful facts we do not attempt to explain. To do so, would be 'to become wise above what is written.' 'Great is the mystery of godliness.' "

Please allow a further suggestion of facts which, by the same exegesis, seem to prove your conclusions wrong —reductio ad absurdum.

1. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as he hath chosen us, in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." (Eph. 1: 3, 4.)

(2). "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the world began, but IS NOW MADE MANIFEST by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ. (2 Tim. 1: 9, 10.)

(3). "And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things [by Jesus Christ][1]; to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which HE PURPOSED in Christ Jesus our Lord," (Eph. 3: 9, 11.)

(4). "For it became him [God] for whom all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. .FOR both he that sanctifieth and they that are sanctified ARE ALL OF ONE: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren. (Heb. 2: 10, 11.)

1. In some qualified sense the pre-existence of not only Christ, but Christians, is taught by these scripture quotations, with equal clearness. But we may not therefore rush to unwarrantable conclusions. Let us rather show ourselves workmen, "rightly dividing the word of truth," allowing the general tenor of Scripture to decide just the degree of qualification necessary to give us the exact truth on the subject.

This style of language is prophetical in itself, or relates to prophetical subjects. And prophecy is history written before-hand. A fine illustration of the former remark is found in connection with the last clause of the last quotation; "For which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee." These appear to be the words of the then existing Christ, put are really the prophetical sayings of David, personifying Christ, as found in the twenty-second Psalm.

Personal pre-existence is an outright contradiction of terms: and is to me, and I would think to all but Papists and Trinitarians, as nonsensical as the popular phrase "The death that never dies." Prophetical pre-existence is paradoxical; but the other is simply irrational. The mere quotation of the above scriptures seem sufficient to prove the pre-existence of all the faithful in Christ in exactly the same sense that your first quotation proves the pre-existence of Jesus, viz: in the plan, or purpose, for ages hid "in God." All Christendom, at least, reject any other than this one, which is also a divine interpretation of those texts which make this direct reference to us; why should we resort to a more literal interpretation of those that refer to Christ in precisely the same manner? the principal involved is plainly stated by the apostle: "As it is written," 'I have made thee a father of many nations,' [that is] "before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were." (Rom. 4: 17.) Or, in the presence of that God whom he believed, who makes alive the dead, and calls things not in being as though existing." (Diaglott.) And, by the way, this very promise relates to Jesus as the one seed, the germination of which is to fulfill the same And if so, how could the phrase, "calleth things which be not as though they were" be true, and Jesus then exist in any sense other than in the promise? No one has any difficulty with the passage: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given,"—statements made by the sublime prophet more than seven hundred years before Gabriel hailed the "highly favored" virgin of Nazareth, saying, "Blessed art thou among women."

---

[1] The phrase—by Jesus Christ—is not found in either of the three best critical editions of the Greek Testament, viz.: Griesbach, Lachmann, or Tischendorf, nor yet in the Sinaitic manuscript.

It is commonly supposed that because Jesus came into the world, because he partook (Diaglott) of flesh and blood, therefore he must have had an intelligent active or personal existence in some mysterious way, in order to be thus spoken of. But this does by no means follow. There is no form of language by which we can avoid similar expressions, in which we appear to make a passive agent a sentient actor. For example: The grass grew; the sun shone; the fire burned. We do not thus express action in a proper sense, but states or conditions of these inanimate objects. I may say the stone did not itself fall, but yielded to natural laws which drew it to the earth; only condition is expressed, not volition, in either case. Adam died. Did he will to die, or simply yield to death. And in yielding did Death receive any more help from him in the execution of the work, than did Gravity, to which the stone yielded, from it? As it regards Heb. 2, 14: "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself took part of the same" &c., it does not appear that he acted in the matter more than the children: for, (1) he was made flesh: (John 1: 14): (2) "Which he had promised afore in the holy scriptures, concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection of the dead." (3) "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law." (Gal 4: 4.) Besides the passage is made clear by other renderings: I will give two; (1) "Since then, the children have one common nature of blood and flesh, he also in like manner partook of these." (Diaglott) (2) Since then, as the children partake of flesh and blood he also himself shared in it." (Whiting)

But more directly to your first quotation. Says Jesus, "Father the hour is come, glorify thy Son." (John 17: 1.) We are told (Heb. 12: 2) that he "endured the cross despising the shame for the joy that was set before him;" and having finished the work given him to do, he says, "O Father glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." In order to identify the Son—the "I" and the "me"—we have only to continue our quotation. Says John, "he that sent me to baptize with water' said unto me, " Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptiseth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God." (Jno. 1: 33, 34.) "And Jesus, when he was paptised, went up straightway out of the water: and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, this is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3: 16, 17.) So it is Jesus of Nazareth—"that holy thing" born of a woman, made under the law, that 'grew and waxed strong in spirit,' increased in wisdom and stature, [Margin age.] and in favor with God and man," he it is that had the "glory." But how? there is no law of language by which we can possibly separate the "I" and the "me" from Jesus himself, the son of Mary by the "power" of God. And certainly by no law of figuration could he be said to have had glory before the world was in any sense of enjoyment. It is, and can be, only in that qualified sense which abounds in the Scriptures. The glory was foreseen for him by God,—"with whom there is no future but one eternal now." And Jesus was participator in the same sense that "Levi also who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham, for he was in the loins of his father when Melchisidec met him."

We may as consistently claim personal pre-existence for John the Baptist, in the form of the translated prophet Elijah on the same principle. For said God, through the Prophet Malachi "Behold I will send you Elijah the Prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Jesus himself applies the prophecy:" Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist.... And if ye will receive it, this is Elias [Elijah] which was for to come." (Matt. 8: 24.) And again, "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things; but I say unto you that Elias is come already and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall the Son of man suffer of them. Then the disciples understood that he spake of John the Baptist." Some might be satisfied with " great is the mystery" here too, but the angel's explanation (Luke. 1: 17) relieves us of any such necessity. "In the spirit and power of Elijah," is the revelation of the mystery. But if we persist in the senseless literalism of the Jews (of which I will speak presently) we have at least in our own minds to settle the query what became of the bodies of Elijah and of the pre-existent Jesus, when John the Baptist and Jesus of Nazareth were born of Elizabeth and the Virgin Mary? Did any one ever understand the Jews to teach or claim pre-existence from John 8: 39, 41? "We be not born of fornication; we have one Father even God." But why not as well as from the answer of Jesus? "If God were your Father, ye would love me; for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I as MYSELF, but he sent me." This same language "he sent me," is applied to John, in the passage above—and as much proves the pre-existence of "me" in John as in Jesus. Why not?—W. E. BROWN. (To be concluded,)

The Famine in Persia.

The following communication from Rev. J. H. Shedd, now in this country for a short time, who has spent fourteen years in Persia, will be read with interest.

The latest intelilgence from the missionaries is to the first of March. Here is a sad story of misery, want, starvation, and death, as the following extracts will show:

Dr. Vanorden was in Hamadan, and says the famine is terrible." As you go to the market the streets present a sad spectacle of the dead and dying—men, women and children crying out for bread, and fighting with one another over the least morsel, or a few coppers. The price of grain was going up, and the prospect dismal before spring work, or summer harvest should come with relief.

" At Oroomiat the poor starving ones continue to come, and on Mondays and Fridays we give them bread and whatever else we can. There are long strings of them at the door on other days, and the Deacon, whose duty it is, inquires into particular cases, and affords relief the most distressed. We cannot do much for want of means. Your heart would ache, and you would not be able to sleep nights, were you here to listen to the dreadful tales of want and see the poor famishing creatures, and hear their clamors for bread.

"In the scrambles, the clothes of the Deaconwho carries the food are often torn. The terible fact is that the rich make gain out of the woes of the poor. The famine has served in many cases to make the rich man richer and the poor man poorer. The noblemen and men in authority, have licked up everything in the land. Multitudes have sold their wives and children for bread. I suppose that more than an hundred thousand have perished from famine in well known districts. The cholera has swept off an immense nnmber. Floods have destroyed many lives and much property. What the end is to be we know not. Yes we do. God is preparing the way for the glorious kingdom of His Son. This charity sent from christian lands, is opening the eyes of multitudes, to see the difference between Christianity and Mohammedanism."

The treasurer of the Mission says:—"We have received from New York, $4[illegible]; £170 from England, and by this mail $[illegible]50 from Germany. But all this is but a drop in the bucket."

The necessity still exists, and will continue for some months to come to aid the starving. If the famine were at our doors, instead of being far away, the world would ring with the call for help, and millions would be poured out in relief. There is greater distress than has recently occurred in any other land. Much as the people of France suffered by war, and the people of Chicago and the Northwest by fire, the unrecorded horrors of famine and pestilence in Persia far excel them. Our mission is the channel to save them. The few hundreds of dollars which have gone on are of inestimable value; but more is needed.

The distress is unabated. The sufferings of Persia are unparalleled in modern times. Funds sent to any of the Presbyterian ministers of this city will go at once to the missionaries, and be used immediately for the relief of the starving.

Serious Things To-Morrow.

Many ages ago, a Greek nobleman made a feast for his friends. In the midst of his mirth, a messenger entered in great haste, with a letter. It was from a distance, to tell him that a plot had been formed by his enemies to kill him that night. "My master desired me to say that you must read the letter without delay, for it is about serious things." "Serious things to-morrow," said the nobleman, as he threw the letter aside, and took up his cup of wine. The delay was fatal. Before the feast was at an end, his enemies rushed into the hall and slew him. "What folly," you say; "why did he not attend to the warning?" But are not you acting in the same manner? The world with all its pleasure and profits to-day; serious things to-morrow!

Give heed to this friendly warning. Forsake your evil ways. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, whose blood cleanseth from all sin, and without whom you must be forever lost. He invites you by His Holy Spirit in His word: "To-day if you will hear his voice, harden not your heart;" for "now is the day of salvation." Serious things to-day!

The Secret of Good Work.

Some years ago, I was brought in contact with a colored man. He was nothing but a cobbler—he said himself he was not a decent shoemaker, and I can testify to that from some experience of his work. But if not elegantly done, it was thoroughly done, and that was the point. He told me that when he became too old and crippled to work in the field and house, he took to cobbling. I said to him: "My friend, after this cobbling on earth has done, how about that other world? Have you any hope for a better world?" "Ah, master," said he, " I am nothing, as I told you, but a poor cobbler, but I feel when I sit here and work at my stool, that the good Master is looking at me, and when I take a stitch, it is a stitch, and when I put on a heel-tap, it is not paper, but good leather."

It is not the work we do upon earth that makes the whole of life, but it is the way in which we do that work—it is the motive. "Thou, God, sees me."—Exchange.

(Continued from page 370)

Hebrew nephesh as "breath," "life, the vital principle in animal bodies." Furst, as we have already seen, gives a similar definition. These are the highest authorities on the Hebrew language. The usage of our own translation of the Authorized Version, confirms this very strongly. Let us remember they all held the Platonic notion of the soul as a sort of second, inner, etherial, immortal man, dwelling in a house or tabernacle called the body. Hence, they most frequently translate the Hebrew nephesh by soul, meaning mostly thereby, their philosophical fancy. But in spite of their bias, they are constantly obliged to translate the word by life, i. e., animal life, because the word soul, understood as they understood it, would be wholly unsuitable. We, who understand by soul, animal life, do not care much or at all, by which term it is translated. But it is quite a different matter with those who suppose the soul to be an immortal entity or person. Hence, our Platonic translators of the Scriptures are constantly obliged to vary their translation: they are constantly compelled to use the equivalent of life, because soul, in their sense was inadmissable. We will give an example of this. In Proverbs 12: 10, we read, " A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast." The word here translated "life," is that which is ordinarily translated "soul." According to our views, it is perfectly immaterial, whether it is here translated by "soul," or by "life," seeing both mean one thing. But not so with our Platonic translators. According to them, the soul was an immortal person, and beasts had no soul; and so, they must needs here use the term "life." What they have done here they have been obliged to do in numberless instances of which we give some below.[1] Despite their Platonic views, they are compelled to give animal life, as a true and proper sense for that word which they generally translate by a term which they suppose to mean something infinitely higher in meaning than "animal life." Just as if a word can be said to have for its primary sense two meanings different from each other. But this violates the laws of language. The secondary senses of words often depart widely from the primary: the primary sense is almost invariably one, and certainly never allows of two contradictory meanings. (To be continued.)

---

[1] 2 Cor. 1:11; Prov. 1:19; 6:26; 1 Kings 1:12; Lam. 2:19; Jonah 1:14; 1 Sam. 22:23; 26:21; Esth. 7:3.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " At a late meeting of the American Tract Society, Mr. Abbott, editor of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, made some startling statements. Last fall a young man of the Young Men's Christian Association of New York, commenced, single-handed, a crusade against the dealers in obscene literature. The police winked at the traffic, and shielded the offenders. An appeal to the press at length called their attention to his demands, and the District Attorney lent his co-operation As the result six rascals were sent to State's prison, and others are awaiting trial; half a million publications have been destroyed—in a single seizure nine tons were captured. The offenders were chased to Philadelphia and other cities. It was brought to light that these vile creatures not only have headquarters in the large cities, but also emissaries in every town, and canvassers in many public schools, both male and female.

The American Tract Society is entitled to the commendation and support of the entire community in its endeavor to arouse public sentiment on this subject, and in its effort, by establishing cheap and pure illustrated literature, to supplant the vicious and obscene.

ABROAD.

" " " The net profits (cash) of Prussia in the late war with France, figure up considerably over $800,000,000. Whether it paid is another question.

" " " Women in Austria perform the duties of bricklayers' laborers, and may be seen carrying hods of mortar and baskets of bricks up high ladders. More than this, they dig and wheel barrels of "ballast" almost as nimbly as men. They chop wood, they carry water, they offer to black your boots in the street, and perform many other little offices, which, according to our notions, do not, and should not come under the denomination of "women's work."

" " " France, during the five centuries preceding the present—that is from 1300 to the year 1800, was engaged in 326 years of war, of which eighty years were spent in civil war, and 246 years in foreign war. During that period 164 great battles were fought.

" " " The tide of emigration from Germany to this country is assuming such proportions as to cause alarm for the welfare of the Fatherland; and unless the current is checked by other influences, the government is expected to take direct action on the subject.

" " " Improving upon an excellent though very recent innovation, the Sublime Porte publishes this year to the world a full official report on the situation of the Ottoman Empire, and—most startling novelty of all—a speech from the Sultan himself, the text of which we published. This production, with the report of the Grand Vizier that accompanied, is interesting, and both suggest odd reflections. The Sultan's speech contains some animadversions on his last Ministers, which, considering that the discarded statesmen are absolutely debarred from having a word in their own vindication, seems scarcely fair. The late Administration he declares did not satisfy the wants of the country except in military matters; and for that improvement it is entitled to no thanks, the sole credit being due to his own exertions. Nor did His Majesty think much of the financial reforms; they were "insignificant, and inspired no confidence among the public," Poor Ali Pacha—now beyond the reach of either praise or blame—surely deserved better treatment. Unless all cotemporaneous authorities were utterly wrong, the best efforts of that able statesman and his colleagues were frustrated by the Sultan himself, whose mania for expenditure on the civil list and the army made economy impossible. It remains to be seen whether the new Ministers will be more successful, or whether they will retain their Sovereign's favor, notwithstanding their success. So far, according to the Sultan, everything goes on well. The finances are better; internal communications are being improved; the Empire's resources are being developed; the relations with foreign powers are most satisfactory. When from His Majesty we turn to his Prime Minister, the reports seem even more roseate in character. The Grand Vizier asserts that the administration of justice is reformed, that education is being extended, that a stimulus has been given to agriculture, and that railways with other means of communication, are in rapid progress.

As for military and naval resources, if we are to take the report as free from exaggeration, Turkey is now a military and naval power of the first class. The army is 800,000 strong, with a due proportion of artillery; the machinery in the arsenal for the manufacture of war material will compete with any European manufactories; an establishment for turning out 300 rifled cannon a year is almost ready; another for making improved rifles has been commenced; while the iron clad fleet consists of seventeen large frigates, monitors and gun-boats. Next, the frontiers are to be fortified. If all this be true, Turkey is well able, not only to hold her own in the Lavant and the Red Sea, but to retaliate.

The sick man is on his legs again, self-reliant and even aggressive. Unfortunately, we have learned the necessity of making large deductions from such statements. Every new ministry at Constantinople sweeps cleaner than its predecessors, and generally the first result of its improvements is a new loan. It is true that, from indepednent sources, we have learned the fact of a slight change for the better in the Ottoman exchequer. It is not now so avowedly hard up; its shifts for temporary accommodation are less desperate. But we have yet to see that this promising commencement will not issue in ignominious failure, thanks mainly to the Sultan's liking for palace and military expenditure; and we certainly should have had greater hopes of Turkey's immediate future if His Majesty and the Prime Minister had said less about armies and iron-clads and more about taxation, revenue, the state of the provincial population, and the chances that the Finance Minister would make both ends meet in his financial budget.

" " " The work of reorganization of the Russian armies is at last complete. Peace footing 810,000 men. War footing 1,700,000. "Let us have peace."

" " " The African traveler, Livingston, found again by Stanley, the N. Y. Herald correspondent. He refuses to return home, and will push on his explorations, and probably get lost again.

" " " Prince Bismarck must just now be in his element. He has first the Pope to look after, then the Jesuits, whom he has made war upon, in the Prussian Parliament. After declaring that "the sovereignty of the law" must be absolute in Germany, and that it is a "constitutional not a confessional government" which cuts off the infallible power of the Pope, he conciliates the German Catholics by selecting for appointment, Cardinal Hohenlohe, to represent the empire at the Papal See. This representative the Pope refuses to receive, as he thinks it impossible for a Cardinal to receive a charge of so much "delicacy and responsibility." And so these opposing powers stand. With the Prince in Protestant Germany and the sympathy of Italy, there is little doubt that he will, in the end, come out triumphant.

" " " A writer in the Sheffield (England) Telegraph describes in glowing colors a visit to the Albion iron works near that city. At these works there is an order now in course of execution for over 70,000 miles of telegraph wire, which could be wound round the earth as a bobbin nearly three times over. He who would see wire-making in its most picturesque aspect should visit the wire mills by night. It is the hatching of enormous whip-snakes—fiery serpents of enormous length out of Bessemer ingots. First the egg or ingot is heated, then reheated and elongated, then reheated and hatched between the rollers, from which it leaps out a hissing, winding, writhing and very vivacious snake of fire, extremely thin and long, and decidedly savage. The mechanical arrangements are such as to turn out 280 tons of finished wire per week.

" " " Europe is nominally quiet, but a look beneath the political surface reveals the fact, that each nation is vigorously engaged in strengthening its war powers and in making ready for troubles that are sure to come.—Watchman.

" " " The Government of Great Britian has been making an emmense number of torpedoes, to be used for the protection of the coast and harbors of that country. No fewer than 1,500 large canisters are now in store at Woolwich dock-yard, ready to be filled with gun-cotton or dynamite, and an immense number of galvanic batteries, galvanometers, and telegraph instruments have already been prepared. The torpedoes will be arranged in rows or groups in the channel or along the coast, the canister containing the charge being joined to a floating or semi-floating apparatus, termed a circuit-closer or circuit-breaker, and the whole connected with the shore by means of an electric cable. The circuit-closer when struck by a vessel may either be made to send a signal to shore, or to explode the machine to which it is tethered.

" " " To maintain the peace of Europe by keeping in check Germany, Russia, Austria, and France, requires armies which amount to 3,000,000 of men. If each man cost only one dollar a day, the yearly expense of this enormous armament would be $1,095,000,000. Besides this cost these men produce nothing, which is an item of great loss.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

" " " The late Protestant Synod, at Paris, passed through an unusually animated discussion, which resulted in a schism of the church. M. Guizot, leader of the orthodox party, maintained the authority of the Scriptures, while Rev. Mr. Coquerel, who is at the head of the liberal party, justified certain divergencies relative to the divinity and resurrection of Christ. The liberals demurring at the action of the Orthodox majority, withdrew.

" " " Miss Finley, the Quaker preacher, was immersed in a Brooklyn Baptist church not long since. Now the Presbyterians will be sure she ought not to preach, while the Baptists will find fault that Mr. Pentecost baptized her without adding her to the church.

The Joyful Message.

THE MEANING OF THE WORD.

The God of heaven has made a communication to men on earth. That communication is in the form of a message; and consequently requires, in the first place, to be faithfully delivered to those whom it concerns; in the next place, to be faithfully considered by those who receive it; and finally, to be answered in a manner suited to the nature of the message and the infinite majesty of him who has sent it. Delightful to tell, the message of God is altogether a thing of grace and gladness. Though making constant reference to human sin and shame, and to consequent sorrow and death, the word sent by God is meant to condemn no one; it does not chide; it does not threaten; it offers no discouragement to the most guilty, and hints no doubt as to the chances of the most unpromising. It is wholly a message of love. It has sprung from God's infinite pity; it discovers the unimaginable resources of his holy mercy; it announces accomplished facts, brought to pass by his wisdom and power, altogether in advance of man's highest hopes and in excess of all his own promises; and finally it opens up to us a future of eternal and unspeakable blessedness. This divine message reveals, in their most affecting outgoings, the love, and joy, and hope, of the inmost heart of the sender, who has made himself known as the happy God. In every sense, therefore, God's message to us is a joyful one; it is good-news, with the advantage of being stamped with authority; and the further advantage of being directed to a definite destination, to which it is sent on the most benevolent errand. All this is hinted to us in the very word chosen of God to characterize the tidings of his mercy to men.

The gospel is God's Evangel. This is the inspired word itself, in English form. It deserves a place in our vocabulary for several reasons. By its relation to angel, messenger, it reminds us that it is a message, and as the word angel in Scripture usage is generally appropriated to denote a divine, a heavenly messenger, so is the word Evangel generally taken to represent the divine message from heaven, of which, by anticipation, no human mind could have conceived. Moreover, he who gives himself to the work by proclaiming this Evangel, is an Evangelist, while they to whom it is adequately made known are Evangelized, and all that relates to the Evangel is truly Evangelical. Our more common English equivalents are Gospel, Good-News, Glad-Tidings. But if we have supreme regard to the full meaning of the original Greek word, Glad or Joyful Message is perhaps the most adequate designation, that our language will afford. The gospel is not a piece of undirected intelligence, set to float upon the idle breeze, a convenient clipping of unknown paternity to be left to the chances of catching the eyes of some, being overlooked by others, deemed of no particular consequence by any, but only to be taken for what it is worth. No, it has the authority of an urgent, public, governmental message from God, challenging universal attention, and requiring immediate action. Being this, and being withal, a Proclamation of Good Things, past, present, and to come, it is pre-eminently and distinctively the Joyful Message of God. May these pages succeed in faithfully delivering it, and be a means of conveying the holy joy of the divine sender into the hearts of many a dutiful and grateful receiver!

THE CONTENTS OF THE MESSAGE.

As our sin works out its mischievous results in many directions, and as God's wisdom and mercy are manifold in their provisions for accomplishing a full redemption from our sin, so the Joyful Message which has reached us is abundantly ample enough in its declarations to meet the whole case which has called it forth. The gospel, while reasonably brief and simple, is by no means the meager thing which some seem to imagine it to be. The writings of the New Covenant set the gospel in various aspects before us, which, for convenience, we may resolve into three, and speak of the gospel of Christ's person; the gospel of his death, burial and resurrection; and the gospel of his kingdom.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

To us, in this age of the world, looking back, as we do, on the first advent of our Redeemer and his manifestation among men as accomplished facts, this view of the gospel naturally and logically comes first before us.

No Christ, no gospel. The person of Jesus our Savior is "the A and the Z" of the Good-news to us as sinners. He himself is the center as well as the circumference, of the charming story. Around him—subordinated to him—everything else in the Good-Tidings falls into its right place.

The gospel of Christ's person is of supreme importance and interest. It tells out the blessed truth that Jesus of Nazareth is the image of God. As the truthfulness, tenderness, purity, unselfishness of Mary's Son are unfolded to our eye in his wonderful life and still more wonderful sufferings and death—this is the joyful note that is sounded forth: SUCH IS GOD! The truthfulness of Jesus is entire; his tenderness is unaffected and unfathomed; his purity is all-consuming; his unselfishness has no haze on its transparency, and his compassion leads him to sacrifice himself in order to save those on whom it rests. Reader, you believe this! As you read of Jesus, simply and candidly, and permit his whole portrait to come before you, this is the irresistible and ineffaceable conviction impressed upon your conscience and upon your heart. You know that you yourself are not for a moment to be compared with him. You know that you never saw his equal—that the best men and women you are acquainted with are but distant, very distant approaches to him. Did you ever fully take home to your heart the assurance that, just what the visible Jesus is, that the invisible God is too? Such is truly the case.

We have the very best authority for saying it. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." (John 14: 9.) These are the words of Jesus himself. "We gazed upon his glory," says the apostle who was wont to recline in his bosom. (John 1: 14.) Beloved disciple! we would ask thee: "Of what sort was the glory of the incarnate word, on which thou didst gaze?" "A glory as of an only begotten from a Father." This is the apostle's reply. He seems to say, "Conceive of the Infinite One as a Father; conceive of such a Father having only one Son, just like himself; conceive of the Only-Begotten as here with us, a partner in our blood and flesh, pitching his tent beside ours in the noon-tide of his life's journey, coming into our tents with unembarrassed freedom and humility as one of ourselves, but ere long disclosing such favor and truth in speech and action, that we see through the veil, and are entranced, and mentally exclaim, 'Lo! all heaven is before our eyes; this is the only-begotten Son of God.' Such is the glory on which we gazed. There is no other glory like it. It simply becomes the high relationship. Now have we seen God. Ah! God is a glorious Being.

In like manner the apostle Paul speaks. "But if our glad-message has ever become veiled—in those who are perishing has it become veiled; in whom the god of this age blinded the conceptions of the unbelieving, that the illuminations of the glad-message of Christ, who is God's image, should not shine forth. For not ourselves are we proclaiming, but Christ Jesus as Lord; and ourselves as your servants for Jesus' sake. Because the God that said, out of darkness shall light shine, is he who shone in our hearts, with a view to an illumination of the knowledge of the glory of God in Christ's face." (2 Cor. 4: 3–6.) Twice in this quotation, have we the truth affirmed that Christ is the "image of God,"—the first time, in express terms; the second, by necessary implication. Christ "is God's image:" that is express. God gives the knowledge of his glory "in Christ's face;" therefore, Christ's face, his person, his manifestation among men, reflects the glory of God; and thus are we, less explicitly, but no less surely, conducted a second time to the same conclusion. Around the sweet truth thus repeated, this charming quotation sets several thoughts well worthy of our consideration. The glad-message of salvation in Christ, as God's image, is luminous and illuminating. It is not native to it to be obscure. It may, however, "even become veiled:" still, even then, it is only "in those who are," at the very time, "perishing," or "destroying themselves," that it is so veiled. Nay! even in their case, the veiling is the result of Satanic intervention. The tendency of the glad-message is actually to illumine those to whom it is sent. So direct and powerful is this tendency, that Satan must be on the alert to obscure its beams. Even then, he can only succeed with the unbelieving who persist in perishing. With them he may succeed. Their conceptions he may succeed in blinding. But the gospel remains as bright as ever with the revelation of God's glory in Christ's face. Good reader, do you believe that Jesus the Christ is God's image? Satan will do all he can, will as the god of this age—which is an evil one—muster all his forces to hinder your so believing. He knows the saving power of this truth. And so do we. Be entreated, then, to gaze steadfastly upon it. Look narrowly into it; test it as severely as you will; but do not let the Evil One blind your minds to the truth.

As we are simply assuring ourselves that this truth is plainly taught in the New Testament, one quotation more will suffice. A moment's glance at Heb. 1: 1–4 will show that the well-known words, "Who being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person," teach that Christ is the image of God. The more literal the rendering, the more pointed, and to our present purpose. Christ is "an eradiated brightness of God's glory." "An eradiated brightness;" that is "a brightness beamed out and away," as the original word suggests. Connecting word and fact together, we may say: "a brightness beamed down into the atmosphere of our human life." Or, more simply still, we may say: "Just as the sun comes into a room through a transparent window, so God comes into our heart through Jesus—brightening, warming, and making glad our souls." But the Son of God is further described as "the express image" of the Father's "person;" an effective popular rendering no doubt. Still, the more literal is the more incisive: "an exact expression of his essence." The very "essence" of God is "expressed" in Christ; and it is "exactly expressed." It leaves nothing to be desired. He that knows Christ knows God. Thus are we sent back to the word of Jesus with which we began this induction: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

What clouds of misconception are thus dispelled! What piles of theological and preaching rant are thus consumed! Reader, hearken unto no man who would have you believe in a God of one kind and a Christ of another. Christ is God's image, his very image, his most exact and perfect impression. You see that the New Testament plainly and repeatedly teaches this. Then, I pray you, grasp this teaching, and never let it go. Grasp it and make it your own. Think it out into all your thoughts of God. Admit it into the inmost chamber of your religious feeling. Let your judgment weigh it well. Let your troubled conscience hearken to its mighty voice.

No! it is not true that the Father is principally characterized by severity and the Son by gentleness. The Son, I know, is gentle, very gentle; the Father is equally gentle. God can be severe—that is true; but so can Christ: "the anger of the Lamb" is greatly to be dreaded. It was absolutely necessary that Christ should die for our sins; but he himself understood that,—reciprocating the divine demand, appreciating the imperious necessity. While his Beloved One was suffering on the cross, God concealed his face behind midnight darkness. Impious the hand that would tear aside that veil: and demoniac the voice that would proclaim an unconcerned, or a reluctantly appeased God. We are accustomed to speak strongly of the holiness of the Father's demand: let us speak as strongly of the holiness of the Son's compliance. We are wont to speak much and well of the love of the Filial Sacrifice: let us speak as much and as well of the love of the Paternal Surrender.

This alone being the right course, one thing becomes plain: he that cannot be reconciled to God, cannot be reconciled to Christ; just as, on the other hand, he that cannot be reconciled to Christ, cannot be reconciled to God. Dear reader, this the very question that I want to put to you, if you are still in an unreconciled condition. Can you be reconciled to Christ? If you cannot, you are indeed, in a dreadful state. I cannot be absolutely certain that you are not in that state. It is possible to be in it. Sin and Satan combined may bring a man into it—that is, into such a state that he is afraid of Jesus, dares not look him in the face, hates the mention of his name, and is instantly moved to flight or resistance when the Good Shepherd is drawing near. But still, dear reader, I am not ready to believe that this is your case. I know Christ can read your heart. I know that he is terrible to hypocrites. But you know that no contrite sinner will he repel, far less reject. Nay, more:—

> "A bruised reed will he not break,
> And a smoking wick will he not quench."
> —Mat. 12: 20.

Did he ever refuse bodily healing to any suppliant that asked it? Did he scorn the poor woman in the Pharisee's house? Had he no ear to hear the dying robber's cry? Did he not grant restoration to Peter? I ask you then, is it so that you cannot be reconciled to Jesus—the same yesterday, to-day, and forever? Could you not be reconciled to him if he were here now, as in Palestine of old? Could you not trust his invitation, "Come unto me?" Could you not credit his promise "I will give you rest?" You admit, on reflection, that you could; is that your answer? Then let me tell you; you you can be reconciled to God; for God's brightest glory is seen in Jesus' face. You can; will you? What is your answer to the Glad-Message of God?

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST'S DEATH, BURIAL AND RESURRECTION.

That we may for convenience speak of these three facts as exhibiting one aspect, and a very important aspect, of the Good-Message of God, is evident from the following quotation: "But I make known to you brethren, the glad-message which I myself announced to you, which also ye received, in which also ye are standing, through which ye are also being saved, if ye are holding fast with what discourse I announced the glad-message unto you,—unless, indeed, in vain ye believed. For I delivered over to you, among first [matters], what I also received,—that Christ died over our sins, according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried; and that he has been raised, on the third day, according to the Scriptures; and that he appeared unto Cephas; afterwards, to the twelve; after that he appeared to above five hundred brethren, once for all, of whom the majority are abiding until even now, but some fell asleep. After that he appeared unto James; afterwards unto all the apostles; last of all—just as if unto the untimely birth—he appeared unto me. For I am the least of the apostles, who am not sufficient to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the called-out assembly of God. But by the favor of God, I am what I am; and his favor that was unto me was not made void, but much more abundantly than they all did I toil; howbeit, not I, but the favor of God with me. Whether, therefore, I, or they—thus are we proclaiming, and thus did ye believe." We quote so much of the context, not only because of the value and interest of the whole passage, but because we shall have occasion to refer to it again and again; and it is now within easy reach. Our immediate object in laying this paragraph before the reader is to point out the force of the allusion made, in verses third and fourth, to the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. The obvious force of that allusion is to give prominence to these great facts, as the essentiail elements in the good tidings of salvation. They had been "delivered over" by the apostle to the Corinthians (among other primary matters) as memorable counts in a solemn trust which might not, on any account, be tampered with. The communication of these facts was characteristic of Paul's evangelistic service; nor of his alone,—all the apostles were one with him in continually pushing them to the front of their aggressive toil; "Whether I, or they,—thus and not otherwise, are we all with unwearied persistence, with common and characteristic consent, making proclamation, wherever we go." We cannot err then, if we too give prominence to these same events. We cannot be following a mistaken clue, if we look to these great events for the purpose of seeing in them glory to God, and peace and salvation to men.

"That Christ died over our sins, according to the Scriptures."

"Christ died over our sins." "Over" is the literal meaning of the word in the original, which here marks the relation of the death of Christ to our sins. He died "over" our sins. Our sins were there under the divine view, as a terrible reality requiring to be dealt with. Christ's death was permitted—was planned to be permitted—in direct and full reference to our sins. Our sins were the occasion—the ground—of his death. His death sprang from our sins. Perhaps this is all that we are warranted to infer from the word "over," considered in itself.

It is indeed, barely possible that the word "over" in this passage, is to be understood as a breviloquent sign of the famous old Hebrew conception of the sacrifice enshrined in the beautiful Hebrew word Kaphar, "to cover." "To make atonement" is, in the Mosaic writings, "to throw a sacrificial covering over sin." So understood, the term "over," in this passage in Corinthians would suggest, as an appropriate paraphrase, the fuller expression: "Christ died that he might throw a sacrificial covering over our sins." And to this broad result we must certainly come, if we would interpret the significance of Christ's death in the manner which this very passage suggests; namely, "according to the Scriptures."

But there is yet another thing to be said about this preposition "over," before we pass on; and that is, that it occurs in other passages in the New Testament in such a connection as to afford us the fullest assurance as to the course which true exposition must take. We meet with it in the following passages:

Heb. 5: 1. "For every high-priest from among men being taken, in behalf of men is appointed, for the things pertaining to God; that he may be offering both gifts and sacrifices over (huper) sins."

8: 27. "Who (Christ) has not a day-by-day necessity, just as the high-priest,—beforehand over (huper) his own sins to be offering sacrifices: after that (over) those of the people. For this," offering sacrifice over the sins of the people, "this he did, once for all, when himself he offered."

10: 11–12. "And every priest, indeed, is standing, day-by-day publicly ministering; and the same sacrifices many times offering; such as at no time are able to clear away sins; but this one, having offered one sacrifice over (huper) sins, for the uninterrupted continuance, sat down on God's right hand."

Whatever else these quotations show, one thing they render very plain, which is, that the New Testament writers did, in fact, explain the meaning of the death of Christ "according to the Scriptures" of the Old Testament. Of course the phrase, "according to the Scriptures," from the pen of the apostle, in the year A. D. 59, can refer to no other than the Old Testament Scriptures.

Let us, then, follow their example, and examine the Old Testament Scriptures. Remembering, however, the surpassing advantages enjoyed by the apostles themselves—to whom the Second Advocate was promised, to guide them into all the truth,—let us supplement the teaching of Moses and the prophets, by that of the ambassadors of the Risen Redeemer. Instead of collecting a large number of quotations, let us rather consult two or three decisive testimonies.

Christ died according to the types of the Old Testament, the prophecies of the Old Testament, and the teaching of the New Testament.

"Christ died over our sins according to the" Types of the Old Testament "Scriptures." The type of types is to be seen in the two goats which were offered for the sins of the people on the great day of annual atonement. (Lev. 16.) That day was a Day of days. On that day alone, of all the days in the Levitical year, did the High Priest pass through the second veil which separated the holy place from the Most Holy. He alone entered, none of his brethren being permitted to enter with him. Then only was blood sprinkled on and before the Capporeth, the Propitiatory, the Mercy-seat,—on the very throne, and under the very eye of him who dwelt between the cherubim. The surpassing importance of such an act is evident. That blood represented all the blood that had been flowing on Hebrew altars all the year round. We may leave aside the bullock which the Hebrew high priest offered for himself, since our high priest had no need, for Himself, to offer.

And we may pass without comment the people's burnt-offering presented on that day. It is with the sin-offering of the congregation that we have to do; "Christ died over our sins according to the Scriptures." Observe then, first, that the two goats constituted one offering. The priest, "shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel, two kids of the goats for a sin offering." (v. 5.) These two goats, in conjunction, are the type of Christ. "Christ died over our sins," with a comprehensiveness of meaning and design which required all the significance of both goats to shadow forth. Observe, second, why the living goat was conjoined with its dying companion. It was to secure a complete and impressive symbolization of reason and end of the death of the dying goat. The reason was, substitution—imputation—vicarious suffering; and the end was the complete and manifest removal of sin from the consciences of those for whom the sin-offering died. The former of these—the symbolizing of substitutionary suffering for sin—was provided for in the following unequivocal terms: "And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by a fit man into the wilderness." (v. 21.) As certainly then as "Christ died over our sins, according to the Scriptures," he died as our substitute, bearing our sins. It was by dying under our sins that he succeeded in throwing an expiatory covering "over" our sins; and he could die under our sins—only if, and as, and because our sins were laid upon him. He was accounted the sinner, and was dealt with accordingly. God did not think that his Beloved had committed the sin, any more than Aaron thought that the goat had committed the trespass of Israel; but just as Aaron, while knowing full well which was the guilty (the morally blameworthy) party, accepted the innocent instead of the guilty, and constituted the innocent legally answerable for the sins of the guilty, and then devoted the substitute to the death due to sin; so God, without any confusion in the thought of his infinite mind—in which is no darkness at all—accepted the righteous one for the unrighteous ones; constituted him legally answerable for our offences; and then, as moral Governor, delivered him to death for us all. This is what this great type of the Old Testament Scriptures teaches us as to the reason of Christ's death, the principle upon which he died over our sins. He died upon the principle of substitution. As regards the end for which he died, this same type has something to say; "And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited (a land 'of separation'), and he shall let go the goat into the wilderness." (v. 21.)

This again, appeals to the eye; and through the eye proclaims the complete removal of sin from the responsibility of the worshippers. What has the dying goat done by dying? The living goat remains to tell. Bearing the sins of the people, he is led away and away, and still farther away, into a land of separation. He is gone—and his burden too.

"Where now are our sins? They have been removed, they have been separated from us who deserved to bear them to the bitter end,—they have disappeared." The type could not effectually do this, but it could effectively teach it. What has Christ done by dying? He has taken our sins away. Believing this, beholding it, our consciences are effectually cleared from the burden of sin. This follows from the blessed truth that "Christ died over our sins, according to the Scripture"—the types of the Old Testament Scriptures. Of course we must see this to enjoy it; and we must be in a position in order to see it. We must become a party to this momentous transaction. Do we consent to have our sins thus disposed of? What is our answer to this joyful message? —Joseph B. Rotherham, in Rainbow.

Hades.

THE SOUL OF MAN; OR THE "NEPHESH" OF THE HEBREWS.

In discussing the question of the soul, we come to a question of great importance, and one which has engaged the attention of mankind at every period. The most opposite theories, it is well known, have been held upon it in the schools of philosophy and theology. By some it has been supposed identical with the spirit; by others to be distinct from it. By some it has been supposed to be the peculiar attribute of man; by others to be shared with him by every animal. By some it has been thought to be in its own nature immortal, and so incapable of death from any source whatever; by others it has been supposed to have been created by God with an inalienable immortality, so that, without denying the power of God to destroy it, it is yet certain that he never will, and that no other power can. By others it is thought in death to pass into the same lifeless condition as the body; while others have thought that it survived the death of the body for some time longer or shorter, and at length ceased to exist. By some it is thought to have had an existence before the body; by others to have come into existence simultaneously with it. By some it has been thought to be an entity or person by itself, so that on the dissolution of the body it was still a true person, capable of all the thoughts and feelings of a living and reasonable being; by others it has been thought to be rather a quality of a person, so that on the dissolution of that person it of necessity ceased to be. By some it has been thought to be the true and proper man, of whom the body was an attribute or circumstance without which it could subsist for a time or forever; while others have supposed the body rather to be the man of whom the soul was the attribute, in possession of which the man was alive, and deprived of which he was dead. Amid all this variety and contradiction of thought, the one source to which we look with perfect confidence is the Bible, in which he speaks of the soul who is its Maker. In the Old Testament Scriptures we have the nature of the soul referred to in numberless passages. From that book alone, therefore, we might expect clear and sufficient evidence upon this question. As it appears to us, all that can be said upon it has been said over and over in the Old Testament. There are points on which the Old Testament is confessedly obscure; but this is not one of them. In clear decided terms, not darkly or with stammering [illegible], it speaks of the soul of man from its earliest to its latest page. But at the same time that we are of this opinion we will not refrain in a succeeding chapter from drawing attention to what is said on this subject in the New Testament, where the soul or psyche of the Greeks is equivalent to the soul or nephesh of the Hebrews. From these two sources together as much information as God is pleased to give us upon this subject will be derived, nor do we believe that a single particle of light can be thrown upon it other than that derivable from Scripture. Divines and philosophers we believe have succeeded in investing the whole subject with obscurity, and in connecting it with a vast amount of falsehood: we do not think that we have ever spoken a single truth about it which may not be found in the word of God. What is more: we believe that if we would attain to so much of truth as is attainable upon this question, we must discard from our minds the theories of men; whether those men who have been called heathen philosophers, or Christian theologians, and sit down as little children to learn from God what he is pleased to tell us of ourselves, and what he can only with infallibility speak of.

We will commence our chapter upon the nature of the soul as we commenced that upon the nature of the spirit, by showing from Scripture that whatever soul be, or whatever its nature and attributes, the Scriptures attribute the possession of soul just as much to all the lower creatures as they attribute its possession to man. Man's proud boast that he alone has soul, and that its possession by him is his essential difference, or one of his essential differences from all those living creatures which are unquestionably below him in the scale of creation, fades away and disappears utterly when we come to consult upon this point the oracles of God.

We must say that in an inquiry of this kind, an English reader meets with great difficulties in consequence of grave faults of translation, of which the translators of our authorized version have been guilty; not through any wilful fault, but in consequence of their coming to the translation of the Bible thoroughly imbued with Platonic views of human nature in general, and of the soul in particular. They all believed that the soul was a person dwelling within the human body, wholly unaffected save in its connection with the body by death, possessed of an inalienable immortality. Adopting widely different ideas of the nature of the lower animals, supposing them in their nature capable of death and dying, they were of necessity obliged to deny to them the possession of such a soul as they supposed man to be possessed of; or, rather, to speak with more propriety, to consist of. Hence, when they found the Hebrew term nephesh, generally by them translated soul when spoken of man, applied to the lower creatures, they could not give it a similar translation, but translated it by some other term. A notable instance of this occurs in the translation of the first and second chapters of Genesis. The Hebrew scholar knows that when Moses, in Gen. 1: 20–1, speaks of the nature of the lower order of animals, and when in Gen. 2: 7, he speaks of the nature of man, the inspired writer used the very same Hebrew terms of both the one and the other. Each fish, fowl, and creeping thing and beast, is called in the Hebrew, a nephesh chajah, as much as man who was given to rule over them. But this was in its apparent bearing wholly inconsistent with the philosophical ideas of the translators. They considered it dangerous that the similarity of description should appear in the English version which Moses did not consider it dangerous to exhibit in the Hebrew original. Hence, [illegible] must guard God's word [illegible] posed dangerous language [illegible]ing nephesh chajah very differently in the first chapter of Genesis, where it is applied to the lower creatures, from what they translated it in the second chapter, where it is applied to man. Hence the Hebrew words which they translate by "creature that hath life," and "living creature," in Gen. 1: 20–1, they translate by "living soul" in Gen. 2: 7. The striking difference of expression which appears in the English version is utterly absent from the Hebrew original. A gross, though unintentional fraud has been committed against the English reader. He is misled in his searching of the Scriptures. He is put on a false scent. The Greek translation of the Septuagint and the Latin Vulgate, true to the duties of the translator, have given the very same Greek and Latin words in their translation of the Hebrew terms whether applied to the lower animals or to man. Our English translators have supplied us with a commentary of their own, instead of a translation, a comment we will here add utterly alien to truth.

But the result of this mistranslation is to lead astray the English reader who trusts it. This is not the only instance which occurs of the thing in reference to this question. The same Hebrew word is throughout the Old Testament translated according as the Platonic notions of the translator led him to think it ought to be translated. Plato had a considerable hand in the translation of King James' Bible. The Hebrew word nephesh is translated creature, soul, life, etc., just as squared with the notions of men who carried Plato's philosophy into their noble work of the translation of Scripture. We affirm that a grave injury has been done to the English reader, and a gross wrong to God's word, by such conduct as this,—an injury and a wrong which we trust will not be repeated in that new version of Scripture into English which we are promised. And while upon this subject, we would just say that a grave duty rests upon those who have the management of this much required work of revision that there should be among the revisers one or more men who do not accept Plato as an infallible authority upon the question of human nature, or rather one phase of Plato's doctrine; for that great philosopher was by no means consistent with himself in all his statements. With these observations we turn to our subject, merely informing our English readers that in our statements of the soul in this chapter we invariably speak of the Hebrew word nephesh, though the variety of its translation in the various passages to which we refer in the authorized version might lead them to suppose a very different thing.

We begin then, by saying that so far from the popular idea of soul as the peculiar possession of man, Scripture teaches us that it is just as much the possession of all the lower creatures. The Hebrew Scriptures tell us that all these possess that nephesh which is usually translated by the English word soul. First, perhaps the highest existing authority on the Hebrew language, in his Concordance defines nephesh as "the soul, by which an animal lives, both of man and brute." (anima, qua animal vivit, tum hominis tum bruti.) No one, indeed having the smallest acquaintance with the Hebrew Scriptures could say anything else. In no less than five verses in the first and second chapters of Genesis are all the living creatures of God said to be "living souls," the expression in the Hebrew being the very same which, when spoken of man is thus translated in Gen. 2: 7. Again, in the book of Leviticus, all the fishes of the sea are said to be living creatures, or living souls. Again, in a passage in the book of Numbers, even our Platonic translators could not avoid using the English word soul of the beasts as much as of men, where the Lord's tribute is reckoned as "one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep." Birds and beasts are both said in the book of Proverbs to be possessed of soul, and to be capable of losing it; though here our translators have given to the Hebrew term the translation into "life."[1] Here is a very considerable array of texts, considering how little of Scripture is occupied with the lower creatures, which prove that whatever is meant by that Hebrew word which is commonly translated soul, is possessed by the lower creatures as much as by man.

We will draw a few inferences which occur to us from this important fact. All the lower animals so long as they continue in existence, are said to be possessed of a soul, or to be living souls. Yet, they are none of them immortal. They all at one period or other cease to exist. In ceasing to exist they lose their soul, they cease to be living souls. It is never supposed that their soul is a second internal animal which, when the outward gross frame becomes lifeless, flits away somewhere else, and enjoys life in some other scene. Thoughts such as these are entertained by the poor Indian who fain would know that > "transported to yon equal sky,

> His faithful dog will bear him company."

But the fancy of the Indian has not yet possessed the theological brain of Christendom. It is still commonly held that the lower creatures really die when they seem to us to die. There is for no part of them survival. It may be found difficult to define what is the life or soul which they possess, but it is all but universally conceded that in their death this life or soul departs, ceases to be, perishes. They have souls and they are living souls; yet they, whatever be their organization and nature, do, in their entirety, cease to be or exist. The possession of a soul does not imply immortality on its own part or on that of the creature who possesses it.

And now we come to man and his soul. Man, in life, has a soul. Man, in life, is a living soul. We need not quote Scripture for this, as it is affirmed in a thousand places, and our translators have not been at any pains to hide it. All we want to know is what is intended by having a soul, or being a living soul, in the case of man. We have no hesitation in saying that the very same thing is meant in man's case that is meant in the case of the lower creatures. We may have difficulties of definition in one case, but not more or different from what we have in the other. Physiologists, and naturalists, and medical men, and divines, may be perplexed in their accounts of the soul or life; but we have no hesitation in saying that what it is in the case of the lower creatures, that very same thing it is in the case of man.

Any other idea would be to do a violence to the language of Scripture, which would thoroughly shake our confidence in it. Thus, in the first two chapters of Genesis, Moses, in his account of of the creation of the lower creatures and of man, uses one of the most important terms no less than six times. The very same Hebrew phrase, nephesh chajah, which is translated variously as living creature, or living soul, is used by Moses in his account of man and beast. Of the latter it is affirmed five times, of the former once. He uses it of the lower creatures before he applies it to man; he uses it again of them immediately after he has applied it to man. He never gives the smallest hint that he uses it of one in any different sense from what he uses it of the other. If, then, we are to interpret the language of Scripture in the same way that we interpret the language of any other book, we can only arrive at the conclusion that men are living souls, in the very same sense that the lower creatures are. We do not say that there is no difference between men and beasts; we know there is much. But what we here say is, that this difference is not brought out by saying that man has a soul, or that man is a living soul; for the very same phrase is used of every animal below him as of him. The distinction between man and beast must be ascertained from other sources than this.

Now this facilitates our inquiry very much. At its very outset it enables us to dispose of the entire Platonic theory about souls and their nature. The soul of man is not the man himself, any more than the soul of the beast is the beast. The soul of man is not itself essentially or inalienably immortal, nor does it confer immort[illegible] in man's case more than in that of [illegible] beast. All these ideas are seen to be but human fancies painfully wrought out of the crucible of the human brain, but having no real foundation, the moment we learn from Scripture that beasts have souls, and are living souls, as much as men. If we would be consistent and affirm all this of man and of his soul, we must adopt more than we have hitherto adopted, and become Pythagorean philosophers, and suppose that the lower creatures are what the Platonist makes man. If we refuse to lower our idea of the human soul from its Platonic level, we must raise the bestial soul to a level with it. But we will now show from Scripture that the lowering process is that which we must adopt.

The simple and proper meaning of the Hebrew word nephesh, when applied to the lower creatures, is life, animal life. The soul of the beast is nothing more or less than the life of the beast. We affirm that the soul of man is nothing more or less than that animal life which he shares in common with the beasts. We consider that we have already proved this in paragraphs 8 and 9, but we will proceed to give further proof.

Gesenius, in his Hebrew Dictionary, gives the primary meanings of the

---

[1] Gen. 1: 20, 21, 24, 30; 2: 19; Lev. 11: 10; Num. 31: 28; Prov. 1: 19; 12: 10.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, ... ILLINOIS.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, July 2, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead, their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
J. M. SNOOK, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS. } Editorial Com.

Address all communications to JOSHUA V. HIMES, 23 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers; but a new edition is nearly ready.

WE would be obliged for a copy of D. P. Hall's Man Not Immortal, or for information as to where a copy can be obtained.

JAMES McDONAL moved from Iowa to Minnesota in the fall of 1865. Any one knowing his P. O. Address will confer a favor by sending it to F. H. Kenny, Manchester, Iowa.

Our P. O. Address.

All letters for this office should be directed to 23 West Lake St, Chicago, Ill.

Don't send them to Norwood Park. Send to Chicago, as directed above.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $180 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 80c. in paper.

The American Institute announces its Forty-first annual Exhibition, to be opened in the city of New York, on the fourth of September next. Applications, for space to exhibit the best Agricultural Productions, Mechanichal Inventions, Artistic devices, and valuable articles of American manufacture, are now in order. It is intended to make this the most extensive, useful and meritorious exhibition ever held in America.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 800 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, Prof. Ives' tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 30c.

To Correspondents.

SAN ANTONIO, Cal. A brother wants his TIMES changed to this P. O. but neither gives his name nor his former P. O. Address ....E. CHAPMAN. Would like more of these....P. W. HOUGH. If you feel it a privilege you can do so. We feel satisfied as it is.... D. O. HINK. Package by express by mistake. We will pay charges....M. A. TIBBETTS. Sent to Ky, and elsewhere....H. H. JANES. Will send to all May use the article in the Pulpit. Will let you know

Communications.

ACCEPTED: Is it this world; A. J. S., A Nameless Nature, God is Love, C. E., C. H. S., M. A. T.,

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

F G Bowman
M W Webber
W Kay
A C Dunham
S M Holcomb
W S Brown
S C Ketchum
P C Unadenia
A C Manning
C E Barnes
G Hill
M Osborn
S Baldwin
W L Griffin
M G Lansing
J Towsley
C H Hamer
J K Junk
H W Burton
E A Howe
S B Mabey
O C Barker
L F Cole
G T Adams
J Reese
H Willett
M A Newcomb
W Weeks
P W Hough
A J Stone
M E Case
M M White
A Edwards
D O Hink
J D Olney
G Storrs
M E Boylan
S E Lanphere
S Rockwell
H H Bissell
L Record
T Russell
C W Batchelder
P Lorenson
T Louch
S S Levi
F H Kenny
E L Mosher
J R Harris
A McKenzie
D Young
W J Cummins
J Housh
P O Wilson
E C Andrus
C H Williams
W Valentine
V Hunt
A Hale
W J Griffin
O N Whitford
E V Phillip
H R Williams
H H Janes
M E Bell
A B Cushing
F E Davis
D Boone
M A Tibbetts
G Howard
O C Denslow
S Cain
T K Allen
W McCulloch
C H Leverton
E C Andrus
E Chapman
J A Smith
J C Essex
L E Kenny

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J F Huber
L Record
H H Bissell
S Rockwell
C W Batchelder
A McKinzie
P Sorenson
J R Harris
W L Griffing
E A Bowe
C H Hamer
J Towsley
J H Gallup
W J Bursell
M A Newcomb
S E Lanpher
J H Paton (2)
J H Nafe
M Osborn
M E Case
E M Rowell
J R Preston
H H Janes
M A Tibbetts
H R Williams
P C Craft
E V Philip
A B Cushing
J P Essex
F E Davis (2)
H H Brown

EXPRESS.

W E Brown
B G Mathewson
H Hewitt jr
D Patten
D O Hink
J Barnhart
E C Andrus (to Royal Center)
R J Arnot
J A Smith

For Expenses of Removal.

T. Louch 2,00; R. Tuttle 60c; M. G. Lansing 3,00; W. Weeks 1,00.

To Send TIMES To Poor.

M. G. Lansing 2,00; Gertie B. 50c; E. Chapman 1,50.

Marriages.

BATES—PYE. By T. K. Allen, June 11, 1872, Wilbert K. Bates and Mary E. Pye, all of Winona Co., Minn.

Obituary.

SHEETS. Died at Welton Junction, Iowa, May 22, Carrie, wife of Leavitt sheets and daughter of George and Esther Covel: aged 20 years.

Carrie was converted under my labors several years ago; was buried with Christ in the liquid tomb and was raised to walk a new life, and that walk and life was maintained with Christian integrity until death paralyzed the being and nature yielded to the fell tyrant. For the past year she has suffered with lung disease, slowly and surely it did its work, and she knowing the progress of the disease and the certainty of the end, yet was always cheerful and happy. No repining or complaining. Beautiful and lovely, just in the bloom of womanhood, known only to be loved, while she loved her Savior and the blessed hope of life through Christ the great life-giver.

Her peace and joy were above this vain world. She looked beyond to the resurrection-life when earth shall be renewed, and the voice of the arch-angel shall pierce the charnel house, and the sleeper come forth clad in the likeness of him who died to save by an eternal redemption from the power of sin and the grave. Her hope was truly a blessed hope, for it was founded only upon the gospel of the blessed Son of God. She was buried in the likeness of his death that she might be in the likeness of his resurrection.

By her death a husband has lost a devoted companion. Parents have lost an obedient and dutiful daughter. Brother and sisters have lost a lovely and affectionate sister. S. K. GIBSON.

ARNOLD. Fell on sleep, May 4, 1872, at his residence in Brown Co. Ill., our brother, John Arnold: Aged 53 years, and 6 months.

Br. Arnold has been connected with the church for about twelve years, and was one of the oldest veterans of our faith in that region. He was always ready and willing to give the inquirer a reason for the hope he fondly cherished.

He leaves a wife and family, and a large circle of friends to sincerely mourn his loss. We tried to comfort the bereaved ones, with the language of Jesus: "Thy brother shall rise again." (John 11: 23.)

GEO. W. HURD.

LANSING. In Joliet, Ill., June 19, 1872, Mary Lansing; aged 66 years.

Sr. Lansing was the daughter of Leonard and Lucia da Catlin, of West Troy, N. Y. Her parents may be remembered as able supporters of the Advent cause in 1843-4. She was converted at the age of 15 years, and joined the Baptist Church; but when she heard of the coming of the Bridegroom she immediately began to search to see if these things were so, and consequently her name was soon enrolled amongst the waiting ones.

Through long years of mingled joy and sorrow she has kept her eye fixed on "that day." Her last sickness was of nearly six months duration: and during the last part of it, especially, her sufferings were intense. Consumption, heart diseased and finally dropsy were the weapons of the enemy. She prayed much for her release from her anguish, but longed more for the coming of the Prince of Life. She fell asleep in the faith that soon she would be called to awake to immortality in a clime where pain and sorrow can never come.

Appropriate funeral services by the Episcopal minister. WM. I. MANN.

Crisis please copy.

Notices, Etc.

The Kansas Mission Tent.

We the undersigned, desiring as soon as possible to raise means to procure a tent for the Kansas Advent Christian Association, pledge ourselves to pay into the treasury for such purpose the several sums set opposite our names, as soon as the amount of the three hundred dollars shall be pledged.

Previously acknowledged	$ 1 17
M H McCulloch	1 00
J M Barber	1 00
Henry Haines	5 00
G Harwood	25 00
J C Smith	1 00
L Smith	1 00
M M Smith	1 00
J C Smith	1 00

PLEDGES.

W. F. Hunt, $1 00; M. L. Hunt, $2 00; Virgil Hunt $1 00;

PAYMENTS.

G S Harwood, $25. T. BOMLEY, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

The total acknowledgments in a late number should have been $117, instead of $1.17.

Direct all pledges to E. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kas.

All money should be sent to the Treasurer, Warfer Dunbar, Sera, Cherokee Co, Kas

Dear Brothers and Sisters, at home and abroad, we need help. May the Lord move upon the hearts of his dear children that they contribute to this good cause, remembering it is good to lend to the Lord.

Your brother in Christ, E. J. MUNSON.

Book Notices, Etc.

THE BEE KEEPER'S MAGAZINE. This is an Illustrated Monthly, devoted exclusively to Bee Culture, and published by H. A. King & Co., 23 West Lake St., Chicago. There are two editions of this Magazine—the plain and the chromo-lithograph. The initial and specimen number seems filled with choice and valuable matter and gives promise of success by deserving to succeed. Indeed, H. A. King & Co, always succeed.

Specimen numbers 25 and 30 cents, to be credited on subscription if the party becomes a permanent subscriber.

ADDRESS H. A. King & Co., 23 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

SCRIBNER'S FOR JULY. The West Point Military Academy and its surroundings are profusely and beautifully illustrated in Scribner's for July, the historical and descriptive text being supplied by Benson J. Lossing. This article appears just at the time that public attention is attracted to the Academy. Another timely paper is that on Woman as a Smuggler, and Woman as a Detective, in which one of the most curious and suggestive branches of the Custom House system is fully exposed. Mr. Warner's Back-Log Studies (by the way, one of the best series of magazine articles ever published in America,) are, if anything, more delightful than their predecessors. Draxy Miller's Dowry, a very fresh and strong piece of characterization, by that mysterious author Saxe Holm, is concluded in this number. Mr. Wilkinson's searching but courteous criticism of Mr. Lowell's Prose is concluded. Then we have an interesting little article on spiders ("Will you walk into my Parlor?"); an illustrated paper, As Others See Us, by Prof. Wilder, of Cornell; a brief essay on The Law of the Heart and the Law of the Street, by Mr. Hodgkins; and poems by Mrs. Whitney and Miss Osgood. The Editorial Departments are, as usual, quite full. Dr. Holland, in Topics of the Time, talks about The Christian Sabbath in Great Cities, The Literary Bureaus Again, Our President, and Indirec. Damages. The Old Cabinet has something concerning Old Probabilities, My Famous Friend, Poor Pillicoddy, and Mrs. Whitney's Pansies. Nature and Science, Home and Society Culture and Progress, and etchings, are full of practical information and entertainment.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.

2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.

3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of sevice. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

arrange.

Afton, July 7, 11 a. m., and 4 p. m.

Squaw Grove, 10½ a. m., July 14.

C. W. SMITH.

Rochell, Advent Hall, eve July 2.

Ackerson's, July 3. Subject: Spiritualism.

Elida, Special meeting beginning in the Grove at 3 p. m. July 4, and continuing each eve, over Sabbath July 7, and longer if the interest demands.

Amboy, July 14, Communion in the eve.

Harmon, Lee Co., 3 p. m. July 14. Subject: The devil—his origin, mission and destiny.

Previous appointments withdrawn.

C. C. MARSTON.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

There will be a Basket Meeting held in the Advent Christian Chapel at Genoa, DeKalb Co., July 4. Hours of service, 10: 30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Eld. J. V. Himes of Chicago, and others will be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters in Christ, and friends in all this region are invited to come up to this meeting. Come one, come all! It will continue over the Sabbath, the Lord willing. In behalf of the Church.

E. H. BURLINGTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Brethren, friends, and all interested in the cause of Christ, in Neponset District, Northern Illinois Conference, are urgently invited to meet with the church in Oneida, on Thursday, July 4, and reorganize the Quarterly Meeting in this District.

The church has proposed the following services: Wednesday, 7½ p. m., prayer-meeting. Thursday, 9½ a. m., love feast; preaching 10½ a. m; after this service the reorganization to be attended to, arranging for afternoon and evening service in the morning.

If there is not room enough in the house in which we worship to accommodate all who come, the Lord has furnished a good big "out doors," and will doubtless give us the use of it. Come, then, with hearts on fire; be in earnest in the matter, and the Lord will bless.

Can you spend the Fourth to better advantage?

All will be welcome.

In behalf of the church, L. F. COLE.

IOWA.

There will be a Basket Meeting on the Fourth of July, in a grove near Young's Mills, where we held one last year, five miles east of Corydon, Wayne Co. It is expected that a number will be baptised at this meeting. Friends of truth, let us have a grand rally on that day arround the banner of the Lord.

Corydon, last Sunday in June,

S. K. GIBSON.

There will be a Basket Grove Meeting held in Pilot Grove, five miles south-east of Dexter, and five miles south-west of Earlham. Preaching by D. S. Clark of Amboy, Ill.

M. B. HUBBELL.

P. S.—The meeting to commence on July 6, at 11 a. m., and 3 p. m.; and on Sunday at 11 a. m., and at 3 p. m.

Cascade, eve., July 6, and over Sunday.

From thence to Iron Hill, and so on to Clinton Co. Brethren there can write to meet Cascade, care of D. A. Dickinson. I will visit churches through the Conference before commencing the campaign with the tent. I. ADRIAN.

By D. A. Dickinson.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Dalton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

White S. H. in Burnham Valley, LaCrosse Co., Saturday evening, June 29, at which time the Lord's Supper will be administered. Let there be a grand rally of the brethren and sisters in W. Salem, Burns, LaCrosse, and the region around. If Eld. Hough could arrange to be with us at this meeting it would gladden our hearts very much.

June 30, at 10 1-2 a. m. at the Methodist Church in Burns and so on every two weeks.

June 30, in the evening at Music Hall, W. Salem, and so on every two weeks.

RUTH M. ROWELL

There will be a Tent Meeting at Mifflin, Iowa Co., Wis. commencing Friday evening, June 28, holding as long as interest may demand. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to preach the word. As this is a new field let there be a general rally of the friends of the truth from the different churches around. Come from Fenimore, Wingville, Arena, Helena and elsewhere. Come to work for God and the perishing.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

MICHIGAN.

Peacock S. H. Sabbath July 7, at 11 a. m. and 7 1-2 p. m. and each alternate Sabbath thereafter.

Sprague S. H. Sabbath July 14, at 11 a. m. and 7 1-2 p. m. and each alternate Sabbath following.

WM BRANCH.

Almer S. H. July 7.

Williamson S. H. July 14.

Lambkin S. H. July 21.

Laingsburg, as Brn. may direct. Wednesday July 24, and through the week.

E. H. DURAND.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andru's big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievious wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. C. H. CASE, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Freedom, Waseca Co., Converse S. H. 3 p. m. July 6, 10½ a. m. July 7.—Meet me at Jaynesville Station, July 6, at 2 p. m.

Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2¼ and 7½ p. m. July 7.

Shelbyville, Grove Meeting near Brown S. H., Wednesday 10 1-2 a. m., and 2 1-2 p. m., July 10.

Kasota S. H., 3 p. m. Friday, July 12.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Sat. eve., and Sunday, July 13-14.

—Meet me at Owatonna Station 10 1-2 a. m. July 13. S. C. WELLCOME.

July 7, at the Baptist Church, Money Creek Valley, Winona Co.

RUTH M. ROWELL.

In accordance with a vote of our State Conference a State Campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove called "Cheatham's Grove," in Utica, Winona Co., commencing Thursday, June 27, and holding over the ensuing Sunday, and as much longer as deemed practicable. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with permanent stands and seats; also a good well of water and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground.

Brethren and sisters of the Advent faith throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles and work for God. Come from every quarter; come with hearts burning with the love of God, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs portend the speedy coming of the Master. Shall we not improve these general gatherings, as God requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and for the salvation of others?

Come Christians of every name, and unite with us in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove.

Brethren and sisters in the ministry, all who can come, at home or abroad, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon-coming King. Come endued with power from on high, with an unction from the holy One; with words that burn, that will reach the hearts of the perishing.

☞ Those coming to tarry on the ground will please come prepared with bedding and provisions (and tents if they have them.) We expect to procure a large building erected by the Methodists, on the ground, and also have the Bethel tent if possible, so that all can be accommodated if they have their bedding and provisions.

Arrangements will be made with the R. R. companies for half-fare tickets from all points where the friends notify ME THIS MONTH that they will attend our meeting. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

The A. C. Church of Honeoye, Ontario Co., N. Y., will hold its third Q. M. Saturday and Sunday, July 13, and 14. Sr. E. S. Jennings and others are expected to be present. Brethren and sisters in the region are cordially invited.

For the Church,

H. H. BROWN, O. B. BROWN.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground, near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conferance. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free trains for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

Further particulars soon. WM. E. BROWN.

SAM'L. H. WITHINGTON.

PERRY M. GRINNELL.

CANADA.

The N. Y. State Mission Tent, the Lord willing, will be pitched in Oshawa, Ontario, for a series of meetings, June 20, 1872. Brn. B. F. Stevens, Wm. A. Fenn, and perhaps others will be present to preach "this gospel of the kingdom" to the people. We hope all the brethren and friends of truth in that region will rally, and by united prayer and effort make the meeting tell for God and truth. WM E. BROWN, Director.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $600, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume 1 will commence in June. $2 a year. THE TIMES and Record one year for $3 50.

H. V. Reed, Publisher, 9 South Canal St. Chicago.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, of the $200 pattern, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

When & How; or a collection of the more recent facts and ideas upon raising healthy children By D. Newcomb, M. D.

A strong, common-sense, and hence valuable work. Sent by mail, post paid, $1. For sale at this office.

Favorable terms to agents by the Publishers, A. W. Penny & Co. 66 South Ca . . St. Chicago, Ill.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 14 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents. Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 38 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

Advent Christian Times.

LIBRARY COPY

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 48. CHICAGO, JULY 9, 1872. WHOLE NO. 428.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - - EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, July 9, 1872.

The Restitution of All Things.

(Continued.)

A little industry could multiply examples of this kind a hundredfold. They show us unquestionably that the illustrations of Scripture are by themselves sufficient to overthrow the false systems both of Agustine and Origen. They all teach, as the universal usage of human language proves, that the end of the wicked, after they have been raised to judgement, and to stripes few or many according to desert, is to vanish into that nothingness which the Epicurean falsely taught would be the end of all men upon death. Every one of them point, not to the preservation of life in any condition, but to the loss of life, the utter blotting out of existence.

We now approach a very solemn question—the question of Divine justice. We approach it with the deep reverence that becomes a creature when he scans and judges the conduct of his Maker, but also with the confidence which becomes one who is invited by his Maker to this inquiry. It is indeed said that we are not able to judge of God's ways, and this, no doubt, is often true. It is true, however, only of those dealings of his with us with which we are imperfectly acquainted, or which from their nature, are wholly above our comprehension. The present subject belongs to neither of these categories. Future punishment is a matter fully placed before us. We are told its cause and its nature—told to ponder on and study it. We are not treated as children incapable of forming an opinion as to what is just or unjust in God. Called upon to love, reespect, and confide in him, and having his conduct towards us brought to our view in order to produce these feelings in us, we are thus allowed by God to be capable of judging of his character, of his love, his mercy, his wisdom, his justice. He was himself appealed to us to do so, admitted his creature's scrutiny as the exercise of a right, and this not merely in the case of his faithful people, but even of those who were alienated from him. (Ezek. 18. 29; Gen. 18. 23—25; Luke 12. 57.) In the human breast there is a true sense of what is just, and God not only allows it, but insists upon its exercise towards himself. He has told man his character and his conduct towards man from first to last. He challenges us to bring any line of conduct attributed to him to this test. In our question of future punishment we have the highest case on which any tribunal shall have ever sat; and we may be certain that the Judge of all the earth will do right, not merely in his own eyes, but in those of all his intelligent creation; of the angels, who stand around his throne, of the redeemed, who rejoice in their acceptance, of the very damned, who listen to their sentence. Judged by human judgment, and that the judgment of believers and unbelievers alike, the punishment which the theory of Augustine supposes that God will inflict is infinitely too great, and we are therefore to reject it as untrue because unworthy, not merely of a merciful Father, but of a just God.

Before we put our question of just or unjust, we must first refer plainly to the punishment itself. We will not attempt to describe it in our own words. We will merely give a few passages descriptive of it from writers who hold the view.

Here is an extract from a little book entitled, "The Child's Path to Glory," and which has passed through at least seven editions: "There is nothing but misery in hell. You would never more have one moment's ease, for there is nothing but pain and torment there. Put together all you can think of that is miserible, and painful, and terrible, and it is all nothing to what is prepared for those who go there, and that not for an hour, or a year, but for all eternity. The lost souls who live in that horrible pit wish to die, but they are not able, for God says 'Their worm dieth not.' The frightful and cruel devil may torment them as much as he pleases—they are made strong to bear it." Here is the description of hell by the Christian Father Hippolytus: "The fire which is unquenchable and without end awaits the unrighteous, and a certain fiery worm which dieth not, and which does not waste the body, but continues bursting forth from the body with unending pain. No sleep will give them rest; no night will soothe them; no death will deliver them from punishment." Here is the celebrated Jeremy Taylor's account:—"We are amazed to think of the brutality of Phalaris, who roasted men alive in his brazen bull. That was a joy in respect of that fire of hell. What comparison will there be between burning for an hundred years' space and to be burning without interruption as long as God is God!" Here is the account given by the famous Jonathan Edwards of America:—"The woes of sinners in hell will not be a cause of grief to the saints in heaven, but of rejoicing. When they hear you groan, and sigh, and gnash your teeth, these things will not move them at all to pity you. They will praise God that his justice appears in the eternity of your misery. The torments in hell will be immeasurably greater than being in a glowing oven, a brick-kiln, or fiery furnace. Here is the way in which the Roman Church describe hell. It is taken from a book writen by the Rev. J. Furniss, and published with the approval of the authorities of his Church:—"The fifth dungeon is the red-hot oven. The little child is in the red-hot oven. Hear how it screams to come out; see how it turns and twists itself about in the fire. It beats its head against the roof of the oven. It stamps its little feet on the floor. God was very good to this child. Very likely God saw that it would get worse and worse, and would never repent, and so it would have to be punished more severely in hell. So God in His mercy called it out of the world in early childhood." Here is the description of hell by the celebrated Mr. Spurgeon:—"Only conceive that poor wretch in the flames, who is saying, 'Oh, for one drop of water to cool my parched tongue!' See how his tongue hangs from between his blistered lips! How it excoriates and burns the roof of his mouth, as if it were a firebrand! Behold him crying for a drop of water! I will not picture the scene! Suffice it for me to close up by saying that the hell of hells will be to thee, poor sinner, the thought that it is to be for ever. Thou wilt look up there on the throne of God, and it shall be written 'For ever!' When the damned jingle the burning irons of their torment, they shall say, 'For ever!' When they howl echo cries 'For ever!'

> "'For ever' is written on their racks,
> 'For ever' on their chains;
> 'For ever' burneth in the fire,
> 'For ever' ever reigns."

We will close our series of "Horrible Extracts" with a quotation from Pollok. He thus pictures one of the damned—

> "Like
> A cinder that had life and feeling seemed
> His face, with inward pining to be what
> He could not be. As being that had burned
> Half an eternity, and was to burn
> For evermore, he looked. Oh! sight to be > Forgotten, thought too horrible to think."

The poet's picture of the damned would not be complete if we did not add his picture of God throughout all eternity looking on it as one who

> "Hears unmoved the endless groan
> Of those wasting within, and sees unmoved
> The endless tear of vain repentance fall."

These are very horrifying descriptions. If the Augustinian theory is correct they are true. They are true of every being placed in hell. They picture the eternity not only of fallen angels and men who rejected the Gospel, but of the myriads who never heard the name of the Father and the Son. If the "second death," and "everlasting destruction," and "perishing", of the wicked be what the theory of Augustine teaches, the ignorant heathen endure it as well as the rejecter of the Gospel, for they who "have sinned without law shall perish" as they who have sinned in the law (Rom. 2: 12). These eternal agonies are the "few stripes" which Augustine's theory has provided for the most ignorant offender!

But we will leave the heathen out of account. We will take the very strongest case. We will ask if punishment such as the above is a just punishment for any conceivable amount of sin committed by the worst of men. Man did not ask for life; it was given him without his knowledge or consent. Can any abuse of this unasked-for gift justify the recompense of an existence spent in unending agony?

We must put the question on its proper grounds. The ablest modern defenders of endless misery have put it on a false issue. They have done so in two main respects, urged on by their inability to justify their theory in its naked light. The first of these we will give in the words of William Archer Butler, whose view is adopted by Professor Mansel, Dr. Salmon, Dr. Angus, President Edwards, and others. "The punishments of hell," says Butler, "are but the perpetual vengeance that accompanies the sins of hell. An eternity of wickedness brings with it an eternity of woe. The sinner is to suffer for everlasting, but it is because the sin itself is as everlasting as the suffering."

It may be fairly questioned whether, according to any principles of Divine or human law, the lost in hell are capable of sinning. We do not believe they are. Out of and beyond all law they are incapable of transgressing the law. (1 John 3. 4.) But independently of this it is sufficient to say of the above fearful view that it contradicts the Scripture. Not once or twice, but over and over again, it [illegible] the pun*ishment of the future is for the sins of the present time* ([illegible] 41, 46; Rom. 2. 6; 2 Cor. 5. 10). If we think it too great we are not at liberty to throw in the sins of the future, real or imaginary, to justify the punishment of the future. If we cannot defend man's future treatment as a just award for his present conduct, we cannot justify it at all.

Nor does it relieve God in the smallest measure from the charge of injustice to say that future punishment will but follow that natural law which inextricably links together sin and misery. We will not allow the believer to shield himself under the cant of modern infidelity. The laws of nature are the laws of God. For all their consequences, after they have worked their uniform work for ages, he is just as responsible as when he first ordained them, or as when he departs from them by an alteration of law or a miraculous interference. If the laws of nature were to bring on the sinner a punishment greater than his sin deserved, it is God himself who would be doing so.

The simple question then is, Could man by any conduct here deserve to suffer pain throughout eternity? The verdict of the human heart, in its fierce denial, in its secret recoil, answers No. "Eternal pain," says Augustine, "seems harsh and unjust to human sense." "With the majority of men of the world," says Butler, "this doctrine seems, when they think at all about it, monstrous, disproportioned, impossible." It seems so, in the same writer's mind, to others beside men of the world—to men who do not fear this doom for themselves—"It would blanch the intellect, reduce the mind of the Christian to a state of idiotcy, deprive him of life, were he but adequately to conceive it." If God were now to ask man whether his conduct on this hypothesis were just, man with one voice would reply that it was not.

The history of human religious thought shows man's ineradicable sense of the burning wrong of this fearful theory. If Plato, deriving his inspiration from Egypt, taught a Tartarus with its fiery streams, whence none could issue forth, he taught it for an infinitesimally small portion of men. For most—even for the homicide, the parricide, and the matricide—he had his Acherusian lake, whence, after a purgative process, they issued forth again to the upper air. If Augustine adopted his great master's abode of unending pain, he adopted also his Purgatory, whence there was a way to heaven. If the church of Rome has sanctioned the theory of Augustine, she practically holds out its terrors only to those without her pale of safety; for her own millions she has, at the worst, the fires of a finite period. The assertion of Augustine's hell did but drive the gentler mind of Origen to the notion of a wider purgatory than Rome's or Augustine's, where even devils should be prepared to resume their place in heaven. The churches of the reformation have generally followed Augustine in his hell and denied his purgatory, but at all times within their bosom has been a struggle against the dominant doctrine, and even from those who maintained it it has only commanded a sullen, uncheerful assent. Such men as Burnet, Whitby, Hammond, Law, Sir Isaak and Bp. Newton, Locke, Bengel, Foster, Birks, have rejected it with abhorrence. Such men as Tillotson, Robert Hall, Dr. Watts, Isaak Taylor, William Butler, Albert Barnes, while they accepted the theory, loved it not. Let them reason as they would, the black look of injustice lurked about the ugly thing. Let them only allow their minds to dwell upon the reality of what eternal evil and eternal misery meant, and their hearts would grieve that man had been made at all, that the feelings of pity were implanted in the human breast. Darkness and anguish settled down and brooded over their spirit—yea, the very light of reason would almost abandon them for madness—when they conceived even in the far-off future the horrible hell of Augustine. We constantly find them, even when they are struggling hard to defend the monstrous thought, candidly confessing that with all their hearts they would wish that it was a monstrous lie. The modern mind, shaken in religious conviction, denies the inspiration of a book which is supposed to teach this creed of cruelty. With those who will not throw away their faith in man's future, the theory of Origen, with all its consequences, bids fair, if only confronted with the fearful nightmare of Augustine, to take the place which the authority of the latter Father has so long imposed upon the Church. The ablest modern defenders of the theory are shrinking back from putting forward a vindication of it in its plain and hideous aspect. Man, with one voice, pronounces the Augustinian punishment unjust, and therefore it is untrue.

Our view needs no vindication, does not compel us to keep it discreetly in the background, reduces us to no subterfuges to escape its consequences. It does not force us to advance arguments which we feel to be unworthy of a child, or faintly to defend the justice of a procedure which our heart whispers to us is only worthy of hell. By it the next life's dealings with the sinner will but follow the analogy of this. He who scans the course of nature may from it anticipate that future course which revelation opens to our view. According to it God's ways with the sinner are equal. They are severe, but they are just. They are full of awe, but they can be contemplated with calmness. They show the award of a justice in whose consequences we can rejoice. Its issue in eternal death, if it brings the sigh of sadness, brings also the deep, full breathing of infinite relief. We require neither the "purgatory" of Augustine, nor the "universal restoration" of Origen. Looking on the calmed face of death we will say, "It is well." The woes, the agony, the despair of life, are passed away from its features with the sin that produced them.

In the predicted extinction of evil we have another proof of the truth of our theory. Evil is not to be eternal. God has pledged his word that it shall be abolished and destroyed. He has promised a "restitution of all things" by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began (Acts 3: 21). A time shall come when the wicked shall not be, when his place shall nowhere in God's world be found. A time shall come when all things shall once more be "very good," when iniquity shall have an end, when the pure eyes of God shall no more be offended by its sight. A time shall come when they who would not glorify God shall be silent in darkness, and when everything that has breath shall praise the Lord. Here the theory of Augustine is at direct issue with God's word. It teaches the eternity of evil, and is therefore to be rejected as untrue. (To be continued.)

THE SOUL OF MAN; OR THE "NEPHESH" OF THE HEBREWS.

[Concluded.]

We will now give some instances from Scripture, in order to show that the primary and proper meaning of the Hebrew nephesh, usually translated "soul," is animal life. We have an instance of this in 1 Kings 1: 12, when Nathan gives Bathsheba counsel how she "may save her own life [nephesh], and the life of her son Solomon." This might just as well have been translated, "save her own soul," and shows us the simple sense of what is meant throughout Scripture by the phrase "to save the soul." Again, in the book of Job, we read of men, beasts, and fishes, that "the soul of every living thing is in the hand of the Lord." It is quite plain that here "animal life" is meant by "the soul," for beasts and fishes have no other soul but animal life. In the same way the heathen sailors, when about to throw out Jonah into the sea, use the word nephesh as simply expressive of animal life, when they pray to God that they may not "perish for this man's life." Further instances of this kind are needless. The usage of Scripture shows beyond a question, that its primary sense for soul is animal life. Having for its primary sense the meaning of "life," the Hebrew nephesh, or soul, comes naturally to signify the person who is possessed of this life so long as he possesses it. No one, we believe, doubts this sense, and we therefore content ourselves with giving below references to some Scripture in which it is so used.[1] From this usage of the word it sometimes comes to signify a dead person; but this, we contend, is only done when the adjective, "dead," is joind to it.[2] Even in face of such authorities as Furst and Gesenius, we more than doubt that the Hebrew nephesh, or soul, by itself and unaccompanied by a qualifying adjective, ever means a dead body or corpse. Num. 5. 2, and Lev. 22: 4, are appealed to as instances when it does, but we do not see our way to accept the interpretation. As this, however, does not bear upon our present question, we will not occupy our reader's time with its discussion. The view that nephesh, or soul does sometimes by itself mean a corpse is against, not in favor of, the theory we here contend against. We only mention it to express our opinion, which is that the Hebrew nephesh primarily signifies "animal life," that readily comes to signify "a living person," and finally comes, when accompanied by the adjective "dead," to signify that person when dead.

We now pass on to consider the important question of the mortality or immortality of the soul. Certainly this question, which now agitates the mind of the Church, could never have arisen if men had only learned their philosophy of human nature from the Bible. Our theological and philosophical books are replete with arguments for the immortality of the soul, but when we come to Scripture, we fail to find a single passage which states it. Some may suppose it to be inferred from certain passages, but no man, of all the men who have read the Bible from beginning to end, can say that he has ever seen it stated in Scripture that the soul is immortal. But this is not all. The very opposite is asserted in Scripture of the souls of specified classes of mankind. This we will now proceed to show.

We will only draw particular attention to a few passages on this subject. If we were to draw attention to all the passages of Scripture which tell us that the soul of man is mortal and dies, we would swell a moderate volume such as we propose to publish, into a folio. We will then draw our readers' attention first to a passage in Leviticus in which the [illegible] and beast is spoken of in the very same terms, and in which the death of both is said to be produced by the smiting or killing of their soul. As is too usual, our translators have disguised the original Hebrew from their Platonic predilections. The passage in our Authorized Version runs thus: "He that killeth any man shall surely be put to death; and he that killeth the soul of a beast shall make it good." (Lev. 24: 17, 18; Prov. 7: 23.) The English reader might pass over this as unimportant in the present question, but a glance at the Hebrew shows it to be of great consequence. The Hebrew is thus literally translated: "He that killeth the soul of a man shall surely be put to death, and he that killeth the soul of a beast shall make it good." Here the nature of death is described. It is said, as in Eccl. 3: 19, to be the very same in man as in beast; and it is also said to consist in killing the soul (nephesh) of each. The mortality of the human soul is here taught, beyond any question, by God himself, for the words are spoken by him. In Deut. 19: 6 we have a similar expression, so far as relates to the death of man. The Hebrew words, which are in our version translated "slay him," are literally "kill a soul." (Deut. 19: 6.) Phrases of this kind abound in the Hebrew Scriptures, but our translation hides the expression from the English reader. (Num. 31: 19; Deut. 22: 26; 27: 25.) The Greek of the Septuagint version will generally be found to carry out faithfully the expression of the Hebrew, as does also, though not so commonly, the Vulgate version. Sometimes the translators allow the literal force of the Hebrew to appear in their translation. Thus we read that Joshua "utterly destroyed all the souls" that were, in the various cities of Canaan, taken by him. (Josh. 10: 28, 30, 32.) And in Leviticus God himself uses the same language: "Whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day the same soul will I destroy from among his people." (Lev. 23: 30.) We may not, in the face of such Scriptures, deny the fact that in death the soul is really and truly destroyed. Abraham's expression to Sarah, that his "soul should live" if she pretended to be his sister, implies his belief that if she did not, his soul would die. (Gen. 12: 13; Jer. 38: 17-20.) And the same truth is fully brought out in the well known wish of Balaam, when literally translated, "let my soul die the death of the righteous." (Num. 23: 10.) In his time of anguish Job tells us that "his soul chose death rather than life" (Job. 7: 15), meaning plainly that the condition of unconsciousness in which his soul then would be, was preferable to living wo. The description given by David of the condition of the soul when separate from the body is a description which is utterly inconsistent with its possession of any conscious life more than the body is possessed of in the grave. His prayer to God is, "Deliver my soul: oh, save me for thy mercy's sake. For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in hades who shall give thee thanks?" (Ps. 6: 4, 5.) Here he describes the state of his soul in hades as far from being in any glorious or happy state, absolutely as incapable of thanking God for anything, as it is for the dead body in the grave to remember former things. That the soul dies is intimated in Proverbs and elsewhere, where it said, wisdom and discretion are the preservation of its life. (Prov. 3: 22; Is. 55: 3.) Job tells us that in death the soul goes to the grave (Job 33: 22), an expression wholly inconsistent with its continuing to live! In the thirty-third Psalm we are expressly told that the souls even of God's people are exposed to death; and in another psalm, that the soul "is not spared from death" (Ps. 33: 19; 78: 50.); while the final end of the wicked is [illegible] we know from the [illegible] evidence of Scripture to be the utter extinction of their entire being, is described as the death of the sinful soul. (Ezk. 18: 27.)

Now what is to be said of passages such as we have referred to, and which could be readily multiplied ten times over? What do they teach us as to the immortality of the soul? Do they not with all authority teach us that any such doctrine is a mere human conceit, to be rejected, no matter what array of great names are paraded for it? Let us remember that we have in the Hebrew language no other word but nephesh for that conception which we speak of as the soul. And of this soul, this nephesh, Scripture tells us, in passages of every variety of expression, that when man dies this soul of his dies with him. Let us then suppose it to be what we will, yet this we must accept, if we accept God's word, which Plato tells us is immortal in the case of every man, God tells us dies in the case of every man. It does not survive the body; both together cease to exist, to live together again when the spirit of life re-enters the body and reproduces the soul within it.

And here we would particularly warn the upholders of the Scriptural truth of life and immortality only in Christ, to beware how, in explaining away the natural force of the many Scriptures which teach that the soul dies in the first death, they greatly weaken their own argument when they come to insist that the second death means the true and real extinction of the entire man. Scripture speaks of it simply as death. (Rom. 6: 23; 8: 13.) If the first death is consistent with man's in fact not dying, but continuing to live in regard of his most important part, whose survival may again be supposed to imply the restoration of the body to life, it seems plain that the common idea of the first death militates gravely against our view of what is intended by the second.

A very important feature of our inquiry, and one which it will not take us long to determine, is the locality of the soul during the period of death, i. e. during that period of whatever length, which intervenes between the time a man dies and the time he rises from the dead. With one unbroken voice, from beginning to end, the Old Testament declares that the souls of all men, good and evil, are in a place called sheol, and which the Septuagint and New Testament translate into the Greek equivalent of hades. What hades is we will not now inquire, farther than to say, that beyond any doubt it is some place within this earth. In another chapter we will inquire whether it is distinct from, or equivalent to, the grave. Such an inquiry is as yet unnecessary. Here it is enough to say that the Old Testament teaches us that all souls go on death to hades, and that this hades is within this earth. We do not consider that it will be necessary in proof to do more than refer to some places of Scripture which affirm it. (Deut. 32: 22; Job 7: 9; Ps. 89: 48; 6: 5; 16: 10; Eccl. 9: 10; Acts 2: 31; 1 Cor. 15: 55.)

We would merely warn the English reader that, when he turns to these passages, he will find a great variety of renderings which would greatly perplex him if he was not informed that they are one and all translations of the same Hebrew word sheol, or of its synonym in Greek, hades. The truth is, that no reader of the Authorized Version can be more perplexed at this than were the translators themselves. In their utter confusion of mind as to the nature of hades, they alternately translate it by death, or the grave, or hell, as the supposed exigences of each case required it. The result is, that the English reader is utterly unable to judge for himself in this important question. We earnestly hope that the revisers of our translation will attend to [illegible]. As the [illegible] of the Hebrew sheol in the Old Testament, we would recommend its Greek equivalent hades. If this is not approved of, we would suggest that word sheol be left untranslated. It will soon become a familiar word, and the English reader will be able to judge from its use in Scripture what Scripture really intended him to learn about it. But we would prefer the rendering of hades, which the New Testament authorises (Acts 2: 31), and which is its invariable rendering in the Septuagint version.

There is undoubtedly a very intimate connection between the soul of man and the spirit. We have already seen this from our examination of the creation of the living man by God in Gen. 2: 7. It was the inbreathing of the breath of life, i. e., of the spirit, which produced within man his soul, or made him become a living soul. Soul had no existence until the spirit entered into him. Then it was produced. While the spirit remains in man it is evident that the soul continues and equally evident it is that when the spirit departs, the soul returns to its original non-entity. The existence of the soul as it was produced by the presence of the spirit, so must always depend upon that presence. With the spirit it comes, remains and vanishes. With the departure of the soul man ceases to be a sentient being. He becomes like the clods of the valley. And this vanishing of the soul, and departure of all sense and thought from man, is consequent essentially on God's taking back the spirit which he gave. "Man's breath or spirit," says the Psalmist, "goeth forth; in that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146: 4.)

But while the close connection of the soul and spirit is a certain thing in the constitution of man, as it is in that of the lower creatures of God, it is equally certain, and an important point to insist upon, that soul and spirit are two perfectly distinct and distinguishable things. Between the cause and its effect, while there is the closest connections, there is also a perfect distinctness. The heat which sets fire to a barrel of gunpowder is distinct from the explosion which it produces. There lay hid in the gunpowder, from the nature of its composition by the manufacturer, a certain power or quality which would forever lie dormant unless a certain power, that of heat, stimulated and brought out its latent quality. Just so with man. God so made his bodily organization of heart, and brain, and members, that all possessed within them a latent capacity of certain action on the application of a certain power, viz., the spirit. The application of this produces this in man, i. e., calls forth within him his soul, or makes him a living soul, capable of certain thoughts, feelings and actions. Hence the moral responsibilities lie, not with the spirit, but with the soul, i. e., with the living man.

But close as is the connection between spirit and soul, they are two distinct things. This will readily appear from the few considerations following. When we were comparing the breath of life with the spirit with a view to their identification, we saw how the manner in which they were spoken of in the parallel clauses of Scripture poetry completely identified them, although the breath of life is spoken of in comparatively few places of Scripture. Now, while both spirit and soul are mentioned in a very great number of places, they are not once, that we are aware of, and we have, we believe, examined every passage in which they occur, mentioned in such a way. Again, throughout the entire of the Old Testament the Hebrew word nephesh, or soul, is never translated by pneuma, or spirit, by the Septuagint translators, but always by the word [illegible], they [illegible] that, in the judgment of the Septuagint translators, nephesh and pneuma, or soul and spirit, were two completely distinct things. But this appears more strongly from the different things that are spoken of them. The soul is very often identified in Scripture with the blood (Gen. 9: 5; Lev. 17: 11, 14; Ps. 94: 21; Prov. 28: 17; Ps. 72: 14), language which is never used of the spirit. The soul, as we have seen in this chapter, is said to be capable of death, and actually dies, whereas nothing of the kind is ever said of the spirit; and we saw reason in our chapters on the spirit, to conclude that the spirit, being the emanation from God, is as immortal as God himself. Again, we have seen that in death the spirit goes to hades, while the spirit goes back to God, from whom it originally came. Again, we are frequently told that the soul sins; but this is language never used of the spirit.

For these reasons, to which others could be added if they were at all required, we hold it is an indubitable truth of Scripture that the soul of man and his spirit are two essentially different things. In ordinary theology they are perpetually confounded, but never in the theology of the Bible. Divines and philosophers constantly speak of their soul and their spirit as one and the same thing, but this confusion is never seen in scriptural language. The Old Testament, as we have seen, keeps them perfectly distinct, and we will in our next chapter, see that the New Testament observes a like distinction. In human life they are intimately connected as cause and effect. In man's death they are completely severed. It requires a resurrection to another life, to renew the dissevered connection.

Before we leave this chapter, we will say a few words on a scriptural phrase which is readily suggested to us throughout our inquiry, viz., what is it that the Scripture means by saving a soul? The ordinary explanation, we believe, is that it means restoring it to the holiness which it has lost since the fall of man, and, as a consequence, preserving it from a misery which, it is believed, will be eternal. Now, while we hold that the restoration of the soul of man to holiness is an incalculable blessing, and absolutely essential to the saving of the soul, we do not hold that it is what is meant by saving the soul. The phrase has another and simpler meaning. To save a soul is simply to save what is the equivalent of soul—a life. Man was made to have an eternal life. He lost it by sin. His soul would have lived for ever if he had not sinned. It dies because he has sinned. But it may be saved out of and from this death; and this is, we believe, what Scripture means when it speaks of saving a soul from death, or saving a soul alive. The Christian's repentance and faith are not the life of the soul, but the way to that life. This life eternal is promised as God's great reward to faith and obedience. These fit a man for life, and its true objects, as sin unfits him. When the man is fit for life eternal, God bestows it upon him. The way the believer walks before God is not his life, but the way to his life; as Christ said, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life." To save a soul is to procure for it the eternal existence which God placed within man's power when he made him, and once more places within his power through the gospel of Christ. "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Henry Constable, in Rainbow.

---

[1] Gen. 46: 18; Ex. 12: 16; Lev. 4: 2; 5: 15; 7: 21; Num. 9: 21; Is. 47: 14.

[2] Num. 6; Lev. 21: 11.

It is a soothing thought that although with atheists and extreme rationalists Christianity is always about to fall, it hasn't given way yet.—Liberal Christian.

e Christian Life,

h may often be learned by close ion to the literal meaning of a on word. Such a word is "conn." "Literally and simply it the turning straight round fro rection to another. If a littl e following a path which is lea n into a tangled and dangero and, in alarm and desire for
, turns directly back and retracsteps homewards, this is conver-
And if a man, who has been folthe path of sin, turns decisively opposite direction, saying, "I to my Father, and will say im, I have sinned against heaven fore thee," such a man is con-
He was going to hell—he is oing to heaven.

Self-Denial.

ou know what self-denial means?
ps this story will help you to un-nd it.
morning, as Harry and his pa-vere sitting at the breakfast-taarry seemed for a while engaged wn study. Presently he exclaim-
'Father, I have made up my not to eat any more salt mack-

! what has brought you to that sion?" asked his father, with a f earnest inquiry.
cause," continued Harry, "our th-school teacher said we ought e up something, so that we might money to put in the missionary ell, but what has induced my chose salt mackerel as the thing ll give up?" again asked his hy," answerd Harry, "because rel don't come very often; and t like them very much, anyhow."

, do my young readers think any self-denial in that? I will n what self-denial is.
le Jenny, who dearly loved
, received one just ever so rich beautiful golden color and plump ts delicious juice. Instead of eat-she ran around the corner and t to little Emma, who was sick, hose mother was too poor to buy r such luxuries. That was self-en you give away something ou really want, that by so doing ay make another happy; or when ive up something that you are fond of, that you may have y for missionary or other good es, that is self-denial.

us said, "If any man will be my le, let him deny himself."—Car-lone.

Benevolence

evolence consists in the wish or tion to do good. It indicates a al good-will to all mankind. No n or position in life monopolizes r is it limited to any particular t You may be rich or poor, and her case, if you have the disposiyou will find opportunity for its ise. It is not to the rich that t said, "the poor ye have always you," and when you will you do them good.
you improve every occasion of king a kind word of encouragement, expressing your sympathy to who need it? Kindness, human-nd tenderness are made of benev-
e. In its fullest sense it is um of moral excellence. Its highmanifestation is found in God
"so loved the world that he gave nly begotten Son, that whosoever veth on him should not perish, have everlasting life."
truly benevolent heart is the of divine grace; and as grace phs in your affections, you will e by the exhibition of this virtue, you are a partaker of the divine re.
e philanthropy of Howard clearmonstrated that he possessed a t in no ordinary degree in sympawith Christ, so that it may in a fied sense be said of the disciple, t the master, "he went about doing
t said, "The names of Wilberforce
Clarkson will be had in everlastremembrance for their unwearied tions in behalf of suffering humanarey, Coke, Judson, and a host of rs, whose hearts of benevolence prompted to the consecration of for the benefit of the degraded and ghted, will not be forgotten while part of our earth is unchristianized.

rs. Fry, Harriet Newell, Mrs. Judand many more truly "sisters of rity," show that woman's sympa-ing heart when sanctified by grace shrinks from no danger, or hardship, or suffering, in efforts to do good.

It has been well said, "there are no circumstances or situations in life which preclude the exercise of benevolence." A little maid in the family of the Syrian general was instrumental in the removal of his leprosy, and of acquaintance with the prophet and worship of Jehovah. If you have the heart to do, opportunities will not be wanting.

No truly benevolent effort was ever put forth in vain, and none ever will be. You may not live to see the good results of your endeavor, you may not see immediate effects, but as the sunshine and frequent showers cover the earth with beauty, and render it fruitful, so your sympathy and kindness will bless many hearts; and eternity alone will measure the influence of your labor of love.—Zion's Herald.

Christians might avoid much trouble and inconvenience, if they would only believe what they profess, that God is able to make them happy without anything else. They imagine that if such a dear friend were to die, or such and such blessings were removed, they would be miserable; whereas God can make them a thousand times happier without them. To mention my own case. God has been depriving me of one mercy after another, but as one is removed, he has come in and filled up its place. Now, when I am a cripple, and not able to move, I am happier than ever I was in my life before, or ever expected to be; and if I had believed this twenty years ago, I might have beeen spared much anxiety. If God had told me some time ago, that he was about to make me as happy as I could be in this world, and then had told me that he should begin by crippling me in all my limbs, and removing me from my usual sources of enjoyment, I should have thought it a very strange mode of accomplishing this purpose. And yet how is his wisdom manifest even in this!—Dr. Payson.

Conference Minutes

Wisconsin.

ANNUAL MEETING.

We find the following report of the late session of the Wisconsin conference in the Crisis:

The annual meeting was blended with the State campmeeting, held at Prairie du Sac, and held its first business session June 5th, Bro. O. S. Knapp was re-elected as President; P. W. Hough, G. Thomson, and N. A. Hitchcock were appointed as business committee. Also the following committee on ordination was chosen:—W. S. Shears, Wm. Sheldon, G. Thomson, P. W. Hough, and N. A. Hitchcock. Conference doors were opened for the reception of new ministers and churches. The Helena church was added; also the following ministers: Abraham Slocum, Ansen Brown Fletcher Ghormley. Reports were heard from the various churches and ministers, partly in person or by delegates, and partly by letter, setting forth a degree of prosperity, interspersed with sectional adversity. The experiment of districting the State for quarterly meetings was satisfactory, and continued. The following brethren were appointed to take supervision of this work for the coming year:—Eastern District, G. Thomson. Western district, P. W. Hough. Southern District, Geo. Howard. The following ministers were ordained:—G. Howard and Philo Hitchcock. Other items of business of a local nature were attended to; but our sessions were short to give time to attend to devotional meetings. The following campmeeting committee was elected for the coming year:—Wm. Sheldon, O. S. Knapp, E. P. Graves, P. W. Hough, T. Barker. The meeting with which this conference was connected was one of special interest—a rich feast.

Wm. Sheldon, Sec'y.

Iowa.

MANCHESTER DISTRICT Q. M.

The third Q. M. in this District met at the Odell S. H. June 14. A good representation of brethren and friends from Center Point, Troy, York, Greely, Yankee Settlement, Elk Creek, Elkport, Manchester, Spring Branch, Strawberry Point, and vicinity, Wolf Creek, Cascade, &c. Neither were the people of the place slow to hear; on the contrary they gave the listening ear, and opened their hearts to receive the truth, and their houses to entertain its advocates and friends. And though we were among strangers, we lacked no good thing. And when opportunity was offered they helped us on our way after a godly sort. We feel assured that the good seed sown will yet bear much fruit to the glory of God. The interest which was good at the beginning increased till the last. One brother said, "It was the most glorious meeting I have ever attended." It was indeed good to be there. Praise God for his goodness!

Br. Isaac Adrian, from Wisconsin, was with us, which added greatly to the interest, and much to our joy; and having ascertained that he would tarry and preach the word in this State, we resolved to send him forth in the name of the Lord with our tent this summer. And right here let me say to the churches and brethren scattered abroad, Br. Adrian is a workman that has handled the sword many years. He knows how to wield it successfully. If you want a meeting of days, write me at once. Direct to Strawberry Point, Iowa, and I will forward your request to him, which will be promptly attended to. Don't delay in this matter. What is done must be done now. Soon it will be said, The summer is ended, the harvest is past, and souls are not saved.

In view of the wants of the cause and the nearness of the judgment, the following resolutions were unanimously passed.

Resolved, That it is the wish of this Q. M. that the tent be put in the field at the earliest possible moment, and we pledge ourselves to bear our part in sustaining meetings and defraying the expenses of said tent.

Resolved, That Br. Adrian be invited to travel with the tent this summer, and have control of the same while under his supervision.

Resolved, That this Conference invite Br. Thurber, of Wisconsin, to be with us at our Annual Meeting in September.

Resolved, That we tender a vote of thanks to the people of this vicinity for their kindness, liberality and good will.

Adjourned to the Annual Conference to be held Sept. 6, and over two Sabbaths. Place will be duly given—probably in the vicinity of Manchester. Meanwhile let every lover of Jesus in the State prepare to be there.

Martha J. James, Sec'y.

Missouri.

THIRD DISTRICT Q. M.

The third Q. M. of this Conference met on Friday eve. June 14, in the Presbyterian church, Clinton Co. Mo. Preaching by G. L. McClure, from Gal. 6:9.

Saturday, Conference was opened by President Billmire; the following preaching brethren were present: A. F. Dugger, H. Billmire, J. Scarce, G. L. McClure and E. A. Marsh.

E. D. White was elected Secretary, pro tem.

Visiting brethren were invited to take a seat with us. Br. and Sr. John Hughes, of Davis Co. Mo., and Br. and Sr. Atwood, of Wis., were present, and gave words of cheer.

G. L. McClure reported Ailanthus and Ringold churches to be in a favorable condition. Empire church was reported by H. Billmire to be in a favorable condition. The Philadelphia church was presented by A. F. Dugger for admission, and was received.

The following report was sent to the Secretary: To the brethren assembled in conference in the third district of the A. C. Conference of N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa, greeting: Eld. A. F. Dugger has succeeded in raising the banner of the speedy coming of our Savior, in Saline Co., against a strong current of opposition and much prejudice. A live church of twenty-five members, mostly heads of families, of whom thirteen were received by immersion, has been organized. Nearly all of our meetings have been blessed with some additions. By the Spirit of Christ and Bible in hand we have been able to withstand the persecution. The Lord has given us an open door, and there is a growing interest. The people are anxious to hear the doctrines presented by us as a people. The harvest is truly great, but the laborers are few. We therefore raise the Macedonian cry for help. We are able and willing to support any good man who will come among us and locate here, and spend his time in preaching the word. By the help of God we hope to have a house of worship completed by the fourth Sunday in September. We ask for the prayers of the children of God in our behalf. Our officers are, M. F. Cook and Cornelius Marshall, Elders; Felix Cook and Wm. R. Augur, Deacons.

M. F. Cook, Clerk.

Report of the Greenland church: Beloved brethren, it is a matter of gratitude to God that he has in his great goodness preserved our lives, and permitted us to meet under such favorable circumstances to confer with each other on those subjects that interest us so much, and to welcome our ministering brethren among us. As regards the interest and general state of the church, we can truthfully say that it is encouraging. On account of not having a suitable house to worship in, and the state of the weather, we have not progressed as fast as we could wish. But are endeavoring to live by the day, and keep up the interest by meeting together often to hear the word, and social meetings, prayer and confessing Christ must not be neglected; we therefore hope to advance in this respect, and have a permanent prayer-meeting established. Br. Marsh, with the assistance of the brethren, organized a Sunday-school, which is in a prosperous condition. Since its organization, May 19, it has been increasing in numbers and interest, and numbers from forty-five to fifty scholars. Br. Marsh supplies us with preaching monthly, and as he has opportunity. Br. Dugger also preaches for us occasionally, and his labors are appreciated. We have a prospect of a number of additions during Conference, and desire the prayers of Christians in our behalf, that God may add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

J. Arnold, Clerk.

Saturday, 4 p. m.

Voted, that the written reports be read by E. A. Marsh.

Voted, that the Philadelphia church be admitted into conference.

After motion by Eld. J. F. Nicholson, of the Greenland church, that Br. E. A. Marsh be ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, his letters of recommendation were read to the satisfaction of all present, after which the Conference voted unanimously for his ordination. He was then set apart to the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of hands. Prayer by Eld. H. Billmire; charge by A. F. Dugger.

The Ringold Co. church desired the ordination of Br. John Scarce, and sent a letter of recommendation to that effect. Br. G. L. McClure, with whom he has been laboring for some time past, also recommended him for this great work. He was then set apart by Brn. Dugger and Billmire to the work of the ministry.

Voted, that we hold our next Q. M. with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co. Mo., commencing Friday eve. before the fourth Sunday in September.

The preaching was of an interesting character, and it is hoped will result in much good. Br. J. Scarce spoke to us in the a. m. from Jno. 10:1, and in the p. m. G. L. McClure discoursed from Acts 26:26.

Sunday morning we enjoyed a blessed meeting of prayer and praising God, after which we listened to an interesting discourse from Eld. A. F. Dugger, based on Mat. 25:31. There was a large and interested audience present, and the truth was presented in a most effective manner. Br. E. A. Marsh followed and showed the object of Christ's second coming is to raise the dead and reward the righteous, and judge the world.

We then repaired to the water and three believing souls were buried with Christ by baptism. Two brethren received the right hand of fellowship from the Greenland church.

P. M. services, preaching by Br. Harrison Billmire, from 2 Thes. 1:8. The subject of the destiny of the wicked was presented in his usual effective style, and it is hoped the discourse will do good.

E. D. White, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

New York.

ANNUAL MEETING.

This Conference held its seventh annual meeting with the church at Springwater, June 13–17, 1872. There was a large gathering of brethren and sisters, ministers and delegates, from various sections of the State, Pennsylvania and Canada; probably two hundred from outside the Valley were present.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES.

In some respects we thought this the best meeting we ever attended. The incense of prayer and of rapturous song uprose for three days continuously from that romantic valley in mingled melody of praise. It electrified all hearts, distanced the surrounding hills, scaled the over-lying clouds, and reached the awful presence of him whose eyes are over the righteous, and whose ears are ever open to their cry. And copious showers of grace divine were returned refreshing and watering well the place. We heard the "golden bells," we ate of the parti-colored "pomegranates," and had, indeed, the blest assurance that our High Priest, once dead, is alive, and liveth forever more.

There were four prayer and social meetings during the session, in all of which the time was well improved, chiefly with short and earnest exhortations. The soon coming of Christ, although constantly recognized, was not made the burden of any exhortation, nor yet, (and this is recorded with regret) was it made the subject of a special discourse. There were 175 testimonies given during the morning and evening meetings, Sunday, and frequent songs that made the very valley ring. The preaching, mostly, was was excellent and well timed, had the time of the Advent received its due share of attention. There were eight sermons in all, respectively by Brn. Cogswell, Smith, Low, Miles, Taylor, Sr. Stoddard, and Brn. Whitmore and Fenn.

Business meetings: Friday, 10 a. m. The President in the chair. The Secretary's report read and approved. The Treasurer handed in the following:

March 14, 1872.	On hand	$19.47
" 18, "	Rec'd of Sec'y	55.18	—74.65
" " "	Paid C. M. Booth		30 00
June 14.	On hand		$44.65

R. C. Brown, Treas.

Committees: Devotional Exercises. Aldrich Willey, John S. Beeman, and N. McCulloch.

Business: R. C. Brown, A. C. Newell, B. P. Stevens.

Campmeeting: Wm. E. Brown, P. M. Grinnell and S. H. Withington.

Ordination: A. C. Newell, C. W. Low and A. P. Moore.

Br. Newell reported the new church at Le Roy, thirteen members, for admission. Their delegate was received. The election of officers was made the special order for nine, and the essays on the ordination of women, arranged for last session, for eleven o'clock tomorrow.

Reports: Delegates. The following delegates reported and presented the annexed quarterly collections for the Mission Fund: J. Phelan, D. T. Cooper and Samuel Wilson, Rochester, $8. C. Pennoyer, Lockport, $7. Benj. Keith, Dansville, $10. P. M. Grinnel and Henry Hey, East Shelby, $15. O. H. Brown, Honeoye, $4.25. A. Willey, Springwater, $3.80. C. Andrus, Wolcott, $6. R. C. Simonds, Darien, $5. Sr. St. Clair, Knowlesville, $1.50. R. W. Beardsley, Le Roy, $2. Geo. H. Shaver, Alton, $2.62. Geo. Resterdon, So. Dansville, $4. F. C. Armstrong and A. S. Brown, Lone Lake and Wayland, $4. Conquest, $2.50. Edwin Treat, Naples, and Mrs. Sarah Rogers, Syracuse, $2.

Preachers. The following preachers reported their labors for the last quarter:

Brn. Brown (H. H.), Greenman, Miles, Fenn, Vreeland and Low. Adjourned.

Four p. m. Reports continued by Brn. Hobbs, Newell, Moore, Smith, Gove, Sr. Stoddard, Allen, Cogswell and Stevens.

The Secretary presented 200 copies of the "Manual" ordered to be published last session; the expense, $20. Accepted, and the Treasurer directed to pay the bill.

Letters were read from Br. J. H. Luttenton, Carlton, and Mrs. Sarah Rogers, Syracuse. Also communications were received from the Hoosic Valley, and S. New York, and N. Pennsylvania Conferences, declining to assist in a general Campmeeting this season. Wm. E. Brown reported for the Campmeeting committee, recommending a meeting, and the Oak's Corners Camp-ground. Adjourned.

Saturday, Nine a. m. The election of officers being the special order, each successive ballot was voted unanimously as follows:

President—Milton R. Miles, Wolcott.

Vice President—Wm. A. Fenn, Rochester.

Secretary—Wm. E. Brown, S. Butler.

Treasurer—Robert C. Brown, S. Butler.

The old Board of Trustees—D. Cogswell, Dansville; Aaron Biggs, Lockport; John F. Westcott, S. Butler; John S. Beeman, Honeoye; N. T. Withington Springwater; R. C. Simonds, Darien; and N. McCulloch, were unanimously re-elected.

Br. Cogswell, on account of his poor health offered his resignation as director of the New York State Mission Tent, which was accepted. It was then voted that Wm. E. Brown take the position, with full charge the present season. All communications relating to meetings should therefore be addressed to him at S. Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.

Spirit of Business Meetings. There came with the delegation over the Livingston hills "a little cloud like a man's hand," or, with varying proportions as viewed through varied lenses of individual hopes and fears. It was not a cloud "without water," but the rain fell gently, if it wet, and was unaccompanied by any of the characteristic phenomena of storms. Not an incautious word, not a rancorous sentence escaped the lips (we know not the hearts, nor interpret the thoughts—God is judge) of those who felt, some more, and some less keenly, the issues of the session. Perhaps no deliberative body ever met and handled so delicate and important a question of differences, with less manifest feeling on the part of the whole, and with calmer countenances and surer signs of purity of purpose in rendering judgment, than was indicated by this assembly in handling the hydra-headed question called popularly "woman's rights." Under discussion for two previous sessions, it had been referred to this meeting for final action.

At eleven o'clock the essays above mentioned being the special order, Sr. E. S. Jennings was introduced and announced her intention to support the affirmative of the following question: "Do the Scriptures recognize woman as eligible to all the positions in the church that they accord to man?" The essay was well written and occupied three-quarters of an hour in the reading.

Br. Whitmore followed in an exhaustive argument upon the negative. His essay was very elaborately prepared, and showed that much time and ability had been taxed in its production. The reading occupied an hour and some minutes. An intelligent audience of nearly 800 people listened with intense interest and almost breathless attention to both papers. It had been arranged between the essayists that the affirmative should reply in a speech of ten minutes, but this was wholly unknown to the President and others, and no reply being offered, the vote was immediately taken—according to the understanding that there should be no general debate—squarely upon the issue,—"Is the question sustained, yea or nay?" The vote was unanimously nay.

[It is quite improbable in the agitation of such a subject, involving the interest of personal ambition and aspiration, that human judgment will not err in one way or the other, or both, and thus grievances arise. But it is now earnestly hoped that should there exist, as the result of this action of Conference, one single unkind feeling on the part of any single individual, in the Conference or in Church, that it will be banished immediately and forever; that the position taken by Conference, and its right to take such position will be recognized and respected; and that we will continue to prosecute the work in which we have thus far so signally enjoyed the blessings of God, with a closer union, and with renewed zeal and love].

Five p. m. Another session was held at this hour. There was some discussion on the question of Campmeeting which resulted in a resolution to have none this year. The vote standing 16 to 13. A vote of thanks was tendered the good citizens of Springwater for their generous entertainment.

The hour for religious services having arrived, we were obliged to adjourn. But the president called another session at six o'clock Sunday p. m. After some discussion relative to districting the Conference, for want of time to perfect the arrangement, it was voted to remain together another quarter; and finally the reason for districting (viz. the large attendance at our quarterly meetings, making it inconvenient for the churches to entertain them), was urged in support of a general campmeeting in connection with our next quarterly. Br. Low, having voted in the majority before, now moved a reconsideration, which resulted in a strong vote for a campmeeting, and the appointment of an executive committee (before mentioned). Br. Gove recommended to the committee the Fairport Campground.

Br. Vreeland was appointed to deliver the next quarterly address; Br. J. E. Wells his alternate.

Ministers.—The following ministers were present during this Conference, and had their certificates renewed (no charges being preferred against any in the examination of standing) viz. J. H. Whitmore, J. E. Wells, E. F. Sergisson, S. C. Gove, B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, W. A. Fenn, W. Vreeland, C. W. Low, A. C. Newell, J. W. Hobbs, P. A. Smith, D. Cogswell, C. P. Greenman, A. P. Moore, H. H. Brown, Ira Allen and J. W. Taylor.

The following, viz. J. H. Luttenton, C. H. Williams, Wm. Ingmire, C. F. Sweet, Wm. Morrell and J. T. Ongley, were absent, and neither, except the first, reported by letter, as required. They, however, were voted renewed certificates (which are prepared, and may be had by applying to the Secretary.)

Sr. L. M. Stoddard and Sr. E. S. Jennings were present, and were also presented with certificates.

Below is a copy, in which it will be noticed that it differs from the certificate of "a regularly ordained minister," only in the omission of those terms, and those qualifying "to administer the ordinances of the house of God, and solemnize marriages, according to the laws of the State," etc.

To all whom it may concern: This is to certify that Sr. ——, is a licensed preacher in good standing in the A. C. Conference of New York, and she is hereby recommended to the church and to the world, as a teacher of the word worthy of their confidence and sympathy.

Done by order of Conference ——.

The celebration of the Lord's Supper, Sunday afternoon, was a very impressive occasion. It was good to be there. A large company united in commemorating the death upon Calvary, and anticipating the future glorious coming of the crucified but risen Jesus. After the social meeting, Sunday evening, nine or ten rose in the congregation to confess Christ, and as a first step in his service. The meeting had developed such an interest that the pastor of the church, Br. Hobbs, engaged Sr. Stoddard and Br. Smith to remain a few evenings and carry on the meeting. Good results are very promising. Few of us will soon forget the annual meeting at Springwater. Our prayers were answered. To God be all the glory!

Wm. E. Brown, Sec'y.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

e Christian Life,

h may often be learned by close ion to the literal meaning of a on word. Such a word is "con- n." Literally and simply it the turning straight round fro rection to another. If a littl s following a path which is lea n into a tangled and dangero and, in alarm and desire for , turns directly back and retra- steps homewards, this is conver- And if a man, who has been fol- the path of sin, turns decisively opposite direction, saying, "I to my Father, and will say im, I have sinned against heaven fore thee," such a man is con- He was going to hell—he is oing to heaven.

Self-Denial.

ou know what self-denial means? ps this story will help you to un- d it.

morning, as Harry and his pa- ere sitting at the breakfast-ta- arry seemed for a while engaged wn study. Presently he exclaim- 'Father, I have made up my not to eat any more salt mack-

! what has brought you to that sion?" asked his father, with a f earnest inquiry.

cause," continued Harry, "our th-school teacher said we ought e up something, so that we might money to put in the missionary ell, but what has induced my chose salt mackerel as the thing ll give up?" again asked his by," answered Harry, "because rel don't come very often; and t like them very much, anyhow."

, do my young readers think s any self-denial in that? I will u what self-denial is.

le Jenny, who dearly loved , received one just ever so rich beautiful golden color and plump s delicious juice. Instead of eat- , she ran around the corner and t to little Emma, who was sick, hose mother was too poor to buy such luxuries. That was self-en you give away something ou really want, that by so doing ay make another happy; or when ive up something that you are fond of, that you may have y for missionary or other good es, that is self-denial.

us said, "If any man will be my le, let him deny himself."—Car- lone.

Benevolence

evolence consists in the wish or tion to do good. It indicates a al good-will to all mankind. No n or position in life monopolizes r is it limited to any particular t You may be rich or poor, and her case, if you have the disposi- you will find opportunity for its ise. It is not to the rich that t said, "the poor ye have always you," and when you will you do them good.

you improve every occasion of ing a kind word of encouragement, expressing your sympathy to who need it? Kindness, human- nd tenderness are made of benev- e. In its fullest sense it is um of moral excellence. Its high- manifestation is found in God "so loved the world that he gave nly begotten Son, that whosoever veth on him should not perish, have everlasting life."

truly benevolent heart is the of divine grace; and as grace phs in your affections, you will e by the exhibition of this virtue, you are a partaker of the divine re.

e philanthropy of Howard clear- monstrated that he possessed a t in no ordinary degree in sympa- with Christ, so that it may in a fied sense be said of the disciple, the master, "he went about doing l." The names of Wilberforce Clarkson will be had in everlast- remembrance for their unwearied tions in behalf of suffering humanarey, Coke, Judson, and a host of rs, whose hearts of benevolence prompted to the consecration of for the benefit of the degraded and ghted, will not be forgotten while part of our earth is unchristianized. rs. Fry, Harriet Newell, Mrs. Jud- , and many more truly "sisters of rity," show that woman's sympa- ing heart when sanctified by grace shrinks from no danger, or hardship, or suffering, in efforts to do good.

It has been well said, "there are no circumstances or situations in life which preclude the exercise of benevolence." A little maid in the family of the Syrian general was instrumental in the removal of his leprosy, and of acquaintance with the prophet and worship of Jehovah. If you have the will to do, opportunities will not be wanting.

No truly benevolent effort was ever put forth in vain, and none ever will be. You may not live to see the good results of your endeavor, you may not see immediate effects, but as the sunshine and frequent showers cover the earth with beauty, and render it fruitful, so your sympathy and kindness will bless many hearts; and eternity alone will measure the influence of your labor of love.—Zion's Herald.

Christians might avoid much trouble and inconvenience, if they would only believe what they profess, that God is able to make them happy without anything else. They imagine that if such a dear friend were to die, or such and such blessings were removed, they would be miserable; whereas God can make them a thousand times happier without them. To mention my own case. God has been depriving me of one mercy after another, but as one is removed, he has come in and filled up its place. Now, when I am a cripple, and not able to move, I am happier than ever I was in my life before, or ever expected to be; and if I had believed this twenty years ago, I might have beeen spared much anxiety. If God had told me some time ago, that he was about to make me as happy as I could be in this world, and then had told me that he should begin by crippling me in all my limbs, and removing me from my usual sources of enjoyment, I should have thought it a very strange mode of accomplishing this purpose. And yet how is his wisdom manifest even in this!—Dr. Payson.

Conference Minutes

Wisconsin.

ANNUAL MEETING.

We find the following report of the late session of the Wisconsin conference in the Crisis:

The annual meeting was blended with the State campmeeting, held at Prairie du Sac, and held its first business session June 5th, Bro. O. S. Knapp was re-elected as President; P. W. Hough, G. Thomson, and N. A. Hitchcock were appointed as business committee. Also the following committee on ordination was chosen:—W. S. Shears, Wm. Sheldon, G. Thomson, P. W. Hough, and N. A. Hitchcock. Conference doors were opened for the reception of new ministers and churches. The Helena church was added; also the following ministers: Abraham Slocum, Anson Brown Fletcher Ghormley. Reports were heard from the various churches and ministers, partly in person or by delegates, and partly by letter, setting forth a degree of prosperity, interspersed with sectional adversity. The experiment of districting the State for quarterly meetings was satisfactory, and continued. The following brethren were appointed to take supervision of this work for the coming year:—Eastern District, G. Thomson. Western district, P. W. Hough. Southern District, Geo. Howard. The following ministers were ordained:—G. Howard and Philo Hitchcock. Other items of business of a local nature were attended to; but our sessions were short to give time to attend to devotional meetings. The following campmeeting committee was elected for the coming year:—Wm. Sheldon, O. S. Knapp, E. P. Graves, P. W. Hough, T. Barker. The meeting with which this conference was connected was one of special interest—a rich feast.

WM. SHELDON, Sec'y.

Iowa.

MANCHESTER DISTRICT Q. M.

The third Q. M. in this District met at the Odell S. H. June 14. A good representation of brethren and friends from Center Point, Troy, York, Greely, Yankee Settlement, Elk Creek, Elkport, Manchester, Spring Branch, Strawberry Point, and vicinity, Wolf Creek, Cascade, &c. Neither were the people of the place slow to hear; on the contrary they gave the listening ear, and opened their hearts to receive the truth, and their houses to entertain its advocates and friends. And though we were among strangers, we lacked no good thing. And when opportunity was offered they helped us on our way after a godly sort.

We feel assured that the good seed sown will yet bear much fruit to the glory of God. The interest which was good at the beginning increased till the last. One brother said, "It was the most glorious meeting I have ever attended." It was indeed good to be there. Praise God for his goodness!

Br. Isaac Adrian, from Wisconsin, was with us, which added greatly to the interest, and much to our joy; and having ascertained that he would tarry and preach the word in this State, we resolved to send him forth in the name of the Lord with our tent this summer. And right here let me say to the churches and brethren scattered abroad, Br. Adrian is a workman that has handled the sword many years. He knows how to wield it successfully. If you want a meeting of days, write me at once. Direct to Strawberry Point, Iowa, and I will forward your request to him, which will be promptly attended to. Don't delay in this matter. What is done must be done now. Soon it will be said, The summer is ended, the harvest is past, and souls are not saved.

In view of the wants of the cause and the nearness of the judgment, the following resolutions were unanimously passed.

Resolved, That it is the wish of this Q. M. that the tent be put in the field at the earliest possible moment, and we pledge ourselves to bear our part in sustaining meetings and defraying the expenses of said tent.

Resolved, That Br. Adrian be invited to travel with the tent this summer, and have control of the same while under his supervision.

Resolved, That this Conference invite Br. Thurber, of Wisconsin, to be with us at our Annual Meeting in September.

Resolved, That we tender a vote of thanks to the people of this vicinity for their kindness, liberality and good will.

Adjourned to the Annual Conference to be held Sept. 6, and over two Sabbaths. Place will be duly given—probably in the vicinity of Manchester. Meanwhile let every lover of Jesus in the State prepare to be there.

MARTHA J. JAMES, Sec'y.

Missouri.

THIRD DISTRICT Q. M.

The third Q. M. of this Conference met on Friday eve. June 14, in the Presbyterian church, Clinton Co. Mo. Preaching by G. L. McClure, from Gal. 6:9.

Saturday, Conference was opened by President Billmire; the following preaching brethren were present: A. F. Dugger, H. Billmire, J. Scarce, G. L. McClure and E. A. Marsh.

E. D. White was elected Secretary, pro tem.

Visiting brethren were invited to take a seat with us. Br. and Sr. John Hughes, of Davis Co. Mo., and Br. and Sr. Atwood, of Wis., were present, and gave words of cheer.

G. L. McClure reported Ailanthus and Ringold churches to be in a favorable condition. Empire church was reported by H. Billmire to be in a favorable condition. The Philadelphia church was presented by A. F. Dugger for admission, and was received.

The following report was sent to the Secretary: To the brethren assembled in conference in the third district of the A. C. Conference of N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa, greeting: Eld. A. F. Dugger has succeeded in raising the banner of the speedy coming of our Savior, in Saline Co., against a strong current of opposition and much prejudice. A live church of twenty-five members, mostly heads of families, of whom thirteen were received by immersion, has been organized. Nearly all of our meetings have been blessed with some additions. By the Spirit of Christ and Bible in hand we have been able to withstand the persecution. The Lord has given us an open door, and there is a growing interest. The people are anxious to hear the doctrines presented by us as a people. The harvest is truly great, but the laborers are few. We therefore raise the Macedonian cry for help. We are able and willing to support any good man who will come among us and locate here, and spend his time in preaching the word. By the help of God we hope to have a house of worship completed by the fourth Sunday in September. We ask for the prayers of the children of God in our behalf. Our officers are, M. F. Cook and Cornelius Marshall, Elders; Felix Cook and Wm. R. Aulgur, Deacons. M. F. COOK, Clerk.

Report of the Greenland church: Beloved brethren, it is a matter of gratitude to God that he has in his great goodness preserved our lives, and permitted us to meet under such favorable circumstances to confer with each other on those subjects that interest us so much, and to welcome our ministering brethren among us. As regards the interest and general state of the church, we can truthfully say that it is encouraging. On account of not having a suitable house to worship in, and the state of the weather, we have not progressed as fast as we could wish. But are endeavoring to live by the day, and keep up the interest by meeting together often to hear the word, and social meetings, prayer and confessing Christ must not be neglected; we therefore hope to advance in this respect, and have a permanent prayer-meeting established. Br. Marsh, with the assistance of the brethren, organized a Sunday-school, which is in a prosperous condition. Since its organization, May 19, it has been increasing in numbers and interest, and numbers from forty-five to fifty scholars. Br. Marsh supplies us with preaching monthly, and as he has opportunity. Br. Dugger also preaches for us occasionally, and his labors are appreciated. We have a prospect of a number of additions during Conference, and desire the prayers of Christians in our behalf, that God may add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

J. ARNOLD, Clerk.

Saturday, 4 p. m.

Voted, that the written reports be read by E. A. Marsh.

Voted, that the Philadelphia church be admitted into conference.

After motion by Eld. J. F. Nicholson, of the Greenland church, that Br. E. A. Marsh be ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, his letters of recommendation were read to the satisfaction of all present, after which the Conference voted unanimously for his ordination. He was then set apart to the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of hands. Prayer by Eld. H. Billmire; charge by A. F. Dugger.

The Ringold Co. church desired the ordination of Br. John Scarce, and sent a letter of recommendation to that effect. Br. G. L. McClure, with whom he has been laboring for some time past, also recommended him for this great work. He was then set apart by Brn. Dugger and Billmire to the work of the ministry.

Voted, that we hold our next Q. M. with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co. Mo., commencing Friday eve. before the fourth Sunday in September.

The preaching was of an interesting character, and it is hoped will result in much good. Br. J. Scarce spoke to us in the a. m. from Jno. 10:1, and in the p. m. G. L. McClure discoursed from Acts 20:30.

Sunday morning we enjoyed a blessed meeting of prayer and praising God, after which we listened to an interesting discourse from Eld. A. F. Dugger, based on Mat. 25:31. There was a large and interested audience present, and the truth was presented in a most effective manner. Br. E. A. Marsh followed and showed the object of Christ's second coming is to raise the dead and reward the righteous, and judge the world.

We then repaired to the water and three believing souls were buried with Christ by baptism. Two brethren received the right hand of fellowship from the Greenland church.

P. M. services, preaching by Br. Harrison Billmire, from 2 Thes. 1:8. The subject of the destiny of the wicked was presented in his usual effective style, and it is hoped the discourse will do good.

E. D. WHITE, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

New York.

ANNUAL MEETING.

This Conference held its seventh annual meeting with the church at Springwater, June 13-17, 1872. There was a large gathering of brethren and sisters, ministers and delegates, from various sections of the State, Pennsylvania and Canada; probably two hundred from outside the Valley were present.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES.

In some respects we thought this the best meeting we ever attended. The incense of prayer and of rapturous song uprose for three days continuously from that romantic valley in mingled melody of praise. It electrified all hearts, distanced the surrounding hills, scaled the over-lying clouds, and reached the awful presence of him whose eyes are over the righteous, and whose ears are ever open to their cry. And copious showers of grace divine were returned refreshing and watering well the place. We heard the "golden bells," we ate of the parti-colored "pomegranates," and had, indeed, the blest assurance that our High Priest, once dead, is alive, and liveth forever more.

There were four prayer and social meetings during the session, in all of which the time was well improved, chiefly with short and earnest exhortations. The soon coming of Christ, although constantly recognized, was not made the burden of any exhortation, nor yet, (and this is recorded with regret) was it made the subject of a special discourse. There were 175 testimonies given during the morning and evening meetings, Sunday, and frequent songs that made the very valley ring. The preaching, mostly, was was excellent and well timed, had the time of the Advent received its due share of attention. There were eight sermons in all, respectively by Brn. Cogswell, Smith, Low, Miles, Taylor, Sr. Stoddard, and Brn. Whitmore and Fenn.

Business meetings: Friday, 10 a. m. The President in the chair. The Secretary's report read and approved. The Treasurer handed in the following:

March 14, 1872.	On hand	$19.47
" 18, "	Rec'd of Sec'y	55.18	—74.65
" " "	Paid C. M. Booth		30 00
June 14.	On hand		$44.65

R. C. BROWN, Treas.

Committees: Devotional Exercises. Aldrich Wiley, John S. Beeman, and N. McCulloch.

Business: R. C. Brown, A. C. Newell, B. P. Stevens.

Campmeeting: Wm. E. Brown, P. M. Grinnell and S. H. Withington.

Ordination: A. C. Newell, C. W. Low and A. P. Moore.

Br. Newell reported the new church at Le Roy, thirteen members, for admission. Their delegate was received. The election of officers was made the special order for nine, and the essays on the ordination of women, arranged for last session, for eleven o'clock to-morrow.

Reports: Delegates. The following delegates reported and presented the annexed quarterly collections for the Mission Fund: J. Phelan, D. T. Conger and Samuel Wilson, Rochester, $8. C. Pennover, Lockport, $7. Benj. Keith, Dansville, $10. P. M. Grinnel and Henry Hey, East Shelby, $15. O. H. Brown, Honeoye, $4.25. A. Wiley, Springwater, $2.50. C. Andrus, Wolcott, $6. B. C. Simonds, Darien, $5. Sr. St. Clair, Knowlesville, $1.50. R. W. Beardsley, Le Roy, $3. Geo. H. Shaver, Alton, $2.00. Geo. Resterdon, So. Dansville, $4. F. C. Armstrong and A. S. Brown, Loon Lake and Wayland, $4. Conquest, $2.50. Edwin Treat, Naples, and Mrs. Sarah Rogers, Syracuse, $2.

Preachers. The following preachers reported their labors for the last quarter: Brn. Brown (H. H.), Greenman, Miles, Fenn, Vreeland and Low. Adjourned.

Four p. m. Reports continued by Brn. Hobbs, Newell, Moore, Smith, Gove, Sr. Stoddard, Allen, Cogswell and Stevens.

The Secretary presented 200 copies of the "Manual" ordered to be published last session; the expense $80. Accepted, and the Treasurer directed to pay the bill.

Letters were read from Br. J. H. Luttenton, Carlton, and Mrs. Sarah Rogers, Syracuse. Also communications were received from the Hoosic Valley, and E. New York, and N. Pennsylvania Conferences, declining to assist in a general Campmeeting this season. Wm. E. Brown reported for the Campmeeting committee, recommending a meeting, and the Oak's Corners Camp-ground. Adjourned.

Saturday, Nine a. m. The election of officers being the special order, each successive ballot was voted unanimously as follows:

President—Milton R. Miles, Wolcott.

Vice President—Wm. A. Fenn, Rochester.

Secretary—Wm. E. Brown, S. Butler.

Treasurer—Robert C. Brown, S. Butler.

The old Board of Trustees—D. Cogswell, Dansville; Aaron Riggs, Lockport; John F. Westcott, S. Butler; John S. Beeman, Honeoye; N. T. Withington Springwater; B. C. Simonds, Darien; and N. McCulloch, were unanimously re-elected.

Br. Cogswell, on account of his poor health offered his resignation as director of the New York State Mission Tent, which was accepted. It was then voted that Wm. E. Brown take the position, with full charge the present season. All communications relating to meetings should therefore be addressed to him at S. Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.

Spirit of Business Meetings. There came with the delegation over the Livingston hills "a little cloud like a man's hand," or, with varying proportions as viewed through varied lenses of individual hopes and fears. It was was a cloud "without water," but the rain fell gently, as it was, and was unaccompanied by any of the characteristic phenomena of storms. Not an incendious word, not a rancorous sentence escaped the lips (we know not the hearts, nor interpret the thoughts—God is judge) of those who felt, some more, and some less keenly, the issues of the question. Perhaps no deliberative body ever met and handled so delicate and important a question of difference, with less manifest feeling on the part of the whole, and with calmer countenances and surer signs of purity of purpose in rendering judgment, than was indicated by this assembly in handling the hydra-headed question called popularly "woman's rights." Under discussion for two previous sessions, it had been referred to this meeting for final action.

At eleven o'clock the essays above mentioned being the special order, Sr. E. S. Jennings was introduced and announced her intention to support the affirmative of the following question: "Do the Scriptures recognize woman as eligible to all the positions in the church that they accord to man?" The essay was well written and occupied three-quarters of an hour in the reading.

Br. Whitmore followed in an exhaustive argument upon the negative. His essay was very elaborately prepared, and showed that much time and ability had been taxed in its production. The reading occupied an hour and some minutes. An intelligent audience of nearly 300 people listened with intense interest and almost breathless attention to both papers. It had been arranged between the essayists that the affirmative should reply in a speech of ten minutes, but this was wholly unknown to the President and others, and no reply being offered, the vote was immediately taken—according to the understanding that there should be no general debate—squarely upon the issue,—"Is the question sustained, yea or nay?" The vote was unanimously nay.

[It is quite improbable in the agitation of such a subject, involving the interest of personal ambition and aspiration, that human judgment will not err in one way or the other, or both, and thus grievances arise. But it is now earnestly hoped that should there exist, as the result of this action of Conference, one single unkind feeling on the part of any single individual, in the Conference or in Church, that it will be banished immediately and forever; that the position taken by Conference, and its right to take such position will be recognized and respected; and that we will continue to prosecute the work in which we have thus far so signally enjoyed the blessings of God, with a closer union, and with renewed zeal and love].

Five p. m. Another session was held at this hour. There was some discussion on the question of Campmeeting which resulted in a resolution to have none this year. The vote standing 16 to 18. A vote of thanks was tendered the good citizens of Springwater for their generous entertainment.

The hour for religious services having arrived, we were obliged to adjourn. But the president called another session at six o'clock Sunday p. m. After some discussion relative to districting the Conference, for want of time to perfect the arrangement, it was voted to remain together another quarter; and finally the reason for districting (viz. the large attendance at our quarterly meetings, making it inconvenient for the churches to entertain them), was urged in support of a general campmeeting in connection with our next quarterly. Br. Low, having voted in the majority before, now moved a reconsideration, which resulted in a strong vote for a campmeeting, and the appointment of an executive committee (before mentioned). Br. Gove recommended to the committee the Fairport Campground.

Br. Vreeland was appointed to deliver the next quarterly address; Br. J. E. Wells his alternate.

Ministers.—The following ministers were present during this Conference, and had their certificates renewed (no charges being preferred against any in the examination of standing) viz. J. H. Whitmore, J. E. Wells, E. F. Sergisson, S. C. Gove, B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, W. A. Fenn, W. Vreeland, C. W. Low, A. C. Newell, J. W. Hobbs, P. A. Smith, D. Cogswell, C. P. Greenman, A. P. Moore, H. H. Brown, Ira Allen and J. W. Taylor.

The following, viz. J. H. Luttenton, C. H. Williams, Wm. Inguire, C. F. Sweet, Wm. Morrell and J. T. Ongley, were absent, and neither, except the first, reported by letter, as required. They, however, were voted renewed certificates (which are prepared, and may be had by applying to the Secretary.)

Sr. L. M. Stoddard and Sr. E. S. Jennings were present, and were also presented with certificates.

Below is a copy, in which it will be noticed that it differs from the certificate of "a regularly ordained minister," only in the omission of those terms, and those qualifying "to administer the ordinances of the house of God, and solemnize marriages, according to the laws of the State," etc.

To all whom it may concern: This is to certify that Sr.——, is a licensed preacher in good standing in the A. C. Conference of New York, and she is hereby recommended to the church and to the world, as a teacher of the word worthy of their confidence and sympathy.

Done by order of Conference ——.

The celebration of the Lord's Supper, Sunday afternoon, was a very impressive occasion. It was good to be there. A large company united in commemorating the death upon Calvary, and anticipating the future glorious coming of the crucified but risen Jesus. After the social meeting, Sunday evening, nine or ten rose in the congregation to confess Christ, and as a first step in his service. The meeting had developed such an interest that the pastor of the church, Br. Hobbs, engaged Sr. Stoddard and Br. Smith to remain a few evenings and carry on the meeting. Good results are very promising. Few of us will soon forget the annual meeting at Springwater. Our prayers were answered. To God be all the glory.

WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, · · · · · · ILLINOIS

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, July 9, 1872.

A WORD of advice to beginners, either preachers or writers—Don't pick too big a subject!

THE pressure of other matter upon our columns has delayed the publication of "Conference Minutes," and some other matter which we shall soon give our readers.

IT is worth your while to secure a new subscriber for THE TIMES in order to secure for yourself a copy of The Bible Triumphant. And if you have one already, you should remind your friends that they can get THE TIMES for a year, and a half-dollar book for two dollars.

WE are pained to announce the death of Br. David Shankland, of the Indiana Conference, which we learn from the following item in a Chicago paper:

Elder David Shankland, who is well known throughout the Wabash country for his peculiar religious sentiments, and his consistent, godly life, was killed by a runaway last week. He was 80 years old.

—His life was indeed "godly and consistent," and his death will carry a pang of sorrow to many a heart.

ROBERT GRIFFIN Esq., A. B., one of the most distinguished barristers of Dublin, Ireland, has written a work entitled Eternal Agony, A dogma dishonoring to God, Inconsistent with reason, and contrary to revelation. It is printed and published by Hodges, Foster & Co. 104, Grafton St. Dublin, and is priced for mailing to the U. S. at three shillings. It is a book of 128 pages, with sixteen pages of appendix. Both on account of its theological argument, and its introductory autobiographical matter—giving a glance at the intolerance of certain classes of modern dissent—it is well worth attention. The Rainbow for June says of it: "Mr. Griffin's work on Eternal Agony, is a masterly production, written with the precision, lucidity and force which become counsel pleading at the bar." The typography of Mr. Griffin's book is elegant, a matter deserving of note and commendation, even in the midst, or at the conclusion of favorable words for the much more important text.

CONSCIOUSNESS.

It is said that consciousness proves man's spirit and entity. The argument from consciousness is not worth the paper it takes to write it out. If good for anything its operation must be universal. But we am bold to say that no man ever had the consciousness that he was composed of two or more distinct entities. We are conscious that our hands are not our feet; that our thoughts are not our fingers; that our eyes are not our ears. But when one says he is conscious that his mind is a separate entity within himself, and he has a clear sense that he is a dichotomy, he will not be sustained by the popular experience. The notion of the soul as a separate entity is purely the product of a course of reasoning, and not a fact of consciousness.

Moreover, we are told that the spirit is the "conscious part of man." Now are there two conscious parts of man? If not, what is it that is conscious of this "independent self, or spirit?" "We are conscious that its attributes are moral, responsible attributes and consciousness." Was ever such a confusion of thought? "We" are conscious that our spirit is conscious. How can one entity be conscious that another entity is conscious?

If anything is to be proved by consciousness, it must be to prove that the spirit itself is conscious that it is "an existing, independent, abiding, potential self or spirit, different from the organization in which it resides." And whatever hallucinations may have occurred in some minds, we have no hesitation in affirming that no sane human being ever was conscious of being a separate spirit enclosed in a body. When enclosed in a house, room, or box, we are conscious that that which encloses us is no part of us. But the spirit is not conscious of being thus enclosed in the body. We appeal to the consciousness of our readers.

SANCTIFICATION.

All things of great value are a standing temptation to the counterfeiter: it is not strange therefore, that there should be a spurious sanctification passing current and deceiving those who are careless about consulting the great Detector. We believe fully in the genuine article. It is essential to salvation. We have no faith, however, in a sanctification that presses us to sacrifice his holiest convictions as an essential preparation for its reception. Such sanctification is a base counterfeit.

The leaders of the unscriptural sanctification movement now in progress, at one of their campmeetings in California, last season, while inviting people forward to be sanctified, especially rerequested Adventists to keep back seats, unless they left their Adventism behind them at the same moment classing them with Mormons and the like sects. Advertists cannot go forward under such an invitation, or even with a tacit understanding to the same effect without denying the faith. They are invited to smother their persuasions of truth, and repress convictions that ought to be like "fire shut up in their bones" when unseasonably restrained. And sanctification obtained in this way is a spurious kind, and the holder of it would be better off without it.

Attend such "sanctification meetings" if you will; gather some grains of precious truth from among the chaff if you can; add new spirit and strength if any is to be obtained; but do not deny your faith by covert act there, any more than you would by word of mouth elsewhere. And take care too, that your influence does not go to give character to a counterfeit grace.

Sanctification is not a mystificatiion. It is not a grace belonging to a spiritual aristocracy. Every true child of God must be sanctified. There are no exceptions. Any thing less than sanctification implies a divided heart, which God cannot accept. A belief of the truth in the love of it leads to sanctification, and the Bible knows no other way of obtaining the grace. "Sanctify them through their ignoring the truth!" is an extra-Scriptural precept, and is no improvement upon the original: "Sanctify them through the truth!" The former are the words of men floating on a popular current, thrusting reproach upon a despised few; the latter are the words of the Lord of light, life, and glory.

Reader, which will you have: sanctification by ignoring the truth, or by believing, receiving and loving it? A pleasing counterfeit, or a grace that has the ring of the King's genuine coin?

OBITUARIES.

Of notices of deaths, the Crisis remarks:

We must ask those who write obituaries to avoid sending long ones. We should be pleased to publish all that the friends of the deceased desire, but should we do so, there would be much complaint among our readers, excepting when the notice was of one quite widely known. It grieves us to grieve the friends we love by cutting short the obituaries of their friends; but we see no way to avoid this painful part of our work. Sometimes a long piece of poetry accompanies the obituary prepared by some friend, as a tribute to the memory of the deceased; of previous value to the mourning circle, as are all the last sayings of the departed one; but it should be remembered that these are read with interest only by the friends of the one sleeping in death. Then please send us short obituaries, and, as a general rule, omit the poetry. The best sentence to be spoken of the dead, is to be able to say: ——"sleeps in Jesus."

—We heartily second this suggestion: Except in the case of public characters, a page of note paper wil be, usually, sufficient space to devote to an obituary notice.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

MONDAY, June 17. After a busy day in Chicago, I took the cars for the camp-ground, at Jackson, Mich. I arrived at 4 a. m. finding the camp prepared and all right under the excellent arrangements of Br. Snook, aided by Br. Babcock and others. The Fair Ground was offered for our meetings; but the Horse Fair to be held next week interfered, and we were compelled to remove to a new place in the east part of the city. Meetings commenced last Sabbath, and were full and interesting. This evening Sr. Tuttle spoke to a full audience, and so things go on well, in the name and by the blessing of the Lord.

TUESDAY, June 18. At 8 a. m. met in the big Tent on the camp-ground. The conference was called to order, and such committees were appointed as necessary to conduct the meeting in order.

The morning service was a kind of love feast. It was good to be there. Quite a number spoke who had but lately come to the light. One intelligent and talented brother from Assyria, who had been a Spiritist for many years. How bold, how humble and how happy he is. Praise God for victory over error and sin. The Lord keep Br. Quimby in his love.

In the p. m. Eld. Barnhart of Dowagiac spoke on Mat. 19: 27, "We have forsaken all and followed thee. What shall we have?" It was an edifying discourse. Many followed in living testimonies for the truth. At night Br. Bower spoke from Gen. 3: 15. "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." He gave a clear Bible argument to show that Christ would make a conquest of Satan, in the sense of the rescue of God's people, and their inheritance, from his power, and destroy him, with all evil, and from off the universe. I think this is good and wholesome doctrine. It cannot be that Satan and sin, are to be immortalized. And that the innumerable host of the lost are to suffer the misery of an endless life in the flames of Hell! This is not the doctrine of the Jehovah of the Bible.

We have a fair representation of our ministers already here, and the interest is good. Two souls started for the kingdom to-night. The spirit of the Lord is with us.

WEDNESDAY, June 19. The devotional meetings continue good. Br. A. Mackie spoke in the a. m. from Heb. 4: 1. "Take heed lest a promise being left us, any of you sould seem to come short of it." It was a clear logical sermon. "Meat in due season."

In the p. m. Eld. Paton, of Almont, spoke from Rom. 1: 15. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." It was his first sermon before the Conference and replete with interest. He has united with the Conference, and will be a true yoke-fellow.

Many new ones came in to-day, to give interest to our feast. Br. Babcock spoke at night, from 1 Pet. 4: 7—"The end of all things is at hand." There was deep interest to hear the faithful testimony upon the near coming of the Lord. Br. Ferris followed in fitting words of warning and invitation. The day closed in good cheer among the waiting ones.

THURSDAY, June 20. Br. Ferris preached upon the general and special salvation. Br. Hicks followed in a touching appeal to the impenitent.

At night Br. Geo. Wright spoke from Is. 61: 1–3. This was the first time I had heard George preach a sermon. And I do not wonder at his success. He made his subject plain, and interesting to his hearers. Attention is fixed from the beginning to the end. And the sermon is not dragged till the people are weary. Those who hear want to hear again. Would that all speakers could imitate his example.

I made an appeal at the close, to the unconverted, but none came out on the Lord's side, though there was much and deep conviction.

FRIDAY, June 21. The Conference occupied the entire morning. Among other matters, one of much importance came up, on the subject of education. A favorable door seemed to be opened for the establishment of a Seminary of learning in the West. And so the Conference seized upon the idea, and advantage offered them, and arranged to secure the advantage. The unanimity with which this matter was disposed of somewhat supprised me. The ministers and delegates were united in the matter.

At the close of the morning session, Br. Whitmore and many others arrived, giving good cheer. Salutations and hand shaking were hearty. We were more than glad to see each other. Br. Whitmore brought us good news from the New York Conference. He gave us a good discourse in the p. m. from Lk. 20: "They that are accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, shall die no more." He gave us a rich treat. It was a keen, cutting argument against the Sadducees, and Pharisees. The keenest points were made against the immaterialists who contend the shades of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are now existing in a ghostly condition in some unseen state, showing the unscriptural character of this position. He laid before us the plan of redemption through Christ in the resurrection to eternal life. At the close an host testified for the truth.

I spoke in the evening from Acts 26: 27–29. "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Deep interest, and one came out for God and truth. Our meeting is progressing finely.

SATURDAY, June 22. Br. L. C. Collins, and Wm. L. Himes arrived, cheering all hearts. They had been detained a day or two. But all were glad to see them, though late.

At 6 a. m. we had our ministerial Conference. In this meeting we deal kindly and faithfully with each other so as to inspire the greater confidence. Our purpose is, to act together as faithful watchmen, and pastors in all good fidelity and union, and so operate and build up the cause in unity and health.

At 11 a. m. Sr. Robey Tuttle, of Charlotte, Mich., spoke to us, and spoke well. I had never heard her until today. I am glad that I have heard her, that I say a good word in her behalf, I commend her to the churches. She will do them good.

Br. Preston, followed in interesting remarks, closing the morning service.

In the p. m. Br. Collins spoke on the Parable of the Nobleman. (Lk. 19.) As Adventists, he said we are to occupy till the Nobleman shall return. He gave us sound instruction. The sermon made a deep impression on all. This visit of Br. C. has been like the coming of Titus, reviving and cheering us all. In the course of his sermon he mentioned his gratitude that he had been thrown out from the M. E. Church into the great mission field to proclaim the coming of Christ, and help prepare a people for this glorious event. He is with us, and deeply interested in all that pertains to the best interests of the Adventist cause. Thank God for such men.

At night Br. Preston spoke from 2 Pet. 3: 11—"Seeing you look for such things, what manner of persons ought ye to be." At the close Br. Wright and seven or eight of our young ministers sang very sweetly—"There is rest over there," and so closed the week of religious service. It has been indeed a blessed week. We have had sweet toil, sweet cares, and sweet trials! All have been blessed to us, alike. Joy and sorrow, have been made to work for good. God doeth all things well.

SUNDAY, June 23. Our first service was a love-feast. It was one of the best of such meetings. Hence the heart gives vent to its deep feeling of joy, and love. One hundred and eleven gave their testimony in the hour. And a number of unconverted gave themselves to God. Father Harding, of the Buchanan church, now the oldest member, upwards of eighty years old, was first in the work. In all human probability he may not meet with us again. But he is all ready for any change.

At half past ten, Br. Collins spoke from John 17: 17—"Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." He showed that the views of Bible truth held by the Adventists were sanctifying in their tendency, and, held consistently, must lead to a holy life. In all the great doctrines of grace he said we argue with the orthodox. We differ on the personal coming of Christ, the sleep of the dead, the resurrection, and the new earth, and reign of the saints. But these neglected doctrines are apostolic, and orthodox is the true and best sense, and have the best tendencies toward piety and purity.

In the p. m. Br. J. H. Whitmore, spoke from Lk. 9: 23–25—"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose himself, and be a castaway." He gave the subject a thorough examination. He showed clearly that the sinner loses himself. The penalty of sin is not eternal life in suffering, but eternal loss of existence, of self. He "loses himself!" He showed the terrible result of a sinful life, The loss of life, the loss of being, the loss of eternal blessedness in the kingdom of God. This discourse made a deep impression.

At 5 p. m. we held a session of conference and received a new loborer, Br. Darrow, who had been baptised at noon, with others, by Br. Babcock. In the course of the meeting, kindly feelings were expressed towards Br. A. N. Seymour, who on account of his views and feelings in which he differed widely from the Conference, had withdrawn. The best feelings towards him were manifested.

There is no need of strife, or division among Christian men. When we have honest differences, or when we have aught against another, if we go to him, or them, and settle it between ourselves "alone," in accordance with the Savior's rule, in Mat. 18: 11, all may be, and generally is made right.

At 4 p. m. Br. Hicks gave some account of his conversion from the life of a gambler and showman, to Christ. The tent was crowded, and at times while he was speaking there was hardly a dry eye in the audience. Br. Hicks is now a successful preacher of the gospel.

At half past seven Wm L. Himes gave a sermon on the personal coming of Christ, giving a pointed, clear and sharp defense of our hope, with some keen thrusts at opposing views, interspersed with earnest practical appeals.

MONDAY, June 24. Our Campmeeting is over, and its work is done. We took leave of Br. Snook and family, and Br. Blodgett, with whom we had put up. They showed us, and all that came to their hospitable home (near the camp), "no little kindness." And during the meeting both of them gave their hearts to God. May they be greatly blessed in the Lord.

In the p. m. took the cars for Lockport, N. Y. Here we visited relatives, and Br. and Sr. Stoddard, who have the care of the church here. The Lord is with them, and their labors are blessed to this dear people. We enjoyed pleasant interviews with Brn. Mormon, Reed and others of our cherished friends of years standing. How sweet and precious these old friendships.

My call on Br. Riggs was a sad one. He had just laid away his estimable wife, Frances, who died June 6, 1872, aged 54 years. She was taken away suddenly, but was ready, full of faith and hope. She spoke to all of the importance of living near to God, and of being ready for the kingdom. She embraced the faith in 1842, at our first tent meeting in Rochester, and has been faithful to the last hour of life. Br. R. and family are deeply afflicted; yet the blessed hope of seeing the loved one in the resurrection is a solace in this hour.

I had seasons of song and prayer at night with afflicted ones and others. This being one of my old fields of labor, I find many old and dear friends who have words of cheer for me. This is comforting, amid the trials incident to public life, in which the best men have enemies, who are often sharp and bitter. I mean always, also, to have a word of cheer for all within my reach. No heart is made glad without increasing my joy, or sad without giving me sadness. It is an apostolic injunction "to weep with those that weep, and to rejoice with those that rejoice." And I thank God that I find it in my heart to obey.

WEDNESDAY, June 26. Took leave of dear ones in Lockport, and came to Titusville, Penn., via Buffalo. We had only an hour in Buffalo. Once we had a flourishing church here, but it has been scattered. Only a small remnant remain. At noon we came into the celebrated "oil region," and at Corry took the Oil Creek R. R. and came winding through valley and over hill in a fashion which seemed almost marvellous, it being a very rough country. But this being the only outlet for the treasures found in the depths of the earth (the rivers of oil), a railway became a necessity, and hence it was constructed at great expense. Previously all the oil had to be transport- by teams at great expense. But now the railway has become a monopoly, that has been, and still is very displeasing to the people who are unable to help themselves. The tariff on the twenty-eight miles of this road has been as high as all the rest of the way to New York. Such is the selfishness of man.

On arrival at Titusville I went directly to the residence of Mr. A. E. Dodge, late of St. Paul. We were very warmly greeted, and cared for, though Sr. D. was absent. We found Br. Dodge in health and prospering. He with his family are quite alone in the town as to their faith. They feel quite lonely in this respect, and long for religious privileges. They are Adventists. Since he has been here he has had a call from Br. Ougily, who resides in this region; but except this he has had no one to speak a word of cheer. Our call was to him "like the coming of Titus."

Titusville has now become a city of several thousand inhabitants, and has all the different sects, enjoying their usual prosperity; but complaints of the want of religious power prevail. Show and fashion are prevalent, but the humble religion of Jesus does not prevail. The world is first and last with most. All are grasping for wealth, and the "oil wells" are the principal subjects of interest.

In 1849 gold was discovered in Coloma, Cal., which moved the continent. In 1859 oil was discovered in this town which has moved the world. The elements of enterprise and power have been called into action, and since the discovery of the first well here in 1859, [illegible]s than ten thousand have been [illegible]onsuming millions of capital, fro[illegible] wh[illegible] ome have made fortunes, and others have lost all and become poor. This entire wild region, or Oil Creek, has been dotted with wells, and has been covered with towns, cities and railroads.

Some of these wells have poured out as many as 3,000 barrels of oil in a day, making their owners immensely rich. Others have yielded from five hundred down to fifty, and many little or nothing. It has been much like a lottery, or prospecting for gold. Many fail.

Many of these wells, failing to flow, operators have lately gone to Clarion, Venango, and Butler counties, in the vicinity of Parker's landing. The excitement in an oil region continues from one to two years. In this county and on the Creek, operations to some extent have been suspended for a time. But there is a backward movement. And the old wells are being opened, and new ones sunk, some of which are yielding handsome returns. And so the oil men are looking for better times again. Some of these wells, in times past, have poured forth an incredible amount of gas. Mr. Windsor, an old settler here, told m[illegible] one which took fire, and sent [illegible] to the hight of fifty feet [illegible] six months. At night the wh[illegible] region was light as day, and the atmosphere was kept so warm that the trees budded and leaved out in the winter, in the vicinity of the well. Any attempt to close it for a time failed. The force of the gas and flame was irresistible.

Within a few days a well six miles from Titusville, on the Nelson Farm, has poured forth such a volume of gas that it has been impossible to work the well. The edition of the Titusville Courier says of this well:

The tubing was pulled Wednesday and was cased in order to let the gas blow off, so that it might be pumped. After the casing was put in, the sand pump was put in for the purpose of agitating the well, and the gas raised a column of water, throwing a solid stream into the air a hundred feet. The noise was terrific and could be heard a distance of more than two miles. The noise was something like the loud roar of thunder, and when the column burst at the top it threw the water each way for fifteen rods from the well. The water was exhausted in about twenty-five minutes, and then a column of gas followed, rising with tremendous force fifty feet above the derrick. The outpouring of the gas makes a roaring noise that can be distinctly heard two miles from the well. The noise sounds like the rushing of a whirlwind. The column can be seen a mile from the well. No tools can be put into the well. As soon as the attempt is made, with such force does the gas come out, that the tools are carried into the air. From descriptions of eye witnesses this is probably the greatest well ever struck in the oil region. Up to last evening the gas showed no signs of being exhausted. The people in that vicinity are very much alarmed, and the cattle run about the field perfectly wild with fright. Great care should be taken that fire is not communicated to this column of gas, for if any number of people should happen to be in the immediate vicinity, a repetition of the celebrated Rouseville disaster might take place.

THURSDAY, June 26. We took leave of Br. Dodge this a. m., and came by rail down Oil Creek to Rynd Farm, some twelve miles. We had a good view of the immense oil tanks, and derricks, old and new wells, all the way. They could be numbered by the thousand. I was not prepared to see such a number of wells or immense iron tanks for the oil. The hills and the valleys were literally covered. On the way Mr. Windsor showed us the old flowing well, that years ago yielded 3,000 barrels a day. It is now quiet. In those days, a well that did not flow from twenty to fifty barrels a day, was thought nothing of; but now, if they can pump from five to ten barrels they think it pays, although the crude oil only brings about $4.00 a barrel.

These wells are from six to twelve hundred feet deep. They have to penetrate the third Sand Rock, which is said to contain the oil. The hard rock contains none. A well costs from five to eight thousand dollars. As the first gold in California was in the mill race of Col. Sutter, so the first oil on Oil Creek was found in what is now Titusville. The oil first appeared on the surface, and from this a well was sunk that poured forth abundance. Then thousands of wells were sunk, not only here, but Canada, and in many parts of the world. And now, petroleum is the principal light for domestic and other purposes, the best and the cheapest light, except day light, for man.

On our arrival at the Rynd Farm, Mr. Patten took us to Capt. I. Hardy's residence, via Rave City, some three miles up the mountain, where I found him living on a beautiful farm, for so wild a region, and with every comfort. We had been separated some ten years. Age has made its mark upon us all. Our meeting was an affecting and a joyful one. Mrs. Himes is the youngest sister in the family. The oldest brother, Walter, is dead, and the older sister, Mrs. Borden, is living still in Buchanan. Mrs. Himes meets here her only two brothers. And I, for a wonder, have a few days that I can spend with relations, though in the time I hope to have some direct work for the Master.

A Queer Little Fellow.

Isn't it a queer little fellow who knows every thing as soon as he's born, and builds a house for himself before he's one day old?

Every thing about him is curious. To begin with he lives at the bottom of a pond or river. At first he was nothing but a tiny atom of green egg, stuck to the stem of some weeds under the water. After a while the egg burst open, out crawled Mr. Worm, and proceeded at once to look for building materials.

You see, except his head and neck, which are protected by a hard covering, he is a soft little worm, and he wouldn't live long in the same pond with fish, and bugs, and spiders, who have nothing to do but to eat, and are always hungry, unless he had a safe home.

So, of course, he goes the first thing to building.

There are several branches of the family, and they all build droll little houses, though they're not all alike. One of them hunts up two dead leaves and glues them together in such a way as to leave a nice cozy home between them. It's perfectly safe; for who would suspect an old dead leaf as being anybody's house?

Another of the family builds of stems of grass, cut off and fastened together side by side, till they look like a bundle of straw.

A third member of this interesting family wants a more elegant house, so he takes tiny atoms of shells, often with the owner inside, glues them together, and lives in a shell house.

Others use grains of sand, and tiny stones. In fact there seems no end to the different things these industrious little fellows find to build of.

No sooner is the house done than Mr. Worm moves in. He don't have to wait for painters and furniture men—happy fellow! He just goes in and fastens himself there by means of a pair of hooks he has at the end of his tail, and then he's ready to live.

The next thing is something to eat. So he starts off, taking his house with him, to hunt up some bits of green stuff, or some atom of a worm smaller than he is.

But strange things happen to this bit of a worm at the bottom of the pond. His life is full of wonderful adventures. If he was bigger, he'd be the wonder of the world.

After eating as much as he can, —stuffing himself, in fact,—Mr. Worm thinks it's time to retire from the gay world; so he finishes his house, by hanging before it a silk door,—no loose curtain, but a tightly-woven net-work which he spins and fastens carefully on every side.

Now, whether he goes to sleep in his comical little house, or what he does, nobody knows, because nobody can peep in, you know. But something goes on there in the dark; for after awhile the little prisoner opens the door, comes out of his house, crawls up the stem of some weeds till he is out of water, and then—you'd never guess what happens!

Why, his old skin splits open, and he pulls himself out,—no longer a miserable little worm, but a gorgeous four-winged Caddice-fly, dressed in a neat suit of brown. And he cares no more for the bottom of the pond, and his old straw or shell house. He sails off in the air, a gay, dancing fly.

You know, I told you he was rather greedy when he lived in the little house down under the water. Well, I think he was not so much to blame for eating as much as he could, after all; for what he had then was the last mouthful he ever ate.

You can hardly believe it, but you would in a minute if you could see him with the help of a microscope. For, with all his four gauzy wings, and splendid great eyes, he has no mouth.

Of course, he has'nt the least desire to eat. He just flies over the water, or runs about on it, as, no doubt, you've often seen him, for a few hours, and then dies—of old age.

Before the Mamma Caddice-fly dies, however, she is careful to go down under, and glue her odd little green eggs to some water plant, so that they will be sure to hatch out into soft little worms, such as she was herself before she got her wings.

And these little creatures, who have such wonderful lives, are not an inch long.—Chris. Union.

A Good Word for Church Papers.

The New York Times says you might nearly as well forget your churches, academies and schoolhouses, as to forget your church paper. It speaks to ten times the audience that your local minister does, and if it has any ability at all, it is read eagerly each week from beginning to end. It reaches you all, and if it has a lower spirit and less wisdom than a sermon, it has a thousand times better chance at you. Lying as it does, open on every table, in almost every house, you owe it to yourselves to rally liberally to its support and exact from it as able, high-toned a character as you do from any educator in your midst. It is in no sense beneath notice and care—unless yourselves are beneath notice and care—for it is your representative. Indeed, in its character it is the summation of the importance, interest and welfare of you all. It is the aggregate of your consequence, and you cannot ignore it without miserably depreciating yourselves.

Theory Versus Practice.

In a certain College in which the Rev. Dr.———' a Presbyterian minister, was the Professor of Greek, there was a quizzical genius of a student, whose name we will call Newlet. Now, it happened that the reverend Doctor became seriously exercised in his mind by the thought that most of the people in the community entirely misunderstood the meaning and the use of, that much persecuted Greek work, baptizo, and he accordingly undertook to enlighten the natives by preaching a series of sermons on baptism. Newlet attended regularly on the ministration of his learned Professor, and in the course of two or three Sundays was pretty well dosed with the statement that baptizo really meant to sprinkle or to pour and not to plunge. But in the course of the regular lessons in the classroom of the College, Newlet was one day called upon to translate a passage from one of the Greek authors. The passage gave an account of a man who became so enraged at another, that he seized a red-hot poker and ebaptize eis ophthalmon. Newlet, with a mischievous twinkle of the eye, but with a grave manner, translated it thus: He seized a red-hot poker and sprinkled it in his eye." "How is that?" said the reverend Professor. "He sprinkled it in his eye," repeated Newlet. "But," said the Doctor, "that word does not mean to sprinkle." "Well, sir, it did mean sprinkle on last Sunday night," replied the mischievous fellow amid suppressed laughter from the class, who keenly relished the joke. The Professor looked grave, was silent a moment, and then remarked, "You may translate it plunge here, sir."—Evangel.

"Five Pizen Pints."

An elder in the church, now dead and sleeping in Jesus, had come in the process of his investigation of Bible truth to consider some of the things popularly held as truth to be exactly the opposite, and only false. Having become settled, rooted and grounded in the belief, he boldly proclaimed his faith. The friends of other days forsook him. The church excommunicated him, and the people, to whom he preached, except a few, who would not go with him—but he still proclaimed his faith like an honest, God-fearing man. One of his old friends, a staid deacon, met a nephew of the elder, a while after he died, when the following conversation occurred:—

Bro. Q. "Your uncle used to be a good man. He was converted to God and ran well for a while; but he got hold of them five pizen pints and they ruined him." One would think that "five pizen pints" would be enough to [illegible] any man so fearfully ruinous, that it might be desirable to know what they were, and so we will state them. They were:—

1st. Man is unconscious in death.
2d. The wicked will be destroyed.
3d. The advent of Jesus near at hand.
4th. The kingdom of Christ to be a literal kingdom on the earth.
5th. Jesus Christ "the Son of the living God."

Perhaps the reader may fail to discover anything very "pizen" about them, being able to find abundant Scripture proof to sustain the elder; but that would not satisfy the deacon, as encompassing a doctrine about with Scripture is exceedingly meagre evidence for some people, who would give more for a cherished opinion, than they would for all the Bible in the world, uninterpreted by their philosophy. We can say for ourself, personally, however, that we heartily endorse "them five pizen pints."—L. C. McKinstry, in Crisis.

New Postal Regulations.

James H. Marr, Acting First Assistant Postmaster General, has published the following concerning the rates to be charged on third class printed matter:

On all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, magazines, hand-bills, posters, unsealed circulars, prospectuses, book-manuscripts, proof-sheets, corrected proof-sheets (passing between author and publisher), flexible patterns, sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes and wrappers, cards (plain and ornamental), paper, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions. a postage of one cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, on packages to one address, to be prepaid by postage stamp affixed. On all books (other than those printed by order of Congress) postage at 2 cents for each two ounces or fractions thereof—limited to four pounds in weight. On samples of merchandise, metals, ores and mineralogical specimens, two cents for each two ounces or fractions thereof—packages limited to twelve ounces in weight; see sections 133 and 113 in the enclosed printed slip. The rates of postage to foreign countries with which postal conventions have not been concluded are as follows: When the matter is forwarded by vessels regularly employed in transporting the mails—For letters, 10 cents per single rate of one-half ounce or under; newspapers, 2 cents each; pamphlets, periodicals, books, and other printed matter, 2 cents per each two ounces or fraction thereof. The single rate on the last-mentioned class of postal matter has been heretofore four ounces, but is now reduced to two ounces.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, divided into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cisterns; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story [illegible].

[illegible] Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries, Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House [illegible] Near two Railroads [illegible] and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

30 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable [illegible]. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to [illegible]

Address: [illegible] HIMES, [illegible] West Lake St., Chicago, Ill., or [illegible], Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

WANTED,
AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any [illegible] without cutting or notching the casing in the least and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or [illegible] the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, mortising or boring required to adjust [illegible] to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing [illegible] for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(36tf) Box 18, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

The Estey Organ.—Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, of the [illegible] pattern, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Poetry.

Till He Come.

"Till he come."—Oh! let the words
Linger on the trembling chords;
Let the little while between
In their golden light be seen;
Let us think how heaven and home
Lie beyond that "Till he come."

When the weary ones we love
Enter to their rest above,
Seems the earth so poor and vast,
All our life-joy overcast?
Hush! be every murmur dumb;
It is only—till he come.

Clouds and conflicts 'round us press,
Would we have our sorrow less?
All the sharpness of the cross,
All that tells the world is lost,
Death and darkness and the tomb
Only whisper, "Till he come."

See, the feast of love is spread!
Drink the wine, and break the bread;
Sweet memorials—till the Lord
Call us around his heavenly board;
Some from earth, from glory some,
Severed only—till he come.

—Bickersteth.

Little Things.

Little bees with nimble wing
Sweetness from the flowers bring,
And with patient toil and skill,
They the hive with honey fill.

Little ants with frugal care
For their future wants prepare;
Day by day they lay in store,
Till their rooms will hold no more.

Little worms by instinct led,
Finely spin a silken thread,
Which the merchant sells with pride
To adorn some lovely bride.

Little hands can something do
Other's paths with flowers to strew,
And sweet comfort may impart
To some lonely widowed heart.

Little tongues may speak a word
For the honour of the Lord,
And with cheerful hearts may sing
Praises to our heavenly king.

—Dalrymple.

Communications.

Grace Given.

"The Lord will give grace and glory." (Ps. 84; 11.)

Oh! happy day, when this toilsome warfare will all be ended, and the rough waters of Jordan's bleak, cold stream shall be entered, Canaan just before us, the legion enemies of the wilderness no longer feared, sorrow and pain no longer felt or dreaded!

> "There we shall see his face and never, never sin.
> There from the rivers of his grace, drink endless pleasures in."

There, my dear pilgrim, is one more heavenly gain—rest, rest forever!

> "On the other side of Jordan,
> In the sweet fields of Eden,
> Where the tree of life is blooming,
> There is rest for you."

It is well that he gives it to us: We have no purchase price to pay; and could not pay if we would. "The Lord will give us grace." So, we can approach that source of supply, which is neither exhausted nor diminished by bestowing, repeating these words:"

> "In my hands no price I bring, > Simply to thy cross I cling."

Far better than if we were to come as did one, "I thank thee, that I am not as other men are!" No place for the bigot. He will give strength for the race, and a crown at the end of it; everything needed for life and death; and then a crown of fadeless glory in the world of light—in the kingdom and city of God!

We, like rills, running to the river, and on to the ocean, rush down the declivity, sometimes leaping from the high crag, to the deep chasm, then murmuring along the solitary channel of life, until we make one final leap, and that is in the dark chasm, from which we find no respite or escape until, "A voice from heaven shall pierce the tomb," awakening all who slumber there. "He will give grace!" What we can do we will! That which we cannot, by his grace he does for us. It is sufficient for us to know that he has promised! "The Lord will give us grace!" That principle so much needed to meet the actualities of Christian life with patience, perseverance, and courage.

Now he will give you grace, and a crown at his coming and kingdom.

J. A. Newton.

Is it this World?

Is it proper or strictly scriptural to claim this kosmos, is given to the saints? Perhaps not. Why? Reason first;—The word kosmos primarily means order, regularity; and is synonymous with the Latin mundus, and then it used in a transferred sense to denote the "world or universe from its perfect arrangement." It includes ges, earth, thalassa, sea, and ouranos heaven, and whatever is included in either of these, if we mistake not, it is thus used 185 times out of 186 times found in our New Testament, and in 1 Cor. 7: 31 it is said its "fashion form, outward appearance, condition—passeth away." We do not strive for a world that will pass away.

Secondly. There is no promise in the N. T. of the saints ever obtaining this world as an inheritance. Rom. 4: 13 comes the nearest to an argument in favor of it, but recollecting that the article "the" is not in the original, and reading it "a" world we shall perhaps more readily get the scriptural idea: it is a future world, kosmos.

Thirdly. The promises are mainly in reference to ges: "the meek shall inherit ges: land, soil—Latin terra: this ges—earth, land, is to be melted and purified made new, as well as the heaven, the sea thalassa is to be no more; then will begin a new kosmos or order which will be unchangeable, ges, earth, not being destroyed, but abiding the fires and still abiding in a purified condition the resting place of God's people.

I want to stand on earth made new, when God shall in very deed dwell with men on the earth. "Oh! the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God." "For of him and through him, and to him are all things: to whom be glory forever. Amen."

L. F. Cole.

"Personal Pre-Existence."

(Second Article.)

Jesus seems often to tantalize the Jews intentionally, on account of their obstinacy and hypocrisy, with expressions which must be qualified or explained to be understood, but which they took literally. For instance, he said, "If he a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." They answered, "Now we know thou hast a devil. Abraham and the prophets are dead; art thou greater than they?" Jesus replied, "Abraham rejoiced to see my day; AND HE SAW IT [of course prophetically] and was glad." But they answered, "thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" Jesus did not say that, neither could he, truthfully, but only replied, "Before Abraham was I am;" and had they understood the prophets relative to the promised seed they would not have misunderstood him. Again, after he had driven them out of their beautiful temple with a scourge, overthrown the tables of the money-changers, &c., when they asked of him a sign as legalizing his suddenly assumed authority, he answered them: "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up?" And this was one of their railing accusations which they quoted, deriding him, while he hung upon the cross. And then his sayings—"Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of man, ye have no life in you;" "What if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" "He that hath seen me hath seen the," &c., as also his parables, the Jews from pride and prejudice, and from a rigid literality which they applied to all his sayings, failed entirely to comprehend.

3. How your second fact, that "though he was rich yet for our sakes became poor," of itself warrants your conclusion, I cannot conceive. For certainly the statement is most beautifully illustrated in the life-history of Jesus of Nazareth.

While it is emphatically true that in voluntarily accepting our position of poverty and suffering, for our sakes, he had not where to lay his head, but was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, bore our sorrows and carried our griefs: at the same time, paradoxical as it may seem, he was rich: (1) In Knowledge: knowing the secret thoughts of man and also the mind and will of God. (2) In Wisdom: perceiving the craftiness of Satan and comprehending the righteousness of God, he put to silence the ignorance of foolish men and confounded the learned doctors and lawyers with his questions and answers.

(3) In Grace: not receiving the spirit of God by measure or limitation; (4) In power: not for himself, but for others, and to prove his Sonship, he turned water into wine, fed the thousands with a few loaves and fishes, healed the lame, cured the sick, raised the dead. He commanded the fish and they brought him tribute money; he rebuked the winds, walked upon the waters, and cast out devils; he scourged the money-changers, and overturned their tables; he rode the untamed colt; and the stones would immediately have cried out had not the people sung—"Hosanna in the highest;" and had he asked his Father more than twelve legions of angels would have come to his aid in his sorrows. (5) In that he was the acknowledged Son of God and the "appointed heir" of all things. All these, which are the true riches of knowledge, wisdom, grace, power, and divine dignity of parentage, character, and heirship, JESUS OF NAZARETH offered in royal humility at the altar of humanity, while for thirty years he abode in the gloom-shadowed vale of sacrifice;—sorrowed with the sorrowing, having no self-cause for sorrow; wept with the weeping, having no self-cause for tears; wearied by the way, hungered in the desert, tempted by Satan, when he might have commanded chariots and bread from either Jerusalem, and sent the devils into lakes either of water or flame. And besides, in all this he is but the pattern of all the "ministers of God, in much patience, in affliction, in necessities, in distress"...."as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing. as poor, yet making many rich, as having nothing, yet possessing all things.

2. In regard to your third fact—"God[?] was manifested in the flesh"—th evidence is against it, as being of Trinitarian origin purely. The same spirit that coined that noted interpolation, 1. John 5: 8; added "by Jesus Christ" to Eph. 3: 9; "of Christ" to 1 Pet. 1: 11; (as I have not the least doubt, even in the last, and several other passages I do not mention,) and so rendered, Heb. 1: 2—as to convey the idea of Christ's assistance, as an intelligence, in the creation of the worlds; was either censurably ignorant of, or wickedly indifferent to these facts: (1.) In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the word was [from] God... And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us. (John 1: 1, 14.) (2) "Whose goings forth [a phrase not applicable to an intelligence, but to the word] have been from of old, from everlasting." (Mic. 5: 2.) The margin gives "days of eternity," which certainly is prior to the Sonship." (3) Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." (Heb. 11: 3.) And, "by the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hosts of them by the breath [word] of his mouth.... for he spake and it was done; he commanded and it stood fast." (Ps. 33: 6-9.)

[[illegible] on account of whom also the ages [illegible] he made.—Emph. Dia.]

But whether, ignorant, indifferent, or interested, I can hardly conceive how even such a spirit could so mutilate 1 Tim. 3: 16, as to put God, the Eternal, the "invisible" into visibility! clothed with flesh! no wonder the "mystery of the fifteenth verse is transferred to the sixteenth. It is noticeable even from the common version that the "mystery of godliness" has reference to the statement of the previous verse. "Godliness" is one of the Christian graces, and the "great" importance of it is the occasion of Paul's anxious solicitude for Timothy, that he might learn this "secret of piety;" (Diaglott) or in his own words "know how to behave himself in the house of God." Nearly all the ancient Mss., and all the versions have 'he who' instead of 'God' in this passage."—Emph. Dia. And it is abundantly evident that each distinct specification of this verse pertains only to Jesus of Nazareth, the real and acknowledged Son, and appointed heir of God. Notice: "What was it that was justified in spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory?" That only that "was manifested in the flesh;" and is there a Sunday school scholar in the land that would not say that it was Jesus? And Jesus was 'very' son of God and 'very' Son of Mary, and twelve years old when he went up to Jerusalem.

I submit the above thoughts to your candid consideration. I do not understand they detract in the least from the true dignity of Jesus as the Savior of the world, scripturally considered. At the same time, the force of education makes it almost sacrilegious to think of him in this way to some, very much as it does to the poor Catholic to speak of the Virgin Mary in any other way than as "Mother of God!" And yet to me every text of Scripture on this point harmonizes with this view.

Correspondence.

From J. S. Lawver.

A word through the TIMES for the encouragement of the brethren and sisters with regard to the glorious work in this part of God's moral vineyard. Br. Childs and myself are preaching in the surrounding country, and we find that the TIMES, with the tracts that come from the same office are entirely revolutionizing public opinion. Br. Childs is doing a noble work in Johnson Co. He is in earnest, and is heart and hand in the work. I depend principally on scattering the TIMES and tracts—the seed every where I go;—and the Bible is gaining many friends through their blessed instrumentality. I am afraid that we idle many hours away, and many dollars are wasted for "gift enterprises" "jewelry," "switches," fine apparel, etc., that ought to go for the TIMES and tracts to herald abroad the true nature of man and the speedy coming of the blessed Master. This life is not the life to spend in luxury and idleness. What would you think if your hands were to put on the finest apparel to work in? So the Master wants us to work while it is called today, clothed in modest apparel, with shame-facedness and sobriety, with meekness and longsuffering.

Pray for us.

From S. C. Wellcome.

During my tour in the Western part of this State I baptized seven persons, and organized one church at Lemont, near Owatonna, Br. E. K. Smith, of Owatonna, is Deacon, and Br. Chas. Fitzsimmons, Clerk. The prospect is good for a glorious work in that vicinity. Many are stirred up to search for truth; and the few brethren that have come out, are of the right stamp to succeed, with God's help, and will let their light shine. I buried three with Christ in the Strait River.

I also met with the church at Medo, who are still striving to live for the kingdom. At Freedom, near Medo, I preached six times. The Lord blessed the word, and I buried four with Christ in baptism, and seven will be added to the Medo church from that place, and perhaps more. At other points we had seasons of interest and the people are hungry for the word of life. At Kasota the church is prospering, and five souls have been added since their organization. At Shelbyville we have no organization, although there are a number of believers who rejoice in the truth, and I am in hopes they will come out in duty to unite in church capacity.

God bless all these little bands, and give us more shepherds to feed them, is my prayer. I never saw such a need of help as at the present time.

From J. L. Glick, Sheffield, Ill.

I came to Bureau Co. in April to keep school and try to preach. I am privileged each Sabbath with meeting Advent brethren, most of whom are poor in this world's goods, but, I have reason to believe, heirs of that kingdom whose king shall wipe away all tears from his subject's eyes, and give them eternal life. There are several persons here who have embraced the truth and would unite with us, but they are forbidden to do so under pain of being driven from their paternal roof. The threat is made by parents professing to be Christians. The church here want help of Br. Clark. I hope they may succeed in obtaining his services. I preach twice each Sunday, and the Lord graciously blesses me. I feel that I never before enjoyed such a clear conscience and so much religion as now. I never felt more that all things work together for my good.

Dear brethren and sisters, wherever or whoever you are, that do not enjoy entire peace through Jesus Christ our Lord, let me say you are not justified in your idleness. Therefore I beseech you to do your duty and the good Lord will abundantly bless you. Should you be ignorant of your duty go to God for wisdom, who giveth liberty and finds no fault because you thus come.

From A. E. Babcock.

How often I have thought of the sayings of the wise man when he said, "Let another man praise thee, not thine own mouth; a stranger and not thine own lips." If this were done more, I think there would be less egotism than now, and not as many big I's. God's cause would be more advanced, and his true ministers far better appreciated and wider known. There are many of our small ministers (so-called) yet powerful for good, who would be called into more active service than now, and finally be able to fill the places of those we look upon as having greater gifts. If by the blessing of God a work, though small, be done by some of those "gifted," how soon it is made known through the land, making the weaker ones feel weaker still. I rejoice to know that the time is coming when all "shall know as they are known."

Last Lord's day I had the privilege of meeting with Br. and Sr. P. Holler, at Nashville. I found them truly alive to the great truths that interest us so much. I found him devoting his time and energies for the good of others, hoping for no reward until Jesus comes; and I should fail to fulfill the text at the head of this letter, if I had not a word for him.

By his invitation I accompanied him to his place of meeting, some twelve miles, in the town of Assyria, where I found he, as an instrument in the hands of God, had raised up an interest that is a marvel to all around. It was said that there never had been such a turn out to a religious meeting in that place as on Sunday last. Such interest and attention I seldom witness. Br. Holler began here last winter, amid many discouragements, the people having become sick and tired of the continual drumming for money on the part of ministers that had been sent to labor with them. After our public services were over, we repaired to a beautiful lake, some two miles away, where Br. H. buried five souls in the liquid grave, and raised them to walk in a new life. Two of them (husband and wife) had long been members of the M. E. church. They rejoice now in the blessed hope so beautifully illustrated in the ordinance of baptism. This makes this teen baptized, and all among the most influential portion of the community. Others have agreed to go and do likewise in four weeks from that day. There has been no organization as yet, but I trust there will be at an early day. I think they have the right kind of material for a strong church. May God continue to bless the labors of our dear brother, that he may have abundant praise of our heavenly Father and his Son Jesus Christ, and have many stars in the crown of his rejoicing.

Br. Howell writes from San Francisco.

I find great pleasure in laboring with Br. and Sr. Fassett. They are doing a good work on this coast. We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord. And as we have received him, we walk in him. We received Christ by faith, and walk in him by faith. Our whole life is a life of faith in the Son of God, who loved us and gave himself for us. And we, according to his promise, look for new heaven and a new earth, wherein the righteous shall dwell. I feel that in myself I am nothing. But in Christ I am complete. Glory be to his name!

From C. H. Sweet, Hollis Center, Me.

I am happy to be able to report an increasing interest in my field of labor. At Steep Falls all classes are becoming thoroughly aroused. The Baptist church there are very much alarmed, and are doing everything within their power to drive us out of the village and prevent the spread of our faith and hope. Thus far they have greatly injured themselves, and really assisted us. One of the most influential men in the place, and the principal supporter of the church has withdrawn from them and thrown his influence on the side of truth, as we preach it. He has fitted up a large hall owned by himself and urgently requested us to occupy it. It is superior in every respect to our former place of worship. Feeling the need of ministerial assistance, I sent for Br. Wm. H. Mitchell, and we dedicated the Hall, Sunday, June 16. Between the services two happy souls put on Christ by baptism.

We commenced with good congregations, and they have increased every Sunday. Without entering more fully into details, I would say that there is every indication of a thorough reformation. Do pray for us. I have seen much to encourage me in several other fields that I have visited recently.

From C. C. Marston.

The truth of the gospel is spreading and taking deep hold in all this region (Ogle and Winnebago counties, Ill.) God is graciously watering the seed that has been sown from time to time during the years that are past, and giving the "increase" to that which has more recently been scattered. At seven places I have arranged to labor statedly in this region during half of my time for the year beginning May 1. In looking over the field after having canvassed it somewhat in detail, I feel like the great Gentile Apostle, to thank God and take courage. The little church at Rochelle after passing over many dark and forbidding waters begins to rise. A new afflatus seems to be breathed into her vitals. There is an increasing interest among the people to hear; the brethren are dwelling together in unity: and the set time to favor Zion seems to be near. We have exclusive control of a very commodious hall for our meetings. This adds interest to the cause. Any traveling preacher in good standing among our people would find a welcome with this church and can have an appointment on short notice.

At Foreston the cause is young, but blessed be the Lord it is growing little by little, the mists of theology are clearing away and God's precious truth is beginning to shine.

At Elida, in Winnebago Co. there is a large and blessed interest. God is doing a great work at this place. The people are interested: they inquire about our meetings and come for miles around to listen with eagerness to the truth of God. At the baptismal occasion June 9, thirty-three teams were counted going in one direction from the waters side. It was a glorious scene—such a procession returning from this mystical burial. In the evening, after the organization of the church, in the presence of a large and most respectful audience, we sat around the Lord's table and partook of the emblems of his suffering and death. God was with us—it was blessed to be there. Our "hearts burned within us" while we feasted on the spiritual manna. This was one of the sweetest days of my life. Praise God for these light spots in the dark path of our mortal pilgrimage. The church here have recently organized a Sabbath School which is being attended with much interest and will be an efficient auxiliary in spreading the truth through the neighborhood.

In the other places are all characterized by a good interest. Brethren, by holy living, unity of action, earnest zeal and perfect trust in the Lord, we are fully able to go up and possess the land. Oh! may the truth triumph and God's name be glorified forever!

Our Young Folks.

Remember Thy Mother.

Lead thy mother tenderly
  Down life's steep decline;
Once her arm was thy support,
  Now she leans on thine.
See upon her loving face
  Those deep lines of care:
Think—it was her toil for thee
  Left that record there.

Ne'er forget her tireless watch
  Kept by day and night,
Taking from her step the grace,
  From her eye the light.
Cherish well her faithful heart
  Which, through weary years,
Echoed with its sympathy
  All thy smiles and tears.

Thank God for thy mother's love,
  Guard the priceless boon;
For the bitter parting hour
  Cometh all too soon.
When thy grateful tenderness
  Loses power to save,
Earth will hold no dearer spot
  Than thy mother's grave!

The Honest Stable-boy.

John——went to live at Colonel Mansfield's. The colonle had a ward, a young lad, who came home to spend his vacation. He very soon tried to make friends with John. But John did not like the "cut of his jib," he told his mother.

One night he came into the stable where John was currying the horse. "John," said he, in a confidential undertone, "will you let me take the colonel's horse to-night? You won't lose any thing by it."

"It is not my horse to let," replied John.

"O hang it," cried Ashby, laughing, "you know what I mean. If you come in and find him gone, keep dark, that's all. You'll be the richer for it."

"The shortest way to settle this bargain is to ask the colonel, and if he says 'yes,' take the horse and welcome," said John.

"Why, don't you know he won't let me?" cried Ashby, angrily; "but I'll have the horse in spite of him—that is," said Ashby coaxingly, "if you John, will keep dark."

"James Ashby," replied John sturdily, "that is a kind o' thing I don't keep. My business is to take care of Colonel Mansfield's horse, and he'll never go out of this stable without the colonel's leave, with my consent."

"Then I'll black you to the colonel," cried Ashby, fiercely.

"That you can do, if you will," replied John calmly, "but you don't have this horse out of the stable to-night without the colonel's leave, while I am stable-boy."

"Blast you!" cried Ashby, turning on his heel, to confront Colonel Mansfield himself, who, going to the stable to give an errand to John, became the willing and yet unwilling hearer of the talk.

"Young man," said he, in one of his most searching tones' "always act and speak in such a manner that you won't be afraid to have daylight let in suddenly on you."

Which boy wasn't afraid?

Cuffee and the Alligator.

Cuffee was walking along by Orange Lake, not far from a fence, when he saw a great big wicked-looking alligator on land, standing near the fence. Cuffee stopped and gazed at the huge, ugly creature, which was about ten feet long. The alligator did not move, but eyed Cuffee most viciously, as the negro cautiously walked around him, keeping at a respectful distance. The animal appeared so harmless and helpless that Cuffee came to the conclusion that he had nothing to fear. So, picking up a piece of fence-rail, he prepared to do battle, and this is the way he told me the story.

"I thort de poor, innocent-looking, creetur had no danger in him—he was standin' so still, with his long ugly tail stretched out. So I say to myself, I hab you out of de water now sir, I pay you for eatin' de pigs! De alligator he nebber say nothin', but keep on looking mighty sharp an' winked out'n de corners ob his eyes. I say to him, take dat, you hog thief! an' I bring de piece ob fence-rail down on his back whack, splittin' de wood all to flinters; an' de fust think I know'd dat creetar's tail flew 'round like light'in', an' I foun' myself lyin' sprawlin' on de ground; an' his big mouf snap, savage as a meat-ax, mighty close to my legs."

"What did you do then, Cuff?" I asked.

"Lor', massa, I let you know I got ober dat fence quick," he replied. "I left dem diggins', an' I nebber did know what became ob my hat! I 'spect dat alligator eat him up."

Cuffee has yet to learn how to manage alligators.

"Now I know how to manage them! And I can manage the biggest and the fiercest one you ever saw, so that he could not hurt me in the least."

"Why, father!" said Fred, his eyes opening wide.

"Yes, my son, it is so. The real secret is in knowing how to do anything. I've seen many an alligator—and you know we have some terrible fellows about here—and yet I never saw one that I could not manage easily, so that he could not knock me down with his tail, or bite my leg off, or hurt me in the least!"

"Do, tell me how it is done, father; for I am terribly afraid of them."

"Why, by my way I could manage a dozen at a time and they could not hurt me."

"How Father? Tell me how!"

"And, in the same way, I could manage a fierce, blood-thirsty tiger, if I knew there was one out yonder in the hammock. And he would not hurt me at all."

"Well, but tell me how you do it, father. That's what I want to know."

"Even if a band of wild Indians was lurking around Orange Lake, headed by Billy Bowlegs himself, I could manage them so that they would not hurt me. And I would not ask for a weapon stronger than a slight walking cane or a riding-whip in my hand."

"Father, please tell me how. Don't keep me in suspense any longer."

"Well, my son, I will tell you. It is the easiest thing in the world. And it answers perfectly well in regard to sin or temptation. It is just this, and no more: keep out of the way. If Cuff had kept away from the alligator, he would not have got hurt. If you want to be safe from alligators, snakes, and tigers, keep out of their way, and if you want to be safe from sin and temptation, the rule is just the same, and it is a sure one—keep out of the way!"

"Oh, I see now!" said Freddie, his eyes glistening with happy surprise.
—Kind Words.

That Old Pump

How well I remember it—that old pine log pump, standing beneath the shadow of a great elm at the corner of the garden fence. It was an old pump when my boyish hands first essayed to move its clumsy oaken handle, and my thirsty lips first pressed its cool moss-trimmed spout. What a refreshing draft it was, though! There has been nothing like it since in life. No Hyperion spring with its limpid sparkle and cool refreshment along the highway of later years could efface its remembrance.

A wonderful well that must have been, I've often thought since, in its cool depths and long dangling green moss, dimly seen clinging to the damp, rude masonry of its sides, as I peered on a hot summer day through the gaping crevices of the rough plank platform down into mysteries below—with its rudely fashioned and sorely battered but picturesque old chestnut trough, a standing invitation for every thirsty beast that passed that way to try its sparkling hospitality, and nibble the fresh green sward in the inviting shade around it. What bright anticipations looked out of the expectant eyes of the tired team as they watched John Ploughman, with lusty stroke and cheerful whistle, work at the creaking beam! How John bowed to his task, and how slow the stream was in coming, and yet how the old pump seemed to start from its short nap and hasten to respond to the call, as it wheezed and croaked through its dry throat, faster and more distinctly at every stroke, "coming, coming!" till, at last, out leaped the comer with a rush and a bound to the struggling muzzles below. Now that old pump, with its rude appliances, and tedious, slow response, was indeed a blessed instrumentality in its day. But who would think of using it in these days of better invention?

And so, in later years, as I have journeyed along through life, and memory has recalled these early scenes, I have been reminded of another well of living water opened so long ago for the thirsty wayfarer, and have been led to think how the church, with its clumsy wooden formalities, like that old pump, has all these weary years been creaking its slow response to the ardent expectations of a waiting humanity. We have all watched the brawny John Ploughman as he toiled with lusty strength at the clumsy handle of theology to satisfy this waiting thirst; and, although thankful for the blessed influences even thus laboriously exerted, many of us have sighed at the wasted strength and hoped for the time when experience and broader thought should suggest better appliances, and a more generous distribution of the living water, when, everywhere, the church, instead of being a theological well, green in its mossy depths of obscurity, from which the truth must be laboriously pumped through the clumsy teaching of ignorance and conceit to a limited portion of the great humanity around it, should be a heavenly crystal fountain of ever replenished love high up on the mountain of God's holiness, sending down its spontaneous gushing stream of Christian charity and fraternal sympathy to the thirsting multitudes below; where nations should hasten from the hot turmoil of unhallowed strife to drink peace at its cooling waters, and a blessed contentment should again allay the fevered passions of mankind.—The Record.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath. Everlasting Punishment—64 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—38 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—4 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—[illegible] pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,600 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 399 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in reference to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 168 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c, single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immortalism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Kingdom, By Wm. Sheldon. 160 pp. 50c.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c. post paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents. It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart. Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cts. 30 copies for $1.

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $2, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage 4c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged Dictionary. $1 00. By mail, $1 15.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. [illegible]

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By [illegible]

WHAT IS MAN? &c; by [illegible]

[illegible]

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, [illegible] Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $2.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 50c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 24c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 44 a dozen. Gilt, $1 25. Full gilt, $1 50.

BOOK MARK.—A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important history, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 20c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Cumming. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 15c. post-paid. For distribution, 10 copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled The self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 40c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated, 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for the young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c; postage, 8c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent Church of Jeffersonville, Ind. 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 138 pp. 20c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy, by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 64 pp. 10c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 12. In two parts. 10c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 10c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 25c.
(Volume Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.)
Revelation 20. 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. [illegible]
Evangelis of the Coming One. [illegible]

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to any address, post-paid, for $1 [illegible]

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. [illegible] express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. [illegible] by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Tuesday Afternoon, July 9, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ The Times maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil: the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
J. M. SNOOK, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

Address all communications to JOSHUA V. HIMES, 26 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

P. O. Address.

James Ferris, Buchanan, Mich.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers: but a new edition is nearly ready.

We would be obliged for a copy of D. P. Hall's Man Not Immortal, or for information as to where a copy can be obtained.

James McDuval moved from Iowa to Minnesota in the fall of 1866. Any one knowing his P. O. Address will confer a favor by sending it to F. H. Kenny, Manchester, Iowa.

Our P. O. Address.

All letters for this office should be directed to 26 West Lake St, Chicago, Ill.

Don't send them to Norwood Park. Send to Chicago, as directed above.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $180 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been assailed upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 15c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

The American Institute announces its Forty-first annual Exhibition, to be opened in the city of New York, on the fourth of September next. Applications, for space to exhibit the best Agricultural Productions Mechanical Inventions, Artistic devices, and valuable articles of American manufacture, are now in order. It is intended to make this the most extensive, useful and meritorious exhibition ever held in America.

We would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.25; Foolscap size, $2. Post-ence or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, Prof. Ives' tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $6 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $3 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J Sinsmore S D Olney S Hall N E McLain W B Tulley E Phelps A C McDowell C E Allard J J Goldsmith J S Brandeburg W Calvert J Andrew J J Hooper M M Maxwell E Royce C Aldrich T H Woodruff C Hamilton W Kile J F Linville M F Eggleston J L Small A M Poole E Spotswood F G Williams S B Mabey D Conklin S Wyttenbach S Whetstone A M Hitchcock O N Whitlaud T Howell S W Richardson I C Wellcome R V Phillips W H Fisk T Cartwright S W Marden H J Marsh W W Nelson H Sturdevant N White L House E A Marsh W W Case J R Preston J C Stoddard F H Burbank B F Ware A C Clendening S C Wellcome L Record E Miller J Smith W E Brown A Stewart F Good L Narmore Z D Drake W B Cover O A Stewart W J Griffin J Maxwell O P Brown J C Mann D S Clark E S Lockwood P G Bowman S E Hall C L Jones A C Long J McMichael W Geiger.

For Expenses of Removal.

E S Lockwood $1 H Zerembe $2.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

[illegible]

EXPRESS.

[illegible]

To Correspondents.

F. G. WILLIAMS. Will send.... E. PHELPS. What is your P. O. address. There are two Woodruffs in this [illegible].... W. F. TALEY. We have heard [illegible] The Times will come.... [illegible] What is your P. O. address?.... [illegible] What is your P. O. address?

Communications.

Accepted: M. M. M., S. B. M., Social Nature, C. E. in March, J. M. Snook.

Marriages.

McGURN—SALIN.—In Freedom, Minn., May 17, by Eld. S. C. Wellcome, William F. McGurn and Sr. Clarissa Salin.

FITZSIMMONS—CONDON.—In Owatonna, May 19 by Eld. S. C. Wellcome, Charles Fitzsimmons and Louisa Condon.

Obituary.

BACON.—Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus on July 2, 1872, in the town of Whetstone, Crawford Co., Ohio, Sr. Jane Bacon, aged 64 years.

Funeral services by the writer. H. M'Culloch.

Notices, Etc.

The Kansas Mission Tent.

We the undersigned, desiring as soon as possible to raise means to procure a tent for the Kansas Advent Christian Association, pledge ourselves to pay into the treasury for such purpose the several sums set opposite our names, as soon as the amount of the three hundred dollars shall be pledged.

Previously acknowledged	$ 1 17
E H McCulloch	1 00
J M Barber	1 00
Henry Haines	5 00
G Harwood	25 00
J C Smith	1 00
H. Smith	1 00
W E Smith	1 00
J C Smith	1 00

PLEDGES.

W. F. Hunt, $2 00;
H. L. Hunt, $5 00;
Virgil Hunt $2 00;

PAYMENTS.

G S Harwood, $25. T. Bealey, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

The total acknowledgements in a late number should have been $117, instead of $1,17.

Direct all pledges to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

All money should be sent to the Treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Baxo, Cherokee Co. Kan.

Dear Brothers and Sisters, at home and abroad, we need help. May the Lord move upon the hearts of his dear children that they contribute to this good cause, remembering it is good to lend to the Lord.

Your brother in Christ, H. J. Munson.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. Burrington.

The Lord willing, I will be in LaCrosse Sunday, July 21, to hold meetings on that day and the week following, and over the 28th. I expect Br. Rowell to assist, but we trust that the Lord will be the leader. Let all who can come and help in Jesus' name. Frank Burr.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. Cobb, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve. Traveling brethren invited to call. S. B. Mabey.

Squaw Grove, 10½ a. m., July 14. C. W. Smith.

Amboy, July 14, Communion in the eve. Harmon, Lee Co., 3 p. m. July 14. Subject: The devil—his origin, mission and destiny. Previous appointments withdrawn. C. C. Marston.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. Geo. W. Hurd.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who prefer to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a goodly rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the wooded grove for the Lord till the glorious come. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCulloch, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

IOWA.

The first Q. M. of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Clear Lake, Cero Gordo Co., July 13 and 14. N. F. Eggleston, Sec'y.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. Kenny.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. Philo Hitchcock.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. Marsh, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. Houck.

MICHIGAN.

Sprague S. H. Sabbath July 14, at 11 a. m. and 7 1-2 p. m. and each alternate Sabbath following. Wm Branch.

Williamson S. H. July 14.
Lambkin S. H. July 21.
Laingsburg, as Brn. may direct. Wednesday July 26, and through the week.

E. H. Durand.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 22-26. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. Preston.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andra's big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievous wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. C. H. Cane, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Kasota S. H., 3 p. m. Friday, July 12.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Sat. eve., and Sunday, July 13–14.

—Meet me at Owatonna Station 10 1-2 a. m. July 13. S. C. Wellcome.

Plainview, Beatty S. H. 3 p. m. July 20, and 10½ a. m. July 21. Will baptize those wishing to go forward.

Viola, Stone S. H. 2½ p. m. and 8 p. m. July 21.

Utica, in Cheatham's Grove, 10 a. m. and 1½ p. m. July 28. Will baptize.

Neoka, Page S. H. 3 p. m. July 28.

S. C. Wellcome.

NEW YORK.

The A. C. Church of Honeoye, Ontario Co., N. Y., will hold its third Q. M. Saturday and Sunday, July 13, and 14. Sr. E. S. Jennings and others are expected to be present. Brethren and sisters in the region are cordially invited.

For the Church,
H. H. Brown, O. B. Brown.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free trains for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Further particulars soon. Wm. E. Brown, Sam'l. H. Withington. Perry M. Grinnell.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 2, Range 5, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $[illegible] or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the Advent Times office. Wm. L. Himes.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume [illegible] commences in June. $2 a year. The Times and Record one year for $3 50.

H. V. Reed, Publisher, 9 South Canal St. Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to The Times can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

When & How; or a collection of the more recent facts and ideas upon raising healthy children. By D. Newcomb, M. D.

A strong, common-sense, and hence valuable work. Sent by mail, post paid, $2. For sale at this office.

Favorable terms to agents by the Publishers, A. W. Penny & Co. 63 South Ca[illegible] St. Chicago, Ill.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 16 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—The Times and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, of any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

E. H. WHEELER'S IMPROVED AXLE & THIMBLE SKEIN

PATENTED JAN. 12, 1872.

THE LIGHTEST, STRONGEST, AND BEST AXLE BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

Less liable to break, and cannot spring under any amount of weight that can be put upon it.

It takes a smaller sized axle and bolster or sand-board than the same sized skeins of common style; is more simple and easier to fit, the skein being of uniform taper, without shoulders upon the inside a better fit is secured. The axle can be turned in a common lathe to fit the thimble, by putting one end out of center.

The arm, or spindle, is so made as to secure the proper set of the wheels, when moderately dished, with its bottom line of the spindle on a parallel line to the bottom of the axle, an important principle never before attained. The set of the wheels is a perpendicular or right angle to the bottom line of the axle upon the face of the spokes, upon their lower half.

This cut shows the thimble and lug for the tension rod across the bottom of the axle, from thimble to thimble, and the socket for the bolster, or the sand-board, as the case may be. I also use a sand guard to keep the dirt out of the shoulder of the hub; but it is not shown in this cut.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Sample thimble skeins furnished to purchasers of rights, at actual cost. For further information address

E. H. WHEELER, Memphis,
Scotland county, Missouri.

☞ Please state where you saw this advertisement.

THE BIBLE BANNER FREE!

We desire to call the attention of the readers of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES to our offer in the Bible Banner, to send it to every minister of the gospel of any denomination who will send us his address, or otherwise signify his desire to receive it.

ONE YEAR FREE

We request the readers of the Times to aid us in presenting this offer to such ministers as are devoted men of God, and who would probably accept, and be benefited thereby.

Do not urge any one to accept, for we have not the means, at present, to send very many papers free, but trust the Lord will provide enough to send it where it should go to prepare the way for our weekly papers, and stir up the watchman to sound the alarm to a guilty world. A copy of the Banner from one with whom the minister is acquainted is worth a dozen sent by mail from the office of publication.

THE BANNER AND TIMES.

We will send the Banner six months free to all new subscribers to the Times, and to all old subscribers who mention this offer when they remit (to Times office) for 1872. We make one condition to this offer, viz, before the close of the six months they must either notify us to discontinue, or remit for the future, as soon as convenient.

We expect to present a large fine engraving in every number of the Banner, hereafter, which will illustrate and add new interest to Bible truth. We have already commenced the series of illustrations. Send ten cents for three sample copies. Address:

H. A. KING,
14 Murray St. New York.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES and the Bible Banner will be sent one year, with a free book, for $4.75, or without book, for $2.50. Address:

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
No. 26 West Lake St., Chicago.

Our Book and Tract Column.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; [illegible] Second Advent; The Key of Truth [illegible] The Only Hope; The [illegible] Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist [illegible] Everlasting Punishment [illegible] Objections Removed [illegible] to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality [illegible] The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—16 pp. The Reign of Messiah—48 pp. [illegible]

Tracts for distribution, by express, 1,000 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,000 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 1c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 200 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in the reference to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 25c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 477 pp. $1.

FUTURITY, Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 160 pp. 20c.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 3 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 3 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1.

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 30c. every one should have a copy.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 60c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Scott's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 30c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $2.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. [illegible] Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlinear word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 30c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 25. Full gilt, $1 50.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 30c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 30c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $4 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES, &c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c. post-paid.

LIBRARY COPY
AUROR

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 49. CHICAGO, JULY 16, 1872. WHOLE NO. 429.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY, July 16, 1872.

AT the late "Festival" or banquet, closing the Universalist's anniversary at Boston, Mass., the following was one of the most applauded toasts:

"Eternal punishment: the open question of the time, in England, Germany, Holland, and America, and no longer a test of orthodoxy nor of piety."

STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS, an infidel philosopher, one of the class alluded to by Paul when he says "professing themselves wise they became—the opposite," prints such stuff as this: "the absolutoid and abstractoid Elementismus of Being echoes or re-appears by analogy within the relatoid and concretoid elaborismus."

HARPER'S Magazine for July contains a lengthy sentimental poem, of very considerable artistic merit, which puts forth the orthodox view of death, but also gives this correct rhyme as one contemplation:

"At last I see that death is but
A door in darkness swiftly shut,
A dropping out of warmth and light
A sense of unresisted blight,
A sinking into beamless night.
To life and soul and sight and sound Death is indifference profound!"

'THE World's Peace Jubilee'—two great balls (no pun intended) and a lager beer saloon attached. Ten-thousand glasses of beer were swilled at one concert, and some of the performers were 'visibly drunk.' What kind of a millennium does this prefigure? Something of a carnal nature, one would judge. Zion's Herald feels a little bad—disappointed, and wants a 'lemonade and coffee' jubilee. Won't it open its eyes to the fact that such an one could not be made to pay?

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, the great and unprincipled editor of the New York Herald, was a Romanist of the weakest and most superstitious type. He wore a "scapula," a piece of particolored woolen stuff, over his heart, to develop "the spiritual life of the soul." The priests have earnestly desired the urgent prayers of the faithful that his stay in purgatory may be of the briefest possible character, and he be speedily ushered into the fullness of the repose of "the just made perfect."

A METHODIST minister writes to his paper about how he speaks to his audiences, especially new ones, upon the claims of the paper. The direct result last year was 125 new subscribers, and others no doubt who sent for themselves. He says 'It pays grandly to circulate our papers and books.'

Brethren in the ministry will make their own application of our reference to the matter—we mean especially those who have not thus felt. Some feel so already and need no Methodist minister's example to stir them up. For others, however, we cannot say as much. Please wake up brethren.

A NOT very well informed writer says:

'The boldest infidels will allow that the word of God affirms the immortality of the soul, but they deny its authority, and view it as a mere human compilation.'

—The "boldest infidels" are of the sort who know little or nothing about the Bible or its contents. Candid and studious investigators of the Bible, of all complexions of theological opinion, admit that the Bible nowhere 'affirms' the immortality of the soul. To assert that it does so is but an evidence of ignorance of the Scriptures. Whether it implies it, is, perhaps, a question open to discussion, but to insist that the Bible 'affirms' any such doctrine, is the boldest kind of theological effrontery, or perhaps we should say pertness.

OBITUARIES must divide with epitaphs the *dis*honor of being epitomes of falsehood. Not only do they give false coloring to characters, but they more wofully mistake the doctrine of a future life and rewards. Hear this:

I hear his song! He has not died;
He lives to praise the GLORIFIED,
Whom he served here:
"Well done!" the servant shall abide
There, favored, near the Master's side—
The one most dear!

Is it not shameful to stand over a dead man and sing the blatant untruth that the dead man is not dead, but more alive than ever?

Another says of a death scene:

'It was a victorious transition into heaven.

Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!'

Here not only is common sense outraged by styling a helpless victim of an unfeeling enemy victorious, but the sin (of ignorance no doubt) is added, of barefaced perversion of the Scriptures. A passage referring to the rising up from the dust of the dead is applied to the 'transition' to heaven of a disembodied spirit. The resurrection is robbed of its gems, to deck the brow of a counterfeit presentiment of the virgin truth.

THE Star in the West says:

'Tholuck, Muller and others of Germany, both radical and conservative, now hold that the sinner will be offered an opportunity to repent in the future world. Multitudes in our country hold this view. We rejoice at it. It removes one of the principal barriers that has divided Universalism and Orthodoxy and opens the way for the ultimate ingathering of all souls into the kingdom of God's love.'

—And the Star is very near the truth. Multitudes are verging toward Restorationism in the seeking for relief from the tendencies and implications of the hideous dogma of immortal sin and sinners.

The New York Independent is strongly suspected of 'leaning' that way—at the very least, its utterances 'aid and comfort' the Restorationist school. Eld. Braden is preparing the way for the theory among the Disciples: and the fact that some do not propose to engage in any such foreign mission will not prevent others from believing that if Christ preached to disembodied spirits, he offered them the gospel: and if they had place for repentance in hell, other spirits will have the like opportunity.

Restorationism is the more pleasing and hence may be the more popular theory. The annihilation theory, as it is called, is simply the naked truth and attracts not by harmony with natural desires, but by conviction of the understanding. In it justice and mercy meet on equal terms.

AN exchange furnishes some hints to correspondents, which we thus adapt:

Send every line on business—appointments, notices, marriages, obituaries, orders—on separate paper, or on paper written only upon one side, so that it may be easily separated.

The paper is for the benefit of readers, not writers.

Local interests must give place to what is general. In accordance with this principle the Editor must be privileged to select, revise, shorten and adapt all matter sent for publication.

Write carefully, take especial pains with names of persons and places, and be sure to give post office addresses in full. Send stamps when writing on your own business.

Commit these rules to memory.

THE contemplated debate between Prof. Underwood of Boston and Eld. C. C. Marston having created considerable interest in various parts of this State, it seems necessary that an explanation should be made why the debate does not take place. The Prof. has positively refused to meet him in debate, although his friends here were quite confident that he would come. His excuse is that Eld. Marston is too young. He cannot afford to debate with a man only twenty-three years of age. His challenge, given last winter, reads—"Any Christian minister sustaining a good moral character." But as soon as this challenge was accepted, then he begins to talk about age, etc., Possibly the Prof. thinks the young man's sling might prove as fatal to him as David's did to Goliah. The smooth stones of the Scriptural argument are better than all the armor of infidelity.

WORDS more true than these could scarce be spoken:

They who are eminently successful in business, who achieve greatness, notoriety, in any pursuit must expect to make enemies. So prone to petty jealousy and sordid envy is poor human nature, that whoever becomes distinguished is sure to become a mark for the malicious spite of those who, not deserving success themselves, are envious of the merited triumph of the more worthy. Moreover, the opposition which originates in such despicable motives is sure to be of the most unscrupulous character; hesitating at no iniquity, descending to the shabbiest littleness. Opposition, if it be honest and manly, is not in itself undesirable. The competitor in life's struggles, who is of true mettle, deprecates not opposition of an honorable character, but rather rejoices in it. It is only injustice or meanness which he deprecates; and it is this which the successful must meet, proportioned in bitterness often times, to the measure of success which excites it.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Journal and Messenger, writing from Vesuvius' heaving sides says:

Such is the aspect of affairs in this city doomed to destruction. Lovely for situation, and lively with all the gayety of frivolity and vice, the fate of Pompeii awaits it whenever the direction of the wind shall bring the cinders of a great eruption over it, as it now brings the ashes of this lesser outburst. As I write the mountain thunders again; the ground shakes; the windows tremble. But the day and the hour God only knows. And, therefore, men go on careless and forget God.

Yet these Neapolitans are not worse than the rest of mankind. Our whole earth awaits the last great volcanic eruption, which shall as effectually bury all our institutions and erections as Pompeii has been buried. Yet men go on and will go on till the day surprises them, eating, and drinking, and buying, and selling, and forgetting God.

Some feel that that last great eruption is not far off. Dr. Carpenter, an able minister of the San Francisco pulpit, says the Post of that city, in his late discourse on 'the still small voice' said, that soon "Oh how soon, this globe will be split in twain;" but the dead will then be raised and the righteous commended by the authority conveyed in a "still small voice."

And the London Telegraph remarks:

Something surely must be the matter with the internal and external health of the little planet upon which we live. The earth is apparently out of order, and her malady takes the form of volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, cyclones, and hurricanes in the warmer latitudes and of damp, wretched weather, or ruinous floods in the colder regions.

THE INTER-LEAVED BIBLE

We have nearly ready a few copies of the Bible inter-leaved with ruled blank paper.

The Bible is Baxter's print, in Minion type, the 8vo of "the Fac-Simile edition."

The features added are: (1) blank leaves, from Genesis to Revelation, on fine, thin, ruled paper, for writing notes, translations, paraphases, comments, sketches, etc., etc. (2) A brief concordance of the principal terms involved in the controversy concerning the nature of man, his future destiny, the resurrection, etc.

This volume will not be so bulky as to be unwieldy. It will be much smaller than the Bagster 'Inter-leaved Bible,' and practically far more useful as well as more convenient.

For ministers and Bible students it will be invaluable.

Further particulars hereafter.

Board Meeting.

Minutes of a meeting of the Board of Trustees held at Chicago, June 14, 1872:

Br. Frank Burr offered his resignation as Auditor.

This was accepted, and Br. Sidney C. Raymond elected to fill the vacancy.

Br. N. W. Spencer was elected a member of the Editorial Committee, in place of L. C. Collins, resigned.

The President of the Association then presented the following letter:

CHICAGO, June 14, 1872.

To the Board of Trustees, etc.

Dear Brethren. At a recent meeting I resigned the office of Business Agent thinking even then to sooner or later resign other positions also.

Our work is increasing and we need more help. My labors in other departments require all my time, and often call me from home for months. For this reason I now offer my resignation as President of the Association. I trust you may in your wisdom elect some able business man to fill this position.

I need not assure you of my interest in the continued success of the Association. I shall relax no effort in its behalf. We have now fairly begun the great enterprise in the West; and we must throw into it our whole weight and strength. I not only hope but believe the friends of the Association will respond to any call for such co-operation as will give it continued success.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

His resignation was accepted, and Br. D. Mathewson elected to take his place. On taking the chair, Br. Mathewson made the following remarks;

BRETHREN of the W. A. C. P. Association:

As your Board of Trustees have chosen me to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Br. J. V. Himes as your President, I wish to say, that in accepting the position with its responsibilities, I do so expecting you will give me your prayers and cordial support while I try, by the help of the Lord, to discharge the duties of the office for the benefit of the Association and the cause of God's truth.

We need harmonious action in every department. This we shall have if we keep a single eye to the object of our Association. I assure you that I shall use my best endeavors to promote harmony in the Association, and maintain its principles and objects firmly against all opposition.

For many years I have been identified with the Advent cause, East and West. That cause is dear to me; and as it has had my best energies in the past, so it shall have in the future: and no vital principles shall be sacrificed in order to gain the applause of men, or a position for myself.

God and the cause demand of us entire consecration to the great work in which we are engaged. And if we have a mind to work, trusting in God for grace and strength, we shall succeed.

The earnest efforts of the Association in the past have been crowned with success far beyond the most sanguine hopes of its friends. The future is open to greater achievements in our great and glorious work, provided we who occupy this field stand firm and united.

Let us put on the armor, be strong, and quit ourselves like men of God, and soon the victory will be won, and we shall hear the Master say, "Enter into the rest prepared for my faithful ones."

Br. L. C. Collins was then elected to fill the place on the Publishing Committee made vacant by the election of Br. D. Mathewson as President.

At a subsequent meeting, Br. J. M. Snook sent word that owing to his business relations it would be impossible for him to remove to Norwood Park, as he expected to do when he accepted the office of Business Agent.

The Board then voted that Br. J. M. Snook act as Secretary, and Br. Wm. L. Himes as Treasurer until the next Annual Meeting of the Association.

WM. L. HIMES, Sec'y.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The work in Arkansas is onward. The church at Pleasant Plains will soon have a sister organization at Philadelphia, near by—all good substantial Christians as well as Adventists. Br. Crosby is busy in the cause.——Br. S. K. Gibson is enjoying better health, and is again in the field.——The Ionia (Ill.) church is prospering with Br. McCulloch's labors. One baptism of late.——The church at Philadelphia (Pa.) is in a flourishing condition.——Br. D. S. Clark has been again to Western Iowa, moving the people to the depths of their souls by his earnest work and talk.——The New York tent is at Oshawa. Out with Brs. Fenn, Brown and others as workers.——Br. E. K. Hill, late of Michigan, has accepted the Presidency of the University of Washington Territory. He is a full and accurate scholar, has fine natural abilities, and is fast ripening into manly maturity and strength. Though yet young, he has already had a good deal of experience, and we predict for him ample success.——Brethren traveling in Franklin Co. Mo., will be cordially greeted by Br. W. H. Lawrance, at St. Clair. There is a school-house, and an interest to hear.——Subscribers to the Kansas tent are notified of the success of the enterprise, and should respond at once. See notice.——The tent meeting at Oshawa, Ont. is making favorable progress. We understand that some were baptised last Sunday.

Communications.

Brethren Indeed.

A WORD DIRECT FROM THE BOSOM OF THE ANGLICAN CHURCH.

The following interesting letter i placed before our readers through the kindness of our California correspondent, by whom it was received at late date.

My Dear Sir: I thank you m for all the kind communications y have made to me, and you should have heard from me before now but that, in addition to parish duties, I have been so incessantly occupied either in lecturing or large correspondence, or writing papers on the subject of the extinction of evil. This truth is fast spreading in this county, both in the church of England and out of it. It turns out that the dogma of endless torments has always been doubted in the hearts of tens of thousands; but each has not known the doubt of the others, and was afraid to broach what was so uncommon. The public advocacy of extinction is bringing out the hidden, timid ones, and what was at our time only a thought, is now a belief, founded solely upon the Holy Scriptures. They now see that endless torment took its rise in heathen philosophy, was unnaturally grafted upon Christianity, favored by the so-called "Christian schools of philosophy," stereotyped in the dark ages, and now supported only by tradition and rationalism.

The only weapon with which I attack this monstrous evil, now grown to such amazing proportions, is the word of God, taken literally, lexically and grammatically: and this is enough, for it is the sword of the Spirit, the edge of which cannot be blunted or turned. People begin to see that they have been blind sheep, led by blind shepherds, and very extensively are they in England searching the Scriptures to see whether these things are so, and seeking for light from heaven.

You will not think it unnatural in me, as a clergyman of the church of England, to be most anxious that my brethren of the clergy should see this truth, and take a lead in propagating it; and, also, that they should see how untenable their position is as ministers in the church of England, as long as they preach endless torments. I cannot but see that there must be a breaking up among us before long, both in our church and out of it; and that we shall require something besides what we have yet had to unite the scattered fragments. It appears to me that the extinction of the wicked by the righteous judgment of God in connection with the evangelical doctrines of our prayer book will be that something. It is the truth of the Bible, and of the primitive Christian church, and, therefore, such as our God can give his blessing to. Many are beginning to see this, and he is preparing the way.

One of the worst features is, that our dignified clergy are timid, time-serving, and rather seek the honor of men than the glory of their Master; and what is respectable in the world, and in their own class, than the plain truth of the gospel.

I have just put forth a tract called—Hear the Church of England! It contains the proof of that feature of our church which you have laid hold of in the extracts which you have made from my Demonstration. I send you another pamphlet of mine. Please look at pp. 31, 32 and you will see, I think, we are brethren indeed. I shall be glad to hear from you from time to time, and if you do not at once hear from me, remember that my time is more than occupied, and that the pressure comes from the many calls in support of the word of God.

Believe me, very truly yours in the Lord, H. S. WARLEIGH.

Ash church Rectory, Eng.

A Thought.

he Scriptures very plainly teach t the throne of David belongs to s Christ by right of inheritance, and yet the angel when announcing rth of christ declares, "And the God shall give unto him the of his father, David." Now stion arises, How shall God im the throne which is his own ght of inheritance? I answer all any person inherits by birth, they lose by death. Jesus died. Had he have remained dead another would have succeeded to the throne, but as Peter affirmed on the day of pentecost, God "raised up" Jesus from the dead, and by thus resurrecting him he gave him the throne to which he was born heir. Praise God! Jesus is now alive and while he continues to live no other person can claim that throne. May he soon take possession of it and "reign over the house of Jacob forever."

C. H. SWEET.

Social Nature.

A commonplace maxim says, "Birds of a feather flock together." This tendency is the natural instinct of all living beings, and constitutes the basis of their social nature. Man is preeminently a social being. Possessing remarkable inteligence, and the power of speech, he, above all other beings, ardently desires the associations of his fellows. This desire, being natural, demands its legitimate gratification. But what is its legitimate gratification? and what means conduce to this result? In answering these questions I shall probably decide somewhat contrary to the prevailing idea."

In our associations with others we naturaly desire to please them; and it is a pleasure to us when we do so. All this is right. In fact, the natural law which relates to our duty to society, makes it obligatory upon us. This law is recognized and enforced in the New Testament. But when we seek to meet the demand of this law by means which are forbidden, we do wrong and ought to yield to the higher authority, while society does demand our aid, and sympathy and intercourse, it has no right to expect these favors through wrong channels.

We need cultivation and refinement. It is right that we acquire an ease and grace of manners that shall win the confidence and good will of others, and be indeed an adornment of character. The only way to do this effectually is by association, by familiar personal intercourse. This fact is recognized by Christians and the world at large; but so long and frequently has this end been sought by improper and sinful means, that man's social nature has become sadly corrupted. This evil has not only been propagated by the world, but at this day we find it sustained by a majority of the professed church. We find all over the land worldly professed Christians including ministers of the same stamp, who patronize public gatherings of amusement. And not only do they swell the company of rioters at shows, theaters, "nigger plays, &c, but original and sustain within the pale of church organization public sociables and festivals. Of course thoose gatherings have some worthy (?) end which takes away the curse, and serves to ease the consciences of those who are not already conscience seared. When no other object can be thought of, the cultivation of the "social element" is given. Of course, the object given is a proper one; but we are confident in saying that in a majority of cases, this is not even thought of, much less had in view as the end of the gathering. The truth is, the public mind is siezed with a thirst for pleasure. Eating and drinking with the drunken is the order of popular religion. But even supposing social cultivation were the sole object, does it justify the course taken to attain it? Does the end sanctify the means? The Romish church says so, and carries out the principle to the letter. But for this very thing the awful denunciations of prophecy are against her. And it is to be feared that her daughters are polluted with her sin.

The effect of worldly amusement upon the heart softened and made clean in the sight of God, should convince all of their baneful results. I think there are very few—I doubt there being any—who have been genuinely converted and have afterward attended public scenes of merriment, who have not felt a degree of condemnation. If they enjoyed a heavenly peace, then they have certainly lost it now. After having stifled honest conviction until conscience and the Spirit no longer reprove them, they may fancy they enjoy peace, but it is not the peace of Christ; it is a deception of Satan.

Then how is social culture to be effected? The question is easy. The Bible is the best book of etiquette extant. It possesses within itself the power to make one a Christian, and the Christian is a lovely being. O! what perfection adorns him. How kind, and gentle, and meek, and loving, and patient, What an agreeable companion. All due to the Bible and the grace of God. Yet there are some Christian people who are disagreeable sometime. The Bible has not made them so. They need to study it more. Patience must have her perfect work.

But we have said that association is necessary to social development. What is better than the society of Christians? What tends more effectually to cultivate ease, and grace, and refinement? We do think, however, that it would be a decided improvement in this direction, if social conference meetings were conducted with more freedom and familiarity. It would certainly be productive of more good if, instead of a few moral exhortations, all, young and old, were to engage in familiar talks about the kingdom and crown, the bright spots and rough places on the way. There is no reason why believers meeting in such capacity should not direct their remarks personally; yet, of course, in a gentle, loving spirit. Thus the weak would be strengthened, the downcast encouraged and the strong made happy.

In conclusion, permit a friendly reminder of your imminent peril. Satan is mustering all his force to drown men in perdition. He is seeking a union of the world and church in opposition to a pure Christianity. He is hard at work in trying to induce the followers of Christ to lower the standard of Bible holiness and separation from the world. Tee final conflict has begun. O Christian, beware! Young converts especially are in danger. Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Remember the friendship of the world is enmity with God. Shun the very appearance of evil. The hour of temptation has come: there is no safety but in Jesus. All for Christ, should be the watchword.

A. N. HITCHCOCK.

The Fisherman Preacher on his Circuit.

Eighteen yeass ago was the first time I ever started out on a circuit mission, proposed by B[illegible] Merriam and Berrick, first editors of the Crisis. Never having preached any before, it was a great cross to call my labor "preaching," although I had been holding public meetings since 1845; and to stop is almost impossible, and to keep up the long trips is hard and trying at my advanced age. On looking over our old Revolutionaries, I find but two or three older, and only one that travels as extensively at my age, that is Br. Himes, who is a few months the oldest; while Brn. Brewer, Batchelor, Storrs, and Cook, are somewhat broken down from hard labor and sickness, and cannot travel these long trips and preach every day as formerly. But what shall we do without them? Their experience and counsel are needed, if not appreciated by the younger ones who have been born this side of the Red Sea, since we left Egypt in 1843. There is another class who are younger, who occupy a more prominent position now, as they are in the prime of life, whom we depend upon as the active managers for these times—Brn. Grant, Couch, Boutell, Ross, Sheldon, Mathewson, and others—who are the main men in our welfare; and if the older ones fall before the battle is ended, God will reward us all according to the work done.

An incident took place while fishing for trout with Br. Allen. A cross bull in a pasture where we were fishing came up bellowing and threatening to attack us. The boy present said he drove people out of the lot. When he got within two or three rods, I took my hat off, put it forward of my face, moving to the right then to the left once a second and going toward him. This being something new to him, he stopped pawing the dirt and bellowing. I still kept up the sudden movement of my hat, walking steadily towards him. When within thirty feet of him he turned to run, and I after him, keeping the same motion with the hat. I chased him till he showed signs of going over the fence. I then came back and went to fishing, and heard no more from Mr. Bull. He looked beaten. I mention this for the benefit of those who may need to know this fact. I learned it thirty years ago. You can drive any bull ever so cross, or a wild steer, by this simple process. Try it. A woman's bonnet, used in the same way forward of her face, will produce the same effect to protect them.

Next to Brunswick. There were but few out to meeting. The old eagle's nest is referred to again this year, making forty years on the same tree, watching the fishhawk's good luck, and taking their game as usual. Some of of the old hawks have learned better than to ascend into the air with their fish, but fly to the woods, and the eagle, like a disappointed pickpocket, went back to his nest empty. It is now fish time here, and I am helping draw a net. We got fifty-four. Last year Br. Storer caught a salmon that weighed twenty-seven pounds, and a sturgeon weighing four hundred pounds....Sunday, June 10th. To-day is the first fair day for two weeks in this section. The people are yet planting corn. The curse is heavy on the land and people here. I am told that it takes a day's work to raise one bushel of corn on an average, and wages are two dollars a day. A farm is not profitable at this rate; for one day's work will buy two bushels of corn ground into meal, delivered from the West to their doors. It is hard preaching a new truth to such people, and have it appreciated; yet we went, as the apointment was out for one evening in Gardiner, thirteen miles away. I started, almost sick, over a bad road, got shipwrecked, got another team, got there late, house full, good attention, and a good collection of sixty-two cents. Next day I went fifteen miles to Bowdoin, over four miles of the worst road I ever rode on. I caught a mess of fish for supper, and went to meeting suffering with toothache for the first time. I found the seats full, and the house full of mosquitoes. I preached on the curse.

On this trip, I saw an old Christian, one hundred and two years old, whose health, hearing and sight are good. His sight is good enough to read without glasses. He splits his own wood. He recollects the "dark day" of 1780, and bids fair to live some years longer. ....Went to Craig's Mills in the evening, and found a good company, loving the hope as first preached by Br. [illegible]. Here I noticed the great six-mile pond, made by a dam of inferior material and construction, liable to fail at any time, which would carry everything off below it, clear to Brunswick, a distance of twenty miles or more. The village of Mechanic Falls would all go off with a rush, and every village below. It so troubled me that I laid awake hours. I consider th people below in more danger than to be located over a volcano. It is strange that a community will sleep quietly below such danger, with the villages full of people ignorant of their danger. I felt so on the subject, I went and informed a prominent man, a representative, and he went to see about it with others; and probably a safer dam will soon be built....There are plenty of farms for sale in Maine for less than the cost of the building. It is a hard time for the farmers at the present prices. Some farms with from fifty to seventy-five acres, and good buildings and orchards, and all the wood they want to burn, can be rented for $75 a year. This is in South Casco, Me., on the stage rode to Portland; and other towns have farms to rent as cheap. These are deserted by the heirs after the old people have died off. The young ones go off to cities and villages to work. There must be a change soon, or farms will grow up to woods. Such places might be leased by city people for summer residences so cheap, it might be an object to some to know these facts, that have got tired of city life. A few months in the country would improve their health. They could get a living in the summer, and move back in the winter if they wished. There are farms to be sold for from one to two thousand dollars with the above advantages, and it seems to me that city life will not be so desirable in a short time, if wickedness increases, which I have no doubt it will until the Lord comes. One half of the common livers in cities spend more needlessly every summer than would hire one of these summer residences.

Next to East Rochester, after catchsome fifty pounds of pickerel for the neighborhood. This exercise keeps my mind in order to preach, and pays for my board in fish. I preached four times on the Sabbath—once in the street, on a shoe-box. Had a good time sowing the seed. Some took effect. Thank the Lord. I again have got where I can get a daily paper, to see what the world is doing. I see you are having in Boston a thundering of music from all nations to keep up the excitement of the times; while for three weeks I have had the music of owls, whippoorwills, and mosquitoes for evening; and the bull-frog, spinning wheels, and the gobble of turkeys, for the day-time.—H. Munger, in Crisis.

Strange Logic.

Says Mr. McDonald: "To prove that the soul existed after death was to silence their objections to the resurrection of the dead. It was necessary to prove the separate existence of spirits, in order to prove the resurrection of the dead." Strange, inconsiderate assertion this, in the face of glaring facts to the contrary! Does not the whole heathen world believe in "the separate existence of spirits"? and do they not discard the resurrection of the body? Did not Paul preach to the Athenians the resurrection of the dead? and did not these Platonists "mock" him? Acts 17. Are not all Spiritualists, the world over, believers "in the soul's existence after death"? and have they no "objections to the resurrection of the dead?" Had Christ proved to these Sadducees "the immortality of the soul," he would have then a more difficult task to prove to them that there would be a resurrection of the dead; for they would have then regarded the resurrection of the body as non-essential, and in fact a hindrance to spiritistic existence. Josephus, and the Hellenistic Jews, endeavored to preach to the Greeks the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, while they themselves had adopted the doctrine of Plato; but how much progress did they make? None at all.—O. E. Fassett.

Petty Persecution in England.

A late number of the Cheltenham (Eng.) Examiner has the following communication referring to the disorderly expulsion of Henry S. Warleigh from the "Clerical and Lay Association," because of his publicly expressed faith in the extinction of all evil. It must, certainly, be painful to Mr. Warleigh to have old ties and relations so summarily severed; yet we are in frankness compelled to say, we are glad this event has occurred. As always, so now, this will turn "for the furtherance of the gospel." We expect to hear of more such petty meanness and similar exhibitions of bigotry and theological bitterness, just in proportion as the truth grows in favor in those parts.

The Examiner's correspondent says:

THE CLERICAL AND LAY ASSOCIATION.—EXPULSION OF A MEMBER.

To the Editor of the Cheltenham Examiner—SIR: I trust with confidence to your love of fair play to allow me to make the following remarks, on a subject which, I venture to think, is of some public importance.

The members of the Church of England Clerical and Lay Evangelical Association held their sittings last week in Cheltenham. At their smallest meeting, on the second day, they expelled one of their members for publishing an opinion, that the Bible and the primitive Church taught that all evil persons and things would ultimately become extinct. The subject was introduced by the Chairman, who asked the meeting to support the Committee in a resolution to which they had come, that the doctrine was contradictory to evangelical opinion, and therefore inconsistent with membership of the Association, and that consequently the offending member should withdraw himself. It seems there was no rule making endless evil part of the conditions of membership, nor any rule giving the Committee power to decide what those conditions should be, nor to expel a member; and one of the secretaries told the meeting that they wished for a new rule to authorize the Committee to expel an offending member, whether from this or any other cause. This, he said was necessary in order that the Committee might act with promptitude and decision in any case which might arise. The offending member in the present instance had, it appeared, disobeyed the dictum of about one-third of the nominal committee, by appearing at the sittings; and hence it was that the Chairman appealed to the meeting to support the Committee and compel the member to withdraw. When the question was put, the Chairman neglected to count hands, and he was embarrassed whether the ayes or noes had it, and some cried one thing and some another, until they seemed too perplexed to know what to do. For a moment silence was given to a clerical member who rose to speak; but when it was seen to be in favor of the inimical member, he was clamored down by a good many of the clergy, as well as by the Chairman; and when others signified their disapproval of this want of fair play, the confusion was great. One cried out, "Be impartial; there are others of us who believe the same thing; turn them out too! You don't do this, but you let all your wrath come upon one who has the honesty to avow his opinions." While this was being said, another called out, "They keep it to themselves let him do the same!" A third exclaimed, "What! when he believes it to be true?" There was no lack of suggestions, but nothing seemed long to calm the troubled waters. At the last the now brow-beaten member himself asked if he might be allowed to speak in his own defense, and for a short space there was blank silence; but the Chairman soon said "No, no," several times, and was joined by others; and when this drew forth as many exclamations of "Yes, yes," the confusion was again great. A lay member, expressing his indignation, said "he never in his life had known a single instance where the death-warrant, as it were, of a man was to be signed without first hearing him in his own defense;" but nothing would satisfy the noisier part of the meeting, except the withdrawal of the member. The Chairman was evidently well pleased with this, and put it to the member, "Yes or No," saying that if he did not voluntarily withdraw, he (the Chairman) would get the meeting to expel him. Amidst some confusion, the member gave reasons for at all attending the present annual sittings, which appeared to be sufficiently cogent in themselves, though seemingly not satisfactory to the adverse parties; and he ended in a very short speech,—in which his voice was drowned with clamors if words of self-defense were used,—by saying "that it had been his intention to withdraw from the Association, for that he did not see what real or practical good it was doing." When, however, he sat down, the Chairman said "It must be now; will you withdraw now?" The answer was drowned, and the expelled member left the room amidst a storm of "Go go," "Withdraw; withdraw now," and as many counter-exclamations of "No, no!"

During the discussion exception was taken to the word "expel;" for that he had been "only requested to withdraw;" but inasmuch as he had been threatened with "expulsion" if he did not withdraw, and had been told during the confusion that he was "no Christian" and "no gentleman" if he did not obey, it would require some logic to explain the difference. It was pretty evident, too, that though the publication of an opinion was the ostensible ground of condemnation, yet there was something in the background which did not fully appear, for in the course of accusation, by the chairman, he said that the member "had signfied his intention to hold a public meeting in Cheltenham, without the consent of the clergy;" and when this was denied, the chairman said something about "the intervention of the Bishop." The public of Cheltenham have a right to know what all this means. Do the clergy of the place assume the right of denying the liberty of holding a public meeting? for if so this is a tyranny over the public at large, and it will not be borne.

Now, the circumstance here reported concerns not an individual, or even an association, only; but the whole Church of England. There is a party within her pale which are doing their utmost to narrow the basis of her communion to their own narrowness. The party is the same whether they do it by legal session, or by means of an association; and the instance we record shows that some limit should be put to their doings. The basis of the Articles and Prayer Book of the Church does not satisfy them. They must introduce another. It may not be known to these gentlemen, that during the Reformation, those Articles were expunged from the list which affirmed the doctrine of endless torments for the wicked; for it was seen to be contradictory to the Sixth Article. Possibly, they may not have observed that when, on two occasion, the doctrine was legally tried, the Supreme Court each time decreed that the dogma of endless sufferings for the wicked was not a doctrine of the Church of England. Now, fair play is a jewel. Here is a doctrine expunged from the Articles and condemned by the Supreme Court of the realm; and yet this party remain in the Church, eat her bread, and teach her members a contrary doctrine, and in addition expel one from their number who does teach her legally declared doctrine. And they do this, be it observed, at the very time when they taunt another party in the Church, who remain in her, and eat her bread while the Supreme Court have also condemned their doctrines. They who live in glass houses should not throw stones. In truth and justice let them turn their taunt against themselves and cast the beam out of their own eye. The expelled member alone is the consistent one, and him they persecute.

ASDIEL.

Men in the Church.

I have now spent nearly a half century of manhood, and been an observer of men and things to a considerable extent, and in my experience I have learned that I have a number of turns and twists in my ways and habits with which some people have found a great deal of fault, for which I am sorry—not more that they found fault, than for the cause given them to find fault—if there was really always a reason given. I have been now, after looking over my past years, led to look at the different characteristics of men in the Church of God.

MODEST MEN.

With these there is generally very little trouble other than to get them to act the parts for which nature and grace have fitted them. They are unassuming, and ever do they fear that they might tread on forbidden ground or be meddling in buisness that does not belong to them, and so doing more harm than good. If preachers, and they find their services ever so acceptable to the people and useful in the cause of God and the Church, still it takes a long time till they can acquire courage enough to enable them to assert their rights and take a bold position. Their conduct is so diffident at times that it is erroneously construed to be indifference to what should interest them so greatly. They generally prefer to hear others preach to preaching themselves; and their small degree of appreciation of themselves and talents ever deters them from preaching or talking in private about themselves. Visiting ministers hardly ever come to them amiss, if they have a word of exhortation for the breathern. If they are private members their conduct is the same in their particular cases. They are not often found meddling in with other people's religion, but when they can be induced to speak it is to applaud all that is good in others, and if they see errors and short-comings in them they, with great decorum, suggest what they themselves believe to be right, and seek to avoid offending any one needlessly. Such men in the Church must always be urged onward by clerical, Church and divine promptings.

FORWARD MEN.

This class of men is just the opposite to the modest character. If ministers, they scarcely ever learn how to be "instant in season" or to know when and how and where to act. They assume to know much, some of them more than their fellows in work, and rather always hear themselves preach than sit and learn wisdom at the "feet" of others, as Paul, "at the feet of Gamaliel." No matter how short-sighted they are in doctrine, they fancy they know it all, and constantly enter into contention with others, and are often worsted, not because their side might not be right, but because their forwardness prompted them to undertake a task for which they were not fitted; and so, and in many other ways, they do much harm to the cause and Church. If they are able men, then they are domineering and often tyrannical in their conduct toward those who are in any wise subject to them. No minister has any buisness to visit such a man's congregation with the hope of being received with ministerial courtesy. The same unfortunate developments are made in the conduct of laymen of this class, in their doings. Some ignoramuses in this class have done incalculable injury to the cause and churches by their everlasting babbling and cavilling at others, and so disgusting sensible people and prejudicing them against the brotherhood as egotists and cavilers.

INDOLENT MEN.

These have a sort of natural deformity of mental being and an unstrung and debilitated animal nature. It is with great trouble that such are brought to consider and act; and when they are converted they are apt to settle down upon the stool of do-nothing as if they had done all they could and had nothing more to do. If, however, such a man imagines himself called to preach—which I think is not often done by the Lord, who denounces laziness—then he calculates to take it easy, live well, and if the people do not choose to come to hear him, they may take their own way of it. He thinks if he preaches once or twice each Sunday he has earned his salary, and considers running about visiting the families to be too arduous for him. If such preachers have a daily paper, two or three lounging places, like stores or work shops, and tobacco enough, and then a sketch-book to steal several sermons from each week, and add to this a good deacon or two to be industrious in collecting the salary for them, they are made up. If this last item be neglected they threaten to go to work with their own hands to make a living. But there is never any danger of their carrying out this terrible threat as long as they can get along otherwise, even at a low ebb of living. The laymen of this class require a double force of all the moral and legal suasion of the Church to keep them in even a very limited discharge of their duties.—J. F. W. in Church Advocate.

Gen. 13:8.

Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.

There is something peculiarly instructive and edifying in this part of the history of Abram and Lot; and it may profitably employ our reflections for a few moments: for it is an important feature in Scrpture biography that it develops the whole of their characters. There is no secret reserve,—nothing glossed over; but the imperfections and failings of good men are recorded for our correction and warning, as well as their gracious dispositions and holy actions for our imitation.

1. This history corrects a very common error: that an increase of wealth implies and involves an increase of happiness. Abram and Lot were both increasing in substance; but it was connected with an increase of dependants and servants, and with an enlarged establishment. Peace and repose are often interrupted; servants disagree, and make their unwelcome appeal to their employers. This frequently separates chief friends, and robs the elevated ranks of much tranquility. The history before us is not a solitary instance. "If riches increase, they are increased that eat them; and what good is there to the owner thereof, save the beholding of them with his eyes?"

2. We cannot withhold applause from the amiable character and condescension of Abram: he was the superior in age, wealth, relationship: yet he concedes his right, he stoops, he yields, and refers the choice to Lot. How forcibly did he exemplify the glowing description given of charity by the apostle? Did this disposition exist, although it were in an inferior degree, in the world, how speedily would it terminate feuds and broils! and strife and contention would soon cease. Let us seek an increase of this gracious temper, that we may thereby increasingly adorn the blessed gospel of Jesus our Lord, who was "meek and lowly in heart."

3. We observe the false estimate we are likely to make, and the erroneous and fatal choice we shall make, if we are regulated by outward appearances and carnal motives. Sodom was well watered,—the plains were verdant,—the prospects pleasing,—the land fertile: and, alas! Lot appears to have consulted nothing, save a suitable portion of provision for his flocks and herds! The character of the inhabitants of the cities of the plain could not be unknown to him, though disregarded. The consequent danger and exposure of his family, his immediate departure from the counsel and pious example of Abram, and from the divine worship in Abram's house, appear to have had but a small share in his consideration.

4. Behold a practical commet on the aphorism of our Lord—"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inhait the earth." The way to succeed in a wordly respect, is frequently to recede from claiming our full right—to be submissive, quiet, calm; and to refer all the appointment to infinite wisdom. Choose then my inheritance for me, O Lord; there is not anything I so much dread as having my request in temporal things, but leanness in my soul. Abram gave up his just right to chose; but his covenant God appointed him the best portion here which he could possess and enjoy with a calm and thankful mind, and the pleasing prospects of faith, into a more pleasant and enduring substance than the earthly Canaan.—Sel. by M. M. Maxwell.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

TRACTS: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 3 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 3 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Gould. [illegible]

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical; showing the successful fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER.—Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. [illegible] a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for [illegible]

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.
The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for [illegible]

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. [illegible] by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. [illegible] by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, [illegible], by express.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July 16, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

TO OLD SUBSCRIBERS.

It has been suggested that we should confer some favors upon old subscribers as well as new, in dealing out the last copies of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

We are obliged for the suggestion. To any old subscriber renewing their subscription, we will send a copy of the book for 25 cents. Just half price.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, June 28. I have had a quiet day at the beautiful farm residence of Capt. I. Handy, which is located on the West side of the Allegheny Mountains. The land is high, the air is salubrious, pure and healthful, and the scenery is beautiful. It is about a mile from many of the oil wells. Wells have been sunk on and all about this farm, but to no purpose. And so the land is cultivated by the farmers, while on others in the vicinity they are pumping up the oil from beneath to give light in our dwellings.

The Captain got up his horses to-day, and we rode out among the oil wells, so that I have had a chance to inspect a goodly number of them. None of these wells flow. All the oil that is obtained now is pumped up from five to seven hundred feet, by steam power. The wells average from one to three barrels a day, which, they inform me, pays. I asked one gentleman how he could meet expenses with so small returns. He got on an average two barrels a day. This gave him between two and three hundred dollars a month, and was better than a $12,000 farm. "But how much are your expenses?" "Nothing but my own time." "But does your fuel cost you nothing?" "No. I use gas." "But where do you get it?" "Out of my well. See here." I looked into the boiler of his engine, and beheld a large steady flame that kept up the steam night and day, without care or interruption. "Well," said I, "that's cheap and convenient, sure. But how do you keep it from filling the air and producing explosion?" "We put a six inch casing into the well, which is designed to be air-tight. Then we put in a tube of three inches. The oil is pumped out of the tube, and the gas comes up between the case and the tube, and is let off in a pipe as we need it. All is kept under entire control for useful purposes. And so I have no expense except my time." "But how much did your well cost?" "Some $36,000 to those who sunk it; but I bought it for $1,800, as a second-hand or old well, and it pays well."

I looked at the oil in its crude state, as it came up. In color it was green, and as thin as spirits of turpentine, and more penetrating. I asked him where it was thought this oil came from. He said from the third sand rock. The oil seems to be located in the sandstone, and makes its way to the wells, and is pumped out as it flows in. Some wells yield more, and some less, according to the richness of the sandstone bed. This is the present theory of the source of the oil.

In the evening we sang for the first time here some of our Advent hymns, with the voice of prayer. The true gospel is not preached here. We find only occasionally one who looks for eternal life through Christ as the Life-Giver.

SATURDAY, June 29. In looking over the foreign news I see that there is much excitement among the Druses of Syria. They believe the Christians are to march against the Mohammedans before Mecca, and while both armies are preparing for a great conflict, an army of two million and a half from China will suddenly appear, commanded by five ministers of God—the Universal Mind, the Universal Soul, the Word, and the Succeeder—to whom the contending armies will submit. China is thought by the Druses to be inhabited by believers in their religion. They believe also that their best men, at death, re-appear in China. These things are to take place this year, and El-Hakem will appear in human form, as formerly in Egypt, and continue forever. He will overthrow Islamism and Christianity, and all infidelity, and reduce the earth to his sway. Believers will then be rewarded according to their rank as to character, and will hold the government of the world while the unbelievers will be reduced to poverty and servitude.

They say if these things do not come this year, then the Druses' religion will be proved false. It will soon be tested.

SABBATH, June 30. I spoke this a. m. in the United Presbyterian chapel, at Oakland. It was the first time they had heard Advent preaching. I spoke on the two advents, showing the first was literal, and the second will be also. The truth was well received. Capt. Handy had not heard an Advent sermon since he left Fairhaven, Mass., some seven years ago. After so long a fast, an Advent meeting becomes a feast indeed.

I find an open door in all this region to publish the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand. Br. Ongley is the only laborer I hear of. He has done what he could.

In the p. m. I spoke at Kane City, amid the oil wells. The people turned out in good numbers. I spoke on the inheritance of the saints, and the preparation for it. Some questions were asked at the close about the destiny of the wicked, and much interest manifested. A desire was expressed by prominent citizens to have the lectures continued the coming week, but my engagements would not allow me to remain.

TUESDAY, July 2. Spent part of the day in Detroit. Consulted with Brn. Cheney and Armstrong on the subject of an effort to scatter the light in this city. They are agreed with the ministering brethren in this vicinity, who took the subject up at the late Conference in Jackson, that when we make the effort it should be a united one, in which all who can help in the vicinity, should take hold together, and so have a united cause. What few Adventists there are now in the city are mostly poor, but noble-hearted, and will do all they can.

While in Detroit I called on Dr. Carr, on State St. He has the finest arrangements for giving Electric Baths, and has a good business. For paralysis, rheumatism, weakness, etc., these baths are among the best helps or remedies. The Doctor attends to his patients personally, and gives the best satisfaction.

WEDNESDAY, July 3. Coming to Sycamore, Ill., Eld. E. H. Burington, pastor of the Genoa Advent church, met and took me eight miles to his residence. We arrived just in season for prayer-meeting, which, though weary, I enjoyed very much. The "sweet hour of prayer," is indeed an hour of sweetness and blessedness to the weary pilgrim. I find they have some excellent gifts, which make their meetings edifying. And I learn that they keep up the prayer-meeting regularly. This is the life of the church. Where there is no prayer-meeting there is no life—indeed no real church.

I put up with Br. Burington at the parsonage, and I find our brother and family are in the enjoyment of health and good cheer. He is esteemed highly, and liberally provided for by the church, and is to them a faithful shepherd, building up the flock. We need more such men, who have a natural care for the cause. It is much easier to raise a church, than to preserve and build it up afterwards.

Br. M. M'Culloch labored here about three years before Br. Burington came, of whom I hear words of kindness. He has now removed to Ionia, Ill., and taken charge of the Advent church there.

THURSDAY, July 4. This is the nation's birthday, a day of festivity and general rejoicing; but it is connected with feasting, drinking and excess on the part of the masses of the people. Few only spend the day religiously. I have been pleased with the course that some of our churches have taken of late years respecting this day. They have appointed religious meetings, and gathered their families and children at the chapel, or the grove, and spent the day in a religious or social way, for the improvement of the manners and morals of the people. I have been invited here to assist in such a meeting to-day. Seats are prepared in the grove, near the chapel, and a table is prepared for refreshments, each family bringing provisions, and setting a common table for all. We had a fine gathering, some coming in all the way from ten to thirty miles. I spoke in the morning and afternoon of the day, first on the bright prospect—the whole earth to be filled with the glory of God. (Ps. 72: 19.) Second, on the time of the ushering in of the glory and kingdom of God. I gave proof from fulfilled prophecy and the "signs of the times," of its nearness.

At the close of each discourse there were many free testimonies given on the things of the kingdom, and the shout of a king, or, rather, the shout of some of the king's subjects was in the camp. It was good to be there. We had a shower between the services, but all passed off well.

While we love our nation and native land, as Adventists, we love the kingdom of God and the "heavenly land," for which the patriarchs looked (Heb. 11: 13–16) more. We are loyal to our country, but we are loyal also to the heavenly country for which we look. "Our citizenship is in heaven." We only journey through this earth as strangers, but the place to which we go, the new earth, will be our home.

Our brethren have put up a good chapel and parsonage here, and have everything very convenient and pleasant in this respect. The church is not wealthy, but they are liberal and have acted nobly in thus providing for themselves. And they are not neglectful of the wants of those who break to them the bread of life.

Br. S. Stevens, who was brought into the faith by the labors of Brn. Burington and H. G. McCulloch a few years ago, has been especially liberal in building up the interest here. But for him they would not have felt able to build or sustain themselves as they now do. The Lord raise up more such brethren to help the cause.

FRIDAY, July 5. Have visited with Br. B. many families to-day, and made some hearts rejoice. I find some very excellent people here, strong in faith and love; though others are weak and backslidden, and have need of help. A pastor always has enough to do. Every day brings new work.

I called on Br. Shurtleff and family, whom I had known East. He and his companion show their religion by their works. Would that all would do so. Our visit was a very precious one.

I spoke this evening on what constitutes a Christian. Many followed in remarks at the close, and some confessed their faults and resolved to live better in time to come. We had a heavenly spirit. The Lord was with us.

SATURDAY, July 6. Since I was last in this neighborhood Eld. Crocker has fallen asleep, in peace. I had a pleasant visit with his son to-day, who, with his family, is looking for the blessed hope. We called also upon three brothers, of English birth, Brn. Holroyd, all settled on the prairie, with prosperous homes, and the blessed hope of the kingdom, which is better than to have been pent up in Leeds, Eng., in poverty, and in the darkness of modern theology.

I spoke to-night on gospel peace. There was a large attendance and good interest to hear. Father Kingsley, now almost eighty, was present and spoke, giving support to my views of peace.

SABBATH, July 7. A beautiful day has dawned upon us. And a large number of people have gathered from all the region. They say it is the largest crowd they ever had in this place. There seemed to be an ear to hear the doctrine of the Adventists. Even those who had been prejudiced heretofore were now anxious to hear.

We met in a beautiful grove. And it looked pleasant to see a crowd of candid seekers after Bible truth. I spoke in the a. m. on the evidence that Christ is the Son of God, and the Savior of men. (Jno 5: 39.) At the close we went to the Kishwaukee, where Br. Burington immersed two earnest disciples. The scene at the water was a blessed one. Br. B. baptises with ease and grace.

At three p. m. we met again in the grove. I spoke from Mat. 25: 26–28, on the Lord's Supper. And the Lord made himself known to us in the breaking of bread. The Lord is with his people in this place.

Br. Burington has a good field, and does not work in vain. He has a commanding influence for good. My reception was hearty, and liberal, and we were mutually blessed. Two were added to the church and more coming. God bless Br. B. in his work of faith and labor of love.

MONDAY, July 8. Br. Stevens took me from Genoa to Sycamore, where we parted, he for home, and I for Chicago. He, and the brethren generally, take a deep interest in the removal of the office to Chicago.

The Restitution of All Things.

BY HENRY CONSTABLE.

[Continued.]

It will here be well to dwell particularly on some texts of Scripture which are most commonly brought forward in defence of the theory of endless misery. We will first consider Mark 9. 44. Speaking here of those who shall be consigned to hell, our Lord, with peculiar solemnity, declares "Their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." In order to understand this text we must go back to Is. 64: 24, from which it is quoted. Speaking of the redeemed of the earth, Isaiah there says, "They shall go forth and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." Here we see that it is not on the living but on the dead that the worm feeds and the fire preys. Hell is here brought before us in a powerful image as the complete and final cleanser of God's world by the utter destruction for ever of the remains of the wicked. These words of Isaiah, adopted by Christ, only establish our view while they emphatically contradict those of Augustine and Origen.

Is. 33: 14. "Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? Who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?" is sometimes advanced in proof of the eternity of future misery. If it refers at all to future punishment it affords us very valuable proof that the eternity which it affirms of that punishment does not refer to any eternity of life in misery but to the eternal extinction of life, to the irrevocable loss which the wicked will bring upon themselves. This is seen from the context of the passage. They who are spoken of in 14th verse are 'the people' of the 12th verse, who "shall be as the burnings of lime, as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire." "The everlasting burnings," then, are burnings whose effects are endured throughout eternity. They have cut off life which shall never be restored again. They are God's solemn warning that Origen's theory of restoration in some far-off age is a delusive dream.

We now come to the stronghold of the Augustinian theorists, the passage relative to future punishment in the Revelation of St. John. Of the worshippers of the beast we are told in the former that they "shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb, and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever, and they have no rest day nor night." In the latter passage we are told that "the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever."

We have to remark of this passage as of the entire book of Revelation, that it is highly figurative and poetical, and therefore incapable from its nature of that literal interpretation proper to ordinary writing. It is felt to be so mysterious a work that it is now an acknowledged principle with commentators not to accept any doctrine from it which may not also be established from other Scriptures. Talking all this into account we think that our interpretation of the above passage will be found suitable to their own language and exactly such as other Scriptures lead us to put upon them. Their sense we believe to be this—that the future punishment of all consigned to hell will be of an eternal nature, and that its fearful effect—the plunging of its subjects ing to death and destruction—will ever remain visible to the redeemed and angelic worlds.

Let us turn to a passage in Isaiah from which there can be little doubt that the imagery of Revelation is borrowed. Isaiah is describing the judgments brought by God upon the land of Idumea. He says, "The land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day: the smoke thereof shall go up for ever." Here, as in Revelation, we have the smoke of God's judgment described as going up for ever. But will the advocates of Augustine's hell tell us that if we went to Idumea we should see people there who had been suffering pain from some period subsequent to Isaiah's prophecy to the present time? The poetical figure of a perpetual furnace of burning pitch and ever-ascending smoke merely conveys the idea of perpetual desolation, but by no means of endless life in pain. The present condition of Edom is the explanation of the poetic figure; its cities have fallen into ruin, the whole land is a desert. Here is Poole's comment on the text, "It shall be irrecoverably ruined, and shall remain as a spectacle of God's vengeance to all succeeding ages." As Poole, the Augustinian, interprets Isaiah, so do we interpret those passages in Revelation borrowed from Isaiah. We interpret Scripture by its own analogy.

We next turn to Judge, v. 7—"Even as Sodom and Gomorrah are set forth as an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Here is another passage of Scripture of equally strong language and similar terms to those found in Revelation. Yet what is their meaning? They point to that punishment, open to human sight, which began when the fire from heaven descended on the guilty cities, and has remained in force through all the succeeding generations down to our own time, and will continue while the earth remains. It is their overthrow in the days of Lot, and their abiding condition ever since, which are placed before the assembly as an example of what awaits them hereafter if they imitate Sodom. (Deut. 29: 23; Is. 1: 9; 13: 19; Jer. 49: 18; 1: 40; 2 Pet. 2: 6.) What has been and is this state of Sodom? In the days of Abraham four populous cities flourished in the plain of Jordan. On a sudden fire descended from heaven, and after a period of terror, regrets, and pain, the inhabitants e deprived of life. They and their ks were burnt up, and this ruined, ess, hopeless condition has remain-to the present day. "The smell of fire is still over the land," says Teran. The whole transaction con-the idea of conscious pain for the

, followed by ruin and death forev-
This is, in the language of Scrip-
"to suffer the vengeance of eternal d now we see that Scripture fully fies us in interpreting the poetical uage of Revelation as we have

, and which brings their sense inrmony with the teaching of the of God's word. Even that word rment," on which such stress is is as applicable to things with-fe as to living creatures. It is same Greek verb which describes tossing of the boat in Matt. 14.
nd the "torment" of the lost in lation. The idea common to the red passages which we have con-ed together is the eternity of the which sinners bring upon them-

d now a few words upon that omphrase "unquenchable fire" on h Augustinian theorists depend so
It is a most significant phrase, ot at all significant, but the re-
, of what they mean. If the read-ll look into a dictionary he will hat an unquenchable fire is a fire h cannot be extinguished until consumed all on which it preyed, that it then goes out for want
el. Unquenchable fires break out antly among us, but none of them burning forever. So the express used in every language and in ture itself. (Ezk. 20: 47, 48; Jer.
; 17. 27.) It is an expression at all descriptive of Augustine's us theory, while it extinguishes er the baseless hope of Origen.
the terrible fate of the lost.
r fire is not quenched. It preys them with relentless force. No on the part of the damned arrest prayers ascend from the redeemr the sin which they know to be eternal death; no feelings of pity d's bosom interfere to check its
e. It burns on, consuming, prey-reducing, until it has consumed urnt all. When it has spent its it dies out for want of food, leavehind it the endless sign of the uction which it has brought on archangel, and angel, and man.
is the second death. But we can to look upon it because it is death.
re not looking upon a picture would overturn reason and ban-ace from all who beheld it. Life t the realms of the lost. The bate felt, but do not continue to the consuming flames. These n the dead until dust and ashes the floor of the furnace of hell.
4. 3.)

ile we see one universal result ely, death—to arise from future ment, we are also told in Scripof varying circumstances attenn it which are necessary to be lered in order to enable us to a just conception of its nal is not at all a sudden cessation tence. There is life in that fearison, though it continues not er. This is shown by the ous texts which speak of weeping ailing, of regrets and anguish on rt of the damned. As here, life efore death; and as here regrets ins precede and produce death, find it to be, on the part of many

, in the scene of future doom.
ildren of the kingdom, think of who have come from East and and enjoy what they have lost.
worthy guest at the marriage f Christ is in despair that he is fered to continue there. The rs of the offers of redemption,
Jews or Gentiles, behold their ling folly, and marvel at its ss. The unfaithful servant has e to bewail his want of fidelity, hypocrite to see that the part chosen is a bitter and a hard e all—sooner or later—sink in-state where wonder, and reand pain, and shame, are the unconscious sleep of the death.

here we must remark that all nings of "weeping and gnasheeth" are addressed to the re- of proffered grace. Not one is addressed to such as the Sodom and Gomorrha, Nineveh bylon were in old times; to such men of Cabul and Bokhara, Tend Timbuctoo are at the pres-
y. The same holds good of all cial warnings of Scripture. In arying circumstances we find r that great distinction in guilt sequent punishment which re insists on. Its cities of Chorazin and Bethsaida, its children of the kingdom, its refusers of an apostle's message, its hypocrites trading on a false profession, its men aware of their master's will, are held up as exceeding in guilt the ignorant offender, the undesigning sinner, the reflector of an unauthenticated messenger, the uncovenanted transgressor, the men of Tyre and Sidon. For the former are many stripes; for the latter the few. Our theory finds ample room for that great distinction in punishment which God will hereafter make.

The circumstances of the first death show us plainly how this can be. This world is a world of death. All here are doomed to die, and all suffer death. In this there is no distinction. But in the circumstances of dying there is infinite variety. One man lives close upon a thousand years ere he yields to death; to another the first breath he breathes is his last. Between Methusaleh and the infant of a moment's life lies every variety of duration. Again: one dies as though he were going to rest in sleep; another is racked with pains, year after year, by day and by night, which makes him curse the weary life that is so hardly parted from. Between these deaths lies every variety of comparative unconsciousness, inconvenience, uneasiness, weariness, and anguish. A like distinction, we are positively told, will exist in the "second death," and our theory affords for it perfect scope. To some this death may be an instantaneous process, a momentary transition from one state to another, like the infant who opens his eyes on this world and then closes them for ever. Here may be the amount of conscious pain for the myriads upon myriads of young and old who, in heathen and even in Christian countries, from the inevitable moral darkness with which their circumstances had surrounded them, scarce knew wrong from right. To others the process of the second death may be more or less lengthened, until we arrive at the case of the greatest human offenders, or that more aggravated one of the spirits who fell from heaven and drew weaker man after them in their fall. In our theory we see how it may be, as it certainly will be, more tolerable for some than for others in the day of judgment; how, while stripes many and sore fall on some, on others they may fall so few and light as scarcely to be felt at all.

The view here advocated derives powerful confirmation from its being in complete analogy with nature, i. e., with God's ordinary working. While those who seek God find him, and, in finding him, find life, and through his gracious plan of redemption are advanced in place and glory, we also find, with regard to others, lives innumerable lost, and in the case of angels an entire race blotted out of being. God and nature are not here in strife. We find in nature that death and destruction are God's usual agents in removing from their place animate and inanimate as soon as they cease to be fit for the part for which they were intended. Throughout the wide domain of nature the law of death is in ceaseless operation. Of fifty seeds but one may bear fruit. Of the lower animals death after life is the usual law. Whole races of living things have long ceased to exist.

"From scarped cliff and quarried stone,
She cries, a thousand types are gone."

In our view God does but apply to higher races for their sin that which he has applied to lower races who knew no sin. The grand distinction between these and us is that we may see and know God, who is Life and the source of all lower life. If we turn from him we turn from life. We deny and renounce our real distinction, and are treated as that which we have made ourselves to become. Mere life is not precious in God's sight. If he scatters it with a prodigal hand, he withdraws it with a hand that is just as free. In the myriads of human beings reduced in hell to death, in the extinction of the fallen angels, we do but find a particular application of a great general law. Lower creatures know not God, and fade away out of life. Higher intelligences knew him, turned from him, made themselves like beasts, and like beasts are treated. Hell will add its fossil remains to those of the quarries of the earth.

The opinion of the early Church on this question is of great importance, but in a brief work we can only allude to it. Those who wish to find an account of it will do so in Chapters 9 and 10 of our book on "The Duration of Future Punishment." We will here merely state that the view of the Christian Church for more than a century and a half completely agreed with that which we here maintain. (To be continued.)

Advertisements.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER

SADDUCEEAN

NOR

PHARISAIC,

BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.
What did the Pharisees believe?
What did the Sadducees teach?
The pure theology—the ancient faith.
The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.
The true doctrine of a future life set forth!
Patriarchs expected it,
Prophets looked for it,
Jesus Christ demonstrated it.
Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.
Dead men are not alive.
Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?
What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.
Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.
Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,

FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township [illegible] Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $400, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Record. A first class, illustrated, practical magazine. Unique and desirable. Volume [illegible] will commence in June. $2 a year. THE TIMES and Record one year for $3 50.

H. V. Reed, Publisher, 3 South Canal St. Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 34 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $25. tf

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR* NEW WINDOW LOCKS, *THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
([illegible]) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d. To St. Joseph, Kansas City and a Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, [illegible] cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

FRUIT FARM

FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting house and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWYER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

E. H. WHEELER'S

IMPROVED

AXLE & THIMBLE SKEIN

PATENTED JAN. 12, 1872.

THE LIGHTEST, STRONGEST, AND BEST AXLE BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

Less liable to break, and cannot spring under any amount of weight that can be put upon it.

It takes a smaller sized axle and bolster or sandboard than the same sized skeins of common style; is more simple and easier to fit, the skein being of uniform taper, without shoulders upon the inside a better fit is secured. The axle can be turned in a common lathe to fit the thimble, by putting one end out of center.

The arm, or spindle, is so made as to secure the proper set of the wheels, when moderately dished, with the bottom line of the spindle on a parallel line to the bottom of the axle, an important principle never before attained. The set of the wheels is a perpendicular or right angle to the bottom line of the axle upon the face of the spokes, upon their lower half.

This cut shows the thimble and lug for the tension rod across the bottom of the axle, from thimble to thimble, and the socket for the bolster, or the sandboard, as the case may be. I also use a sand guard to keep the dirt out of the shoulder of the hub; but it is not shown in this cut.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Sample thimble skeins furnished to purchasers of rights, at actual cost. For further information address

E. H. WHEELER, Memphis,
Scotland county, Missouri.

☞ Please state where you saw this advertisement.

THE BIBLE BANNER FREE!

We desire to call the attention of the readers of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES to our offer in the Bible Banner, to send it to every minister of the gospel of any denomination who will send us his address, or otherwise signify his desire to receive it.

ONE YEAR FREE

We request the readers of the TIMES to aid us in presenting this offer to such ministers as are devoted men of God, and who would probably accept, and be benefitted thereby.

Do not urge any one to accept, for we have not the means, at present, to send very many papers free, but trust the Lord will provide enough to send it where it should go to prepare the way for our weekly papers, and stir up the watchmen to sound the alarm to a guilty world. A copy of the Banner from one with whom the minister is acquainted is worth a dozen sent by mail from the office of publication.

THE BANNER AND TIMES.

We will send the Banner six months free to all new subscribers to the TIMES, and to all old subscribers who mention this offer when they remit (to TIMES office) for 1873. We make one condition to this offer, viz. before the close of the six months they must either notify us to discontinue, or remit for the future, as soon as convenient.

We expect to present a large fine engraving in every number of the Banner, hereafter, which will illustrate and add new interest to Bible truth. We have already commenced the series of illustrations. Send ten cents for three sample copies. Address:

H. A. KING,
14 Murray St. New York.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES and the Bible Banner will be sent one year, with a free book, for $2.75, or without book, for $2.50. Address:

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
No. 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents.

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 60c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—40c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 30c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $2.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By F. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

*DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Des*truction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 10c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; be*ing a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 15c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 130 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 40 pp. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 204 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c; postage, 8c.

SOUND THE BATTLE CRY.

Sound the battle cry!
See! the foe is nigh;
Raise the standard high
For the Lord;
Gird your armor on,
Stand firm every one;
Rest your cause upon
His holy word.

Chorus—Rouse then, soldiers!
Rally round the banner!
Ready, steady,
Pass the word along;
Onward, forward,
Shout aloud Hosannah!
Christ is captain
Of the mighty throng.

Strong to meet the foe,
Marching on we go,
While our cause we know
Must prevail;
Shield and banner bright
Gleaming in the light;
Battling for the right
We ne'er can fail.

Oh! thou God of all,
Hear us when we call,
Help us one and all
By thy grace;
When the battle's done,
And the vict'ry won,
May we wear the crown
Before thy face.

The Christian Life.

Selections from the Letters of Madam Guyon.

[Translated from the French, and hitherto unpublished in our language.]

THOUGHTS ON PRAYER.

We should pray no less when we find difficulty in it, than when we enjoy it. When we have a sweet facility in prayer, it is God who gives us proofs of his kindness and his love; but when in spite of weariness and dryness, we nevertheless continue to pray, we give him proofs of ours. Pray, then, always, without regarding your feelings; he who approaches the fire, though he see it not, is nevertheless warmed. It is impossible, in times of dryness, to prevent the imagination from wandering. The best you can do is to call in your thoughts as vigorously as you can, resigning yourself to God to remain in that state as long as he pleases.

I could never comprehend how one could be truly spiritual and neglect prayer. I have always strongly opposed the opinion that when one is advanced in piety, he has no longer need of appropriating particular seasons to prayer. Who can be compared to Jesus Christ, who passed whole nights in this holy exercise? I know that on some occasions, which take us by surprise, we should make no scruple of leaving it to fulfill other duties to which Providence calls us—but this is for once, and we should resume it as soon as possible.

It is also an abuse to imagine that because one has the presence of God during the day, it is not necessary to take regular times for prayer. The presence of God is the fruit of prayer, and he who ceases to offer it, will not long preserve this presence in the doings of the day. It is not always necessary to do it at a certain fixed hour, but we should give ourselves a holy leisure for practicing it daily. We give nourishment to our bodies; let us give it also to our souls. We spend much time unprofitably; let us give part of it to our souls. We spend much time unprofitably; let us give part of it to God; that surely will not be lost time.

We converse often with our friends if we would maintain a familiar friendship. It is the same with God; the more we converse with him, the more he becomes familiar to us, and the more we love him.

The want of interior nourishment and of prayer causes a withering and a sadness in the whole soul. Though you should do no other thing in prayer than present yourself before God, without any other movement on your part, you would find that insensibly the condition of your soul would be changed and its strength renewed. You will advance in prayer only as you shall be more given up to God, that he may cause you to do it not in your way, but in his.

Remain simply exposed to his divine rays, as one exposes himself to the rays of the sun and the fire to get warmed; and there may appear in you no action on your part but the simple placing yourself before God, yet the divine warmth of his love will imperceptibly penetrate you, as the fire insensibly penetrates bodies at a distance. I pray you to try this way; though you may have less satisfaction, it will, nevertheless, advance your soul much more; at least you will have this advantage, of being in the hands of God, that he may do with you whatever he pleases, and become the sole principle of your prayer.

SELF-RENUNCIATION.

We pass long years without becoming better, because we are not willing to forsake self. Let us not measure our love to God by our feelings, but by our self-renunciation. How are we weaned from self, we who wish to be flattered, whom the truth wounds, who seek that which accommodates us, who wish to rest on feathers and down; who say to the cross, "Withdraw from us, you are too hard!" we who desire to be thought highly of, who have vain joy when we are esteemed, and grief when we imagine we have lost that esteem; who renounce ourselves in nothing, who call ourselves children of the divine Master without following him; who desire what we choose, and desire it strongly; who affect to be simple, and wish to appear so, though there is nothing of which we have less than simplicity; we who take every form to make ourselves esteemed, who are idolaters of ourselves and of all that we do, who elevate ourselves above others; we who withdraw our heart from God to give it to creatures, whose souls are adulterous and divided, who say to God by our works, "Depart from us, thou art a jealous God; we wish to live as we please, and thou canst not suffer it;" yet we flatter ourselves that we are the children of the divine and lowly Jesus.

We have none of his features; we shall not then have his inheritance. He recognizes not those illegitimate children, who spring from the alliance of the flesh with the Spirit. Where is that mutual love which he so strongly recommended to us? If you were united to him, you would be so to your brethren. But I recognize not in you the lowly Master.

Let us not flatter ourselves, but be renewed in the spirit of our mind; let us quit the old man, to be clothed with the new. Where is our faith and our love? I discover it not. We are naked, and think ourselves well clothed. I weep over the daughter of my people.

O the laxity, the laxity of Christians! Would to God they were either cold or hot! But because they are lukewarm, God rejects them. If they were wholly cold, their coldness would trouble them, and they would be likely to seek warmth from God; if they were hot, they would fulfill their duty, and attaching themselves to the one object of their love, they would not continually vacillate. If God is loved, why not serve him as he deserves to be served? If one prefers the world, why not give himself up to it boldly? Why waver thus, sometimes on the side of God, sometimes on that of the world? O my God, how afflicting is the state of Christianity! None has the heart to declare himself entirely for God. They wish to appear good with the good, and are really wicked with the wicked. I say this in the bitterness of my heart.

O be courageous, and fight the battles of the Lord.—Trans. for the A. C. TIMES by E. C.

Correspondence.

More Good News.

It will doubtless be cheering to those "of like precious faith" to hear of the joyous greeting of brethren and sisters during our late ministerial Conference held at Jeffersonville. We had a most interesting and profitable meeting. Our ministering brethren preached with force and telling effect, and as a happy result there were eight added to the church during the week. It was indeed solemnly impressive, as night after night at the close of the sermon so ably delivered, we visited the baptismal waters of the beautiful Ohio, and here by the light of the moon, buried beneath the yielding waves the loved ones who had so nobly professed their faith in Christ. And I am happy here to record that among the number thus obedient to their absent Lord was the grand daughter of our venerable brother and indefatigable laborer, Dr. N. Field. It was indeed a time of rejoicing, not only to the household of our brother, to receive this lamb into the fold, but to us all that God had given this token of approbation upon the labors put forth at this time in his cause. The church was greatly refreshed and many spiritual and cheerful testimonies were daily given in by brethren and sisters whose hearts overflowed with love and gratitude to God for the manifestation of his mercy in our midst. Dr. Cass, in his usual forcible manner, made our hearts glad with the gospel message that fell from his lips, while Br. G. W. Green in masterly style introduced his hearers into the glories of the coming kingdom in such a delightful manner as made them long to be there. He is a young man of talent and great promise, and I trust the church will so fully care for his family as to keep him most of the time in the field now so white for the harvest. His musical talent and beautiful singing is a most welcome accompaniment to his able preaching.

I was again permitted to make my annual visit to the prison and speak to those erring ones of God's great love and mercy to fallen man. I closed up in my own humble way with the saint's inheritance, the glorious restitution and time of reward at the coming of our blessed Lord, with more Scriptural proofs than they are accustomed to hear. They seemed greatly interested, and by their marked attention took in the truths of the Bible so new to their ears and yet made so plain to their understanding. They were much pleased and comforted in their sorrows with some of our beautiful hymns, such as, "Take it to the Lord in prayer," "The happy time is coming." It cheered my own heart that I could even for a little while make those erring ones, shut out from the passing world, seemingly forget their present affliction in hope of the glorious immortality brought to light through the gospel. I gave them a bundle of tracts, which I trust will do them good.

I cannot close this brief notice of my visit there without some allusion to Col. L. S. Shuller, their excellent and estimable Warden. He is not only a gentleman, but a Christian, and every way worthy of the responsible position he so nobly fills. In our struggle here to build a house for the Lord, unexpectedly he sent to us $——, and gave me something more for the distribution of tracts. May God restore to him four fold for his generous and unlooked for gift, and bring him more fully unto the truth concerning our coming Lord, that he with us may love and long for his appearing.

But the time came to part with all those loved ones at Jeffersonville, with the blessed hope, however, of soon meeting at our Father's banquet and marriage supper of the Lamb. I came home by the way of the river, where I had opportunity for a few hours to engage willing and candid listeners in an animated conversation upon the great truths of our Savior's coming and kindred subjects of vital interest. I distributed tracts, obtained one subscriber and left behind me as I left the boat, in some minds at least, a greater desire to know more what the Bible teaches and less of human opinion and the traditions that have so long obscured to our understanding the teachings of Jesus and his apostles. I visited other dear friends on my journey home, promulgating the gospel message so necessary to be made known in the close of the present dispensation of mercy to our fallen race.

The moments are so precious that I cannot let them pass without trying to do something for the perishing all around me. Let us all wake up to the present duties of the passing hour, while the multitude seem to be heedless, and the "peace and safety time" has apparently reached the masses. Let us warn them of the predicted "destruction" that waits all such, hoping that with much prayer and a godly life we may influence some to turn away from the follies and fashions of the present day to seek refuge in Christ, and with us look for the glory to be revealed at the coming of our blessed Lord and Savior.

MARY A. TIBBETS.

From W. A. Fenn.

I had the honor of preaching the dedicatory sermon of the new union house at East Randolph, N. Y., June 6. A Baptist, and three Methodist clergymen were present and assisted in the services. We had a large audience and a pleasant time. We raised $250 on the occasion, which left the house clear of debt, before we dedicated it. The house is a neat and comfortable structure, free to all sects and persuasions.

Br. C. N. Hovey has had the burden of rebuilding this house, and it reflects much credit to his taste, as well as his noble spirit of sacrifice. This field is much in need of a good and strong man to cultivate it and develop the seed already sown. I pray God such a man may be provided.

From Maggie Alexander, Adair Co. Iowa.

I am so rejoiced over my having found the truth that I am constrained to tell it to the world. I was raised in the Methodist church, and, like many others, I believed just what the preacher told me, without asking questions; but my eyes have been opened, and I have learned that I can read my Bible for myself, and I can believe just as it reads. It tells me that "the wages of sin is death;" that the wicked shall be blotted out, and be as though they had not been; that the soul that sinneth it shall die. Thus saith the Scripture, and I believe the record.

And I believe, too, that Jesus is soon coming. I am looking and waiting for him. I have learned from my Bible that our only hope is in the resurrection. (Acts 22: 6; 24: 15; 1 Cor. 1: 7, 8; 2 Cor. 1: 9; 4: 10, 14.) These are a few among the many passages that prove what is the object of our faith, hope and comfort.

Br. D. S. Clark came to this place a few months ago and preached the word, and a number of us received the truth, the way is opened, and I pray God to carry on his work against every opposition.

From Isaac Adrian.

My visit to Iowa has been a blessing to me. I can think of no illustration more appropriate than to say it has been like the cooling breeze to the weary traveler on the parched desert. Here I met old friends with whom I took sweet counsel in the first years of this theological reform. They gave me welcome to their homes and hearts. How refreshing in the midst of the increasing conflict, and unavoidable trials of the time of the end, it is to meet those who have stood the storm of battle from the first.

Br. Janes and Kenny were my old helpers twenty-nine years ago, when I raised the cry in the northern part of New England and in Canada. When I remember these by-gone years and their unchanging records, there is a bitter regret mixed with my cup of joy. Oh that I had been more faithful to the Master who I know honored me with a commission.

I experienced increasing pleasure in meeting one another, and still another, and they come to the desk saying—"You preached in my mother's house in Massachusetts." "I heard you preach the Advent eighteen years ago in an orchard on the hills of Conway, Mass." Another says "I saw you baptise a man ninety-three years old, in Montgomery Vt." I distinctly remember this interesting fact. This man was converted under John Wesley, when sixteen years of age. As I stood preaching the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and the redemption of the globe, the old veteran would respond, "That's what Wesley preached!" while the tears rolled down his withered cheeks.

The brethren expect to advance instead of retreat. They want help and must have it. I find no disturbing element in the Conference, no strife for leadership or ambition for personal rule. All was harmony of action. Sr. M. J. Janes has her gift, and manifests talents by no means inferior. She should be kept in the field.

Br. Dutton a few years ago was an infidel. He has good preaching talents, and will make his mark. Pray for him, and invite him out to visit you. He will do you good. The tent is ready to start to any part of Iowa, and I am ready to go with it. My address will be Manchester, Iowa, care of F. H. Kenny.

From Ruth M. Rowell.

Through the divine strength and guidance I am still holding up the banner of the cross and pointing sinners to the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Through the years that I have been called upon to stand upon the walls of Zion and proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, I have known something of the trials and persecutions, the cares and perplexities that appertain to this self-denying avocation. But out of them all the Lord has been pleased to deliver me, and through trial bring me nearer and nearer to his own dear self. Like Paul I can say I know how to be abased and how to abound; but through the darkest hours, when I passed "under the deep waters and the billows went over my head," I could say with the same apostle, "Cast down but not destroyed." And through the help of Christ, I have been enabled to rise from these stern conflicts and dark hours of trial to a closer walk with God, "a calm and heavenly frame;" for "I know that my Redeemer liveth and in the latter day he will stand upon the earth," and I am trying to live with reference to that glad and glorious event.

My life is one of arduous labor in the cause of Christ. The harvest is so great in this western country and laborers are so few we cannot find it in our hearts to dally with the pleasures of life or settle down in quiet rest while the masses in this Mississippi Valley are rushing on the broad road to death, and many of them can well say, "No man careth for my soul."

"Oh who will go and find them in the paths of sin they roam?"

Never methinks since I entered the ministry have I been so pressed with calls for earnest, steady, continued labor at so many points as at the present; and while sometimes tired nature and pressing cares call loudly for cessation from this constant preaching, I look to my blessed Master and his cause, and a "world lying in the arms of the wicked one," and I cannot find it in my heart to "lay my armor down." While I cannot begin to supply the numerous and repeated calls, still by the grace of God I am determined to do what I can for my blessed Master, for I hope bye and bye to hear him say, "Well done!"

I am preaching half the time in West Salem and Burns, Wis., where there are some precious Advent brethren and sisters. The other half I have been preaching for the past year within a few miles of my home in Minn., where the Lord has blessed me greatly in my labors the past year, and to him I feel belongs all the glory. But I often get released from this near field to carry the news of the gospel of his kingdom to other points, thus in my weak way trying to scatter the seed far and near, at home and abroad, as God commissions me, trusting to him to give the increase.

I have long been struggling and hoping to get things so arranged that I might leave home for a few months at least and proclaim this gospel in dear old New England, to the friends of my youth, where my beloved parents, now sleeping in Jesus, preached for so many years a crucified but risen Savior.

But to the earnest calls coming to me from across the Alleghanies I can only respond that I see not how I can be spared from this field. Yet since the distressing news of the death of my own beloved sister, Mrs. Hobbs, so recently, I sometimes feel that I must leave all and go.

Truly this is a world of change and passing away, and when the person of mature years looks back upon the journey of life and calls to mind the friends of his youth, and the early ties and associations so rudely broken in the onward march of time, he realizes fully the words of the poet:

"Oft in the stilly night, ere slumber's chain hath bound me,
Fond memory brings the light of other days around me.
The smiles, the tears of other years, the words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone, now dimmed and gone,
the cheerful hearts now broken;
When I remember all the friends thus linked together,
I've seen around me fall like leaves in wintry weather,
I feel like one who treads alone some banquet hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled, whose garlands dead,
And all but me departed."

But the blessed Jesus when he comes will restore all these missing links that are good and true and worth preserving, and give all of his ransomed ones a precious and grand reunion, where the lights will never pale, the garlands never wither, the mansions of beauty never be deserted, and friends tried and true never be seperated, but "the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water." Hasten it, dear Master, in thine own sacred time. Meanwhile help us to watch and work, and wait and be ready.

Conference Minutes

Illinois.

DE KALB DISTRICT.

The storm and bad roads interfered greatly in the commencement of our meeting, so there was no assembly until Friday eve. But our meeting was good from this to the end. Preaching by Brn. Barington, Spencer, Crocker and McCullock. In the love-feast many testimonies were given by Adventists, Disciples and others.

At a session of the Conference it was voted to request the preachers within the bounds of the Conference to take up their appointments the Sabbath of the Conference and attend the same.

It was also voted that the officers of the Conference correspond with the preachers who are members and living within the bounds, for the purpose of knowing whether we can have their help and co-operation, and so know what course to take in regard to appointing future meetings.

Adjourned to the call of the officers. H. G. M'CULLOCK, Sec'y.

A FEW PLAIN WORDS:

Shall we sustain our quarterly meetings or not? If preaching brethren continue the course they have pursued, the question is already settled: we cannot, and the sooner we give them up the better. If the excuse is that it will injure a local interest to give up an appointment for one day, more than it will do the general cause good, then why have them at all? for we all have our local interests.

But we do not believe thus. An interest that can't live through one Sabbath without preaching must be built on a sandy foundation; and I would not preach to a church that depended entirely on my preaching every Sunday to keep them out of the slough of despondency. And a church that cannot meet and sing and pray while their pastor is off to a council of war, needs another baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Perhaps some of our preachers are so far advanced that they do not need to be edified by the preaching of others, or to take council with them for the good of the cause. God has his men of war, like Saul; his David's, the keepers of sheep: and it may be said of many in the judgment day—Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his tens of thousands.

But whatever may be our excuse, let us cease to make them: for by staying away we deprive the meeting of our presence and help and keep others away that ought to be there. Come, and we shall no longer hear the inquiry "Where is ——?"

Now Br. Editor, don't cut this down so much, for I want it to hit and I will be responsible. H. G. M.

Michigan.

NORTHERN DISTRICT Q. M.

The fourth Q. M. for the present year was held at the Lamson S. H., Ashland, May 23–26. Voted, That the Committees be appointed by the chair.

Business Committee: E. B. Scott, R. Burtenshaw, and Wm. Wheeler.

Devotional: A. W. Lamson, D. Weaver, Wm. Wheeler.

Report of churches: Millbrook, Hinton, Ashland, Dayton, Denver, Hesperia, Levaitt, and Wexford.

Reported: A flourishing Sunday School at Hesperia, and a Union S. S. at Dayton: good attendance.

Report of ministers: J. Bowen, E. B. Scott, R. Burtenshaw, Wm. Wheeler, D. Weaver, A. G. Hopkins, and Sr. L. W. King, were present and gave encouraging reports.

It was voted to appoint a Treasurer and raise a Missionary Fund, for the advancement of the cause of Christ in this District.

We recommend each church in this District to pay into the Treasury of the church monthly, what they can for this fund, and send it to the Treasurer of this Quarterly Conference at each Q. M. The fund to be appropriated as the Conference may direct. A. W. Lamson was appointed Treasurer.

Ajourned, to meet in Dayton about the middle of August.

The results of this meeting were of the most encouraging character. Prejudice broke down, and other good results followed. E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Iowa.

DEEP CREEK DISTRICT.

The third Q. M. of the Deep Creek District convened at the Esgate S. H., Jackson Co. Iowa, Friday, June 14. Preaching Brn. present—Pitcher, Adair, Grover, and Woodard, who gave encouraging reports of their labors. Br. Jas. R. Carrol, of the Christian Church, was recommended by the same, and by vote was admitted to improve his talent in the ministry.

There was a good attendance and our meeting a complete success.

JOHN ROUSH, Sec'y.

Iowa Campmeeting.

Campmeeting Board convened at New Hartford, June 22, 1872. Alonzo Raymond in the chair. On motion, M. A. Newcomb was elected sec'y. pro tem.

Voted, That all brethren and members of the church belonging to the Christian Conference be invited to participate in the deliberations.

The following officers were elected for the year: P. S. W. Deyo, President; C. C. Ramsay, Vice President; M. A. Newcomb, Sec'y., and E. W. Burt, Treas. To complete the Board of Directors, Sanford Peck, Jasper Ingalls, and W. H. Peck were elected.

Voted, To invite the Conference to hold its next annual session in connection with our next campmeeting.

Voted, That this Board elect an Auditor. N. F. Eggleston was elected to that office, and meeting adjourned at call of the President.

Auditor reported condition of the treasury. Amount in the treasury, $26.

Voted, That the next campmeeting be held in June of next year, commencing on Thursday before the full of the moon.

Voted, That R. Stevens, James Griffith, John Refsnider, —. Cleaveland, L. G. Denton and H. M. Brwen be a committee to make arrangements to hold a campmeeting near Charles City, this summer or fall.

Voted, That there be a committee appointed to arrange the setting out of shade trees, and to see that the work is done. Jasper Ingalls, E. Dunham, and W. H. Peck were appointed said committee.

Adjourned, with bright prospects for the future. Brn. Wm. Sheldon, C. C. Ramsay, P. S. W. Deyo, and other ministers of Christ were present and administered the word; and we can truly say that we had a rich feast. May we all meet where the rich and blessed feasts shall never end.

M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec'y.

Quarterly Meeting in Iowa.

The quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference convened at Tama City, Iowa, May 25th, by appointing Br. M. A. Newcomb President pro tem, and Wm. H. Shafer clerk. The church of Christ at Ettie, Clark township, Tama Co., presented by P. S. Converse, their delegate, with twenty members in full connection, and were received. Adjurned sine die. WM. H. SHAFER, clerk pro tem.

NOTE. This meeting, so close to the annual meeting, was not very well attended, but was very good for those who were there. I had to do most of the preaching. Br. Talmadge spoke once, and four united with the church.

I called at Ettie on my way down and back. Men have been here preaching against the truth, and have managed to sow discord, so that some will be like good seed sown by the wayside. Four were baptised.

I am now at home, preparing for our annual campmeeting. Hope that there will be a good attendence. This closes my twelfth year for the conference as an Evangelist. A condensed report will be given hereafter of this year. We are nearing home and rest.

P. S. W. DEYO.

Central Illinois.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The A. C. Conference of Central Illinois met according to appointment at West Point, June 8. Organised and proceeded to elect officers, which resulted in the appointment of the following Board: A. S. Calkins, President: G. W. Hurd, Vice President: O. D. Gibson, Sec'y. The attendance from abroad of both ministers and delegates was very small. There is a great fault in this matter in this Conference. There should be greater effort to attend, and if this is not practicable, they should not fail by any means to report by letter. If it is of any importance at all to have a Conference, why not comply with its regulations? If we don't want one let us not kill it by neglect, but meet and and vote it ended, in good order.

There was a good report from some of the preachers and churches. Br. L. Scott's labors in Brown Co. had been blest: a few converted, and several baptised. Br. G. W. Hurd's and Sr. A. E. Rathbun's labors in Denver and West Point last winter resulted in good. 39 united with us, and others are coming. A good Sunday School there also.

Sr. Rathbun's labors in Livingston Co. were blest in three places. Several came out at each place, but are not organized. Br. O. D. Gibson had labored in 5 or 6 counties; had seen good results in several places. Baptised 10 in Palmer, Christian Co., and expect others yet to go forward.

The meeting was attended by the people around West Point, very largly both day and night. So good a state of feeling was manifested, the meetings were continued until Thursday following. Several were converted, and eleven were baptised into the name of Christ by Br. Scott.

O. D. GIBSON, Sec'y.

NOTICE TO ADVENTIST PREACHERS.

The A. C. Conference of Central Illinois voted at its late sitting to offer the Shiloh Tent to any Adventist preacher in good standing in the West who will repair it and put it into the field proclaiming the soon coming of Jesus. The cloth of the top is about all that will be necessary to get new. I think the ropes and curtains and guy poles will nearly all do to wear out another top.

The above offer is to hold good for two months from date, (June 18') after which, if not accepted the tent will be sold for the benefit of the Conference treasury. Here is a great chance for some field where they wish a tent. This offer is made to some preacher, but of course he may get any number to help him he pleases. All letters should be directed to O. D. GIBSON, Clayton Ill.

New York.

HOOSIC VALLEY, Q. M.

The second Q. M. convened at Sandy Hill, N. Y., Thursday, Apr. 18th. 1872, and closed the following Sabbath evening. Had four business sessions, A. W. Sibley in the chair.

The following brethren were present: Preachers—A. W. Sibley, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; H. K. Flagg, Savoy, Mass.; Richard Mosher, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt.; J. L. Knapp, Saratoga, N. Y.; Jacob Wilber, No. Easton, N. Y.; C. W. Baker, Pawling, N. Y.; J. L. Wood, New Millford, Ct.; and James Ferris, Buchanan, Mich.

Delegates: Jacob Pike, Nelson W. Wait and Dea. J. Pike, Sandy Hill; C. H. Johnson, Saratoga, Geo. E. Whipple, Ft. Edward, Wm O. Munson, and David W. Lincoln, Hebron; John B. White, Hoosic Falls; and Chas. A. Friar, No. Easton, N. Y.

Brn. Mathewson, Ferriss, Wood and Baker were invited to sit with us and participate in our deliberations.

The reports of preachers and delegates were of a cheering character, God having abundantly blessed the labors of his servants since our last quarterly session.

Voted, That Brn. Wood and Baker be received as members of this Conference.

Voted, That we do not think it advisable for this Conferecoe to hold a campmeeting this year.

The following resolution was unanimously passed.

Resolved, That we appreciate the courtesy extended by the N. Y. State A. C. Conference, with reference to uniting with them in a State campmeeting.

Voted, That this Conference procure a Tent, in which to hold meetings as the Lord may direct. Brn. A. W. Sibley, S G. Mathewson and H. K. Flagg were chosen a committee to procure the Tent and serve in the use of the same.

Receipts, in pledges and money, were more than one half the required amount, for the purchase of the tent. (All who feel it a privilege to contribute to this object are requested to do so as willing and obedient stewards.)

A vote of thanks was cordially extended to the brethren of Sandy Hill and vicinity, for their kind and courteous reception and hospitable care shown us while providentially we were permitted to be with them. May the blessing of God abide with them.

A. P. BUMP, Sec'y.

Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y.

The third quarterly session of this Conference was held at the Button S. H., in Middlebury, Tioga Co. Pa., June 8, 1872. Conference called to order by the President.

N. Rice and E. Potter delegates from the Troup's Creek church; E. H. Eggleston delegate from Turner Creek; S. Gardner from Westfield; O. Conley from Little Marsh. Preachers present: B. Butler, E. H. Eggleston, J. W. Taylor, A. H. Briggs. Preachers absent: Ira Slocum, D. B. Hunt, W. Mariatt.

Minutes of the last session read.

The Church of God at Woodhull, Steuben Co. N. Y., was received; also the church at Ripley, Chatauque Co. N. Y. Brn. O. Conley, A. Mallory, and E. Keeler were appointed committee on devotional exercises.

Voted, That the President of this Conference deliver an address at the opening of the Annual Session.

Adjourned to meet with the church at Fremont Center, Steuben Co. N. Y., Sept. 12, 1872.

During the Conference there was six sermons preached, two sessions of conference, and the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper were celebrated. The meeting was good from the first to the close, and we feel like saying "it was good to be there," and we expect excellent results. May the blessing of God rest upon the labor.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Minnesota.

OTTAWA DISTRICT.

The second Q. M. for the Ottawa District was held at Scotch Lake, Le Seuer Co., commencing Friday eve. May 24. Our meetings were well attended considering the season and the weather which was rather threatening. Our Sunday morning meeting was full. Some thirty gave in their testimony on the side of the truth we love, and about twenty more arose who had not spoken, witnessing that they were interested in the blessed hope. Preaching brethren present—Scott, Bacon, Lombard and Miller. Engaged to meet at Lombard and Winegar's Mill, Sept. 12, when we shall expect a general rally of all those living in the Ottawa Dist. These seasons and opportunities are like Showers that ripen the grain for the harvest.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Our Young Folks.

That "Sum in Addition."

DEAR UNCLE: You are very kind to remember "Our Young Folks."

I have never studied mathematics, but I think your "Sum in Addition" is very easy, for there are only eight figures, and I find in the same "old book" that the sum total, when added up, makes: The Fruit of the Spirit. Proof: The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.

Now, dear Uncle, will you please do a little sum in subtraction? Give answer and proof: "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

How many, and of which class "shall" not "come forth?"

Worcester, Mass. GERTIE B.

ANSWER. If all the dead hear the voice of the Son of man and come forth, we really see no chance for subtraction in the case. ED.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—60 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—46 pp. Restitution—36 pp.
Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,200 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 309 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 192 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered; Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the Signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 464 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $3 00, post-paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 30c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage, 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 00 a dozen.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 139 pp. 30c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 284 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July 16, 1878.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication, ☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O. Address.

O. R. Fassett and L. E. Fassett, Santa Clara, Cal.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers; but a new edition is nearly ready.

We would be oblig[illegible] a copy of D. P. Hall's Man Not Immortal, or for[illegible]mation as to where a copy can be obtained.

JAMES McDONAL moved from Iowa to Minnesota in the fall of 1868. Any one knowing his P. O. Address will confer a favor by sending it to F. H. Kenny, Manchester, Iowa.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $120 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Attention.

One Richard J. Turner, hailing from Rochester N. Y. is in the West. He is unreliable. Look out for him. He pretends to be an Adventist and tells a sympathetic story. Don't invest anything in him.

FRANK BURR.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 100 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 30c.

To Correspondents.

A. B. FABRICK. Many thanks. We will not take it from you. We wish a copy for sale.....E. B. SCOTT. It will be all right. Do what you can.....I. C. WELLCOME. Letter was received.....E. A. LAKE. The $2.00 paid the bill.....C. PALMER. We will gladly comply with your wish.....H. RUST. We will wait .....W. ROYCE. All received. Will send something. .....P. S. BUCK. The statement was made out before that date.

Communications.

ACCEPTED. B., L. F. C., G. M. B., G. W. G.,

Tract Fund.

A. S. Kingsley 25c; J. L. Paine 3.00

Poor Fund.

M. Briggs 50c; M. P. Hinds 1.00

Norwegian Tract.

H. Halmboe $12.00 (pledge.)

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A S Kingsley T G Bartlett T Barker S L Grandy I C Wellcome G S Vincent S Bentley S K Gibson J R Mitchell H J Sweetland L F Cole S W Rider J Raymond J W Stouffer P S Buck M Briggs E C Andrus H L Skeels E B Scott J G Junk O R Fassett E C Chadwick W F Barr W R Kendall L M Stoddard G T Adams E A Lake G W Hurd N Mason L F Cole D S Morris J Lewis R W Orton M B Hubbell (2) W M Rhoade A Wilbur T R Weaver C Palmer Mrs E Mann S M Lum J S Morrison L Z Lotspiech M A Tibbetts S Wing W J Lambert J R Sheef H H Davis Z D Baird H Rust G T Adams J L Paine C P Coleman C B Hall R W Wilson M P Hinds A S Corey H J Munson H Constable D Mathewson (2) W Royce A M Poole H Liederbach W Branch G W Green D D Reed O R Fassett M M'Culloch L F Cole W C Hicks (2) C R Leverton H Munger P Foster E Kelly P S Buck C W Turner W J Waterous A E Cole G Thomson J Stinson G W Miller L D Groom O C Denslow W E Hathaway A F Dugger D Cogswell P Allyn C B Coleman J Day H G Bean E Reed J S Chambers W L Dibble D Q Kent N O Moore G T Adams.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J Lewis W M Rhoade S Lum L Z Lotspiech H Rust S K Gibson W S DeVoss W L Skeels T H Harlan E B Scott W C Hicks W J Waterous J Hodgson C P Coleman J S Bradford L C Collins J Farley (3) L D Groom (3) W C Hicks (3) E Reed (2) W S Dibble J S Bradford C B Coleman (2) L C Collins W J Waterous (2) J Hodgson.

By Express—H A King & co E C Andrus L F Cole J R Towle J M Snook.

Notices, Etc.

Kansas Tent.

Dear Brethren and friends who have subscribed for the 'Tent,' our Subscription Fund is nearly raised. We wish to get the Tent at work now in a very short time; so let all who have subscribed be preparing themselves for prompt response. And those who purpose helping do so at once, so there need be no delay. The Lord is blessing and will bless those that trust and obey him.

Send all money by mail to Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co. Kan. Postal Orders, to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

The Kansas Mission Tent.

We the undersigned, desiring as soon as possible to raise means to procure a tent for the Kansas Advent Christian Association, pledge ourselves to pay into the treasury for such purpose the several sums set opposite our names, as soon as the amount of the three hundred dollars shall be pledged.

Previously acknowledged	$1 17
R H McCulloch	1 00
J M Barber	1 00
Henry Haines	5 00
G Harwood	25 00
J C Smith	1 00
H. Smith	1 00
N R Smith	1 00
J C Smith	1 00

PLEDGES.

W. F. Hunt, $2 50;
M. L. Hunt, $2 50;
Virgil Hunt $2 00;

PAYMENTS.

G S Harwood, $20. T. BOSLEY, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

The total acknowledgements in a late number should have been $117, instead of $1,17.

Direct all pledges to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

All money should be sent to the Treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co. Kan.

Dear Brothers and Sisters, at home and abroad, we need help. May the Lord move upon the hearts of his dear children that they contribute to this good cause, remembering it is good to lend to the Lord.

Your brother in Christ, H. J. MUNSON.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.

2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.

3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

Squaw Grove, 10½ a. m., July 14.
C. W. SMITH.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Beemerville, July 21.
Milroy, July 28. C. W. SMITH.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCullock will bring the Mission Tent with him. Place of meeting will be given next week: probably between Mt. Joy and Anna churches.

J. S. Lawrer, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Rochelle, Advent Hall, 10:30 a. m., July 21.
Subject: Church Festival.
White Rock, Union chapel, 3 p. m. of same day.
Ackerson's S. H. eve., same day.

Hennepin, Putnam Co. Special meeting commencing Tuesday eve. July 30, to continue over the Sabbath, and through the following week, if the interest demands. The brethren and sisters scattered through the region about are earnestly requested to come to this meeting and lend a helping hand. C. C. MARSTON.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring food and bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent, and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brs. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Particulars hereafter.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.
F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

WISCONSIN.

The Lord willing, I will be in LaCrosse Sunday, July 21, to hold meetings on that day and the week following, and over the 28th. I expect Br. Rowell to assist, but we trust that the Lord will be the leader. Let all who can come and help in Jesus' name. FRANK BURR.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.
Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.
Wingville, 3 p. m. June 22.
Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all wh[illegible] may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of [illegible]a, is traveling with my Tent this summer, al[illegible]o wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. F. W. HOUSE.

MICHIGAN.

Sprague S. H. Sabbath July 14, at 11 a. m. and 7 1-2 p. m. and each alternate Sabbath following.
WM BRANCH.

Algansee, July 21, as Br. Preston may arrange.
WM. BRANCH.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-26. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

Lambkin S. H. July 21.
Laingsburg, as Brn. may direct. Wednesday July 24, and through the week.
E. H. DURAND.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andru's big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievious wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. C. H. CASS, Sec'y.

There will be a tent meeting at Kewanee, Fulton Co., commencing Friday July 19, and holding over two Sundays. Eld. D. Mathewson is expected to assist. E. C. ANDRUS.

MINNESOTA.

Plainview, Bently S. H. 8 p. m. July 20, and 10½ a. m. July 21. Will baptize those wishing to go forward.
Viola, Stone S. H. 2½ p. m. and 8 p. m. July 21.
Utica, in Cheatham's Grove, 10 a. m. and 1½ p. m. July 28. Will baptize.
Nooka, Page S. H. 8 p. m. July 28.
S. C. WELLCOME.

NEW YORK.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

A boarding tent will be on the ground, furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, &c., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 35c. a day, for those who do not. Let all come well prepared with overcoats, overshoes, shawls, coverlets, straw ticks, &c., &c. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents.

Let all desiring tents correspond immediately (enclosing stamp for an answer) with Br. D. T. Cooper, 73 Mt. Hope Ave., Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season. WM. E. BROWN, SAM'L. H. WITHINGTON, PERRY M. GRINNELL, Committee.

The next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held, the Lord willing, in the State Tent on the Fairport Campground during the coming Campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at 9 a. m., Wednesday Aug. 14, when Br. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which the meetings will be held at such hours as will least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected and will be submitted for districting the Conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. MILTON E. MILES, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting. Providence permitting, the second annual Campmeeting of the American Life and Advent Union will be held in Springfield, in Carew's Grove, commencing Aug. 4, and to continue to Aug. 15. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come, with board and lodging on the ground. Board 80c. per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R. will be reduced the same as last year, from July 26 to Aug. 27, inclusive.

We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes.

THOS. E. WEAVER, Sec'y.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

TRACTS: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel H[illegible] Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. It silences objections.

Our Book and Tract Column.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—36 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—60 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—18 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—36 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,000 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,000 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c. $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 180 pp. 20c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourses. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 218 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers [illegible]. The three in one volume are now offered [illegible].

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 44 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 25.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $20 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 60.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM, By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 15c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 25c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c, post-paid.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 50. CHICAGO, JULY 23, 1872. WHOLE NO. 430.

Advent Christian Times.

THE "apele for are to the Sextant" is once more going the rounds of the papers. We quote a single paragraph:

" Are is for us to brethe.
What signifize who preeches if I can't brethe?
What's Pol? What's Pollus to sinners who are ded,
Ded for want of breth? Why, sextant, when we dye
It's only cos we can't brethe no more—that's all!"

—Very dangerous doctrine that; decidedly 'materialistic' in its tendencies.

THE Advance sensibly says:

> There is nothing more natural to a certain type of partisans, than when a periodical declines one of their contributions to hasten it off to some other journal, with an introductory paragraph stating that it was "refused a place" in the So-and-So, or was "suppressed" by the editor of the This and That. Now there may be any one of a hundred good reasons why an article is declined, outside of an unwillingness to give both sides a hearing. The same things may have been sufficiently said already, better articles on the same side may be in hand, the offered article may be too carelessly written and, so, unworthy of publication on its literary merits. A candid editor always desires that the views from which he differs shall be stated as strongly as they can be — difficult as it is for the aforesaid partisan mind to understand such a fact.

THE Independent is again under suspicion of heresy. Tilton and Johnson were cast out, and there was a general "clearing up time." But the heresy hunters are keen of scent, and the odor of Restorationism hanging about "the largest religious paper in the world" is too perceptible not to give rise to a new theological scandal.

Well, the Augustinian theory is doomed. There remains the theory of Origen and that of the Bible. The former is the more popular, more in accordance with the desires of the natural man, and hence the more likely to become the prevailing opinion. But while the Independent and other agencies are preparing the way for the wider dissemination of the Restorationist error, those who have the true light on the future destiny of man should 'let it shine.'

A SCIENTIFIC Journal in discussing 'Brain work, Heart work and food,' reaches the conclusion that three hours of hard study wear out the body more than a whole day of severe physical labor. Another evidence of the cost of brain work is obtained from the fact that though the brain is only one fortieth the weight of the body, it receives about one fifth of all the blood sent by the heart into the system. Brain workers, therefore, require a more liberal supply of food and richer food than manual laborers.

—The way thought and intellect are getting mixed up with brain, blood and food must be intensely disgusting to the immaterialists. The way the brain uses up vital supplies in mental labor, is thoroughly suggestive that without those supplies thought would cease. Give man as many immaterial entities as you will, the evidence that either or all of them possess consciousness or intellect apart from a material organism has yet to be adduced.

HERE is an incident, from an old-time Methodist minister's Diary that will touch a vibrating chord in the hearts of many an Adventist minister's family:

> I felt considerably affected by a little incident which occurred during our ride to that place. A lady in the stage asked one of our children, 'Where do you live, my little dear?' The poor little fellow, after being shifted about so often, was at a loss for an answer, but replied, "I don't know;" then with an artless simplicity looked up to me and asked, "Ma, where do I live?" I was as much puzzled as the child, but replied, "You live here in the stage to-day, my boy." Not feeling satisfied, he again queried, "Ma, where is our home, haven't we any home?" It is impossible for me to describe the strange sensation which came over me as I realized how homeless we were; but the thought that we might claim a heavenly home soothed and comforted me, and I mentally cast my burden upon the Lord.

THERE is a weekly journal published in West Virginia called the Baptist Record. Our attention has been called to a scurilous attack upon THE TIMES in its columns. The writer charges that we inundate the Post Offices in that section with papers that no one will take away. Now the facts are that our subscribers there have felt compelled to stop their papers, a dozen at a time, because they could not get them. We used every possible precaution on our part to ensure their safe arrival at their destination, and we have this writer's testimony that they do arrive safely at the Post Offices. Hence it follows that they are knowingly detained from our subscribers. We advise a little caution in this sort of warfare. Postmasters should not allow their theological prejudices to interfere with their legal duties. If they persist, we must 'appeal to Cæsar.'

WE once heard of man as "a good hater." We don't know that he was especially to be commended for possession of that quality, but we are often reminded of him when reading the allusions of "Evangelical" Adventists to their brethren of more Scriptural faith, whom they designate as Materialists—a good enough name, by the way, when properly understood. The Advent Herald gives its approval to a letter written by an orthodox pastor of California, in which we find this choice morsel: 'Many a bitter fling have I heard, with unfeigned sorrow, directed against 'Adventists' by brethren, both in the pulpit and out of it, which I am persuaded grew out of the heresy,' etc. Now we would just say to this brother that if his brethren are a kind of Christians who indulge 'many bitter flings,' it is no credit to either their grace, their intellect, or the logic upon which their own system is based. They are simply 'good haters,' and that is all. Will the kingdom of heaven be composed of such?

IF SIN, which is productive of misery only to its victim, is temporary and destined to be done away, it is safe to tell the poor victim so, and the sooner he learns it the quicker will he flee from it and turn into the pathway of righteousness and peace. He is now serving that which is destined to come to an end. Convince him that righteousness is enduring, and he will be likely to accept it, and live it as his highest good, here and hereafter.—Star in the West —Whether sin is ever to be done away we can only learn by revelation and revelation affirms that it will be done away in the destruction or doing away of the sinner. The agents being destroyed their work will necessarily come to an end. But neither Orthodoxy, or Restorationism affirm that only righteousness 'is enduring.' all human beings are equally enduring in nature; the difference in them consisting, we are told, wholly in the conditions of their consciousness. But the Star has told the truth. The sinner serves that which is destined to come to an end; and we add, unless he forsakes that service he will 'come to an end,' also.

THE new editor of the Western Christian Advocate has a word to encourage the unappreciated workers:

> It is the fate of faithfulness too often to receive censure instead of commendation. And we must adjust ourselves to this condition of the race, and toil on content that God is our observer, and will crown us in the end.
>
> Said a retiring to an incoming editor once: "Your great work will be with that which will never get into the paper, not with that which gets in."
>
> It is the evil that the Christian minister prevents, quite as much as the good that he performs, that exhausts his time and energies. And we all know that the result of an evil prevented, or a fire quenched, is not so apparent as the result of a good established or a church erected. Patience, then, fellow-toiler. Though all you do may be credited to some other hand or heart, or may never be seen or credited to any one at all, there is an Eye that sees all workers and understands all from the beginning to the end, and in the great day the plaudit shall ring in softest and sweetest music in your ear, "Welcome, ye blessed of my Father!"

WHEN the New York Observer becomes liberal we may well believe the backbone of religious fogyism is about broken. In a late passage in its columns Dr. Prime says he "would have every Christian congregation willing to receive into its fellowship and membership all who are believed to be believers in the Lord Jesus Christ." The italics are Dr. Prime's. And farther on he adds:

> "The first text from which I ever preached contained the basis of the Church, which I wish to see as broad as the earth and as multitudinous as its inhabitants. It was this: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." That verse contains the entire creed that I would use if I were now laying the platform of a Church for a new country."

—The Doctor is gaining golden commendations for his new-fledged liberality. We would like some evidence that it is practical in application on his part as it is winsome in theory. Would an Adventist, for instance be allowed to be "a believer in Christ?" We doubt.

McCOSH says:

> The age of doubt and inactivity is fast passing away. With a large body of young people, it is the age of materialism. Satisfied with the comforts, elegances, and luxuries of the age, they do not seek anything higher. Materialism says: 'Show me how a thinking mind differs from the material things about us!' We cannot penetrate the essence of being, but we are certain there is in man that which is not in the material universe. They ask, what proof is there of a soul? I reply, I am conscious of it; I am equally sure of material things. There is something in me that hopes, fears, rejoices, and sorrows; but that table has no such feelings, no such qualities. Men try to resolve every thing into materialism. Under the circumference of the brain is a grayish matter consisting of cells that are intimately connected with thinking; if these cells are deranged the mind does not work in a healthy manner; these cells are the ministers of the mind: but a cell is one thing, and the sorrow I have is an entirely different thing.

—All this is assumed to show that man proper is immaterial. A dog "hopes, fears, rejoices, sorrows." Who dare deny it? "A table has no such feelings, no such qualities." Hence dogs proper are immaterial; and if immaterial, then immortal. If not, why not?

THE eighth of Romans has been up lately in the 'uniform' series of Sunday-school lessons. We have watched our orthodox exchanges to see what they would make out of it. Nearly all try to weave the doctrine of natural immortality into their exegesis, and of course they all fall into the most absurd self-contradictions. One sets out with a list of definitions, that we may have "the exact meaning of words and phrases." Here are two: 'Death—separation from God.' 'Life—existence with God.' Bear this in mind, and follow the lesson to v. 10. 'The body is dead, destined to die.' Let us see. What definition did our glossary give of 'death?' Ans. 'Separation from God.' A correct definition of a word will always make sense when supplied for the term itself. We read then—'The body is separated from God, because of sin!' 'Oh! but death applied to the body is one thing, and to the soul is quite another.' Indeed! So when we read, 'The body is dead because of sin,' we are to understand a cessation of its vital existence, and a return to its native elements: but when we read, 'To be carnally minded is death,' it means live right along, separated from God. Won't some of the theologians give us a rule by which the common people may be able to discern when death means end of life, and when it means endless life.

IT is said that the late Norman McLeod, while visiting his parishioners, found that many made the excuse for not attending church, that they had 'no clothes.' He instituted evening services for such persons, and stationed a sexton at the door to keep out all who were well dressed. So faithful was this sexton, that on one occasion he kept out Dr. McLeod's wife, a joke which the minister enjoyed as much as any one.

Zion's Herald says:

> Not so much of a joke for the minister's wife, after all, but quite a significant lesson! Instead of an evening service for the poor—an offensive form of caste—why should not Christian women always dress, in the house of God, in a style, so simple and chaste that the poor need not be shocked and kept away by the ungrateful contrast? We greatly need a reformation here; not a costume, not an eccentric garb, but a plain, quiet, unostentatious habit that will attract, and not repel, the humble poor from our common worship.

—We remember a wealthy sister, now deceased, whose example was a model for Christian women in this as in many other respects. She never wore 'fine clothes' to church. She dressed always with taste; never appeared inelegant nor 'slouchy,' but dressed always so simply and plainly as to never invite a comparison between her own clothing and that of her neighbors, unless, indeed, as an example of Christian neatness and simplicity. How many women dare follow her example, and 'appear before God' in the house of worship attired according to the apostolic direction? When will the church cease to be a field for the display of feathers, trimmings, and the 'latest fashions?'

S. M. MERRILL, who lately descended from the post of editor to that of Bishop in the Methodist church, has a way of writing things worth reading. Here is a thought from a late leader in the Western involving more, we think, than he would himself be willing to allow. Its logical result is Adventism as surely as effect is related to cause. But it is one thing to enunciate a principle, and quite another to adhere to it. But here is what Dr. Merrill says:

> There is much to be learned by studying the words of the Bible. As the apostles declared the gospel in words, and in words which the Holy Ghost suggested, or approved, it is fair to infer that the words employed by them should be taken in their most obvious sense, as determined by the scope and design of the writers.
>
> Sometimes when we come back from the habits which have grown up around us, to the simplicity of inspiration, and see how the churches and the ministry have wandered from the original sense of those words, and how the simplest terms of the Bible have grown into mysterious technicalities, producing almost endless discussion, we are astonished that so much of the essence of Christianity has been preserved, and that the truth is still ours, substantially as it was first delivered to the church. The fact that the Word is written, and that it was first written, in a tongue which soon after the writing ceased to be liable to the changes incident to living language, is the only solution of the problem, and indicates Providential care in providing the truth for us, and in securing the sacred records.

—This is essentially the idea maintained by Alex. Campbell in his Christian System, but ignored by him when treating of the human spirit, just as it was tacitly repudiated by Eld. Braden in his late discussion with us.

The Restitution of All Things.

BY HENRY CONSTABLE.

[Concluded.]

The only plausible objection which, as it seems to us, can be brought against our theory is this—viz., why, if God intends to put an end to evil hereafter in hell, he should not have put an end to it at its very commencement, when it first broke out among angels and men. We are not called upon to clear up all difficulties, but we believe that a good answer may be made to this. It is that God will in all probability for ever put an end to evil by the only means possible—viz., its permitted existence for a time. Among free agents capable of good and evil—i.e., among all beings higher than the brutes, moral evil cannot be prevented from breaking out by an iron law of necessity, but can only be effected by moral means. It is, therefore, that we suppose that the evil-doer is not destroyed the moment he has chosen evil. God will rather meet evil in its hour of victory, fight it on its battle-field, fight it with its own weapons here, and with these conquer it until it shall rise up no more. Such a battle has been waged and is not yet concluded. Angels fell. They are not at once destroyed. They select a further scene of strife against God. They are permitted to do so. They select this earth, where a new creature, in some respects like themselves, had just been called into being. They triumph. God does not destroy the fallen with the tempting race. He will let the race continue, spread, exhibit itself in every variety of condition under the secret guidance of the higher angelic race. Here is God's chosen field to exhibit evil to the higher creation in all its phases.

It is therefore, we believe, that he has allowed the world to proceed exactly as it has proceeded, interfering just as he has interfered. All the good which evil can bring he has allowed it to exhibit in Sodom, and Tyre, and Nineveh, and Athens, and Rome. The darkness into which it plunges he has allowed it to exhibit in Egypt and Greece as well as in the remote parts of continents and in sea-encircled isles. The cruelties it leads to he has suffered to be seen in places where children were burned in honor of Moloch, and captives were enclosed in fire-girt images, and life was crushed out to please the grim god that rolled over his victims. The difficulty of rescuing from it he has shown in the fruitless preaching of Noah, the vain pleading of the Jewish prophets, the rejection of the Son of man, recommended by his inimitable life, his unequalled words, his Divine works. The value of restoration he has exhibited in the lives of men who have at the call from heaven left country, and property, and life, led on by a lure that made illicit pleasure a loathing to youth, and power a disregarded thing to manhood, and life a spurned gift to the delicate woman and the feeble old man. The loss evil involves he will suffer to be read through all the ages in that hell which will have deprived of precious, priceless life those to whom grace was never offered or offered in vain. Here on this field of earth, through the dispensations, in lands where Satan held undisputed sway, in times when the powers of light and darkness sternly contended, in the murderer, the adulterer, the liar, as well as the saint, the confessor, and the martyr,—God displays to the outer worlds of the unfallen of these and coming times the results of evil, that thus appealing to the free agent he may for ever put an end to evil.

And now we bring our little work to its close. Its argument has led us to the most glorious hope and expectation which a being loving God can possibly entertain—the termination of moral evil. As it is a part of our Father's revelation that evil had a beginning, so we rejoice to [illegible] in another part of that revelation that it will have an end. It is not from eternity. And it will not be to eternity. It is a thing of time, and is not an essential part of the constitution of God's world. The ages to come will roll on ignorant of evil as were those former ages before the Archangel fell. Evil will be blotted out. All God's attributes, his mercy, his holiness, his justice, his power, are pledged to extirpate it. Hell is not the eternal abode of evil, concentrated in intensity, deepening and darkening in hue throughout eternity. It is not the everlasting exhibition of a scene with whose moral horrors all the sensuality, and deviltry, and hate, and despair, that have been exhibited in earth's foulest dens, could not compare. The phrenzies of Bedlam, were earth one Bedlam; the despair of suicide were each one of earth's sons and daughters to resolve on rushing from a hated life; the hatred of the heart, were each heart to hate as Cain when he stood by Abel in the old field of murder, or the Dominican as he glared with demoniac hatred on the martyr he was attending to the flames;—all these could not exhibit even a feeble resemblance to that which hell would present if Augustine's views were true. Thank God it is not true. God does not contemplate this hell. He will indeed gather into it all things that offend—all the foul rakings of hate, of pride, and falsehood, and selfishness, and lust. But it is with the ominous purpose of Jehu when he said, "Gather all the prophets of Baal, and all his priests; let none be wanting; and the house of Baal was full from one end to another." Even so will hell enlarge her borders, and the evil of the universe will descend into it and fill its wide domain—to be extirpated and blotted out for ever.

Such is the hell of Scripture, the very counterpart to that hideous scene which Augustine has depicted. The very "thought of it is too horrible to think." We reject it as a black lie, a foul slander on the character of our God. How ever ancient this hoary lie, it is no part of "the faith once delivered to the saints." We renounce it as a fable, a monstrosity worthy of the Koran where it takes its fitting place, unworthy of the gospel where it finds no place. We leave it to the disciple of Mohammed, lying on his couch of sensuality, to look down with cruel delight upon a scene of unutterable and endless misery. This is not the consummation which the disciples of Christ, or the worshippers of the Father of Mercies, are called on to rejoice in. They could not look on it and rejoice, they could not regard pain as endless without feeling that unalloyed joy could never be their own. They will contemplate the coming destruction with satisfaction because in it they see evil and misery for ever banished from God's world, and God reigning supreme in the affections and loyalty of all that breathe.

From this standpoint we view the final scene of retribution. There is heaven and there is hell. There is heaven, and there is hell; there is eternal life, and there is eternal death. The redeemed enjoy the one, the lost are subjects of the other. The book of revelation describes the latter: "Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." (Rev. 20:14.) All that has been and continued to be evil, the fallen angels who now move in earth and air, the spirits who are kept in chains of darkness, the multitudes who have died without God and without hope, the multitudes whom the last day will find impenitent and unholy, have all been consigned to one common scene of punishment. According to their deserving is their chastening. The time for each one's suffering over, he is wrapped in the slumber of eternal death. Gradually life dies out in that fearful prison until unbroken silence reigns throughout it. They who would not find life have found death. But the scene remains for ever. As Sodom and Gomorrah have exhibited to every succeeding generation of men the Divine vengeance upon fullblown iniquity, so will the charred and burnt-out furnace of hell afford its eternal lesson to the intelligences of the future. As angels wing their way from world to world, as the redeemed touch with fresh delight their harps of gold, as new orders of life are called into being, so the nature and end of evil are always remembered in that scene where so many of the inhabitants of heaven and earth had bid an eternal farewell to that life of God which is so full of joy. That lesson of awe is read and pondered on by all. But it will be a lesson read without the shudder of anguish. The dead have drunk the waters of Lethe, "the silent stream," and forgotten long ago their misery. There is no eternal antagonism of good and evil, no eternal jarring of the notes of praise and wailing. Evil has died out, and with it sorrow; throughout God's world of life all is joy, and peace, and love.

The Papal Tiara.

In a recent speech on the Papal question, BISMARCK created a great sensation in the German Reichstag and throughout Germany, by exclaiming: "Do not be uneasy; we will not go to Canossa, either bodily or mentally." The allusion was received with cries of "Bravo!" and its significance was at once understood. Canossa is celebrated as the castle in Modena where, in the eleventh century, the German Emperor Henry IV. submitted, by order of his enemy Pope HILDEBRAND, then residing there, to the humiliating penance of kneeling at the gates, in the winter snow, for several days, till it pleased His Holiness to admit him. It was not at all necessary for BISMARCK to give assurance that the present German Emperor would not "go" to Canossa," or abase himself before the Pope; but the illustration furnished a very striking contrast between the past and the present relation of the temporal and spiritual powers of Europe. Instead of going to Canossa in the garb of an abject penitent, it looks as though the Bismarckian Emperor meant to go to the Vatican in the attitude of a dictator.

BISMARCK evidently intends to take a hand in the election of of a successor to Pius the Ninth. The event may take place any day, and it would seem by the recent advices from Rome about the angry state of the malignant sore on the Pope's leg as though it might occur before BISMARCK was fully prepared for it. The election will be one of extraordinary interest to the whole Catholic world, and of profound importance to at least three or four of the leading Governments of Europe. It is a curious thing to think of the great Protestant State of Continental Europe interfering in the election of the head of the Catholic church, but circumstances have placed Bismarck in a position where his influence can be exercised in a very effective way.

The Pope is on ill terms with all the Catholic Governments, excepting France, and even with France, since it deserted his cause, he has been grievously dissatisfied. He positively refuses all terms of reconciliation or compromise with Italy. His feelings toward it are implacable, and he constantly assails it with maledictions. He must be reinstated in his ancient authority at Rome, or he will carry on the war ceaselessly and transmit it to his successors. With Austria, he has a quarrel of ten year's standing, relating to questions of ecclesiastical jurisdiction and civil authority, such as education, marriage, and the rights of bishops and priests. With Spain, he has been on bad terms ever since the overthrow of his special favorite, the wicked and tyrannical Queen Isabella the Second. He is highly incensed at Bavaria, for the way its Government favored the Doellingerite schism. With the new Emperor of Germany he has had nothing but trouble. He was troubled a few months ago, over the school question, and since then he has had trouble about the Bishop of Ermland, trouble about Bishop Namzanoski, trouble about the Jesuits, and trouble about the obnoxious Ambassador sent to him by Bismarck. In short, Pius the Ninth has succeeded in getting up all sorts of difficulties with nearly all the Governments of Europe, Catholic and Protestant. It is worthy of note that, in these disputes, they have always held their ground against him, and carried out their measures in spite of his opposition.

It is of the utmost importance that the successor of this Pope should be a man desirous of ending this distracting struggle, and disposed to settle the questions at issue in some practicable way. It is of especial and supreme importance to the Italian Government which can not perfect its civil administration or moral unity while the Vatican is in possession of an enemy who exercises divine authority over the consciences of the people. It is of hardly less importance to Austria, which, in carrying out the processes of political reconstruction, is embarrassed at every step by its relations with the church and the Papal power. It is of no little importance to the German Empire and its various States, for the spiritual authority which the Pope exercises over one-third of the population of the Empire is constantly endangering the unity and freedom represented by the civil Government.

It is, therefore, in the interest of Germany, as well as of Italy, which is the ally and friend of Germany, that Bismarck desires the election of a satisfactory pope, in place of the present intractable occupant of the Chair of St. Peter. He is doubtless also desirous of utterly destroying French influence in the papal election, and of showing the world that the moral power of France at Rome is annihilated as completely as her military domination there and elsewhere.

We do not know much about the recent diplomatic movements of Bismarck, in preparation for a Papal election; but we know from his special organs, the German Correspondent and the North-German Gazette, as well as from the Allegemeine Zeitung, Cross Gazette and other papers, that he has taken up the matter with the determination that it shall be satisfactorily arranged. There is some evidence that he has come to an understanding with Italy in reference to it, and we have the assurance that he is carrying on negotiations about it with Austria. The Italian Crown Prince has recently been on a visit to Berlin, and it is announced that the Austrian Emperor will visit the capital in the coming September; and it is not improbable there is truth in the assertion that these visits have something to do with the settlement of this overshadowing question. A recent Berlin dispatch, which, however, came from an unreliable source, alleged that Bismarck had addressed a note to the four Governments possessed of the power to veto a Papal election, asking them to make arrangements and conditions for the Conclave of Cardinals in Rome immediately after the Pope's death; and it was said that three of these powers at once responded to this note and assented to its terms. In a recent article we referred to the veto power as a historical fact, and its scope has since then been discussed by the Allegemeine Zeitung.

"Though," says the journal, "by the electoral law decreed by Gregory XV, on the 26th of November, 1621, which still regulates the procedure at papal elections are they to be independent, they have as a matter of fact always been influenced by outsiders. After Gregory VII, the only relic of lay influence which was left was the veto exercised, through a Cardinal specially designated for that purpose, by Austria, France, Spain, and Naples, whenever there was a probability of the election having a result which would be displeasing to any of these powers. Although, however, the right of interference is no longer recognized, a prominent part has been played at all the elections of the last two hundred years by the Governments at Vienna and Paris, and by the Roman nobility—to say nothing of the election at Venice in the year 1800 of Pope Pius VII, under the influence of Austria, and in direct opposition to that of France."

The North German Gazette, in discussing the same subject, doubtless under official inspiration, says:

"The position of the Pope is of such extraordinary importance that the choice of a successor cannot be weighed with too much deliberation.

"The choice for Pope can not be a matter of indifference to any government with Catholic subjects. Such governments are compelled to examine conscientiously if they can approve the choice which has been made, before they can in reality give full power to the new Pontiff, who is called to exercise most extensive rights upon their territories; rights which, in certain points of view, approach sovereignty itself.

"A Pope whom the totality or even the majority of European sovereigns should consider themselves bound not to recognize would be as impossible as a bishop who should attempt to exercise his functions in any country without being recognized by the Government. . . .

"Before yielding such a position to any future Pope, before permitting him to exercise any such rights over their subjects, the governments will be forced to consider if the personal character of the new Pontiff offers such guarantees as they have a right to demand, in order to prevent his abuse of so great a power."

It is quite evident that Bismarck is attempting to co-operate with, and exercise his influence over, the Governments possessed of the veto power in a Papal election—Austria, Italy, (which assumes the rights of Naples,) Spain and France; and perhaps he may claim the power for the Emperor of Germany, under a strict construction of its original significance. There is, of course, no probability that France will co-operate with the other Governments; but if Italy and Austria act together, receive the passive support of Spain, (through the influence of King Amadeus and his Ministers,) and are backed up by the German Empire, the alliance will be sufficiently formidable to work effectively.

It would seem that the Pope has been preparing for a contingency of this kind. It is reported in Rome that he has signed a bill dictating the measures to be adopted at the election of his successor, in the event of any interference with the Conclave of Cardinals by the European Governments.

If this be correct, there will be a mortal struggle between the parties concerned. If a Pope be elected, obnoxious to Italy and her allies, and against their protest, his authority will doubtless be rejected, and his jurisdiction over the Church in their despotic territories interfered with. The offended Governments could thus create disastrous confusion in the Church and the papacy, and before it was over we might see a repetition of the historical incident of two rival Popes. In such an event the obnoxious Pope would certainly not be permitted to occupy the Vatican, or reside in Rome.

Bismarck, in attempting to dictate the election of a Pope, has undertaken the greatest labor of his revolutionary life. Success in it will be the most astounding of all his triumphs. He has heretofore ridden on the whirlwind and directed the storm, but he is now mounting a whirlwind different from any he has yet directed.—Cincinnati Commercial.

And the terms change not. They cover the entire state from the last gasp of dying breath to the joyful awaking of the resurrection morning. "The dead in Christ." The words form a kind of epitaph in brief for the tomb of all the faithful, an epitaph which, if it does not answer every question of a curious mind concerning the departed, tells us the one thing that we long to know, that they are safe and shall live again. And so we may tell the story of the Christian's burial no longer in that brief hollow phrase which to the ancients seemed the tenderest allusion that could be made to the deceased, "Non est," he is not; but in words like those of Bunyan's, so fragrant of heart's-ease and immortelle,—"The pilgrim they laid in a chamber whose window opened toward the sun-rising; the name of that chamber was PEACE, where he slept till the break of day."—A. J. Gordon.

Bible vs. Himes.

We find the following communica- n in the Sanilac (Mich.) Jeffersonian. s in reply to low misrepresentations a Methodist clergyman in his report our lecture. Ed.]

Under th above heading I see an icle in the Jeffersonian of June 15, d signed by my friend, J. G. Whit- mb.

I attended the three lectures, and the question, "The spirit; what is " Eld. Himes simply stated how any times the word in the original ebrew and Greek occurred in the Old d New Testament from which the ord spirit in our English Bible was anslated. He told how many times was translated spirit, and, from the me word, how many times translated eath, how many times wind, and I ink the Elder stated that it was anslated a number of times feeling, d I have forgotten what else; but commenced and went through the ible, giving chapter and verse wherever in the original the word occurred d reading it, plainly showing that in instance where the word occurred uld it logically or even reasonably e construed to mean that there is in an a spirit, entity, person, or whatever you may call it, that lives on in a nscious state in happiness or misery hen the man dies and we put him in e grave.

Elder Whitcomb was not at at the eeting, and whoever it was that reorted it to him could not have undertood it, for the article certainly very rossly misrepresents the lecture. lder Himes gave liberty, with the reuest that if any lady or gentleman ad any questions on the subject to sk them; but no. Two weeks after, lder Whitcomb comes out in an artile and uses this language: "I don't now but Mr Himes' Greek and Hebrew reads, 'and that which is born of he spirit is breath;' and, "with the above efore us, we may judge of the honesty f the champion of Adventism," and reats the momentous subject so irreverently, that to me it appears perfectly idiculous. Why did not Elder Whitcomb grapple with the subject? To me it is one of the greatest and most vital questions we have to do with. I have relatives that were very near and dear to me, that never gave evidence of their conversion, that are now dead, and this is the case probably of most families. Is it so that they are now writheing in torment and eternally to be there? My God! To evade this dreadful doctrine, many have accepted the Universalist's view; many others to evade it have got a sort of a purifying purgatory, and call themselves Restorationists; others become infidels, and denounce the Bible and the God of the Bible, rather than accept such a monstrous doctrine. These are stern realities here among us.

If it is really a fact that when men die they go immediately to happiness or misery, we ask, what is the use of Christ coming here the second time? or why talk about a resurrection and judgment day? I do not wonder that many that believe this dogma and its kindred doctrines deny the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection, and general judgment day; it is very natural, for if the real man does not die, he could not be raised from the dead.

Why did not my friend Whitcomb come out and discuss these mighty questions with candor and Christian courtesy, and not treat the questions with a low grade of sarcasm and ridicule? Is it really the case that a poor finite creature is capable of committing sin, the penalty of which is to be infinite (eternal pain). "The wages of sin is death." To say it means cessation of life, is certainly a more natural interpretation than to say it means eternal life in misery.

I have written the above, not that I wish to enter into a discussion of the question with any one, but merely to explain and state the simple facts of the lecture and spirit of it, hoping that some, at least, will be persuaded to investigate and be profited thereby, and ever have explicit faith in the Book of God. R. J. Arnot.

The Profit and Loss of War.

It takes some time to post the books and balance the accounts of any unusually large enterprise. Certainly one of the biggest undertakings of the century was the Franco-German war, and it need hardly be wondered at, if the balance of that huge business has, on the German side, only just been struck. It may be necessary to recall the fact that the total number of the army of the German Empire which was called into the field amounted, from first to last, to one million and a quarter. This included the regiments of the landwehr who were employed in garrisoning fortresses, and who were never required for active service at all. The official statements, now completed, of the number of men killed, wounded and missing give the total for North and South Germany, of about 4,200 officers and 85,700 men. It has been estimated that the entire money cost of the war to Germany was two hundred and seventy-five millions of dollars. It is obvious, however, that this amount actually expended. will not cover the entire loss in Germany involved in the operations of the war. We must assume that, for the entire eight months of the struggle, Germany lost the productive labor of at least 600,000 men. The value of this to the country cannot be estimated at less than one hundred dollars per head i. e. sixty million of dollars. Then, the loss of about ninety thousand men was equivalent, on the lowest computation, to a national loss of $1000 per head, or ninety millions of dollars. We thus bring the actual cost of the war to Germany up to the sum of four hundred and twenty-five millions of dollars.

In exchange for this, Germany has already levied upon France some $480,000,000, and she has still to receive $660,000,000, before letting go her grasp upon French territory. That is to say, the German loss by the war, represented, so far as it can be by pecuniary equivalents, is rather less than two-fifths of the entire indemnity claimed from France as the fee of victory.

The war, then, may be considered by people who think it possible to measure everything by dollars and cents, as a good enough speculation for Germany. To those who look upon the loss incurred by one nation as involving a loss to the world at large, it may be less encouraging to reflec that the money paid out and the lives lost by Germany must be added to the same item on the French side of the account before we can estimate the money loss to civilization of this disastrous struggle. We keep out of view altogether the amount of the indemnity as representing money which has merely changed hands. But taking what may be called the inevitable outlay on both sides, it is perfectly certain that in these fatal eight months, at least $1,200,000.000, or its equivalent, was absolutely and irretrievably wasted. This would have paid off half the national debt of the United States, might have accomplished no one can tell what good to the human race, and will have to be replaced in the capital fund of civilization by the accumulated surplus of labor all over the world. It is only by taking such broad views of the question that we come adequately to understand the profit and the loss of war.—Scot. Am. Journal.

What to Remember.

The Christian Era tells beautiful truths in the following article, which even its erroneous ideas cannot wholly becloud. Just how death and being with Christ can be synchronous events and one long for the one without anticipating the other, also is not over clear: it is one of the difficulties of orthodoxy, and no small one either.

But let that pass, and read what the Era says on the duty of keeping in mind the second advent:

It is a beautiful and most Christian remark of Bengel upon the seventh verse of the first chapter of First Corinthians,—waiting for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ—"Leaving to others their Memento Mori (remember death), do thou earnestly cherish this joyous expectation of the Lord's coming." Scarcely does the New Testament warn us to watch against the day of death. Its almost invariable language with reference to the future is, wait for the Son of Man—be ready for his coming—hope for his appearing. That second advent is set before the Christian as the grand event whose importance and glory obscure every other. The New Testament is full of this precious and inspiring doctrine. The coming of Christ in person is constantly presented as the noblest and most stimulating motive to duty, the sweetest ground of encouragement and comfort. What are all other events compared to this—the actual appearing again in his humanity, now glorified, of the Head of the Church? The hope of this kept alive in the heart of the bride during her separation from her Lord, must be a powerful aid in resisting the temptations of the world, and maintaining a course of unfaltering and joyful loyalty. In writing to the Corinthian Christians the apostle, before censuring their sins and faults, presents this grand event as if to prepare them duly to consider and profit by what should follow.

But says one, after all our waiting and hoping, Christ may not come in our life time. Well if you die thus expecting and longing for his personal presence, will you be disappointed by your departure? Will you not go to be with Christ? And what can be a better preparation for your departure? Having been wont for years to look for Christ, your going to him will be the going to a long-loved friend.

The great motive to a Christian life is this beholding of Christ. That sight by faith allures the soul onward and upward to the glorious object of its gaze. And so, at death the heart, instinctively turns to Christ. Dying will not bring to your view another object. It was Christ on earth; it will be Christ in heaven.

Let this then be the constant attitude of the church—that of expectant waiting for the Lord. Instead of brooding over the grave, as did Dr. Judson once when in a state of morbid depression, her eye should be directed heavenward, whence her gracious Head shall be revealed, that he may fulfill to her his promises of blessing and glory. Christ wishes his people to be happy, what can fill them with joy so well as to be looking for and hastening unto his appearing?

The Keystone.

Christianity as a great truth comprises within it a number of minor and related truths, each one of which depends upon the fact of the resurrection of Christ. The doctrine of his divinity and of the genuineness of his mission rests upon it. For if he did not rise he was either mistaken or an impostor. And "if he be not risen; then the dead rise not." In like manner the whole fabric and superstructure of all the Christian doctrines rests upon the fundamental fact of Christ's resurrection. It is in truth the great keystone which holds up the mighty arch of Christianity. Knock this out, and the whole arch drops at once. Prove that Christ is not risen and we are left without hope and without a Savior in the world.

If Christ is not "the first-be-gotten from the dead," then he was not the "only be-gotten of the Father." If he left not the bosom of the sepulcher, then he never "left the bosom of the Father." If he is not risen, then he is not at the right hand of God. We've no intercessor there. No atonement has been made. We are yet in our sins, and those who have fallen asleep in Christ were deceived and are lost. And if he has not "gone hence," where is the promised Comforter! Where the glorious resurrection, the immortality brought to light in the gospel, and where the sheet-anchor of hope? If Christ has not risen, the New Testament is a fable, the Christian Church a band of deluded fanatics, and our missionaries are madmen, and the world is yet in darkness, or at best only in the twilight of the Old Dispensation." But we are persuaded better things, though we thus speak. "He is risen," and in that fact we find a glorious confirmation of all Christ did and spake. Let the skeptic deride his other miracles, if he will. Let him say as the water blushes into wine, "Trickery, legerdemain." As the life-restorer brings back to life the pale son of the weeping widow, let the unbelieving scoffer say, "He was not dead." Let him hear the Savior call Lazarus out of his grave, and if he will not believe, let him say, "Lazarus was in a swoon, or that his was a mock funeral, and he plotted a plan with the Son of God to hoax the unsuspecting crowd." But what will he do with that miracle of miracles—the self-resurrection of Christ? In all the semblance and reality of death, his body lay in the tomb—eyes closed, lips sealed, limbs stretched out in motionless inactivity. Suddenly a shining one, commissioned from above, comes down "swift as the lightning's glimpse" and rolls away the stone. The earth quakes, and the sleeper rises as if from a night's repose, "bursting the bands of death." And as he comes forth my faith meets him at the mouth of the sepulcher, clasps him in its arms and exclaims; "My Lord and my God! The resurrection and the life!" Even skepticism itself, like the Centurion at the cross, smiting on its breast, is compelled to exclaim, "Surely this was the Son of God!—L. D. in Chris. Era.

The Tendency to Shirk.

The fashion of trying to do everything by means of "movements" so general just now, does more harm than good. It has, in the case of multitudes of men and women, wholly displaced and abolished direct personal effort for the advancement of public morals and education, and for the spread of religion itself. Thousands of people in this country, who have power and opportunity for most blessed and fruitful work in quiet ways, are living in utter idleness, so far as any effort for the moral welfare of others is concerned, because they are waiting for some great "movement" to abolish the evils of the world and bring in "the good time coming." They will not teach a boy to read or a girl to sew. They have not even a good word for those who undertake such work. They believe vastly in culture, and morals, and religion; but these are all to be promoted and advanced by means of great movements by which everything is to be done without anybody really doing anything. This is the very essence of the popular idea of "movement." It is to dispense with all personal effort, all downright work; with everything, in short, that is toilsome and unpleasant. The world is to be reformed by machinery. Not only is the kingdom of God to come with observation; but the banners and bands of music, the speeches and the show, are to be the chief means used for bringing in the new order of things, as they are also to constitute a large part of the new order itself. The movement people abhor, above all things else, quiet work, work that is not seen of men, and, specially, the putting of their own hands to the business. Just as much of any good work as can be done by speech-making, by bill-sticking, by appointing presidents and vice-presidents and secretaries and executive committees, will be done readily every where now. Many things sadly needed, which require individual effort and devotion to accomplish them, must wait till this dress-parade, brass-band religion has run its course and got itself out of the way.—Liberal Christian.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $800, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the Advent Times office. Wm. L. Himes.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to The Times can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—The Advent Times and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 36 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $25. tf

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1875. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1036 Chestnut St. ([illegible]) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED:

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

Its Advantages:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
([illegible]) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

FRUIT FARM

FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 36 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWYER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Bible vs. Himes.

We find the following communica- n in the Sanilac (Mich.) Jeffersonian. s in reply to low misrepresentations a Methodist clergyman in his report our lecture. ED.]

Under th above heading I see an icle in the Jeffersonian of June 15, d signed by my friend, J. G. Whitmb.

I attended the three lectures, and the question, "The spirit; what is " Eld. Himes simply stated how any times the word in the original ebrew and Greek occurred in the Old d New Testament from which the ord spirit in our English Bible was anslated. He told how many times was translated spirit, and, from the me word, how many times translated eath, how many times wind, and I ink the Elder stated that it was anslated a number of times feeling, d I have forgotten what else; but commenced and went through the ible, giving chapter and verse wherever in the original the word occurred d reading it, plainly showing that in instance where the word occurred uld it logically or even reasonably e construed to mean that there is in an a spirit, entity, person, or whatver you may call it, that lives on in a onscious state in happiness or misery hen the man dies and we put him in he grave.

Elder Whitcomb was not at at the eeting, and whoever it was that reorted it to him could not have undertood it, for the article certainly very rossly misrepresents the lecture. lder Himes gave liberty, with the reuest that if any lady or gentleman ad any questions on the subject to sk them; but no. Two weeks after, lder Whitcomb comes out in an artile and uses this language: "I don't now but Mr Himes' Greek and Hebrew reads, 'and that which is born of he spirit is breath;' and, "with the above before us, we may judge of the honesty f the champion of Adventism," and reats the momentous subject so irrevrently, that to me it appears perfectly idiculous. Why did not Elder Whitcomb grapple with the subject? To me it is one of the greatest and most vital questions we have to do with. I have relatives that were very near and dear to me, that never gave evidence of their conversion, that are now dead, and this is the case probably of most families. Is it so that they are now writheing in torment and eternally to be there? My God! To evade this dreadful doctrine, many have accepted the Universalist's view; many others to evade it have got a sort of a purifying purgatory, and call themselves Restorationists; others become infidels, and denounce the Bible and the God of the Bible, rather than accept such a monstrous doctrine. These are stern realities here among us.

If it is really a fact that when men die they go immediately to happiness or misery, we ask, what is the use of Christ coming here the second time? or why talk about a resurrection and judgment day? I do not wonder that many that believe this dogma and its kindred doctrines deny the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection, and general judgment day; it is very natural, for if the real man does not die, he could not be raised from the dead.

Why did not my friend Whitcomb come out and discuss these mighty questions with candor and Christian courtesy, and not treat the questions with a low grade of sarcasm and ridicule? Is it really the case that a poor finite creature is capable of committing sin, the penalty of which is to be infinite (eternal pain). "The wages of sin is death." To say it means cessation of life, is certainly a more natural interpretation than to say it means eternal life in misery.

I have written the above, not that I wish to enter into a discussion of the question with any one, but merely to explain and state the simple facts of the lecture and spirit of it, hoping that some, at least, will be persuaded to investigate and be profited thereby, and ever have explicit faith in the Book of God. R. J. ARNOT.

The Profit and Loss of War.

It takes some time to post the books and balance the accounts of any unusually large enterprise. Certainly one of the biggest undertakings of the century was the Franco-German war, and it need hardly be wondered at, if the balance of that huge business has, on the German side, only just been struck. It may be necessary to recall the fact that the total number of the army of the German Empire which was called into the field amounted, from first to last, to one million and a quarter. This included the regiments of the landwehr who were employed in garrisoning fortresses, and who were never required for active service at all. The official statements, now completed, of the number of men killed, wounded and missing give the total for North and South Germany, of about 4,200 officers and 85,700 men. It has been estimated that the entire money cost of the war to Germany was two hundred and seventy-five millions of dollars. It is obvious, however, that this amount actually expended, will not cover the entire loss in Germany involved in the operations of the war. We must assume that, for the entire eight months of the struggle, Germany lost the productive labor of at least 600,000 men. The value of this to the country cannot be estimated at less than one hundred dollars per head i. e. sixty million of dollars. Then, the loss of about ninety thousand men was equivalent, on the lowest computation, to a national loss of $1000 per head, or ninety millions of dollars. We thus bring the actual cost of the war to Germany up to the sum of four hundred and twenty-five millions of dollars.

In exchange for this, Germany has already levied upon France some $480,000,000, and she has still to receive $660,000,000, before letting go her grasp upon French territory. That is to say, the German loss by the war, represented, so far as it can be by pecuniary equivalents, is rather less than two-fifths of the entire indemnity claimed from France as the fee of victory.

The war, then, may be considered by people who think it possible to measure everything by dollars and cents, as a good enough speculation for Germany. To those who look upon the loss incurred by one nation as involving a loss to the world at large, it may be less encouraging to reflec that the money paid out and the lives lost by Germany must be added to the same item on the French side of the account before we can estimate the money loss to civilization of this disastrous struggle. We keep out of view altogether the amount of the indemnity as representing money which has merely changed hands. But taking what may be called the inevitable outlay on both sides, it is perfectly certain that in these fatal eight months, at least $1,200,000,000, or its equivalent, was absolutely and irretrievably wasted. This would have paid off half the national debt of the United States, might have accomplished no one can tell what good to the human race, and will have to be replaced in the capital fund of civilization by the accumulated surplus of labor all over the world. It is only by taking such broad views of the question that we come adequately to understand the profit and the loss of war.—Scot. Am. Journal.

What to Remember.

The Christian Era tells beautiful truths in the following article, which even its erroneous ideas cannot wholly becloud. Just how death and being with Christ can be synchronous events and one long for the one without anticipating the other, also is not over clear: it is one of the difficulties of orthodoxy, and no small one either.

But let that pass, and read what the Era says on the duty of keeping in mind the second advent:

It is a beautiful and most Christian remark of Bengel upon the seventh verse of the first chapter of First Corinthians,—waiting for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ—"Leaving to others their MEMENTO MORI (remember death), do thou earnestly cherish this joyous expectation of the Lord's coming." Scarcely does the New Testament warn us to watch against the day of death. Its almost invariable language with reference to the future is, wait for the Son of Man—be ready for his coming—hope for his appearing. That second advent is set before the Christian as the grand event whose importance and glory obscure every other. The New Testament is full of this precious and inspiring doctrine. The coming of Christ in person is constantly presented as the noblest and most stimulating motive to duty, the sweetest ground of encouragement and comfort. What are all other events compared to this—the actual appearing again in his humanity, now glorified, of the Head of the Church? The hope of this kept alive in the heart of the bride during her separation from her Lord, must be a powerful aid in resisting the temptations of the world, and maintaining a course of unfaltering and joyful loyalty. In writing to the Corinthian Christians the apostle, before censuring their sins and faults, presents this grand event as if to prepare them duly to consider and profit by what should follow.

But says one, after all our waiting and hoping, Christ may not come in our life time. Well if you die thus expecting and longing for his personal presence, will you be disappointed by your departure? Will you not go to be with Christ? And what can be a better preparation for your departure? Having been wont for years to look for Christ, your going to him will be the going to a long-loved friend.

The great motive to a Christian life is this beholding of Christ. That sight by faith allures the soul onward and upward to the glorious object of its gaze. And so, at death the heart, instinctively turns to Christ. Dying will not bring to your view another object. It was Christ on earth; it will be Christ in heaven.

Let this then be the constant attitude of the church—that of expectant waiting for the Lord. Instead of brooding over the grave, as did Dr. Judson once when in a state of morbid depression, her eye should be directed heavenward, whence her gracious Head shall be revealed, that he may fulfill to her his promises of blessing and glory. Christ wishes his people to be happy, what can fill them with joy so well as to be looking for and hastening unto his appearing?

The Keystone.

Christianity as a great truth comprises within it a number of minor and related truths, each one of which depends upon the fact of the resurrection of Christ. The doctrine of his divinity and of the genuineness of his mission rests upon it. For if he did not rise he was either mistaken or an impostor. And "if he be not risen; then the dead rise not." In like manner the whole fabric and superstructure of all the Christian doctrines rests upon the fundamental fact of Christ's resurrection. It is in truth the great keystone which holds up the mighty arch of Christianity. Knock this out, and the whole arch drops at once. Prove that Christ is not risen and we are left without hope and without a Savior in the world.

If Christ is not "the first-be-gotten from the dead," then he was not the "only be-gotton of the Father." If he left not the bosom of the sepulcher, then he never "left the bosom of the Father." If he is not risen, then he is not at the right hand of God. We've no intercessor there. No atonement has been made. We are yet in our sins, and those who have fallen asleep in Christ were deceived and are lost. And if he has not "gone hence," where is the promised Comforter! Where the glorious resurrection, the immortality brought to light in the gospel, and where the sheet-anchor of hope? If Christ has not risen, the New Testament is a fable, the Christian Church a band of deluded fanatics, and our missionaries are madmen, and the world is yet in darkness, or at best only in the twilight of the Old Dispensation." But we are persuaded better things, though we thus speak. "He is risen," and in that fact we find a glorious confirmation of all Christ did and spake. Let the skeptic deride his other miracles, if he will. Let him say as the water blushes into wine, "Trickery, legerdemain." As the life-restorer brings back to life the pale son of the weeping widow, let the unbelieving scoffer say, "He was not dead." Let him hear the Savior call Lazarus out of his grave, and if he will not believe, let him say, "Lazarus was in a swoon, or that his was a mock funeral, and he plotted a plan with the Son of God to hoax the unsuspecting crowd." But what will he do with that miracle of miracles—the self-resurrection of Christ? In all the semblance and reality of death, his body lay in the tomb—eyes closed, lips sealed, limbs stretched out in motionless inactivity. Suddenly a shining one, commissioned from above, comes down "swift as the lightning's glimpse" and rolls away the stone. The earth quakes, and the sleeper rises as if from a night's repose, "bursting the bands of death." And as he comes forth my faith meets him at the mouth of the sepulcher, clasps him in its arms and exclaims; "My Lord and my God! The resurrection and the life!" Even skepticism itself, like the Centurion at the cross, smiting on its breast, is compelled to exclaim, "Surely this was the Son of God!—L. D. in Chris. Era.

The Tendency to Shirk.

The fashion of trying to do everything by means of "movements" so general just now, does more harm than good. It has, in the case of multitudes of men and women, wholly displaced and abolished direct personal effort for the advancement of public morals and education, and for the spread of religion itself. Thousands of people in this country, who have power and opportunity for most blessed and fruitful work in quiet ways, are living in utter idleness, so far as any effort for the moral welfare of others is concerned, because they are waiting for some great "movement" to abolish the evils of the world and bring in "the good time coming." They will not teach a boy to read or a girl to sew. They have not even a good word for those who undertake such work. They believe vastly in culture, and morals, and religion; but these are all to be promoted and advanced by means of great movements by which everything is to be done without anybody really doing anything. This is the very essence of the popular idea of "movement." It is to dispense with all personal effort, all downright work; with everything, in short, that is toilsome and unpleasant. The world is to be reformed by machinery. Not only is the kingdom of God to come with observation; but the banners and bands of music, the speeches and the show, are to be the chief means used for bringing in the new order of things, as they are also to constitute a large part of the new order itself. The movement people abhor, above all things else, quiet work, work that is not seen of men, and, specially, the putting of their own hands to the business. Just as much of any good work as can be done by speech-making, by bill-sticking, by appointing presidents and vice-presidents and secretaries and executive committees, will be done readily every where now. Many things sadly needed, which require individual effort and devotion to accomplish them, must wait till this dress-parade, brass-band religion has run its course and got itself out of the way.—Liberal Christian.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $600, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Cook, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 35 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 34 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $25. tf

---

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1000 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED:

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting: any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n30m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

FRUIT FARM

FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them

Refer to Ed. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 35 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

IOWA, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, CALIFORNIA.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, or any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July [illegible], 1873.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

AN OPPOSITION PAPER.

There seems to be good reason to believe that there is a scheme projected to establish in the West a new weekly journal in opposition to THE TIMES. There have been rumors of such an enterprise before; and since some of the late campmeetings they are thickening. A brother in Iowa, sending a new subscriber, inquires if it be true that THE TIMES is running down, and that it is soon to give way to another journal in other hands. Now while upon the last clause of this inquiry we have no very definite information, and are therefore not prepared to speak, it is quite different in regard to our own affairs; concerning them we are well informed. With those who set this rumor afloat the wish was no doubt father to the thought that THE TIMES is "running down." Those who have contributed, whether by action or inaction to such a result, can without question truly say that our Western paper is not in as flourishing condition as it might have been. The minds of some of its friends have been alienated. Mistrust has been sown where confidence had prevailed, and where, by the blessing of God it will again prevail. But for all this it is not true that THE TIMES is "running down." On the contrary, it is steadily gaining ground both as to influence and circulation. True, some have successfully urged not a few of our subscribers to drop THE TIMES and take another journal in its stead. But while this has been done, others have been at work adding to the list, so that all losses have been more than made up, and our list of regular subscribers was never larger than at the present moment.

Our list of trial subscribers fluctuates. Sometimes it has held as many as 400 names, then again there would be less than 100. But out of these there have been continual permanent accessions to our regular list, of those who after receiving our visits for three months have become desirous of a still better acquaintance.

In this connection a few words as to the real condition of our affairs will not fail to interest our friends. We are now passing through the period of the year during which our income is least, while the demands upon our resources are scarcely less than at any other season of the year. It is seldom that our income during either of the summer months is equal to our expenses. On the contrary, from October to March our receipts are in excess of our expenditures; and from this surplus something is set apart, at the time, to meet the mid-year deficit. The extraordinary expenses of our removal more than absorbed our surplus, designed to meet our summer bills. Hence we have been to some extent cramped for ready means. But help has been extended, both from expected and unexpected quarters, and our credit has not been impaired, nor have we failed to keep any of our financial engagements. A fast is not a mortal sickness, to either man or newspapers. As the harvests are gathered and the time for renewal of subscriptions comes on, means will again flow in, as usual, to enable us to pay our debts, and current expenses. We look to our subscribers and friends to answer the question, whether "THE TIMES is running down and destined to die."

Our readers will bear us witness that we have never been jealo[illegible] new efforts in the publishing [illegible] have always had a kind word f[illegible] Crisis; we welcomed the Chri[illegible] and published its prospectus [illegible] months. Since the Banner was projected, although it led directly to the suspension of one of our own publications, we can truly say we have done what we could in its behalf. The field is wide, and there is room for all the workers, and we are in favor of letting every one work with their own tools and in their own way, if only Christ and his truth be preached.

But we do object to any laborer pulling one down, or pushing another aside to make room for himself. The field is big enough for all; in fact there are not laborers enough for the work. The press must take the preacher's place in a thousand fields. And if THE TIMES, and the Crisis and the Banner will not suffice, then, by all means, let us have another sheet, such as may be needed. On the other hand, if either of these papers are not properly managed, there is a time and place for righting what is wrong and correcting and reforming any grievances that may exist. Let such matters be canvassed there, and then let the majority rule. If needed reforms are not effected at once, time will bring the desired result.

By all means, then, let us have new papers as fast as they can be supported, and all possible improvements in those already established, as fast as they can be introduced. THE TIMES, with the aid of many friends, has made itself a field, and has made itself a necessity in thousands of homes. Its position is secure in the affections of those families. They love the paper, and we love them. We toil for them, think for them, write for them, select, prune, polish, and often—most unpleasant of all—reject for them. We do not succeed in pleasing every body, and never expect to. But we believe we have succeeded in making THE TIMES very nearly such a paper as a majority of Adventists in the Interior have desired. If there are to be more Advent papers, let them not be "opposition" sheets, but let there be rather a generous rivalry as to which can do most for the truth, stand straightest and firmest for it, and best deserve the commendations of the great Master as well as his people.

CALIFORNIA.

All will be glad to learn that since his removal to the Southern part of the State, Br. R. W. Wilson's health is improving. We had heard that he was so poorly that he must die, but rejoice that he is to live and do more work for the Master.

Br. and Sr. Fassett have been visiting Santa Clara and vicinity, further south than they have been before. They found the climate so genial and favorable that they have determined to remain in the State some months longer at least. At San Francisco the sea-winds seemed to affect them unfavorably; and the fine-driving sand kept their eyes in a continual inflammation. We need Br. and Sr. F. in Minnesota, still we cannot help feeling that they are now in the right place. Any way they can hardly get away over the prayers and entreaties of those who cling to them in California.

Br. and Sr. Reed are indefatigable in their labors. Overwork, when one is in feeble health, does not tend to improve one's physical condition. But they seem, in spite of ill health, to get through a good deal of hard work.

There is no news as yet from our Oregon Missionary, we shall hear from him in good time, and good news too, no doubt.

Some young men are needed at the Pacific Coast. Men are wanted.

Those not afraid to grapple with highway and hedges work.

We have just received the following letter from Br. and Sr. Reed:

We have returned home again from a three month's tour, working in new fields. Had a hard battle all the way around in company with Brn Fassett and Wilson. Nearly all the ministers fought hard against us; but the Lord brought some out of their snare over on the side of truth, and were made happy in the love of God.

We are preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, over this coast as fast as we can. We believe the King is soon coming and that the great work of saving souls is almost over.

As the professed church of God rejected the first advent, so will the Gentile church reject the second advent. As there were plenty of hypocrites and hirelings then, so will there be when Christ comes the second time; and they shall not escape. As it was in Lot's time, so shall it be in Christ's time, at his coming.

The ministers and people tell us, that they have nothing against us, but its the doctrine. The people of old had nothing against the Prophets, but the doctrine. This doctrine brings ministers and people straight out on God's great truth and the Bible. Then they see that some thing must be done. They must repent and put away their sins; and it will cost them a great sacrifice; and so they first draw back, and then commence to fight it down. We pity them, and are laboring to do all we can to get them ready to meet the Lord.

Sanctification.

[A friend has handed us the following communication which appears to be a letter written in apostolic times, as the heat of the first persecutions was subsiding. We publish it the more readily, that our own position upon the topic of sanctification is well understood. We have no faith in sanctification dogmas which are of human origin. Bible sanctification, with its accompaniments of growth in grace and knowledge we fully believe and endeavor to teach. But here is the document referred to. Our readers can take it for what ever they may consider it worth. ED.]

Didymus, to Aquila and Priscilla, beloved in the Lord, Greeting:

I cannot refrain from apprising you of the new reformation that has sprung up in India. I have just returned from one of the great national Feasts of Tabernacles held by certain of the Rabbies and Scribes for promoting sanctification. The places for the meetings are very wisely chosen. A beautiful grove near the sea-coast or some delightful lake is selected, and the grounds are fitted up regardless of expense. In some cases as much as twenty talents of gold have been expended for the purchase of the ground, and as much more in fitting up the grounds with cottages and other comforts and conveniences.

This is considered a vast improvement over the way that John Baptist managed; and I have sometimes thought that if the Savior had been a little more popular in some of his outward arrangements he might have succeeded in sanctifying more of the people. However I would not presume to criticise him: doubtless he had other objects in view than these present reformers.

Be that as it may, their grounds for these Feasts of Tabernacles are a perfectly delicious place for resort during the heats of summer. However all their exterior arangements are constructed with an eye single to the one object of the Feasts—the promotion of sanctification. And I must say, dear brother and sister, that if you would see a renewal of the orignal purity of Phariseeism—as it was long years agone, when Pharisee meant one separate—separate from sin, pure in heart and life, austere in manner and humble in spirit, you should attend one of these National Feasts of Tabernacles. The Rabbies and Scribes in charge are fully consecrated to God, and his Spirit is certainly with them. Although they do not see the truth in regard to Jesus of Nazareth, and still reject the truth of his resurrection, and have no faith in his promise that he will come again with every man's reward; although they still teach that the dead go to Paradise or Tartarus at death; and that the judgment is a long way off, and that the resurrection is not a very practical doctrine, and that man possesses natural immortality, thus scouting the claim of Jesus of Nazareth to be the Life-giver; I say though they hold all these and some other errors, yet they are a long ways ahead of us on this doctrine of sanctification. They take little interest in the prophecies of Daniel, or indeed in prophecy at all, except those fabulous interpretations about a season of temporal national glory for Israel; but they do so love to dwell upon all the passages that have the word 'sanctify' in them. Sanctification is the one and only object of the meeting. Every thing else is treated as a side issue. And it would do you good to see how harmonious everything is. Here are Pharisees of several schools, and Herodians and Essenes, and Nazarenes, and some of John Baptist's followers who refused to acknowledge Jesus as the Christ, and I even noticed a few Sadducees. But the most perfect union prevailed. I confess it jarred my nerves a little when I heard allusions to going into glory and receiving crowns and rewards at death; and I could see the Sadducees wince at a hint of resurrection glory; but these were only incidental allusions, and did not disturb the outward harmony in the least.

And things really look as though a great union of all the jarring sects was well begun. I think these lovers of sanctification will yet see the truth, and all be Christians. I know Jesus seemed to teach as though belief of the truth and repentance and faith must precede sanctification; but a glorious work is going on; and if we can have sanctification first, and belief of the truth afterwards, it will be just as well. It is the results we are after; the means are not of so much account. Any way, the end will justify the means.

Beloved brother and sister, I hope you will take hold of this doctrine of sanctification. I know you have always taught and still believe that believers must be sanctified soul, body, and spirit; but there seems to be a something in this movement in which these Pharisees are ahead of us, a long way. They are prepared to help us into a fitter condition to meet our returning Lord. Preach less doctrine and more sanctification. Don't mind that report about what the Rabbi said at the Tabernacle meeting by the way of the Sea, beyond Jordan.

In giving the invitation for seekers of perfect peace to come forward for a season of prayer, he said—"We want you Nazarenes, and Gnostics, and Sadducees, to leave your peculiar notions behind you, when you come to the altar for prayers." I expect they were a little stirred up at the pertinacity and effect, probably, with which some of our not very judicious brethren had been preaching our doctrine, and he was afraid some of them might make the truth prominent where Sanctification only should be the theme. Its a pity he said it; for the Scriptures assure us that the abundance of the heart dictates the words of the mouth; which makes it look as though they had not much love for us as Christians, except as we deny our faith. But let this pass. They are ahead of us in sanctification, and I am determined to have the blessed union with them in the future I have in the past in this sanctification movement. And I feel really sorry for these reforming Scribes and Pharisees.

Their more popular brethren deride them, and they are called fools, not exactly for Christ's sake, but for the sake of the doctrine of sanctification.

If by chance you meet with Paul, tell him in all his epistles to say less about Jesus and the resurrection, and the immortal kingdom, and the second coming of Jesus, and the renewal of the earth and prophecy in general, and especially be careful in speaking of the nature of man, and say more about sanctification. It is the doctrine for the times, and must prove a success in uniting the warring sects.

Greet the household of the sanctified.

DIDYMUS.

Dated at Jerusalem, in the sixth month and fifteenth day of the month.

A Talk with the "Mailing Machine."

Most readers of THE TIMES are aware that the directions and names upon their papers are affixed by a little instrument called a mailing machine. Its operation cannot very well be described without an illustration. Suffice it to say, that the names and postoffices are all printed upon narrow slips of paper, and these pasted in one long ribbon, containing toward 5,000 addresses. This ribbon runs from a roller upon a little endless band, which, in turn, runs through paste held in a little chamber of the machine. The machine hangs upon the operator's left arm, and the rubber band is turned by the thumb of the left hand. The paper ribbon does not follow the band around into the paste, but is led off under a knife operated by the right hand, which slices off the name and address, to which sufficient paste adheres, gathered from the pasted rubber band, to secure its adhesion to the paper or wrapper. It is the most rapid system of mailing papers now in use, and is quite as accurate as any. Last week we received our first papers from the press at about half past ten a. m., and by four o'clock p. m., they were all folded, wrapped and directed, and ready for "mailing." We only wish every reader of THE TIMES could visit our office on a mailing day—the busiest day of the week, with the hardest work. They would never again feel that we spared any effort to send their papers regularly and in time. When for any reason they are delayed, we feel as though it were a personal matter to ourselves as well as our readers.

It was mailing day, or rather the evening after. All hands but myself were abed, and asleep, I hope, when I thought I heard a voice saying—

"I can talk too, sometimes!"

I looked around to see who or what spoke—whether the Dry Press, or the Stabber, or the Cutting Machine, all useful servants, when the voice continued—

"It's me, the Mailing Machine."

I was not surprised at all: indeed I had rather been expecting something of the kind.

M. It seems some like old times, lately, don't it, when you used to 'run' me every mailing day?

W. Yes, indeed; but I can't really say I am glad to renew the acquaintance. My arm aches yet from the run of to-day.

M. Oh! yes, of course. But then, you don't bear me any ill will. I make it easier for you in some other directions. And I heard you say to-day you wished there were twice as many subscribers; so I guess you ain't so much afraid of the aching part after all.

W. Certainly not. I am not afraid of work, but it has been a good while since I have been in the habit of working with you, and the list is nearly twice as large as it was then, and I have not got fairly used to the work. I'd be willing to have both arms ache every night if the circulation and usefulness of the paper could only be doubled.

M. No doubt. I've watched you, and knew you didn't slight me, but had plenty of work in other directions. But I have been in good hands. You'll have to practice some to work me as Elijah used to do. No offense, I hope.

W. Not a bit. It don't make me feel bad to know that others can do better than I can. I'll try and do the best I can, and if others can do better, why, so much the better.

M. All right then. I thought you wouldn't take offense; and I hope nobody else will, either: for I want to talk pretty plainly with a good many people, if you will let me. I saw your Talks with the Press, and I want to have some of my talk with you published, too.

W. Well, go on.

M. I shall ask you some things I know myself, to draw out answers for the benefit of others. What do you do when you get your letters every day?

W. Why, open them, of course.

M. Well, what then?

W. Why, look them over, see who and where they are from, and if there is any money in them, mark the amount on the letter.

M. But you can't always tell the who and where?

W. How do you know that?

M. Why, haven't I seen the notes to correspondents on the eighth page of THE TIMES, asking for names and Postoffice Addresses. Besides, I've seen you hunting over the list, and the P. O. Book. No small job to hunt up one name among so many, is it?

W. No, it is not. We can't do it. Sometimes when we know about where a name is, we look for it. Sometimes out of fifty letters in a mail, over twenty will be defective, either as regards P. O. Address or names. We find them if we can; and if we can't, put them in "the Reference File," until we hear again.

M. Apt to hear, are you not?

W. Yes, and get a scolding, too.

M. Well, but don't you make mistakes sometimes?

W. Oh! yes. I'm only human, and liable to err. But I solemnly believe, that if correspondents would take pains to do what we have asked a hundred times—write their P. O. Addresses in full in every letter, and write proper names very plainly, there would not be one mistake where there are a score now.

M. And I should think that so many carelessly written letters would perplex you so that you would be more apt to make mistakes in the others.

W. Exactly so. That is just the way it works. Correspondents will put an order for the paper, or papers, and books, and tracts all run together on the same sheet, with perhaps something for the paper, and a few kind words (God bless them for those!) beside. They think less of economizing my time than they do of their own time and paper. Now if each item was written on a separate slip of paper, or on only one side, so I could cut it into slips myself, how much easier it would make our work.

M. Why so?

W. Why you see I have a "pigeon hole" for each sort. There is one for appointments, and another for communications, and another for correspondence and extracts; and one for TIMES business and one for orders for books and tracts, etc. Now I can't put the same sheet into a half-dozen pigeon holes at the same time; so I either have to copy the items, or else it is delayed to travel the rounds, and perhaps be mislaid. But I try hard not to make mistakes, and so do those who help me. When we find we have made one we feel worse about it than anybody else can.

M. Can't you tell me something more about the process of the work?

W. Certainly. After the letters are assorted, the orders for books and tracts are copied into the Order Book. Then we take those that relate to THE TIMES, and spread out our List as we call it—a large square book, made of Manila paper, containing a printed list of the names and Addresses of our subscribers, and the date they are paid to.

M. The List then is a copy of that long 'ribbon' of names I paste on the papers every week?

W. Exactly. And they are all in a regular order, beginning with Maine, so that if a P. O. Address is fairly given, we know where to find it on the list.

M. Please explain the meaning of the little label I cut off on each paper.

W. The name needs no explanation. The date to which the paper is paid is the added portion. For instance.

John Smith 1 Jan 73.

Means that John Smith has paid for his copy of THE TIMES until January first, eighteen hundred and seventy-three. Any subscriber whose date is not now ahead of 1 Aug 72 is in arrears, and should at once send 50 cents or one dollar or more, and have the date on his label changed.

M. Just so. That's all plain enough; and they ought to understand the one and do the other thing. But how do you make the changes.

W. Let us suppose a case. I will take the List, and to-day's mail. Here is a letter from A. B. Plainly written—easily understood. Sends two dollars for his TIMES. Augusta, Maine. Here it is first name on the list. Present date, 1 Jan 72. I draw my pen through the figure '2' and in the margin at the end of the line I make a "3."

B. C. says, testily, "Stop my paper! Don't want it." We won't tell where he lives, for he is six months in arrears. Certainly he should have found out that he did'nt want the paper before he had run a dollar in debt for it. But no matter, I draw a line through his name, and place in the margin the proof reader's mark for "take out."

C. D.'s letter is pleasanter reading. A half dozen new subscribers. I write the names and dates in the margin, and draw a line from them to the place where they are to be entered in the type.

E. F.'s letter is a puzzler. It is dated—say Washington. That's all. No county, no State. I take up the Post Office book to see what State Washington is in. Find that there is a Post Office of that name in every State, in some States there are two or three of that name. So I turn to a sheet marked "To correspondents," and write

E. F. What is your P. O. Address? and put his letter in "the Reference File," and go on with the rest. After they are all entered, then the letters are folded, the writers' names written upon the back, and they are filed away in Alphabetical order for future reference;—unless indeed they contain something for the paper, when they go into the "Composing Room," to be set up, and find their way at last into the waste paper box.

M. But what about the list?

W. A day or two before mailing "Fred" takes the list into the Composing Room. The type from which it is printed lies on a long table "locked up," in "chases." He loosens the "quoins" so that he can move the type. He then goes through and makes the changes in the type that are marked on the List.

M. Well, he sometimes makes a mistake don't he?

W. Oh! yes. We are all liable to make mistakes. It takes a long time to get thoroughly acquainted with such a large mail list, and one has a multitude of things to remember. To one not posted the wonder would be that he did not make more instead of fewer mistakes. But the fact is, that after an intelligent person once gets used to the work, they make comparatively very few blunders. Sometimes a type gets into the wrong box, and so into the wrong place. And types are like folks in that respect—they make bad work when out of place. Sometimes a type or two drops out of its place, and that is just as bad. One may do as much harm by getting out of one's true place as by getting into the wrong place. The right types in the right place, and the right men in their places is just right. But we can't always have it so, and its no use to fret. [All I can say is, that if the wrong type gets in or the right one falls out, just drop a friendly note—don't scold us—and we will "fix" it at once.]

M. Well, its near midnight, and you are tired. You had better get to bed, and I will talk about some other matters at another time—Good night!

W. Good night. WILLIAM.

A Summer Trip.

I would like to say through the TIMES that I have just returned from quite an extended trip, which has afforded me the rare opportunity of visiting the friends in numerous localities and becoming better acquainted with the wants of our people, and the rapid spread of our views. I find doors open in every direction and multitudes anxious to hear. In all churches and neighborhoods I meet with some one or more seeking light upon the question. Their faith is being shaken in the old theological views of the nature of man, and the final destiny of the wicked. They are anxiously inquiring, "Watchman, what of the night?" and feeling oppressed by the general silence of the pulpit upon the prophetic scriptures.

My last sabbath out I spent at Prescott, Wis., where I preached twice to deeply attentive listeners, and administered the ordinance of baptism, in which two, who had been waiting the opportunity, came forward and thus publicly "put on Christ."

Through the kindness of a friend I enjoyed the privilege of attended the State camp-meeting at Jackson Mich. Here I formed and renewed acquaintance with a number of dear friends I had seen before; and also met with several I had much desired to see, having known them only by the good report of their faithful labors in the TIMES. It did me good to meet with them; to see so many good and true men, and among them so many young men, who have forsaken all to preach the Word, in this age when so many have "turned away their ears from the truth and been turned unto fables." The Lord is greatly blessing their labors.

I also attended our own State Campmeeting held at Utica. This makes the fourth of our annual Campmeetings in succession I have enjoyed. And I can but feel there has been a steady growth, year by year, and good accomplished. If all our people would but make the sacrifice, and gather from all parts of the State to their annual feast there would be no estimating the good results to themselves and the cause; and they should make a great effort to do this. Our meeting was characterized by a deep religious feeling, affecting all present. Believers were greatly blessed, a number of backsliders reclaimed, and sinners converted. Thirteen were baptised and others are to follow.

I was much interested in the case of Br. Chapman, a minister from the Baptist church, who came to our campmeeting directly from a body of Elders who sat in trial upon his case for heresy, and had disfellowshipped him for his belief in the Advent views. He is a man who promises to be a help to us in the cause of Bible truth, a valuable laborer in the great field.

Such cases as Brn. Chapman, Paton, Bowman and others, are increasing among us; and for the truth's sake and for their sakes, I am rejoiced at it. God will be with these dear brethren, and all those who are cast out for a belief of the truth. They will have a richer experience in divine things, and do a thousand fold more good than in their old relation. The blessed light that will shine from God's word upon their path will be worth incomparably more to them than all the honors and friendship of a wealthy and popular church which they are called to sacrifice for the truth's sake. They have not "been ashamed of Jesus and his word;" they have "forsaken all that they had, for the kingdom of God's sake:" and how full the promise, "a hundred fold in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting." My heart runs out toward these dear brethren, from a personal experience of the same trials. And I want to say to each of them, lean upon God's promise (Is. 66: 5), and he will never forsake you.

Among other things, I was greatly interested by a visit to our office in Chicago, and our printing establishment at Norwood Park. Nothing, in a business light, I deem could have been more important to our success than this removal of our headquarters. Important as this move has always appeared to me, I was not prepared to take in its full advantages until I came personally to stand upon the ground and look upon its workings. To my mind the change has been admirably managed, and it is giving us a vantage ground never enjoyed before. Every thing seems working prosperously. Better and truer men, more earnest workers, or more capable and trusty managers could not be at the helm. With the divine blessing and co-operation of the friends, success is certain. Let every one who loves our cause stand by our Western Association. It is our home interest, essential to the prosecution of the work in our own field. Pray for it; talk and act for it; get subscribers for the paper; buy its tracts and publications; and scatter them everywhere. Donate to it liberally—either your mite or abundance as God prospers you. Let no material aid be wanting to keep those iron sinews at work, and no means lacking to scatter their printed pages like the leaves of autumn, bearing God's message of light and mercy to all who will read and learn the blessed truths of love and warning for these last days.

Why can we not, and why should we not, put our own Establishment upon as good footing everyway as our "Seventh Day" friends have theirs. In this they have set an example worthy to follow. Let us emulate their self-sacrificing spirit in this direction. We are really indebted to the cause to do this. In closing, I must say a word for Norwood Park. I like it. I am delighted with it. It is beautifully located, dry, and healthful, and is being tastefully built up. It is just the place for our printing establishment, and just the place I would like to live in the rest of my days. L. C. COLLINS.

"GOOD TIDINGS."

We have been authorized by the publisher to reduce the price of this work.

We will send a copy in cloth by mail for 65c, postpaid.

When sent to any American Merchants' Union Express office, 60c postpaid: or four or more copies at the rate of 55c. each copy.

$5 a dozen by other Express Companies, charges paid by the purchaser.

We expect a supply in paper covers soon.

Ho For Camp!

[The following call, designed for our Iowa brethren, will answer for all the other States.] ED.

Dear Brethren and Sisters scattered throughout Iowa:

Have you read the notice of the Campmeeting and Conference to be held at Manchester the 6th of September next, continuing over two Sabbaths? This meeting is for the glory of God; the advancement of his cause; the edification and up-building of the church, and the salvation of perishing souls for whom Jesus died. Are you making preparations to attend? Come in the name of the God of Israel, and bring your unconverted children and neighbors with you. Come at the commencement of the meeting, if possible. Come prepared to live on the ground during the meeting. Come equipped with plain, substantial clothing and thick shoes, so you will not be afraid of the dew, sun, or rain. And remember that plain wholesome food is much better for the body and soul than rice cake and pastries.

Twenty yards of good heavy sheeting, or a number of sheets, if not convenient to get new cloth, will cover a tent large enough for a small family: Something that you have will answer for sides ends and partitions. A straw tick, pillows, sheets, comfortables, soap, towel, wash basin; utensils for cooking such food as you may bring without cooking; plates, knives, cups and such other articles as may seem to be wanted, and you are equipped bodily.

Now be filled with the Spirit and clothe yourselves with the whole armor of God and come up to this feast of tabernacles to work for King Jesus. So shall you reap an hundred fold now, and in the world to come eternal life.

We expect Brn. Thurber and Adrian from Wisconsin, and other ministers from abroad will be with us to administer the word of life and add to the interest of the meeting. But best of all, God, our Father, will be there, by his Spirit, to cheer and to bless.

The Committee will spare no pains to make you comfortable and happy. So we bid you come. Come from every quarter and from other States, to worship with us the living God.

MARTHA J. JAMES.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER

SADDUCEEAN

NOR

PHARISAIC,

BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.

What did the Pharisees believe?

What did the Sadducees teach?

The pure theology—the ancient faith.

The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.

The true doctrine of a future life set forth!

Patriarchs expected it.

Prophets looked for it.

Jesus Christ demonstrated it.

Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.

Dead men are not alive.

Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?

What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.

Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.

Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,

FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Communications.

Just a Thought.

PROP. 1. "Man is....a being that possesses a spirit."

ART. 1. "Man's spirit [is] a rational, intelligent, conscious, moral entity."

Therefore, either man is not a rational, intelligent, conscious, moral entity, or there are TWO rational, moral beings in every individual of the human race!

A. A.

Chicago.

Having recently paid a flying visit to the offices of the W. A. C. P. Association in Chicago and Norwood Park, I am happy to say that in my humble opinion the Board took the right step in the right direction, when they moved our publishing interests from Buchanan to Chicago. The Association was never in better trim for work and never had better prospects of success than now. God has done great things for the cause in the West, but still greater things are before us if we abide humble, faithful and true. May the gracious benediction of high heaven rest upon the Western Association and give it success beyond even our most sanguine desires in spreading far and wide the glorious truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ. C. C. MARSTON.

How Can it be Expressed?

The wicked are to utterly perish like natural brute beasts in their own corruption, to be as tow, to be as chaff, to be as tares that are gathered up and cast into the fire and burnt up, to be as stubble, to be as grass cast into an oven, to be as though they never had been, to be cut off! they shall not enter into life eternal, the soul that sinneth shall die, to be as the fat of lambs, shall consume away into smoke, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.

Now I will admit for the argument's sake, that all of the above plain and expressive passages of Scripture mean a never-ending life in conscious misery and torment. On and on, through all eternity, without a cessation, the agony must be endured. Now let us suppose the Lord should really mean to burn up the wicked, really and utterly destroy them, in what language could he express the idea? Will some one give us the words and frame the sentences that will in any way convey the idea of annihilation? Can it be done? Will some powerful linguist please step forward and solve the problem?

C. S. BRANCH.

Bible Admonitions.

Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth. (Eccl. 12: 7.)

Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. (Mat. 22: 37.)

Fulfill the royal law. (James 2: 8.)

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another. (James 5: 16.)

Pray that we may lead a quiet and peacable life, in all godliness and honesty. (1 Tim. 2: 2.)

Be not ashamed of the testimony of our Lord. (2 Tim. 1: 8.)

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. (1 Tim. 6: 12.)

Earnestly contend for the faith, which was delivered unto the saints. (Jude 3.)

Add to your faith, self-control, patience, and love. (2 Pet. 1: 5,

Sanctify the Lord God in y[illegible] (1 Pet. 3: 15.)

Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. (Heb. 12: 14.)

Be not conformed to this world. (Rom. 12: 2.)

Exhort one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. (Heb. 10: 25.)

Keep [these] commandments without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. (1 Tim. 6: 14.) G. W. B.

Are They Reliable?

I mean Moses and the Prophets. Some who pretend to believe Christ's words say not. I say "pretend," because Christ says, "if ye believe not the writings of Moses, how shall ye believe my words." (John 5: 46, 47.) "For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me." Now if the words of Christ are to be authenticated by the writings of Moses, and they cannot be relied upon, how can we rely upon the words of Christ? "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." (Lk. 16: 31.) Christ says: "If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true." It is folly for us to claim the New Testament as reliable, so long as we hold the Books of Moses and the prophets as unreliable. Peter having been with Christ on the Holy Mount and having heard the voice, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased" (2 Pet. 1: 18), could yet say that the word of prophecy was more sure, more to be relied on than even his own ears and eyes. For, he says, prophecy came not by the will of man, but "the Spirit of Christ was in them," by which they wrote "unto us." (1 Pet. 1: 11, 12.) Thence, Peter says, "Be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets," and taught us that it was themost reliable testimony that he had to offer.

Now if the testimony upon which the New Testament is based is not reliable, it follows that the New Testament is not to be relied on. The New Testament is a stream from the Law and the Prophets, and a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain. Christ says "that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses and the prophets and in the Psalms concerning me." Paul was persecuted for preaching, and he declared he had preached nothing but what "Moses and the prophets did say."

S. CRONCE.

Errors of Conscience.

That an error of conscience in some cases may mitigate and yet not wholly excuse the wrong conduct that it causes, is very plainly taught in the Bible. Jesus prayed for those who crucified him: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." This implies that their conscience was misguided; they knew not what they did. But still they were guilty, for they needed forgiveness: "Father, forgive them." But their ignorance did in a measure mitigate their guilt; it was not so great as it would have been if they had known what they were doing. Hence Jesus pleads their ignorance as a reason why they should obtain forgiveness. Paul says of himself: "I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." (Acts 26: 9.) In carrying out this false idea, he persecuted, imprisoned, and gave his voice to murder the saints. But though he followed an honest conviction of mind, still he was guilty before God. He calls himself "a blasphemer, a persecutor, and injurious." "the chief of sinners," &c. His error, however, was a mitigation of his guilt; for he "obtained mercy, because he did it ignorantly, in unbelief." (1 Tim. 1: 13.)

The Jews were considered murderers because they had crucified Christ; but the apostle testifies "that through ignorance they did it," and therefore he [illegible] them to repent of their criminal conduct. This exhortation being grounded on a concession that they did it through ignorance, implies that their hope of forgiveness was better than it would have been if they had thus acted in opposition to knowledge.

The reason of the case is very plain. If we do a wrong act under the influence of an erroneous conviction of mind, we do not manifest that obstinacy and perverseness that we do when we perform such acts against the existing light in our minds. But to argue that this error or misconception should wholly excuse us, is unreasonable; because an error of judgment (in an important point of duty especially) indicates some fault or defect about us, such as prejudice, lust, negligence, or want of careful inquiry.

The guilt in being controlled by, or more properly, in having an erroneous conscience, is proportionable to the inexcusableness of the cause. If it is caused by mere obstinacy and perverseness, in rejecting the means of information, it does not abate our guilt in the least; for I can see no distinction between a willful rejection of the known means of information, and a refusal to perform duty aft[illegible] have obtained the information [illegible] incapacity to obtain, or to ap[illegible] means, will alone wholly excuse us.

They to whom Jesus has not spoken cannot be said to have the sin of unbelief. For external disadvantages, proportionable allowance in the divine estimation of guilt will probably be made. As there is much or little given to men, much or little will be required. No more will be required than has been given. The ignorance or error which proceeds from negligence, inattention, and the prejudice of custom is certainly sinful, for the causes of it are; but it is not so criminal as it would be if it were caused by direct obstinacy. The course of conduct therefore caused by the latter, is the most heinous in the sight of God. This seems to be in accordance with the teachings of Jesus. "And that servant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more." (Lk. 12: 47, 48.)

C. H. SWEET.

To the Brethren in Indiana.

The time, Aug. 9, is near when our Annual Conference is to meet; and we want to do more for the spread of the truth, during the coming conference year than we have done hitherto. We want a fund for the support of Evangelists, that some of our brethren may be kept in the field, proclaiming the glad tidings of life and salvation to our friends and neighbors. "Let your light shine," is the command of the Master, and we must heed it. The Macedonian cries, so constantly ringing in the ears of our ministers, call for prompt and energetic action on the part of the brotherhood. The means should be provided to answer all these calls for help; for it should be remembered that ministers cannot devote all their time to the proclamation of the gospel in new fields without help to support their families. Other denominations, notwithstanding their doctrinal errors, sustain missionaries; and shall we show less good than they? If we have the truth, let us imitate the example set by Abraham, and show our faith by our works, that it may be accounted to us for righteousness. We profess to believe that time is short; and while time remains let us WORK. We want no careless folding of arms now. The world are watching us; and if, while professing to believe the day of the Lord is near, we make no lively effort to warn them of impending judgment, they will say we are hypocrites. God forbid that we should bring reproach upon the Master's cause in this or any other way. Let us, then, do what we can, and all we can, to sound the alarm.

We want to raise at least $600 this year (and could use $1,000) for Evangelical purposes. If we expect to see the cause prosper we must take hold of mission work; and certainly we can raise $600 to support an Evangelist. Now let this be considered an appeal to every brother and sister in Indiana. Reader, I mean YOU. Will YOU give what you can?

Now let every church in Indiana meet and act in regard to this matter at once; as we want the pledge of each Church at Conference, that we may know what to do in regard to the employment of Evangelists. Start subscription lists at once. The following form will answer:

County of——, State of Indiana, August ——, 1872. We the undersigned hereby agree to contribute in advance quarterly payments, the sums placed opposite our respective names, for Evangelical support in the State of Indiana.

Let it be understood that only one fourth of the amount subscribed will be needed in advance—the remainder to be paid in quarterly instalments. Let the deacons take hold of this matter, and work with a will, and the amount can be raised. Brethren, contribute liberally.

Individuals in localities where they are isolated from churches can send their pledges by letter to Dr. N. Field, at Jeffersonville.

We want all our Churches represented Conference. Appoint your delegates, and send them with the proper credentials, that they may have a voice in our deliberations. Brethren, do not neglect this. I would also suggest that if you could pay the traveling expenses of your delegates to and from the Conference there would be nothing wrong in doing so.

M. E. GREEN.

"The God of Abraham."

Unfortunately for immaterialists, God and Moses left out the little word on which their argument turns! "I ....the God:" am is supplied by the translators. It might have been was or will be, just as well, for "this was not the intended sense," nor "even Moses so understood it." God did not use the "AM!" (Ex. 3: 6.)

Jesus did. He "showed that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob [the pastoral barbarians! Sodom was civilized!] were alive when he spoke to Moses." The opposer's reasoning seems to be this: God is their God. But he is not the God of the dead. Therefore the "pastoral barbarians" are not dead. I affirm on the authority of Scripture that Abraham and his son and grandson are dead. All will admit their bodies are dead—their bodies only. Then God is not the God of the dead bodies of said barbarians; therefore God will not raise their bodies. So the dead bodies never will be raised. The spirits of those barbarians are alive with God in happiness: they need no resurrection—are not capable of it. Therefore there will never be any resurrection of these barbarians. Therefore the Sadducees were right! and Abraham, Isaac and Jacob "are perished!"

If the Savior intended to prove the dead alive, his answer would not have confounded the Sadducees; for the living need no resurrection. The question of the Sadducees and Christ's answer both referred to the resurrection, not to the state in death. The spirits of either the woman, her husbands, or Abraham, are not once referred to.

The Pharisees taught that man did not die; the real man escaped, and took lodgings in some animal, or if very good or bad, went to happiness or misery at once, and at some time the body would be raised for the soul to inhabit eternally. The Sadducees denied the whole of this, and taught that man died totally and eternally.

"Now that the dead are raised" (present tense). "I am the God" (present tense). "All live unto him" (present tense). On the same principle that he says they are alive, they have had a resurrection. It is as positively said "the dead are raised," as that "they live unto him." Both expressions refer to the future. So does the "I am." All live in God's purpose to raise them from death. This he has promised, and is able to perform. Their life is only suspended; it is concealed, hid with Christ, who is the resurrection and the life.

If "all live unto him" proves the barbarian's spirits alive with God in happiness—it will also put the wicked there; for unless this statement refers exclusively to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, it must include all the dead: and if all the dead live, they live unto God. But a chief feature of the popular theology is that the major part of the race are enduring endless, conscious torment, in a place called hell. There they lie, weeping, wailing, cursing, blaspheming, sinning more, and suffering increasingly, hopelessly, unceasingly, unendingly! Do you call this "living to God" "for all live unto him?" Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, though poor barbarians, were rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom, and their state in death (even if they could be proven to have a conscious existence) cannot prove that those who are "alienated from the life of God" (Eph. 4: 18.) have the same life.

A. A.

God is Love.

The truthfulness of the above declaration of the inspired writer was never more fully impressed upon my mind than while listening to Br. Hicks' experience at our late camp-meeting. How strikingly manifest was God's love, in the life and example of that Christian mother who, often with tears and prayers, besought her wayward son to become a Christian; and how the influence of that pious mother's prayers followed him, often reproving him in his mad career, and how wonderfully, after years of sin and wickedness, of strivings against the Holy Spirit, was the heart of the prodigal son touched, and brought to a saving knowledge of the truth.

Thus it is that the carnal heart, which is ever at enmity with God, is brought into subjection to the divine will, by the purifying influence of God's love. Truly, God is love! Turn our eyes in whatsoever direction we may, love is written on all his created works. As we look out over this beautiful earth (for beautiful it is, notwithstanding sin and misery dwell therein), and contemplat its rich and varied scenery, its fertile hills and valleys, its numerous bodies of water, its vast forests, and towering mountains, to say nothing of those bright orbs that are shedding light and heat on all animated nature, and then, as the last great crowning work of a Creator's hand, the physical structure, of his created intelligences, we are led to exclaim, as did the Psalmist, "Great and marvelous are thy works, O Lord!"

Who can deny God's love and power, when we see the beauty and harmony, in all his work? How munificently the Giver, of all good has provided for the wants, as well as the happiness of his children. With the different organs of sense so wisely given us, we may enjoy all the blessings of life. How much pleasure is often derived as we look upon the beauties of nature and art; or perchance, as we read in the beaming countenances of our loved ones, those expressions of love and affection, which so often gladden our hearts. God has not only given us the delicious fruits and beautiful flowers, of varied colors and fragrance, but he has given us the keen sense of taste and smell, whereby we may enjoy them.

And so God's love is manifest in everything. In the air we breathe, in the cooling water, so bountifully given to allay the fevered thirst of man and beast, and in the glorious sun-light, without which our beautiful earth would be shrouded in gloom and darkness. Is it any wonder then, that the unto him." Both ex-the future. So does

I live in God's pur-
m from death. This and is able to per-is only suspended; it with Christ, who is
and the life.
unto him" proves the its alive with God in ill also put the wicked this statement refers Abraham, Isaac and include all the dead:
and live, they live unto hief feature of the pop-that the major part of uring endless, conscious lace called hell. There ing, wailing, cursing, inning more, and suffer-
ly, hopelessly, unceas-gly! Do you call this d" "for all live unto am, Isaac, and Jacob, arbarians, were rich in the kingdom, and their (even if they could be a conscious existence)
e that those who are rom the life of God"
have the same life.

A. A.

God is Love.

lness of the above declara-nspired writer was never mpressed upon my mind istening to Br. Hicks' ex-our late camp-meeting.
gly manifest was God's life and example of that other who, often with tears besought her wayward me a Christian; and how of that pious mother's owed him, often reproving mad career, and how won-er years of sin and wickedtrivings against the Holy the heart of the prodigal
d, and brought to a saving of the truth.
that the carnal heart, which nmity with God, is brought ction to the divine will, by ng influence of God's love.
is love! Turn our eyes in r direction we may, love is all his created works. As ut over this beautiful earth ful it is, notwithstanding sin dwell therein), and contemrich and varied scenery, hills and valleys, its numer-of water, its vast forests, and mountains, to say nothing of t orbs that are shedding light n all animated nature, and then,
t great crowning work of a hand, the physical structure, ated intelligences, we are led n, as did the Psalmist, "Great lous are thy works, O Lord!"
an deny God's love and pow-we see the beauty and harmohis work? How munificent-iver, of all good has provided rants, as well as the happiness ildren. With the different or-sense so wisely given us, we joy all the blessings of life.
ch pleasure is often derived as upon the beauties of nature and perchance, as we read in the g countenances of our loved ose expressions of love and af-which so often gladden our God has not only given us the s fruits and beautiful flowers, d colors and fragrance, but he en us the keen sense of taste mell, whereby we may enjoy o God's love is manifest in
ing. In the air we breathe, in ling water, so bountifully given y the fevered thirst of man and and in the glorious sun-light, it which our beautiful earth be shrouded in gloom and dark-
Is it any wonder then, that the heart of the inspired Psalmist was filled with songs of praise as he contemplated the wisdom and goodness of God? or that he should exhort his servants to sing praises to his name? And shall we dear brethren and sisters, creatures of a heavenly Father's love and care, fail to lift up our voices in praise to God, not only for temporal blessings, but for the gift of his dear Son, whose love was so strikingly manifested for a lost and perishing world? Truly God is love! M. E. ORR.

---

"Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." (John 6: 68.)

In this chapter we have the Lord Jesus Christ set forth as the bread of life, and his disciples are invited to eat and be satisfied. "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." However despised by the prejudiced Pharisees, or neglected by the unbelieving Jews, Jesus Christ is the great Apostle of our profession. He spake, and he still speaks with divine authority in his word, "Hear ye him!"—Let us hear him; and not, like those false disciples, go back and walk no more with him. In reflecting on this painful event, let us remark,

1. That men are changeable beings, and not to be depended on, when left to their own strength. God created man upright and holy; and had he not fallen, he would have moved on, steady and regularly as the sun in the firmament. Now, alas! he is as fickle as the the bird which hops from spray to spray, and changes as the wind. One day Saul is charmed and pleased with the appearance and the abilities of David; another day he hurls with vengeance his javelin at his heart, and seeks to kill him! One day Amnon adores the lovely Thamar, and next abominates her with an unconquerable hatred! One day we find Ahithophel counselling King David, and walking with him to the house of God, and another day uniting with his enemies in a conspiracy to dethrone him! One day we see Judas at the feet of Jesus, receiving instructions; another, we see him taking thirty pieces of silver to betray him. These, and many more instances, might be produced, to show the changeableness of man, and that it is no wonder our confidence is so often disappointed.

2. Upon some slight disgust, or in the moment of some strong temptation, many professed disciples will withdraw, and "walk no more with him." Mere professors may show the appearance of a strong attachment; but bye and bye, in the hour of temptation, they often fall away, desert his cause, and associate with his people no more. "They went out from us, (says the beloved Apostle,) that it might appear that they were not of us."

3 The appeal of Jesus Christ on this occasion—"Will ye also go away?" is calculated to stir up a holy indignation at the crime of apostasy—as composed of the basest ingratitude, and the grossest folly. It is also calculated to awaken the real disciple of our Redeemer to self-examination and inquiry. "Shall we also go away?" Shall subjects forsake such a Prince? Shall soldiers desert such a Captain? Shall sinners go from such a Savior?—Lord, to whom shall we go? for thou hast the words of eternal life."

This leads us, lastly, to remark, that eternal life is alone in Christ, and alone to be given through him. It is emphatically "the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord." "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." To whom then shall we go, if we leave the Lord Jesus Christ? For "there is salvation in none other.—Sel. by M. M. Maxwell.

Correspondence.

From Geo. D. Hunter.

I am trying to work for Jesus. We have organized a Sabbath-school here in Springville (Wis.), and have a good attendance. I believe that we are all trying to do our duty, and to live faithful. There are some twenty scholars, and we love to gather and talk of Jesus and his love. We are a happy little band, watching and waiting for that blessed hope, to be fulfilled beyond this vale of tears. I want to say something for Jesus, but my heart seems to be too full for utterance.

From F. H. Kenny.

We are rejoiced to hear Br. Adrian open to us the Scriptures. He is a workman that need not be ashamed. He attended our Q. M. in June; then went to Strawberry Point, preaching twice to good acceptance. He then came here (Manchester) and preached three times out of town; in town once. Those who heard are well pleased. A number of the Universalists spoke highly of his ability. On Tuesday eve. he started for home, summoned by sickness in his family. We hope he may soon return.

From James Ecker.

I regret to say that I have been sleeping in the cradle of carnal security, rocked by sensual pleasures and vain amusements, until, alas! much time has been lost, and I have accomplished nothing. Nothing, did I say? Would it were but nothing. I have been laying up ruin, on the foundation of unbelief, laid only by the traditional doctrine of endless torment, and the consequent apparent self-contradictions of the Bible. I was almost a Deist. I could not believe a God of love, justice, and mercy would consign souls to endless torment.

But, thank God, I now see in a far different light. I see that only the righteous have eternal life, through Christ, and the soul that sinneth shall surely die—not have eternal life in misery.

I thank you sincerely for the papers and tracts sent me. May they do others the good they have me.

From M. B. Hubbell.

Our grove meeting came off July 6 and 7. Br. Clark was present to break to us the word of life. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. On Sunday forenoon he spoke on the hope, and proved positively that our only hope was in a resurrection from the dead, and the coming of the Lifegiver to give eternal life to the Christian, and to change the living saints, who will then put on immortality. We have not immortality now, but must seek for glory, honor and immortality. Eternal life will be the result. We can get this life only through Christ.

In the afternoon he spoke on prophecy to about 300 people. I think it took deep root. He held the congregation spell-bound for an hour and a half. He had great liberty, and proved positively that the next great event in prophecy is the coming of the Son of man. A great many have changed their minds, and no longer believe that Christ will not come for thousands of years. It has been made so plain to them that they had to admit that Christ is soon coming. After the sermon all that loved Jesus were invited to gather around the Lord's table, and hold communion in memory of his death and sufferings. Forty-four partook. Quite a number "of like precious faith" were present from a distance of twenty-five miles. It was good to be there.

From E. Rice, Burlington, Kas.

Dear Brethren and Sisters scattered abroad: How precious and cheering to lone pilgrims are your communications. Though we are living in a time when iniquity abounds and the love of many is waxing cold, yet the Lord has a remnant left that are praying, "Thy kingdom come!" What a blessed hope is ours! The hope of immortality when Jesus comes to make all things new. I do love that hymn in the Minstrel, that says:

"Oh! the happy time is coming,
When the trumpet's joyful sound
Shall waken all the sleeping saints,
To earth's remotest bound."

I have not heard an Advent sermon since last August. I do thank you, Br. Himes, for sending us THE TIMES, for it is all the true gospel teaching we have here. I am lending the paper to the neighbors. Some will read, and some will not. I am very thankful that I received the true light of the gospel when I did. It was under the preaching of Br. F. H. Kenny, in Mitchell Co. Iowa, over two years ago. Let us pray for each other; that our faith fail not.

It was good news to me to read of the Mission Tent for this State. I would be glad to help them if I could; but we are like a great many others in this State. Money is hard to get. But I will put my trust in the Lord, who is ever merciful to his children. Your sister, waiting for Jesus and immortality.

From O. W. Crosby.

We still live in the enjoyment of a reasonable portion of our heavenly Father's blessings. Though our persecutions are many and bitter, and our trials keen and sore, yet we love the truth and the work of God. I am happy to be able to say to you that truth is still prospering in Arkansas, and making many friends, even among the most respected an influential citizens. We now have an organization at Pleasant Plains, of twelve members, all zealous, warm-hearted Christians, who love their Master and his cause. We have regular preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month. We intend to build a chapel this autumn, and be at home.

There is also an appointment to organize the brethren and sisters at Philadelphia into a church of Christ, on the second Sabbath in July. The truth is gaining ground there also, and we expect ere long to see a flourishing vine at that place.

From J. Palmer, Sparta, Wis.

As I am cheered by reading the letters from the brethren and sisters scattered through the land, I thought there might be some that would be pleased to hear from the little band in Sparta. We are still striving for the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and the consummation of our hope at the appearing and kingdom of our Lord. We are still blest with the labors of Br. Thurber. He has been with us over one year. His labors have been blest of God to the advancement of truth, strengthening and confirming the saints, and removing much prejudice. He manifests the spirit of friendship and love to all with whom he meets.

I enjoyed the privilege (in company with Br. Thurber) of attending the Minnesota State Campmeeting. It was truly refreshing to meet and mingle with those of like precious faith, and form new acquaintances. The power of God was manifest. There are faithful laborers in Minnesota, and God is blessing them, and adding to their numbers. We are loth to part with loved ones after enjoying a feast together. It would be much more painful were it not for the glorious hope of soon meeting in the great general meeting and church of the first born, to part no more forever. Praise the Lord.

From J. H. May, Ark.

I received a copy of THE TIMES, and am very well pleased with its contents, and will become a subscriber for it if the terms I propose will suit you. At this time I am destitute of any means. I am very poor in this world's goods, but, I trust, rich in an inheritance in the kingdom to come. I also am a proclaimer of the glad tidings of the approaching kingdom, and have been since the truth of God enlightened my mind, about one year ago. And while God gives me health and strength I expect to do all I can to turn my neighbors from darkness to light. Now, brother, if you can send me the paper, I will try to send you the money before the year is out.

I have been a member of the "Campbell Reformation" for twelve years, until a year ago the gospel of the future kingdom was presented to me, and I examined it thoroughly; and since that time I continue in public and private to witness to all the personal advent of Jesus to set up his kingdom and reward the righteous with a crown of eternal life, and an utter destruction of the wicked, punishing them with death eternal. I have met with the most fierce, virulent and unrelenting opposition from all denominations here. But, thank God, the work still goes on, despite all the opposition. I have baptised in about six months some ten or twelve. Truly, the truth is mighty and will prevail. May God speed the time when sectarianism shall tumble, and fall like Dagon before the ark of God; when Messiah's kingdom shall come; when God's will shall be done on earth as it is now done by angels in heaven.

From J. C. Roberts.

I am a member of that little band at Volga, Ind. We are still strong in the faith, and although we cannot boast as large a membership as our neighbors, we feel that much stronger in faith. I am young in the church. I was converted last September under the ministry of Br. Field. To his sermon upon the inheritors of the kingdom of heaven I paid strict attention. I studied it over in my mind, and my conclusion was that unless I believed the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, and repented of my sins, I would be doomed to die the second death, and lose my inheritance. Was not that a thought to humble me, to bring me to a just sense of my duty, a duty which I owed to my Savior? I saw in an instant my life had been a blank, that I had wandered in the dark, and that I was weighed in the balance and was wanting. I offered my first prayer since childhood that night. My prayer was to become an inheritor of that kingdom. Next day I offered myself to the church, and was baptised.

Just before I commenced writing this I was reading the Bible. I opened at the first chapter of the book of Ruth. What beautiful language Ruth uses to her mother-in-law when she asked Ruth to return back to her own people. "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God!" How strong Ruth's tone and fidelity. She well deserved the reward she received. If we will only love and obey, and trust in Christ as Ruth did in her mother-in-law, our reward will be still greater: for Christ at his coming has promised us more. How glorious it will be for those that do his will, when he descends, saying, Come, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning!

There is one thing that can always be found—and that's fault.

It is possible to be doing something and yet be very idle.

He who procrastinates reform yields to Satan all he asks.

The purest joys of earth are like those Eastern birds whose beauty is in their wings.

The religion of what not to do is not so valuable as the religion of what to do, and how to do it.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

TRACTS: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermons on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—80 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—56 pp. Restitution—56 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,200 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 50c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 484 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 30c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP; A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 15c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 80 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated, 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for the young folks. Two vols. 80c. post-paid. Single volume 50c.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 3 for 10 cents.

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. It silences objections.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 15c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.
The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $18 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Goud. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 60.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology: II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.
The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor Cloth, $1.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—The principal one that can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged. $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 60c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 75. By mail, $1 75.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 60c. post-paid.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July 23, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]
TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 25c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication, EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O. Address.

O. R. Fassett and L. E. Fassett, Santa Clara, Cal.

We have none of Whitmore on Immortality, in paper covers: but a new edition is nearly ready.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $100 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense o one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 30c.

One of the most beneficent of the time-saving arts of this age is Phonography. The corresponding style of Graham's standard method can be learned in from four to six weeks by the adult: and thoroughly mastered by the school-child of six to eight years, in three months. The Synopsis price fifty cents, and the Hand-book, price $2.00, can be ordered from this office. Many of our preachers use the corresponding style for their various memoranda. By it a person can write from eighty to one hundred words per minute. Thos. Benton said in 1850 "Had I known Phonography forty years ago it would have saved me twenty years' of hard labor."

To Correspondents.

P. NOKES. We credit the $2 on G. W. L's TIMES. Is that right. Sent Minstrels again....G. DYSON. Were out of some you ordered. Trust you will be pleased with what we send....E. W. HUSON. All right. Send when you can.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

P Nokes
A Cutler
F DeVries
C Evans
S K Gilham
S C Miller
G Caldwell
M J Wellman
F A Childs
O H Hammond
W Lloyd
O R Fassett
G Dyson
P Vos
H Seller
C W Smith
M Pemberton
W C Taylor
A Foster
N W Spencer
A Sanford
M N Parker
H Bolles
E B Williams
C Fox
J E Proctor
B J Mott
T R Rice jr
D W Fuller
W Murphy
E A Marsh
D S Clark
H H James
S Baldwin
J Crawford
J M Judkins
M A Tibbets
G T Adams
E Temple
C C Marston
F M Berry
J Newbury
J C Emerson
F Brenner
E W Huson
W Daniels
P W Hough
J Wolverton
J Servis
A F Rathbun
S F Allison
L Strubel
C Pike
P C Marsh
P Heller
M M Norton
J Hatton
L S Conner
F King
D Patten
W Wright
J Scarce
S W Thurber
G Wright
H Phelps
R Spotswood
E S Bradway
D A Bradley
W C Lesert
A Leafaver
S A Pettis
M L Dickson
C H Swett
E E Piper
W R Auger
A S Fuller
L C Collins
W S Hemingway
M J Goodwin
A M Glidding
J S Patterson
V Hunt
W J Burnell
J L Stick
W J Ball
E H Burlington
J E Durham

Communications.

ACCEPTED. C. C. M., D. S. C., E. A. M., M. J. J., L. C. C., E. T., A. E. R.

Trust Fund.

Clinton, Ia. church, $6.

Book Notices, Etc.

IF the first number of Zion's Herald, under its new editor, is a fair sample of what is to follow, its readers have lost nothing in the removal of its former editor to a bishopric. Dr. Pierce has a difficult place, but is, evidently, destined to succeed.

Notices, Etc.

To Whom it May Concern.

This is to certify that WILLIAM L. HIMES is a member in good standing in the Advent Christian Church of Buchanan, and is hereby commended to the confidence of the churches as a Christian and a minister of the Gospel.

Alfred Richards, Elder. F. R. Harding, H. J. Howe, L. P. Fox, Robert Mead, Deacons.

JAY O. GLOVER, Clerk.

Buchanan, Mich. July 12, 1872.

Kansas Tent.

Dear Brethren and friends who have subscribed for the "Tent," our Subscription Fund is nearly raised. We wish to get the Tent at work now in a very short time; so let all who have subscribed be preparing themselves for prompt response. And those who purpose helping do so at once, so there need be no delay. The Lord is blessing and will bless those that trust and obey him.

Send all money by mail to Warder Dunbar, Baxter, Cherokee Co. Kan. Postal Orders, to H. J. Manson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

Marriages.

COMBS—JENKINS. At Strawberry Point, Iowa, June 24, 1872, M. J. James, Mr. Samuel S. Combs, and Mrs. Sabrina Jenkins, all of the vicinity of Strawberry Point.

McCLURE—NORRIS. At the residence of James Maudlin, Middletown, Iowa, July 4, 1872, by Eld. A. F. Dugger, Mr. Geo. L. McClure and Miss Sirena Norris.

At the residence of the bride's father, in Warren, Ill. July 3, 1872, by Eld. Geo. W. Hard, Mr. William E. Hard, and Miss Mary A. Trimmer, both of Warren.

Obituary.

BOYNTON. Died at St. Johns, Mich., June 11, 1872, Ezra Boynton: aged 80 years, 9 months and 15 days.

Br. Boynton stood alone for some years; but through his faithfulness others were brought into the truth, and indirectly a church raised up here. He was greatly loved and esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves a widow and two sons to mourn, not as those who have no hope; for he fell asleep in full confidence of a glorious resurrection to immortality and incorruptibility when Jesus comes. J. M. SNOOK.

RIGGS. Died at Lockport, N. Y., June 6, 1872, Sr. Frances, wife of Br. Aaron Riggs, aged 51 years.

By this sudden and unexpected stroke, a devoted husband and three sons are caused to mourn, yet not without hope. The church here and neighborhood feel keenly the loss of her sympathizing acts of kindness, and many weary pilgrims will remember the cordial welcome they have received from her in words and acts, while they have been made recipients of her hospitalities. Though sick only three days, and suffering excruciatingly, she retained her consciousness to the last, and sent messages of love to the church and friends absent, with desires that they should prepare to meet her in the kingdom of God. The writer endeavored to speak words of comfort and hope to a large concourse of people, from 1 Thes. 4: 13. Some had never before heard the blessed doctrine of the resurrection as believed by the apostles.

L. M. STODDARD.

HOLKINS. Died in Warehousepoint, Ct., Col. Harvey Holkins: aged 75 years.

In the death of Br. Holkins, we have all lost a friend and brother—one that was a friend indeed. Br. Holkins always carried a liberal heart: was independent in thought, and ever ready to grant to others the same right. His has always been a home for the weary pilgrim. For many years his great delight has been the promulgating of what he so earnestly believes—the soon coming of Jesus and its kindred truths.

The family have sustained a loss this world can never make up to them; but while this is true, they feel the fullest assurance that a husband and father sleeps in Jesus, and they sorrow not as those without hope.

The funeral exercises of the Episcopal church were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, assisted by Bishop Niles, of New Hampshire, who spoke words of great comfort to the friends while he discoursed on the resurrection. A. M. HIGGINS.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The church at Minneapolis, Minn. have just completed a new chapel, 28x40 feet, to be dedicated next Sunday. The church are well united. Br. S. W. Thurber is to be with them.——The church at Lancaster, Ind. has been helped by a visit from Dr. Field. One soul was added to the church.——A number at South Pendleton, Ohio, desire baptism, one of them a converted Romanist.——The church in and around Oneida, Ill. seem to be wide awake. They have bought a chapel, paid for it, God is blessing them by adding to their numbers. There could be no more faithful land. Br. L. F. Cole is with them.——Br. P. G. Bowman is making a visit to the Eastern States, and is cordially received and aided everywhere. He will attend the larger campmeetings.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Coral, 3 p. m., August 11. Communion after service. E. H. BURINGTON.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. David, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Milroy, July 28. C. W. SMITH.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCullock will bring the Mission Tent with him. Place of meeting will be given next week: probably between Mt. Joy and Anna churches.

J. S. Lawver, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Hennepin, Putnam Co. Special meeting commencing Tuesday eve. July 30, to continue over the Sabbath, and through the following week, if the interest demands. The brethren and sisters scattered through the region about are earnestly requested to come to this meeting and lend a helping hand. C. C. MARSTON.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring food and bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Particulars hereafter.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. F. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

Clinton, July 28.

Cascade, eve. August 3 and over Sunday.

Manchester, August 11, as Br. Lewis may arrange.

Clear Lake, 7½ p. m. August 16. Will Brn. at Clear Lake provide a tent pole? ISAAC ADRIAN.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-25. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

Laingsburg, as Brn. may direct. Wednesday July 24, and through the week.

E. H. DURAND.

The Southern Michigan camp-meeting will be held on James Paul's farm in the town of California, Branch co., Aug. 20-25. We hope to have Eld. J. V. Himes to preach the word; also that Br. W. C. Hicks will be on the ground with "Pioneer" Tent. Every effort will be put forth to make this meeting a success.

We hope to see brethren from all parts of the southern district on the ground with tents, ready for action at the commencement of the meeting.

The quarterly conference will convene at that time and place.

This will be a large meeting and one of unusual interest. Let all who love the appearing of Jesus prepare for a glorious waiting upon the Lord.

Those coming by R. R. from the North will stop at Fremont Station, where they will find a team waiting to convey them to the camp ground. Those coming on the M. C. R. R. will change cars at Jackson. Take the Ft. Wayne Road to Fremont. Those on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. will change cars at Jonesville for Fremont.

Come brethren, in the name of the Lord; and come with prayerful hearts that you may see and feel a glorious revival of the work of grace among us.

Hay and grain for teams will be provided on the ground at reasonable rates.

For the Brn. J. R. PRESTON.

Mt. Clemens, in the Court House, at 11 o'clock a. m. Aug. 11-25. D. W. FULLER.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District will be held at the Tyndall S. H. in Dayton, Newaygo Co., commencing Friday, Aug. 16, and holding over Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance. All that come will be provided for.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The Lord willing, I will be in LaCrosse Sunday, July 21, to hold meetings on that day and the week following, and over the 28th. I expect Sr. Rowell to assist, but we trust that the Lord will be the leader. Let all who can come and help in Jesus' name. FRANK BURR.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Miffin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Ream, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 8, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andru's big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievious wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. G. H. CARR, Sec'y.

There will be a tent meeting at Kewanna, Fulton Co., commencing Friday July 19, and holding over two Sundays. Eld. D. Mathewson is expected to assist. E. C. ARNSON.

MINNESOTA.

Utica, in Cheatham's Grove, 10 a. m. and 1½ p. m. July 28. Will baptize.

Neoka, Page S. H. 3 p. m. July 28.

S. C. WELLCOME.

The new chapel at Winona, will be dedicated Sunday, July 28. Br. S. W. Thurber will be present, and other ministering brethren; and all the brethren in the region around are invited to meet with us on the occasion. W. C. TAYLOR.

NEW YORK.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

A boarding tent will be on the ground, furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, &c., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 35c. a day, for those who do not. Let all come well prepared with overcoats, overshoes, shawls, coverlets, straw ticks, &c., &c. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents.

Let all desiring tents correspond immediately (enclosing stamp for an answer) with Br. D. T. Cooper, 73 Mt. Hope Ave., Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season. WM. E. BROWN, SAM'L. H. WITHERSTON, PERRY M. GRINNELL, Committee.

The next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held, the Lord willing, in the State Tent on the Fairport Campground during the coming Campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at 9 a. m., Wednesday Aug. 14, when Br. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which the meetings will be held at such hours as will least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected and will be submitted for districting the Conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. MILTON R. MILES, Pres't.

WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting. Providence permitting, the second annual Campmeeting of the American Life and Advent Union will be held in Springfield, in Carew's Grove, commencing Aug. 4, and to continue to Aug. 15. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come, with board and lodging on the ground. Board 80c. per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R., will be reduced the same as last year, from July 26 to Aug. 27, inclusive.

We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes.

THOS. R. WEAVER, Sec'y.

Advertisements.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting house and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Has two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCullock, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c. for sale. Fifty per cent. and good inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 32 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 51. CHICAGO, JULY 30, 1872. WHOLE NO. 431.

Advent Christian Times.

'WITHOUT the license of the Pope' is the significant imprint upon the thousands of Bibles now selling at Rome.

THE Sea Cliff Grove Long Island 'Holiness' Camp Ground cost something over $200,000. The tabernacle will seat some 5,000 people.

IT is said that there are fewer Universalist ministers and members than formerly; but this is a grand mistake if the Restorationists in all the churches were counted.

SPAIN has suspended all payments hitherto made by the government to the Roman clergy. Rome's blindest lovers are giving sensible testimony that her power over them is gone.

GAVAZZI says reform of the church of Rome is impossible. A diseased member may be amputated; but when the whole body—every member—is diseased, the only cure is cessation of existence. Rome will go down soon, at the Lord's Advent.

THE heathen wife of an Englishman living near Brighton—he had married her in India—was inconsolable upon his recent death, and disappeared the evening after the funeral. It appeared on search, that she had built a funeral pyre, and after the fashion of her country, burned herself.

THE Watchman and Reflector says:

> Campmeetings, as now conducted, have conquered the problem of uniting religion and pleasure; it is now almost as fashionable to go to the meeting at Martha's Vineyard as it formerly was to laugh at it; have the people or the meeting changed?

THE famine in Persia has in some horrible cases led to cannibalism, punished by equally horrible penalties. Five persons were sentenced to starvation upon proof that they had killed and eaten children. Being shut up to meet their fate, three of these criminals ate the two that died first, before yielding to their sad fate.

IT has been truly remarked that the most illiberal papers in the country are the so-called "liberal" ones. "Professing to have the spirit of charity in superabundance, their utterances indicate a desire to stir up strife, a fondness for calumniating others, and a love of self and a dislike of those who differ from them, which require much ink to express."

THE Philadelphia Ledger calls attention to the remarkable meterological phenomena of the past winter and present summer. The heavy snows and rains; the intense and long-continued heated terms; frequency and severity of storms, extraordinary and destructive floods, and rains where they were never known before on the great Western Plains. Accompanying those violent phenomena there have been volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, and tornadoes in unusual number in various portions of the world, within reach of the press and the telegraph. The greatest scoffer must admit this much: that a better world than this is both conceivable and desirable; and if these things are among the signs of the near approach of a better era, we may rejoice in view of the approaching redemption.

A CONGREGATIONAL church in San Francisco refuses to receive eight converted Chinamen as members—or, rather a minority of thirty so refuse. Wonder if they expect to join in singing the great choral anthem of Rev. 7. They seem to have a little idea that Christ's mission is to all nations, to every kindred, tongue and people.

WE have all heard of the rings of Saturn; but henceforth he will wear but two. The missing ring is the inner one of the three hitherto observed, and the astronomer Struve has been watching for years its approach to the body of the planet, upon which it has now closed like a belt of semi-transparent vapor, its centrifugal force being entirely overcome.

THE Independent calls attention to an inspired utterance that cannot be set aside by any veneered 'unions,' to the effect that two cannot 'walk together except they be agreed.' A great deal of this union is like the peaceful lying down together of the lion and the lamb: there was no strife, because the lamb was inside the lamb. There is not a church on the footstool that would not assent to 'union,' provided they could be the lion.

NEVER had man a nobler motto than Pastor Fleidner: "If there is work to be done, and nobody else to do it, I must." This is simply fulfilling in good faith the Scriptural admonition to do with our might what our hands find to do. One need not possess wonderful talent to do this. Every one can do it! Ah! but will we all try? Is there not too much time wasted in envious longing for the vineyards of others, which were better spent in care and enjoyment of our own?

'CHRISTIAN' America sends Africa some 440,000 gallons of rum a year from Boston, besides what is shipped from other ports, 'Christian' Great Britain is not behind in the same work. The devil's best missionary finds ready entrance, and is self-sustaining. God's missionaries are few, stinted in their support, and have, besides, to wade these accursed rivers of rum and ruin, which rise in our most civilized and Christianized lands. And besides rum to Africa, these two great Protestant nations furnish ready-made idols to India. A firm in New York export the latter, running a sort of opposition to the Birmingham manufacturers, who until lately have supplied the idol market.

JUST now there is peace throughout the world—were the temple of Janus now standing its doors might be closed. But Brazil and the Argentine Republic are preparing for war, which may commence any day. And the giants of Europe are not maintaining their vast armaments as mere play things. The clash of resounding arms will soon again distress our ears, unless, haply, the bright return of the Prince of Peace should bury the contending elements of earth in one common perdition. Let us pray, 'Thy kingdom come!'

SEE what it is to have a bad name. Already we have insinuations that the Herald's correspondent has never seen Dr. Livingston at all; but has invented Herald fashion, 'the news,' that has so stirred the world. We confess the story about 'ivory door posts' abounding in quite civilised communities in Central Africa taxed our credulity. But we'll hope it's all true, and that the Doctor and the source of the Nile have both been found.

THE great objection the German politicians have to the vast emigration from the Empire to America is the conviction that the able-bodied men will be needed at home before long. It is stated by careful authorities that there is very little confidence in the continuance of peace. Instead of enabling Europe to decrease her armaments, the late war has enforced new improvements, new expenditures, and calls for more men and longer terms of service.

THE signs of the times disturb thoughtful people in a most persistent way. Now in the moral world, and then in the political or physical, things seem to be getting out of order in most unexpected and unheard of ways. As the London Telegraph recently remarked, the earth seems 'out of order,' and not only so, but with a complication of diseases that indicate the necessity of radical treatment. The Great Physician of humanity and nature will effect a final cure presently.

IN an obituary of a young lady lately deceased, we find the following:

> Pausing a moment she said, "O, will it not be nice to be an angel!" With a sweet smile she added, "I seem to be a good while going;" but just then she joined the heavenly host.

—This young woman was twenty-two years old, and had been a Sunday-school scholar from early youth, and yet was so consummately ignorant of the Bible as to suppose that death would transform her into an angel.

The nearest approach we have in the Scriptures to an intimation that human beings will ever become angelic, is in the passage which says that in the resurrection we shall be made equal to the angels in that we can die no more. What is this promise worth to one who becomes actually an angel by the process of death. Who, after being an angel for some thousands, or tens of years, or even days, would care for a change by the resurrection of a cast off body to a condition 'equal' to the angels? Better remain an angel outright.

THE attempted repression of the 'Internationale' in France by unduly severe measures, has given rise to a more numerous and flourishing organization of the working classes, and 'the labor movement' was never more wide-spread or active than now. We have no faith in the assertion that the objects of this coalition are the subordination of capital to labor, the abolition of heirship, the destruction of the family and marriage relation, the extinction of patriotism, and, finally, the suppression of all religious systems. But it is no doubt revolutionary in its tendencies, and one of the disturbing elements of the last days.

EMIGRATION is depriving Germany of her material for soldiers so fast as to alarm the legislators and rulers. There can be no doubt that dislike of the compulsory military service is one of the great sources broadening the stream of emigration from all parts of that Empire to this country. The imperial authorities are seeking measures to prevent this loss of the bone and sinew as well as skilled labor of the country. America seems to be the world's last resort for a better country. A thousand pities so few seek an interest in the only really better land—the heavenly country, which lies just beyond the Advent and resurrection.

GAUTEMALA has closed all her convents and expelled the friars. Bismark has just degraded and punished a Romish Bishop who interfered with the army chaplains. This picture of a German Chancellor degrading and punishing a Roman Catholic Bishop is a very different one from that of German Emperor waiting three days in the court-yard of a castle, until a Pope deigned to grant him an audience. Things look very much as if the complete divorce of church and state were an event near at hand. Their long existing fellowship must soon be broken up.

THE New York Tribune condenses a report by Prof. Gratz, and Messrs. Levy, Potzin and Gottschalk, who have just returned from Palestine.

Their report is set down by the Jewish Times as "an additional argument against the folly of encouraging the emigration of the Jews to a country which has no other claim than that of a venerable monument of the past." There are now, it appears, about 16,000 Jews living in Palestine, and "their average state of culture is much below that of their fellow-religionists in Europe. They have no visible means of support, spend their time in idleness, praying, and Talmud reading, and foolish pining and sighing on the ruins of the temple, eking out a miserable existence by the charity of the Jews of Europe, America, and Australia." Curiously enough, the memorial of their visit by Prof. Gratz and his companions also suggests "the general elimination from all Jewish prayer-books of the portions referring to the hopes of Israel in the restitution of the Holy Land to the possession of Israel, and the rebuilding of the Temple of Divine Providence." The Times considers it "not only a folly but a crime to feed the sickly imagination of poor, ignorant people by the hallucination; as if one spot on earth had a greater value in the eyes of God, and prayers sent up to heaven from a certain locality find sooner a hearing from the Throne Divine."

PETER BAYNE, the great English Baptist, sees war and not peace in the immediate future. In reviewing the condition of Europe he remarks:

> Were Prince Bismarck to find it either desirable or inevitable to quarrel with Russia, the fatherland would at once be flooded with maudlin songs about the wrongs of the German brethren in Russia, and I have no doubt that a number of foolish people in England would believe that the pious William was once more impelled by Christian feelings to right the wrongs of oppressed Germans. Russia is engaged in increasing and remodelling her armies as if with a view to some fearful struggle in the future. And thus, as the nineteenth century draws towards its close, is the organization of human slaughter being perfected in our Christian Europe! How slight must appear the expenditure even in blood—treasure seems hardly worth mention—of your great war, in order to preserve your Union, and avoid a future of warring nationalities, like that which seems in store for the European kingdoms! I ought to have said that, if Prussia manifests any disposition to interfere between the Czar and his German subjects, an opportunity will thus be presented—possibly it has been already presented—for the application of skillful diplomatic intrigue on the part of France with a view to increasing Russian irritation and securing the Czar as an ally against Germany.

Prostitution of the Press.

The press being the only source through which the masses receive their information it is important that this source be pure and unpolluted. They who mould the public mind and control public opinion ought to be men of such an exalted sense of right as to be incapable of wittingly perverting or concealing the truth, much less of wilfully publishing falsehood. The people, anxious to become informed on the great question of national policy, eagerly devour and accept as true the contents of all our leading political journals. Every statement they contain, every item of news, whether true or false, must and will have an influence in moulding public sentiment. It is, therefore, a lamentable fact that as soon as a political campaign opens the public prints become in a great measure unreliable. In the bitterness of partisan strife they wholly ignore truth so far as regards politics. Professing to advocate principles of right, they become so blinded by prejudice or self-interest as to be unable to candidly and calmly consider the great question agitating the public mind. Possessing the confidence of millions, they betray that confidence by a slavish advocacy of the interests of their leaders. Apparantly their great mission is to wilfully and maliciously misrepresent the motives and actions of public functionaries, and to vilify and blacken the character of those candidates for positions of public trust and profit whose claims they do not see proper to advocate. The masses can not form an intelligent opinion concerning the integrity and fitness of aspirants for official honors because the press, the custodian of public opinion, is false to the trust reposed in it by a confiding populace. Misrepresentation in business may be common, but wilful misrepresentations in print are becoming fashionable.—Interior.

Poetry.

Elbow Him Out.

I.

What! fifty years old and in office still?—
Unshaken of nerve, unbroken of will;—
But though firm in truth, and ready in skill,
Does he hope, forever, that place to fill?
Full many a year in the lengthened past,
He had held the post and held it fast;
But the world begins to stand aghast,
And wonders that things so long should last.
True, he has stood as a shining throne,
Unblemished and pure, and stood alone;
And fraud and vice have stately grown,
While he, in scantiness, held his own.
But other men need a starting place—
A chance to win in the life-long race—
And the old should yield with pleasant grace,
That youth a bright career may trace.
If the old man clings to his honor long,
And yields to no hint or pressure strong,
Then charge him at once with something wrong,
And rail at his work, in a ready throng
Asperse his name throughout the town,
And look on his smiles with a rigid frown—
Elbow him out by crying him down—
And praise the young, but call him clown.
What matters it whether his children need
A father's toils their mouths to feed?
A change of place is part of the creed,
A joy to the man who shall succeed.
If poor in purse, and his little one sick,
He ought to have taken and taken quick,
For spoils should be seized while spoils are thick
And then in a higher bureau click.
Then hound him down, and his life defame,
And let your charge dishonor his name;
Elbow him out with a howl of blame,
And scornfully point the finger of shame.
Elbow him out. Elbow him out.

II.

He's fifty years old and our preacher still,
A giant in thought and ready in skill,
Well balanced in mind, of generous will,
And moulded of heaven the place to fill.
He has served us long and served us well,
As the lists of our honored records tell;
He has promptly answered the summoning bell,
For Christian praise or the funeral knell.
But he soon will be falling into years,
And awake distrust, or start our fears;
Perhaps we shall find our eyes in tears
At the world's disdain and the scoffer's jeers.
True, he has worked with old and young;
Has faithfully toiled while idlers sung;
To our church in every trial has clung;
And has been the praise of every tongue.
But we need to have a younger man,
One of equal depth or greater span,
One fluent of words, attractive in plan,
And able the world's desire to scan.
We shall need a man who can please the youth,
One able to sugar-coat the truth,
One about whom there is no forsooth—
Less rigor in speech and not uncouth.
We can get a preacher of youth and dash,
A preacher whom naught can e'er abash—
We can get the young—the Rev. Splash,
Who will fill our pews and bring us cash.
We need a change ere the old man fails,
And the world our pulpit's voice assails,
Ere the church grows dim and the devil rails,
Or any our trembling strait bewails.
We need a change to keep us from rout,
And gently, but surely must elbow him out,
If any our actions should venture to doubt,
Spurn them at once, and their reasoning scout.
We must elbow him out by shaking the head;
Cold-shoulder his calls and keep him in dread;
Reduce him in pay and give him instead
The elbowing out of poverty-fed.
Elbow him out. Elbow him out.

—J. P. E. in Baptist Union.

Southern Correspondence.

I went out a few Sabbaths ago to hear a sermon preached by a good Methodist brother, against the final destruction of the wicked. The appointment had been previously announced at different points, and the subject attracted a very large congregation. After a good, spirited introduction, the preacher said he would not take a text, but would give his reasons why he was opposed to the doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked after the day of Judgment. In the first place it was immoral in its tendency. One old man had said it gave him a "better chance" than eternal torment did. A drunken young man, wishing to run his horse on Sunday, being admonished for it, said it did not matter, there was "no hell." But the preacher admitted that one very intelligent man told him that for the last two years, (since he had heard the final destruction of the wicked preached,) he had searched the Scriptures more than he had done in all his life before, and he was fully satisfied they taught the doctrine, and now he lived in constant dread of being annihilated at last, which was more terrible to his mind than to live forever in eternal torment; and as much as he respected the man who opened his eyes on the subject, (I suppose he referred to myself,) he wished he had never seen him or heard of the doctrine. I thought this last case did not much strengthen the preacher's position, and ventured to ask him if sinners who believe in eternal torment do not commit the same sins as others. "O yes," said he, "but with this great difference that they do not glory in the doctrine while the others do."

Having spent nearly all his time and strength on the first point, he assigned as a second reason, that the Bible was opposed to the doctrine. Quoting Matt. 3; 12, he said if the burning up of the chaff meant the annihilation of the wicked, it proved too much; as the chaff represented the wicked, so the wheat represented the righteous. The wheat is carried to mill and ground into flour. The flour is baked into bread. The bread is eaten, and then what becomes of it? "So you see," said the preacher, "that won't do. The same reasoning applies to the last chapter of Malachi. If burning up the stubble root and branch represents the annihilation of the wicked, the calves of the stall represent the righteous; and all farmers know that stall-fed calves are slaughtered to be eaten, and then what becomes of them? The everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels, the everlasting punishment referred to in the 28th of Matthew, the smoke of their torment spoken of in the 14th of Revelations, all prove that the sinner must live forever, or else the righteous must also be annihilated.

In regard to the sleep of the soul, he said he should say nothing about that, as a belief in it had no immoral tendency. It did not matter much whether a man slept one day or a thousand years. He then pronounced a eulogy upon the Methodist Church, stating that none of her bishops or preachers believed in these doctrines; that all our fathers and mothers had gone to heaven through the Church, &c., then he gave us all (myself included) a pressing invitation to come back to Mother Church.

The last reason he gave us was worthy of note: "These doctrines came from the North." That he thought was sufficient to put every man on his guard. He said he believed there were many good Methodists at the North, (of course he did not mean to exclude all others,) but that Atheism, Deism, Mormonism, Free-Loveism, and Abolitionism, all originated at the North, and therefore he exhorted the people to be very careful about what they heard and believed; especially as they were not men of books, and consequently were not capable of forming opinions and coming to right conclusions.

The most humiliating feature in this remarkable discourse was the almost entire neglect of God's holy Word. Though the sermon was fully an hour long, he passed over the texts alluded to above in the course of a few moments and never once urged it upon the people to search the Scriptures. O how are we to have the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost given unto us—how are we to be sanctified to the service of God through the truth—how are we to overcome world, the flesh, and the devil—how are we to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free—how are we to have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ—how is the truth to make us free and enable us to rejoice continually in hope of the coming glory and kingdom of David's Royal Son to bring in everlasting righteousness and cleanse the universe once more from all evil, unless we search the Scriptures!

Another unfortunate feature in the brothers discourse was the dragging in of side issues. I could mention others who did the same thing when they had occasion to mention my name in the public prints in connection with this subject. But where is the pertinency of such epithets as "New England Gospel," "Boston Missionary," etc.? Now so far as I am concerned, "none of these things move me." Praised be the Lord Jesus, I think he enables me to love these brethren just as I did before, away above Charleston or Boston, North or South; but is it not strange that professed ministers of the peaceful Jesus should, on the holy Sabbath, discuss subjects calculated to feed and fan the worst passions of the heart? The people have worshiped the War-god long enough. They are tired of it. They want peace and rest.

The truth is, this is entirely a Bible question, and can only pe settled by an impartial appeal to that standard of all truth. If a man is a dual being; if a part of him goes to heaven, or eternal torment, when he dies; if at the resurrection the unoffending bodies come from their graves, are reunited to their souls, and then sent to heaven or to eternal life of unimaginable woe, with a dual government in a divided universe; if the devil is to take the headship of a large majority of the Adamic race; if with his own fallen host, and with all the fallen men, women, and children, spread over two hundred generations on this cursed earth, he is to set up a Government in direct hostility to the great Father of love, cursing God and the Lamb forever, cursing themselves and one another, vainly trying to destroy each other amid their infernal and eternal tortures, thus making the existence of evil an absolute necessity to the divine jurisprudence, and hence a good and not an evil; I say if these are taught in the word of God, show them and we will embrace them. On the other hand, if a man is a poor, frail, mortal being, of the earth earthy, and is rapidly tending to the dust, out of which he was made; if no such expressions as "immortal soul," "deathless spirit," "death that never dies," "soul and body parting," "soul and body re-uniting," "going to heaven or hell when we die," etc., are to be found in the Holy Bible, why should any man be required to believe them, or be branded as a heretic?

When a man is alive, everything that constitutes him a man is alive. When he dies, the opposite is the case; everything is dead, and no part of him can ever live again until the part that first gave him being shall speak him into existence. This will take place at the resurrection, when Christ the Lord shall come. Then will come the judgment of quick and dead. Then the everlasting death of all wicked beings will be inflicted, and everlasting life (with all its eternal concomitants) will begin with the righteous. The new heavens and new earth, with more than their Eden loveliness, shall be their home, with Jesus at their head, and God the Father once more will be all in all. This is an outline sketch of the two opposing systems. Which is right? Which is true? Not according to what the Pope says, or Bishops, or Priests, or Methodists, or Baptists, or Presbyterians, or Episcopalians, or any other sect, but according to God's blessed Word. Here let us bring these systems and weigh them. Here we are taught man's nature, and his final and eternal home. O let us all come here, like a band of brothers meek and lowly, in search of the clear light. Let us come praying, and believing, and loving, and seeking, and, glory be to Jesus, he will show us where the truth is. Amen.—P. G. Bowman in Banner.

Is the Eighth Chapter of Daniel a Prophecy of any Importance?

We should answer this question in the negative if the position of some of our brethren, both lay and ministerial, is correct; for the question is asked repeatedly, in substance: Why not waive this prophecy, seeing there is a difference of opinion about the termination of the 2300 days. I know there is a difference of opinion, and this very fact makes it necessary that light should be forthcoming. The position is taken by some that the 2300 days ended in A. D. 1843–4, making the great design of the prophecy to be merely to bring us to a special tarrying time, designated in Mat. 25. Therefore any ending of these days in the future is regarded by such persons as mere folly. The seventh-day Adventists that follow E. White's visions are among this number. Now according to my understanding such an application of this very important and significant prophecy is mere twaddle, and I am very sorry to see such trifling with the word of God. It is as evident as language can express it that those days extend throughout the entire period of the treading down of the sanctuary and the host. This conclusion is inevitable, from the very form of the question asked: "How long the vision, the daily [or continual transgression] and the transgression of desolation to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?" The "little horn" that "waxed exceeding great," interpreted by the angel Gabriel to be a king (or kingdom) of fierce countenance—is the last power presented in the prophecy that should continue this work of treading down; and this power is to be broken without hand (or human agency), at the coming of Christ to judgment. Then, as this power is not yet broken, and the sanctuary and host are still trodden under foot, it is simply absurd to talk about the days ending in 1843–4. And no intelligent mind that regards the honor of God should continue to hold and teach such a view, unless they can present proof that the sanctuary and the host are no longer trodden under foot.

Then another class that have formerly believed that the 2300 and the 1335 days of Dan. 8 and 12 end together, but now because they cannot be made to do so legitimately, think we had better not say much about the 2300 days, as they reach some two years beyond the 1335. We would ask such persons if they think it would be safe for us or honorable to him who has said, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts," to follow such counsel as this?

Then again it is said that the position that ends the two periods at different points, commands but very little respect, even among brethren believing in definite time. Very well. We think the respect of our brethren valuable; but then we think the respect or honor coming from God more valuable. This is not the first time in the history of the world that truths have been uttered by those that have stood isolated and comparatively alone among men: even the great apostle to the Gentiles (Paul) did say, "At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me.... Notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me and strengthened me." Again. "All they which are in Asia be turned away from me." Also those that heard the words that fell from the lips of Christ, said, "This is a hard saying, who can hear it?" And on one occasion "many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him." And Martin Luther said he would go to "Worms" and defend the truth "if there were as many devils there as there were tiles on the houses;" and when remonstrated with by Duke George, against what he conceived to be his line of duty, he said he would go forward in it, though it "should rain Duke George's for nine days together." Although he stood almost alone in the defense of truth among men, yet God was with him and sustained him, as he will all his true servants.

The doctrine of Christ's coming personally as an impending event, with the unconscionsness of the dead, are not much respected by a large class of the professed Christian church; but it is true, nevertheless; and there may be some things yet for Adventists to learn. So I think we had better not be in a hurry about shutting down the gate as to promulgating some disagreeable portions of prophetic truth. No position based upon facts will suffer, even if subjected to the most scrutinizing criticism, but will appear more solid and safe for the acceptance of our faith; while that which is based upon fancy is like receiving rotten timber for the hub of a wheel: while it may be painted over very nicely, it will be sure to fail in the time of trial.

Now I will present some points, and make some statements of facts vitally affecting the termination of the 2300 days of Dan. 8.

1. Daniel tells us (v. 1) "A vision appeared unto me." With repetition, he says, "And I saw in a vision." He is also very particular to locate himself, to tell where he was, and then tell us what he saw. As to what he saw, we will refer the reader to Dan. 8:3. All these things which Daniel saw in vision have had a history, to almost the close of the last thing, or power presented. Then, says Daniel (v. 13), "I heard Palmoni speaking. And another holy one said unto the numberer of secrets, or the wonderful numberer" (Lit. rend. of v. 13), "How long the vision?" Paraphrased thus: How long a period of time is embraced in the vision, that is, to cover the things seen by the prophet. Then the angel reduces, or presents the things seen by the prophet, under two general heads, "the daily" (or continual), "and the transgression of desolation." These powers are to tread down the sanctuary and host "unto" 2300 years; to the justification of the sanctuary: not to the justification of the host, as some seem to want to have it. As Palmoni, or the Lord Jesus Christ, only expresses the justification of the sanctuary at the end of the 2300 days, it follows that the end of that time is not where, or when the host are justified. The host being the people of God, are justified as soon as they believe in Christ; and will not have to wait the end of the 2300 days for justification. That the Lord Jesus Christ, and the holy angel are here represented in v. 13, may be seen by reference to 1 Pet. 1:10–12, compared with Ex. 25:20–22, and Dan. 12:5–7.

In what has now been presented, it will be noticed that Palmoni, or Christ, divides and presents the vision under two general h[illegible] "The continual and the transgression of desolation." Continual being an adjective, the antecedent of transgression, a noun, it must be of the same quality as the noun; therefore it would be properly rendered "the continual transgression, and the transgression of desolation:" as Christ divides the vision under these two heads, it inevitably follows that two great elements are here represented, namely, the Pagan and the Papal. Therefore the continual transgression represents the Pagan element of the vision, namely, Persia, Grecia and Pagan Rome; and "the transgression of desolation," "Papal Rome." If any one can point out wherein these conclusions are not sound, or do not express the meaning of the Holy Spirit, I should be very happy to see it done. I have no doubt as to their correctness. Therefore those that apply the "daily" to Jewish or Christian worship, misinterpret the prophecy, and dishonor God, and injure the cause of truth. If there had been any such idea as the worship of God connected with the term "daily," there are Hebrew words to express it, such as reh-vagh, or rah-vagh, that are rendered sacrifice, and the oblation. (Dan. 9:27.) But the word sacrifice connected with the term daily in the five places of its occurrence in the book of Daniel, is not a proper word; it is the equivalent of no Hebrew word, but merely a supplied word introduced into the text by the translators, and has served to darken counsel, as all words do that are used without knowledge.

Another argument that confirms my application of the term "daily," is found in the explanation of the vision of the eighth chapter by Gabriel, where he tells the prophet (ch. 9:24), "seventy weeks [of the vision] are cut off upon thy people, and upon thy holy city," to restrain "the transgression." This term, the transgression, in ch. 9:24, is the same transgression as in ch. 8:13, for the same expression is used in both instances. (Heb. Con. p. 1051.) As, therefore, seventy weeks or 490 years were "cut off" from the 2300, the first part of the vision, to restrain the transgression; this transgression must refer to the heathen nations that were presented in ch. 8 to be restrained from destroying the Jews 490 years; while they would tread down they would not be permitted to destroy that people till the predicted time was ended. These facts prove that the heathen powers of Persia, Grecia, and Rome Pagan are the "daily" or the continual transgression. God has warned his people repeatedly against the abominations of the heathen in the Scriptures, and because they have not regarded these admonitions he has given them into their hands, to be oppressed and destroyed, as in the case of Jerusalem by the Romans after the 490 years were ended, in A. D. 65. As God has all through the Scriptures applied the term abomination to the heathen nations; and as these nations were to tread down the sanctuary and the host after they were given into their hands for 2300 years; the change from the "continual" to the transgression of desolation is only a change from bad to worse. Papal Rome is represented to be more desolating in its character than the powers that persecuted it. After A. D. 65, Jerusalem was destroyed, and Pagan Rome continued to desolate the church of Christ till the change was effected from Pagan to Papal; and then Rome Papal in A. D. 538 became the abomination of desolation; and Rome will continue till Christ comes, which must now be very soon; and its present condition makes it evident that Christ is coming immediately.

The 1335 years of Dan. 12:12, from A. D. 538, bring us to the deliverance of the host in 1873. And after the nations have experienced God's special indignation, to be visited upon them after Christ comes, then the sanctuary shall be justified. With regard to the Hebrew word rendered sanctuary in v. 14, it is koh-desh, which means in Dan. 8 : 14, holy, or dedicated, or consecrated place. In Ezk. 20 : 40 it is called "holy mountain." In Dan. 9 : 16, Jerusalem is called "thy holy mountain," and "holy city" in v. 24. In Joel 3: 17—Zion "thy holy mountain," from koh-desh. In Zeph. 3 : 4, koh-desh is represented as having been polluted by her priests. In Ps. 79:1, we have a prophecy of a future defilement of koh-desh—"O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, thy holy temple have they defiled; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps." This defilement is to continue through the appointed time, the 2300 years, which reach to the last end of the indignaton. The word sanctuary in v. 11 is not the same as in ch. 8 : 14. In v. 11 it is mik-dash, and applies in this connection to the "casting down" of Pagan temples, by "arms," or military power, in the interest of the Catholic church.

In view of the foregoing, we see that koh-desh, that is to be justified, is not the church, not any tabernacle up in heaven, not the whole earth, but "the koh-desh hill" (Ps. 15), "the koh-desh mountain" (Ps. 87 : 1; Is. 11 : 9; 65 : 11, 25; 66 : 20). "Jerusalem thy koh-desh mountain (Dan. 9 : 26); the glorious koh-desh mountain (11: 45); the koh-desh hill of Zion (Ps. 2: 6), where God says he will set, or plant his King, even Jesus. "For thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor [or justify] her, yea, the SET TIME [viz., 2300 years] is come. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

There is but one "Holy Land" on earth; that is Palestine. This land was given to the "holy seed;" but because they defiled it, it was taken from them, and given to Gentile governments, to be trodden under foot. But God has set a time when it shall be redeemed with judgment, and consecrated again by the feet and throne of Christ. I think the destruction of the earth will commence at Rome, where the anti-christ has reigned so long; and the redemption of the earth will begin at Jerusalem, the scene of Christ's sufferings.

> "Where thy cross in anguish stood,
> Where thy life distilled in blood,
> Where they mocked thy dying groan,
> King of nations plant thy throne!"

The word rendered "cleansed" in Dan. 8: 14, is, literally, justified, and is so rendered, generally, in more than forty instances of its usage in the Old Testament. To justify is, according to Webster, "to pardon, and clear from guilt, to accept as just, and treat with favor." The justification of the sanctuary or Holy Land is the cessation of God's "indignation" against it. (Is. 10: 25): "For yet a little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction." The justification of the "Holy Land" is not to be understood in a moral sense, but in a physical. "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness." (Is. 1 : 27.) "Zion is now a wilderness, and Jerusalem a desolation." "Zion has been ploughed as a field." "The curse has devoured the earth." "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain." "The creation was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." The creation in earnest expectation "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." But "the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." This earth on which we live is yet to pass through a baptism of blood and fire. Why does Paul say that under the law "almost all things are purged with blood?" Read the first of Is. 63, and compare with Rev. 14: 15–20; 16: 13–15; and Is. 34, especially v. 8. This work of cleansing is antecedent to the justification of the sanctuary. "Then shall the sanctuary be justified. This is in the preterit, or past tense according to the Hebrew Concordance. So that at the end of the 2300 days the sanctuary has been brought into a condition of justification, all indignation has then ceased that was connected with it. This I expect to see in A. D. 1875.

> "Then thy Mount Jerusalem
> Shall be gorgeous as a gem;
> Then shall in the desert rise
> Fruits of more than Paradise."

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The Difficulties of Dress.

Zions Herald has the following display of the follies of the woman's dress, accompanied with a box of salve (the last paragraph) for wounded consciences: In one sex, certainly, a gradual progress in the right direction is visible in the matter of dress. Queen Elizabeth's duke of Leicester could not have dressed himself, and when dressed, could neither have wrought nor fought.

Now the man who is suspected of having spent an hour of time, or thought of getting himself up for the day, is despised. But it is not clear that this wholesome change sprang from holy motives, and what is thus saved is not saved in Christ, but wasted in other ways. All retrenchments, through improvements in machinery, are swallowed up in new exactions of fashion and luxury. The Christian has now less leisure for prayer or Christian work than they whose every thread of clothing was spun and woven by hand, and when even the fiber was pulled off the cottonseed by human fingers.

But the Christian gentleman can be transformed into the Christian soldier much more easily than the Christian lady. He is able-bodied. with a little training he can be brought into a high state of physical efficiency. And in this respect the tendency of the times is in the right direction. The gymnastic drill has become a part of liberal education. And if you meet him in the street in his gray business dress, you could suggest little change to make in it as subservient of all the purposes of dress as possible. It is no impediment to bodily activity, and demands little thought or time to put in order and keep it so. And should he suddenly turn all his energies and resources to the battle of the Lord, society might miss him, but would not outlaw him.

But how different with the lady! She ventures outside of her bed-room in no dress that does not resemble in outline those worn for full-dress by Abraham and Sarah, but which all the sons of Japheth have thrown off as an impediment. The outline alone remains; fashion has made all its details "movable that thou canst not know them" but by a life-study. Many of its victims find that it costs more than half the energies of their life to superintend its purchase and manufacture, to put it on, keep in place, and put it off. A single article of it may cost as much as a meeting-house, or an edition of the Bible. A healthy girl in the lower walks of life often finds her dress demanding all her surplus earnings for years.

Nor is all this the worst of it. The lady is a prisoner. She cannot penetrate a thicket, can hardly climb a fence; makes a great feat of a five miles' walk over good roads; can make no headway against a rough breeze, and cannot walk in the sun without occupying one hand with parasol, if not another with her dress. It is in consequence of these impediments, and of unnatural life, that woman is rarely in perfect health. And if in health, her bodily energies and her mental leisure are reduced to a minimum by her dress. And her bodily condition reacts on both her head and heart. Six new diseases, it is said, all located in the same organ, have been developed by the increased volume of skirts which came in vogue since Eugenie became empress of the French. Some of them are incurable, all are lingering, and most of them destructive of energy, happiness, and good temper. The Christian who falls a victim to them goes at once into the invalid corps for life.

But it is not enough that the health be not absolutely impaired. A vigorous health is necessary to the highest degree of mental power. And this is hardly attainable without pleasurable exercise in sun and air; and a walk with ball and chain, or worse impediments, will not meet the want. And to rejoice evermore is not natural when eternal vigilance is the price of a decent toilet. Nor is one whose trade it is to get ready to be looked at, able to throw her full force into any other enterprise. And it would not be strange that a condition in which one's own person requires a very large fraction of our care, should tend to selfishness.

So we conclude that the Christian woman for the coming crisis must of a widely different type from what now prevails. But let the most devoted of her sex become convinced of this and what can she do? Reluctance in obedience to the behests of fashion avails little; open rebellion is madness. Grant that she is satisfied that fashion is to this generation exactly what Baal was to that of Jezebel, what next? She may cast longing eyes to the time when conformity to the world shall appear to the Christian as idolatry did to the Jews in the days of the Maccabees, but how is that time to come? She approves of the words of good old Peter (no bachelor he) about plaiting the hair, and grudges the time as she stands before the glass longer than she ever kneels, but she cannot crop her head like a pugilist, or go with the looks of a bison. Nay, if in default of the regulation quantity, she dons the shearings of the hospital, the prison, or the dissecting-room, she is more to be pitied than blamed.

"Born of Water."

Does the above phrase, in the third chapter of John's Gospel, mean baptism? The overwhelming weight of ministerial authority so decides. It may be presumption in me to call in question the correctness of such decision. I yield to no one in admiration of learning and piety, and especially in honor to those learned and pious men who have devoted their lives to unfolding the truths of God's Holy Word. I must be excused, however, from receiving as infallible the teachings of any but those who "wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." I do not remember to have seen the view taken which has had most influence in deciding my mind on the subject. I hold, in common with many others, that the term "water" here used is an allusion to the natural birth, but my reason for that view is, perhaps, not so common.

From the commencement of the conversation a parallel is drawn between the natural and spiritual births. See the language of Jesus in the third verse: "Except a man be born again," &c. Now, no one will dispute that the term "again" refers to the natural birth. Now examine the reply of Nicodemus: "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" That the parallel is here maintained is too clear to need comment.

Passing over the passage in dispute, notice the teaching of the sixth verse: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." Here, again, it is clear enough that the parallel is kept up between the natural and spiritual births.

Finally in the seventh verse, we have a repetition of the language with which the colloquy commences: "Ye must be born again," thus closing with the parallel. Now, to my mind it seems remarkable that a parallel should have been drawn and maintained by four undoubted allusions in this short conversatian, and dropped without explanation in a fifth reference to the subject. But this is not all, for in this fifth reference to the spiritual birth a new and wonderful disclosure is made by a word or two, upon the supposition that the phrase means baptism, that has no parallel in the Word of God, without a word of subsequent explanation. Upon the other hand, understanding the "water" birth to be an allusion to the natural birth, the sixth verse explains it: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit."

It remains only to account for the use of the term "water," or, rather, the phrase "born of water," to indicate the natural birth. We cannot always appreciate the forms of speech of Oriental writers, but to those who understand the physiology of gestation the form of expression is entirely rational. In English we have the following expression: "Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters; she was fruitful and full of branches, by reason of many waters."—F. C. in the Watchman and Reflector.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

have a supply of Br. Wellcome's cations, and will promptly fill rs.
rean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leath-
$2.50.
n of Redemption, $1.25.
M 'thew 24, 25c.
stian Baptism, 25c.
rs: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a
Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a
God's Special Gift—Immortal-
; 35c. a dozen.
Gospel Hope, and the Faithful hman. The two for 5c; 20c. a n, each.
The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Ro-
an Apostasy, 10c.
Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

The Christian Life.

Holy Living.

A holy life is made up of a number of small things. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles, not battles, nor one great heroic act or mighty martyrdom make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not "the waters of the river, great and many, rushing down in torrent, noise and force," are the true symbols of a holy life.

It is a feature of the life of our time that, in all matters pertaining to religion, or to the spiritual side of life, people care more for form than for substance, more for what is incidental and external than for what is essential and vital. Earnestness, life, power, would be disturbing and unpleasant. Whoever does anything must be careful to do it in a smooth and attractive way, with a manner entirely unobjectionable. Then, whether the thing which he does is worth doing is a question not likely to be raised.—Liberal Christian.

It is scarcely worth while for people who cannot direct or influence the reading of their own childern to say much about their interest in great reforms, or their wish to help make the world wiser and better. The books and papers which children read have a veay important influence upon their character and life after they reach mature years. But, even in Christian and cultivated families, the young people usually read immeasurable trash. This is partly because the parents "have not time" to look after such matters; partly because much of their own reading is of a similar character. Very often, the work that is farthest from home has the greatest attraction for us.—Liberal Christian.

"A mill stone on the church's neck" is the title The Universalist gives to "one burden which no denomination can carry. It is a certain kind of a minister. It is a minister who has a certain failing. It is the minister who is reckless in the incurring of debts, and who shows no conscience in the matter of paying his debts. He may have the brains of Bacon, the eloquence of Chatham, the learning of Abelard; but if he has a conscience that will permit him to be happy while spending other people's money, he becomes a millstone on the neck of any denomination that tries to hold him up."

Go straight on, and don't mind enimies. If they get in your way, walk round them regardless of their spite. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enimies, used to remark, "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will go out by themselves." "Live down prejudice," was the Iron Duke's motto. Let this be your feeling while endeavoring to live down the scandel of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let the poor fellow talk—there will be a reaction if you do but perform your duty; and hundreds who were once alienated from you will flock to you acknowledge their error.

Poisoned Arrows.

Savages fight with poisoned arrows. With such weapons, the slightest wound is fatal. It needs no strong arm to bend the bow or deal the deadly stroke. The least scratch infuses death into the helpless victim, and no second effort is required to complete the work.

Civilized nations discard such weapons; yet there are many, even among those that bear the name of Christ, the weapons of whose warfare are not only carnal, but deadly as poisoned arrows. The bitter word, the stinging sneer, the vile insinuation, the "ifs," and "buts," and innuendoes of the envious, the jealous, and the slanderous—what are these but poisoned arrows? Let Christians beware, lest in their carelessness and forgetfulness of duty, they be found scattering firebrands, arrows of death, and pierce the souls of those around them with "sharp arrows, even bitter words."—The Christian.

"Knock and it Shall be Opened."

Where are we to knock? "I am the door," says the Savior: "no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

When are we to knock? "Evening and morning and at noon," says King Pavid, "will I pray, and cry aloud;" and David knew the benefit of this.

For what are we to knock? "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." Heaven in the soul—that is what we want; for heaven must first come to us before we can be saved.

How must we knock? We must knock in earnest. We cannot knock too loud. Jacob said, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me;" and he got a blessing. We must knock perseveringly too. The answer does not always come immediately. "I waited patiently for the Lord," says David; "and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry."—Well Spring.

Use of Affliction.

There is an old story in the Greek annals of a soldier under Antigonus, who had a disease about him, an extremely painful one, likely to bring him soon to his grave. Always first in the charge was this soldier rushing into the hottest part of the fray, as the bravest of the brave. His pain prompted him to fight, that he might forget it; and he feared not death, because he knew that in any case he had not long to live. Antigonus, who greatly admired the valor of his soldier, discovering his malady, had him cured by one of the most eminent physicians of the day; but, alas! from that moment the warrior was absent from the front of the battle. He now sought his ease; for, as he remarked to his companions, he had something worth living for—health, home, family, and other comforts, and he would not risk his life now as aforetime. So when our troubles are many, we are often by grace made courageous in serving our God; we feel that we have nothing to live for in this world, and we are driven, by hope of the world to come, to exhibit zeal, self-denial, and industry. But how often is it otherwise in better times! for then the joys and pleasures of this world make it hard for us to remember the world to come, and we sink into inglorious ease.—Spurgeon.

Fashion in the Church.

There is a dress question in which all Christian congregations have a common interest, and with regard to which we wish they might all unite to effect a reform. It has reference to the ordinary apparel—female apparel especially—proper to wear at church. There was a time when good taste demanded the use of the plainest clothes in the sanctuary, when the wealthiest were distinguished for their conspicuous absence of personal adornment, and sartorial display was a mark of vulgarity, at such times and places. But now-a-days, in the congregation, on the Sabbath, rich and poor alike seem on desperate strain, the one to make some faint approximation to the other, in point of extravagant display, and the other to demonstrate to the one the utter hopelessness of the attempt. It would almost appear as if, whatever might be thought of the propriety of a modest garb in other places, the proper costume for the house of God, where, theoretically, we all go to be reminded of our common origin and destiny, were an agglomeration of all the jewelry, and all the chignons, and all the panniers, and all the feathers and furbelows in one's wararobe. The wearer is to carry all this piled agony to the sanctuary as to a fair—as if her errand were not so much to praise as to be appraised—and there employ the sacred time in envious comparison of her own mountain of millinery with the Himalayan triumphs of her neighbor. Shall we ever get back to the standards of good taste and unobtrusive piety in this? Will not all good Christian people—especially those whose wealth and refinement make them the proper and only efficient leaders in such a reform—will not the pulpit of every sect, unite in the effort to effect it?—Christian Union.

till Christ comes, which must now be very soon; and its present condition makes it evident that Christ is coming immediately.

The 1335 years of Dan. 12:12, from A. D. 538, bring us to the deliverance of the host in 1873. And after the nations have experienced God's special indignation, to be visited upon them after Christ comes, then the sanctuary shall be justified. With regard to the Hebrew word rendered sanctuary in v. 14, it is koh-desh, which means in Dan. 8:14, holy, or dedicated, or consecrated place. In Ezk. 20:40 it is called "holy mountain." In Dan. 9:16, Jerusalem is called "thy holy mountain," and "holy city" in v. 24. In Joel 3:17—Zion "thy holy mountain," from koh-desh. In Zeph. 3:4, koh-desh is represented as having been polluted by her priests. In Ps. 79:1, we have a prophecy of a future defilement of koh-desh—"O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, thy holy temple have they defiled; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps." This defilement is to continue through the appointed time, the 2300 years, which reach to the last end of the indignation. The word sanctuary in v. 11 is not the same as in ch. 8:14. In v. 11 it is mik-dash, and applies in this connection to the "casting down" of Pagan temples, by "arms," or military power, in the interest of the Catholic church.

In view of the foregoing, we see that koh-desh, that is to be justified, is not the church, not any tabernacle up in heaven, not the whole earth, but "the koh-desh hill" (Ps. 15), "the koh-desh mountain" (Ps. 87:1; Is. 11:9; 65:11, 25; 66:20). "Jerusalem thy koh-desh mountain (Dan. 9:26); the glorious koh-desh mountain (11:45); the koh-desh hill of Zion (Ps. 2:6), where God says he will set, or plant his King, even Jesus. "For thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor [or justify] her, yea, the SET TIME [viz., 2300 years] is come. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

There is but one "Holy Land" on earth; that is Palestine. This land was given to the "holy seed;" but because they defiled it, it was taken from them, and given to Gentile governments, to be trodden under foot. But God has set a time when it shall be redeemed with judgment, and consecrated again by the feet and throne of Christ. I think the destruction of the earth will commence at Rome, where the anti-christ has reigned so long; and the redemption of the earth will begin at Jerusalem, the scene of Christ's sufferings.

> "Where thy cross in anguish stood,
> Where thy life distilled in blood,
> Where they mocked thy dying groan,
> King of nations plant thy throne!"

The word rendered "cleansed" in Dan. 8:14, is, literally, justified, and is so rendered, generally, in more than forty instances of its usage in the Old Testament. To justify is, according to Webster, "to pardon, and clear from guilt, to accept as just, and treat with favor." The justification of the sanctuary or Holy Land is the cessation of God's "indignation" against it. (Is. 10:25): "For yet a little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction." The justification of the "Holy Land" is not to be understood in a moral sense, but in a physical. "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness." (Is. 1:27.) "Zion is now a wilderness, and Jerusalem a desolation." "Zion has been ploughed as a field." "The curse has devoured the earth." "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain." "The creation was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." The creation in earnest expectation "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." But "the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." This earth on which we live is yet to pass through a baptism of blood and fire. Why does Paul say that under the law "almost all things are purged with blood?" Read the first of Is. 63, and compare with Rev. 14:15-20; 18:13-15; and Is. 34, especially v. 8. This work of cleansing is antecedent to the justification of the sanctuary. "Then shall the sanctuary be justified. This is in the preterit, or past tense according to the Hebrew Concordance. So that at the end of the 2300 days the sanctuary has been brought into a condition of justification, all indignation has then ceased that was connected with it. This I expect to see in A. D. 1875.

> "Then thy Mount Jerusalem
> Shall be gorgeous as a gem;
> Then shall in the desert rise
> Fruits of more than Paradise."

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The Difficulties of Dress.

Zions Herald has the following display of the follies of the woman's dress, accompanied with a box of salve (the last paragraph) for wounded consciences: In one sex, certainly, a gradual progress in the right direction is visible in the matter of dress. Queen Elizabeth's duke of Leicester could not have dressed himself, and when dressed, could neither have wrought nor fought.

Now the man who is suspected of having spent an hour of time, or thought of getting himself up for the day, is despised. But it is not clear that this wholesome change sprang from holy motives, and what is thus saved is not saved in Christ, but wasted in other ways. All retrenchments, through improvements in machinery, are swallowed up in new exactions of fashion and luxury. The Christian has now less leisure for prayer or Christian work than they whose every thread of clothing was spun and woven by hand, and when even the fiber was pulled off the cottonseed by human fingers.

But the Christian gentleman can be transformed into the Christian soldier much more easily than the Christian lady. He is able-bodied. with a little training he can be brought into a high state of physical efficiency. And in this respect the tendency of the times is in the right direction. The gymnastic drill has become a part of liberal education. And if you meet him in the street in his gray business dress, you could suggest little change to make in it as subservient of all the purposes of dress as possible. It is no impediment to bodily activity, and demands little thought or time to put in order and keep it so. And should he suddenly turn all his energies and resources to the battle of the Lord, society might miss him, but would not outlaw him.

But how different with the lady! She ventures outside of her bed-room in no dress that does not resemble in outline those worn for full-dress by Abraham and Sarah, but which all the sons of Japheth have thrown off as an impediment. The outline alone remains; fashion has made all its details "movable that thou canst not know them" but by a life-study. Many of its victims find that it costs more than half the energies of their life to superintend its purchase and manufacture, to put it on, keep in place, and put it off. A single article of it may cost as much as a meeting-house, or an edition of the Bible. A healthy girl in the lower walks of life often finds her dress demanding all her surplus earnings for years.

Nor is all this the worst of it. The lady is a prisoner. She cannot penetrate a thicket, can hardly climb a fence; makes a great feat of a five miles' walk over good roads; can make no headway against a rough breeze, and cannot walk in the sun without occupying one hand with parasol, if not another with her dress. It is in consequence of these impediments, and of unnatural life, that woman is rarely in perfect health. And if in health, her bodily energies and her mental leisure are reduced to a minimum by her dress. And her bodily condition reacts on both her head and heart. Six new diseases, it is said, all located in the same organ, have been developed by the increased volume of skirts which came in vogue since Eugenie became empress of the French. Some of them are incurable, all are lingering, and most of them destructive of energy, happiness, and good temper. The Christian who falls a victim to them goes at once into the invalid corps for life.

But it is not enough that the health be not absolutely impaired. A vigorous health is necessary to the highest degree of mental power. And this is hardly attainable without pleasurable exercise in sun and air; and a walk with ball and chain, or worse impediments, will not meet the want. And to rejoice evermore is not natural when eternal vigilance is the price of a decent toilet. Nor is one whose trade it is to get ready to be looked at, able to throw her full force into any other enterprise. And it would be strange that a condition in which one's own person requires a very large fraction of our care, should tend to selfishness.

So we conclude that the Christian woman for the coming crisis must of a widely different type from what now prevails. But let the most devoted of her sex become convinced of this and what can she do? Reluctance in obedience to the behests of fashion avails little; open rebellion is madness. Grant that she is satisfied that fashion is to this generation exactly what Baal was to that of Jezebel, what next? She may cast longing eyes to the time when conformity to the world shall appear to the Christian as idolatry did to the Jews in the days of the Maccabees, but how is that time to come? She approves of the words of good old Peter (no bachelor he) about plaiting the hair, and grudges the time as she stands before the glass longer than she ever kneels, but she cannot crop her head like a pugilist, or go with the looks of a bison. Nay, if in default of the regulation quantity, she dons the shearings of the hospital, the prison, or the dissecting-room, she is more to be pitied than blamed.

"Born of Water."

Does the above phrase, in the third chapter of John's Gospel, mean baptism? The overwhelming weight of ministerial authority so decides. It may be presumption in me to call in question the correctness of such decision. I yield to no one in admiration of learning and piety, and especially in honor to those learned and pious men who have devoted their lives to unfolding the truths of God's Holy Word. I must be excused, however, from receiving as infallible the teachings of any but those who "wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." I do not remember to have seen the view taken which has had most influence in deciding my mind on the subject. I hold, in common with many others, that the term "water" here used is an allusion to the natural birth, but my reason for that view is, perhaps, not so common.

From the commencement of the conversation a parallel is drawn between the natural and spiritual births. See the language of Jesus in the third verse: "Except a man be born again," &c. Now, no one will dispute that the term "again" refers to the natural birth. Now examine the reply of Nicodemus: "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" That the parallel is here maintained is too clear to need comment.

Passing over the passage in dispute, notice the teaching of the sixth verse: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." Here, again, it is clear enough that the parallel is kept up between the natural and spiritual births.

Finally in the seventh verse, we have a repetition of the language with which the colloquy commences: "Ye must be born again," thus closing with the parallel. Now, to my mind it seems remarkable that a parallel should have been drawn and maintained by four undoubted allusions in this short conversation, and dropped without explanation in a fifth reference to the subject. But this is not all, for in this fifth reference to the spiritual birth a new and wonderful disclosure is made by a word or two, upon the supposition that the phrase means baptism, that has no parallel in the Word of God, without a word of subsequent explanation. Upon the other hand, understanding the "water" birth to be an allusion to the natural birth, the sixth verse explains it: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit."

It remains only to account for the use of the term "water," or, rather, the phrase "born of water," to indicate the natural birth. We cannot always appreciate the forms of speech of Oriental writers, but to those who understand the physiology of gestation the form of expression is entirely rational. In English we have the following expression: "Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters; she was fruitful and full of branches, by reason of many waters."—F. C. in the Watchman and Reflector.

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

have a supply of Br. Wellcome's ations, and will promptly fill ders.
rean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leath-
$2.50.
n of Redemption, $1.25.
thew 24, 25c.
stian Baptism, 25c.
ts: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a
Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a
God's Special Gift—Immortal-
; 35c. a dozen.
Gospel Hope, and the Faithful
hman. The two for 5c; 20c. a n, each.
The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Ro-
an Apostasy, 10c.
Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

The Christian Life.

Holy Living.

A holy life is made up of a number of small things. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles, not battles, nor one great heroic act or mighty martyrdom make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not "the waters of the river, great and many, rushing down in torrent, noise and force," are the true symbols of a holy life.

* * *

It is a feature of the life of our time that, in all matters pertaining to religion, or to the spiritual side of life, people care more for form than for substance, more for what is incidental and external than for what is essential and vital. Earnestness, life, power, would be disturbing and unpleasant. Whoever does anything must be careful to do it in a smooth and attractive way, with a manner entirely unobjectionable. Then, whether the thing which he does is worth doing is a question not likely to be raised.—Liberal Christian.

* * *

It is scarcely worth while for people who cannot direct or influence the reading of their own childern to say much about their interest in great reforms, or their wish to help make the world wiser and better. The books and papers which children read have a vey important influence upon their charactr and life after they reach mature years. But, even in Christian and cultivated families, the young people usually read immeasurable trash. This is partly because the parents "have not time" to look after such matters; partly because much of their own reading is of a similar character. Very often, the work that is farthest from home has the greatest attraction for us.—Liberal Christian.

* * *

"A mill stone on the church's neck" is the title The Universalist gives to "one burden which no denomination can carry. It is a certain kind of a minister. It is a minister who has a certain failing. It is the minister who is reckless in the incurring of debts, and who shows no conscience in the matter of paying his debts. He may have the brains of Bacon, the eloquence of Chatham, the learning of Abelard; but if he has a conscience that will permit him to be happy while spending other people's money, he becomes a millstone on the neck of any denomination that tries to hold him up."

* * *

Go straight on, and don't mind enimies. If they get in your way, walk round them regardless of their spite. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enimies, used to remark, "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will go out by themselves." "Live down prejudice," was the Iron Duke's motto. Let this be your feeling while endeavoring to live down the scandel of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let the poor fellow talk—there will be a reaction if you do but perform your duty; and hundreds who were once alienated from you will flock to you acknowledge their error.

Poisoned Arrows.

Savages fight with poisoned arrows. With such weapons, the slightest wound is fatal. It needs no strong arm to bend the bow or deal the deadly stroke. The least scratch infuses death into the helpless victim, and no second effort is required to complete the work.

Civilized nations discard such weapons; yet there are many, even among those that bear the name of Christ, the weapons of whose warfare are not only carnal, but deadly as poisoned arrows. The bitter word, the stinging sneer, the vile insinuation, the "ifs," and "buts," and innuendoes of the envious, the jealous, and the slanderous—what are these but poisoned arrows? Let Christians beware, lest in their carelessness and forgetfulness of duty, they be found scattering firebrands, arrows of death, and pierce the souls of those around them with "sharp arrows, even bitter words."—The Christian.

"Knock and it Shall be Opened."

Where are we to knock? "I am the door," says the Savior: "no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

When are we to knock? "Evening and morning and at noon," says King David, "will I pray, and cry aloud;" and David knew the benefit of this.

For what are we to knock? "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." Heaven in the soul—that is what we want; for heaven must first come to us before we can be saved.

How must we knock? We must knock in earnest. We cannot knock too loud. Jacob said, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me;" and he got a blessing. We must knock perseveringly too. The answer does not always come immediately. "I waited patiently for the Lord," says David; "and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry."—Well Spring.

Use of Affliction.

There is an old story in the Greek annals of a soldier under Antigonus, who had a disease about him, an extremely painful one, likely to bring him soon to his grave. Always first in the charge was this soldier rushing into the hottest part of the fray, as the bravest of the brave. His pain prompted him to fight, that he might forget it; and he feared not death, because he knew that in any case he had not long to live. Antigonus, who greatly admired the valor of his soldier, discovering his malady, had him cured by one of the most eminent physicians of the day; but, alas! from that moment the warrior was absent from the front of the battle. He now sought his ease; for, as he remarked to his companions, he had something worth living for—health, home, family, and other comforts, and he would not risk his life now as aforetime. So when our troubles are many, we are often by grace made courageous in serving our God; we feel that we have nothing to live for in this world, and we are driven, by hope of the world to come, to exhibit zeal, self-denial, and industry. But how often is it otherwise in better times! for then the joys and pleasures of this world make it hard for us to remember the world to come, and we sink into inglorious ease.—Spurgeon.

Fashion in the Church.

There is a dress question in which all Christian congregations have a common interest, and with regard to which we wish they might all unite to effect a reform. It has reference to the ordinary apparel—female apparel especially—proper to wear at church. There was a time when good taste demanded the use of the plainest clothes in the sanctuary, when the wealthiest were distinguished for their conspicuous absence of personal adornment, and sartorial display was a mark of vulgarity, at such times and places. But now-a-days, in the congregation, on the Sabbath, rich and poor alike seem on desperate strain, the one to make some faint approximation to the other, in point of extravagant display, and the other to demonstrate to the one the utter hopelessness of the attempt. It would almost appear as if, whatever might be thought of the propriety of a modest garb in other places, the proper costume for the house of God, where, theoretically, we all go to be reminded of our common origin and destiny, were an agglomeration of all the jewelry, and all the chignons, and all the panniers, and all the feathers and furbelows in one's wardrobe. The wearer is to carry all this piled agony to the sanctuary as to a fair—as if her errand were not so much to praise as to be appraised—and there employ the sacred time in envious comparison of her own mountain of millinery with the Himalayan triumphs of her neighbor. Shall we ever get back to the standards of good taste and unobtrusive piety in this? Will not all good Christian people—especially those whose wealth and refinement make them the proper and only efficient leaders in such a reform—will not the pulpit of every sect, unite in the effort to effect it?—Christian Union.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July 30, 1872.

[illegible]........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

[illegible] THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine [illegible] personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

POLITICAL MORALS.

That what has been called "the sea of politics" is really little better than a cess-pool of moral corruption is evident from one fact, if there were no other testimony. We refer to the habit of reckless lying that seizes upon nearly every person who assumes any active part in political strife. This lying is of every grade, from the mildest insinuation up to the deliberate barefaced falsehood. Tongue and pen are both prostituted to the vice, until the remark David made in haste, seems to be the least one can say after careful deliberation. Listen to the passengers upon the public conveyance, to the disputants in public offices, or more private places of meeting; and then, to crown all, read the political newpapers—and is it not hard to avoid a feeling that "all men are liars?"

Nor is this lying confined to any one party: each is alike reckless of the truth, and the only way in which one can approximate the truth is to form an independent judgment after reading both sides. An[d] one thing is very certain. If one hal[f] [th]at either party says of the other i[s t]rue, the whole race of politicians, rule[rs, j]udges and legislators should be ban[ish]ed, as false to the interests of both their country and society. A spirit of the most ignoble partizanship seems to have driven out the force of sound reason and sober common sense, and senseless prejudices sway the passions of the people.

Every Christian should be an active politician. He has a Leader; and the principles of his system are definitely announced. Let him be true to them. It matters little who is to be President, when we think of the greater question, Is it true that soon the Lord is to reign, King of the whole earth? Keep this fact in mind, and the strifes of the present day will appear to you in their true character of petty contests, unworthy of the interest they excite.

And to the Christian we say, take care! Keep out of the strife, or ere you are aware you will find yourself inextricably involved in associations that will blunt your moral sense, take away your peace, and destroy, to a greater or less extent, your influence as a follower of King Jesus. Obey your conscience in fulfilling whatever claims your earthly country may have upon you; but beware of falling into the slough of politics, lest you forget, or in a hasty moment ignore the claims of your professed heavenly citizenship.

ANOTHER BOOK BY HENRY CONSTABLE.

We need not introduce Henry Constable, to our readers. The Prebendary of Cork has made thousands of friends as well as admirers by his articles, first in the Quarterly and since in THE TIMES. His pen has not only point, but there is force to wield and intellect to direct. His name attached to any book or article is a sufficient guarantee that the matter is worth reading. He does not speak unless he has something to say; and he has a way of saying that something, that invests even familiar thoughts with a new interest. He possesses in an eminent degree the gift of our own Whitmore—a scholarly style combined with lucidity of statement: such writers are never dry.

Since Mr. Constable espoused the theory of the final destruction of all evil, he has been a close investigator of the teachings of the Bible on this subject. He early got rid of the notion of the conscious intermediate state—an idea that embarasses the arguments of so many of our English writers. And while Mr. Constable has been investigating his pen has not been idle. His pamphlets and magazine articles have kept us quite fully posted concerning the results of his investigations. But the ripest thoughts have now been gathered into a cluster in a carefully prepared manuscript upon The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. The work bears about the same relation to his pamphlet, whose republication in this country we owe Prof. Ives, of Yale that the man does to the child. We have the substance of the lesser in the greater, but in larger, more mature and more effective form. This work was designed for publication at the University Press in New Haven; but the Messrs. Chatfield felt unwilling to assume the financial burden involved in issuing a work of this class, preferring to invest their capital in the valuable series of Scientific and educational books for which the public owe them a debt of gratitude. It remains, then, for our readers to determine whether this work shall be republished here, or go back across the ocean. It will make a volume of about three hundred pages, of the size and general style of Whitmore's Doctrine of Immortality: and as the latter has become the standard work of its topic; so Mr. Constable's book will be the standard volume upon the future punishment. It will be an invaluable addition to our literature. We ask for a subscription for FIVE THOUSAND COPIES for the first edition. Shall we have it? there is no reason why we should not. If the readers of THE TIMES cannot afford to put five thousand copies of this book into circulation before January of 1873, they cannot afford to hold the doctrine it teaches. If God has opened our eyes to behold his truth on this topic as it is in Jesus, it is not that we should use it as the glutton does his dainty—make a secret and selfish repast, caring naught as to who else is fed or hungry. Nay it is rather that we should send it out. Freely ye have received; as freely give! It is for us to say whether this revolution in theology shall go forward or backward. If it is to go forward then we have something to do. It must be do, do, and keep doing. All workers and all at it—about our Master's business continually.

It is not the day to spend our time in dreamy conditions, or frames of mind—seasons of delicious repose, or of beatific contemplation. Such is not the true spirituality. Get the sanctification of service, of usefulness. Be up and doing.

Our papers, tracts and books must continue as they have been, among the most effective agencies in our work. The men we need cannot be had in the numbers we need them. We cannot make men; but we can make books and papers. Money will make books; and in that way a Collins, or Whitmore, or Constable and others may reach souls they may never see except in the kingdom.

Many will endorse all we have said, except in the practical application of the remarks. "Oh! Yes! Mr. Constable's book should be published, and we will be glad to see it." Very well, then take hold and help by forwarding your subscription. How many copies will you take?

As we have said the book will contain something more than three hundred pages. The price of single copies bound in cloth, will be one dollar. In paper covers, 50c. We ask subscriptions for any number of volume from one copy to one thousand or more, to be filled in the order they are received. We ask our friends everywhere to do a generous thing in this matter, for the sake of the truth upon this question of momentous interest.

Pledges will be received on the following terms.

Amount	Number of Copies Cloth.		Paper.
$ .50			1
1.00	1	or	2
2.00	3	"	7
3.00	6	"	13
10.00	18	"	34
25.00	35	"	90
50.00	75	"	200
100.00	175	"	300

These pledges may be paid at once, or when the books are ready for delivery, at the pleasure of the subscribers. Where it is possible we would like them paid in advance. This will enable us to hasten the work of publication.

DEATH.

Dear reader, the day is not far distant when a remorseless foe will confront you. Your strength of arm, and pride of intellect, and stoutness of heart will not avail. Powerless as a leaf driven before the blast, you must yield. The rarest skill and the wisdom of the wisest men cannot save you. Though hosts of devoted friends surround you, yet every effort of theirs in your behalf will be in vain. Death will conquer you. Your eyes will close to all earthly sights; your ears will grow deaf, even to the tenderest whispers of love; your lips will be sealed, and your throbbing heart will cease to beat. You will be laid in your coffin, and borne to the grave, and weeping friends will turn away and leave you to the solitude and silence of your narrow home.

Deathless spirit, reading these brief lines, remember you are reading your own experience, for you are mortal, and it will become you to stop, if only for a moment, and ask yourself the solemn question, "Am I ready to endure this momentous ordeal? Am I ready for the hour of dissolution, and the darkness of the grave?" Whether prepared or not, the hour is very near when death will claim you for his own; already his shadow darkens your pathway, and the fatal dart is poised with unerring aim in the hand of the destroyer. There is then—

> "No room for mirth or trifling here,
> For worldly hope or worldly fear,
> If life so soon is gone;
> Nothing is worth a thought beneath,
> But how you may escape the death,
> That never, never dies!
> How make your own election sure;
> And when you fail on earth, secure
> A mansion in the skies."

You may live, with God's help, so that death even shall not be feared; and though you may fall before the King of Terrors, you shall conquer, and go shouting home to glory, victorious through Jesus Christ our Lord.
—Zion's Herald.

—Several of our correspondents have of late referred to the influence the contradictions of immaterialism have exercised in bringing them into the truth. We wish every immaterialist could be compelled to thoroughly analyze the above article, and furnish Scripture citations in proof of each of the points taken. First, we are warned that the Philistine, our insatiate fo, is upon us. No one can save. "We" must go into the tomb. Next a "deathless spirit" is called upon to recollect that it is "mortal!!" Then come the fables of the "death that never dies," and of entering "the skies" at death; and the case is summed up by the assurance that although you may fall you will still be victor in the contest, and instead of going to the grave to be left in "the solitude of your narrow house" you will "go shouting home to glory!!" Only think. "The rarest skill and wisdom of the wisest men cannot save you!" "Hosts of desolate friends" can avail nothing. In spite of their efforts and prayers and sorrow and cries of grief, away you will flee "victorious," "shouting home to glory." Oh! deplorable fate! Cannot earth afford a medicine to "save us from going to glory? How sad!

BODY, SOUL, SPIRIT AND SYNECDOCHE.

It is said that "man is composed of or possesses body, soul and spirit, just as one says of a house it has or is composed of main part, wing and kitchen." Either may be called the house by synecdoche. This is the immaterialist's position, and chosen illustration. But let us suppose the "wing part" of the house moved into another part of the town; "the kitchen," to still another place: Will our opponents tell which in such case would be "the house?" By synecdoche or any figure of speech could one say of "the wing" or kitchen—"This is that house which stood," so and so. The house was left. So when spirit and soul depart from man, the man is left. When Stephen died, "devout men carried him [personal pronoun] to his burial;" but "the spirit returned to God who gave it"—neuter gender.

It the oft repeated assertion, that the spirit of man is "a rational conscious, thinking, responsible moral entity" or being is correct, we have the singular spectacle of a rational intelligence invariably represented by the neuter pronoun "it." For it is a fact that wherever the word spirit is clearly or indisputably represented by a pronoun, this is the pronoun used.

To claim such an expression as "my departure," as referring to the spirit is sheer begging of the question at issue. There are nine personal pronouns in the sentence. Eight of them indisputably refer to the man in his entire personality. "I am ready to be offered: I have fought, I have finished, my course, a crown for me, shall give me, not to me only, but to all them—but it is said in "my departure," the pronoun is a synecdoche for spirit! One can but feel that our opponents are hard pressed when they resort to such "chop-logic" as this.

Homer, and the Isles of the Blest (a heathen fable) with other pagan and anti-Christian authorities are sometimes cited as proof that the spirit is the man. But opposers forget to add that they held that the spirit was the man whether in life or death. Plato represents Socrates as plumply denying that his body was Socrates at all. But observe. Our opponents go to heathen poets and philosophy to find a definite statement that anthropos is applied to disembodied spirits. Would they cite Homer if they could possibly give a citation from a sacred writer? Bible usage is our standard, and it nowhere directly predicates personality of the spirit. And no person can fail to see that if an opponent has the right to go through Scripture and inject synecdoche at will into nouns and pronouns, he can prove by that process anything he pleases. But he has no right thus to do. He is bound by the laws of language as well as we.

We know that in discussing this question our opponents have a law for referring the personality now to the body, now to soul, now to spirit: it is the law of necessity. They must have the synecdoche to save their theology—and their theology is the only reason they can give for injecting the figure. The nouns and pronouns make sense in their natural construction. "The Lord God formed man of the dust." "His body" says the immaterialist—"its a synecdoche." But the record reads that man was made of dust and the dust-made man became "a living soul." The living soul was not a being "without organization that can be apprehended by the senses," but a material being made from the earth; and no trifling about figures of speech can remove or alter this stubborn fact.

DOUBTS CONCERNING RELIGION.

All honest doubt is to be respected. We should deeply sympathise with those persons whose very love of truth and reverence for God are connected at times with the most painful doubts. Such persons need our sympathy, not our aversion; our prayers, not our curses. Our Savior did not anathematize Thomas because of the latter's doubt. He loved him still, and showed him "the better way." Unlike their Master, many professing Christians frown upon all who venture to doubt the authority of church or creed. A superstitious and unquestioned acceptance of a traditional creed and intolerant zeal in defense of it, imply less love for truth, than the honest doubt of one who means to be entirely sincere and thoroughly honest in a matter so important as that of religious belief. It was a saying of Coleridge that, "One had better have Arnold's doubts, than most men's certainties." Dr. Arnold had in early life suffered much from doubts concerning religion but having at length emerged from "Doubting Castle," he gained the "King's Highway" that leads to the "Celestial City." Ever after, during his long and useful life, he was the kind friend and wise counselor of all who came to him for religious advice. His early struggles and after success fitted him to be the guide of others. "The boys who were tormented while at school (Rugby) with skeptical doubts, took courage at last to unfold them to him, and were almost startled to find the ready sympathy with which, instead of denouncing them as profane, he entered into their difficulties, and applied his whole mind to assuage them."

J. H. W.

THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST.

[First Article.]

"All men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father who hath sent him." (Jno. 5: 23.)

The question to be considered in this article is, Did Christ exist as a person before his Incarnation?

This is eminently a theological question, and in answering it we shall appeal not to the speculations of philosophy, but to the plain declarations of the Scriptures. Accepting the Bible as the standard authority, we hope to bring to its study a teachable spirit and a grateful heart. The abstractions of philosophy, and the speculations of metaphysics, may answer for the skeptic and the rationalist, but with the devout believer in inspiration, nothing can take the place of the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make him "wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." Many vitally important truths are written in the fifth chapter of John's Gospel, one of which is embraced in the passage which stands at the head of this article: "He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father." Our Lord was addressing the Jews who had sought to kill him for healing the impotent man on the Sabbath day, and for saying "that God was his Father, making himself equal with God." Our Savior instead of attempting to allay their hostility by disclaiming Divine rank or power proceeded to say that the Father had committed all judgment unto the Son, that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. That the hour had come when the dead should hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that heard should live; that as the Father had life in himself, so he had given the Son to have life in himself; that they were not to wonder at this, for the hour was coming in the which all that were in the graves should hear his voice and should come forth, they that had done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that had done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation. In these tremendous utterances our Lord certainly claimed for himself Divine prerogatives; therefore all men should honor him, even as they honor the Father who sent him. If we would thus honor the Son we must believe the record which God hath given of him, and accept as true the testimony of the faithful witness, who is emphatically styled the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

The first question properly to be considered in Christology, is that of Christ's pre-existence. The Apostle John begins his Gospel with the announcement that "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God, and the word was God. The same was in the beginning with God." "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." In this important passage three things are distinctly stated:(1) In the beginning the Word was with God; (2) the Word was God; and (3) the Word created all things. If there were nothing else to the purpose in the whole of the New Testament, these first three verses of the fourth Gospel in connection with the fourteenth verse would suffice to persuade a believer in Holy Scripture of the truth of Christ's pre-existence and Divinity. Without preface or words of introduction, disdaining the verbiage and formulas of scholastic philosophy, the apostle John, instead of beginning his narative at the human birth of our Lord, or at the commencement of his ministry, opens his treatise as it were with a peal of thunder in the sublime announcement, IN THE BEGINNING WAS THE WORD. When as yet the heavens and the earth were not, he was. He existed before the creation, for he was the Creator of all things. The personality of the Logos is carefully protected by the language used. The Evangelist speeks of him, not of it; of a person, not of an attribute. John talks not like one speaking of an Ideal Existence or of a Divine Energy. He worshipped the Word as the Creator, and adored him as his Savior. To him the life of Jesus was as the light of heaven. He never seeks to idealize the Master. To his conception, Jesus is above and beyond all idealization. The Word of whom he writes is also the Son, the only begotten Son of God. "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." God sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him."

We have also in the opening chapter of John's Gospel the testimony of John the Baptist, whom our Lord declares to be a true witness. (Jno. 5: 32.) "John bore witness of him, and cried, saying, This is he of whom I spoke, he that cometh after me is prefered before me: for he was before me." The followers of Socinus, who denied the pre-existence of Christ will not allow the obvious teaching of the passage, but paraphrase it thus: "The Christ who is to begin his ministry after me has, by the Divine appointment, been preferred before me, because he is my chief or superior." Thus they explain the clause 'for he was before me' in the sense of superior rank or dignity, instead of time. John, however, uses the same word—protos—several times in his Gospel to denote priority of time. Examples. "The world hated me before it hated you." (Jno. 15: 18.) He first findeth his own brother Simon." (1: 41.) "The other disciple did outrun Peter and came first to the sepulcher." (20: 4.) The verb in the last clause, 'He was before me,' is sufficient to fix the meaning of protos as indicating priority of time. Had the Baptist referred to the rank or dignity of Christ as separable from the idea of time, he would not have said 'He was,' but 'He is before me.'

Our Lord's discourses, in which he claims to have had a pre-existence in heaven, must carry with them the absolute conviction to every Christian heart of the truthfulness of the great doctrine therein enunciated. To the Jewish Ruler, he said: "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." (Jno. 3: 13.) When preaching in the great synagogue of Capernaum he used the following significant language: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (ch. 6: 38.) "I am the living Bread which came down from heaven." (ch. 6: v. 51.) "The Jews then murmured at him because he said, I am the Bread which came down from heaven. And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven." (ch. 6: 41, 42.) The Jews objected that they knew his father and mother, and could not therefore understand his claim to a pre-existent life. Instead of attempting to remove the impression which his words had made upon his auditors, our Lord proceeded to re-assert his pre-existence in the same terms as before. (vv. 44–58.) He carried the doctrine into its mysterious consequences. Since he was the Bread of Life which came down from heaven, his flesh was meat indeed, and his blood was drink indeed. They only would have eternal life who should eat this flesh and drink this blood. When many of the disciples murmured at this doctrine as 'a hard saying,' our Lord met their objections by predicting his return to heaven as an event that would justify his allusions to his pre-existence. "What, and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up WHERE HE WAS BEFORE." (Jno. 6: 62.) In what manner are declarations so plain and unequivocal to be avoided? It is said that Socinus and his early disciples, in order to account for these phrases, supposed that Christ, between the time of his birth and entrance upon his ministry, was translated into heaven, and there remained some time, that he might see and hear those things which he was to publish to the world."[1] For such a supposition, however, no warrant of Scripture can be found, and the position is therefore clearly an untenable one. Another hypothesis, and the one generally adopted by modern Socinians is, that our Lord's words do not necessarily imply a literal ascent and descent, but merely that "He alone was admitted to an intimate knowledge of the Divine will, and was commissioned to reveal it to men."[2] But to this it is obvious to reply that if the first of these two opposite phrases of "ascending into heaven," and "coming down from heaven," be explained figuratively to mean becoming acquainted with God's will, the second phrase must signify to become unacquainted with the Divine will. Whatever "ascending to heaven" may be supposed to mean, in any figure, descending from heaven must mean the opposite. If, therefore, to ASCEND, be to learn, to DESCEND, must be to unlearn.[3]

Again, if to come down from heaven signifies to bring a Divine commission to teach, is it not passing strange that the expression should never have been used in reference to Moses or David, to John or Paul, or to any other of the inspired writers? So decisive is the passage in John 6: 62 that even Strauss concedes that the language of Jesus is "in its intrinsic meaning, as well as in that which is reflected on it from other passages, unequivocally significative of actual, not merely of ideal pre-existence."[4] J. H. W.

---

[1] Watson's Inst. Part II. p. 341. [2] Belsham's Inquiry. [3] Magee on the Atonement. [4] Leben Jesu. ch. I, § 65.

THE "LITTLE" STONE.

By what authority is the adjective "little" prefixed to the word stone, when referring to the symbol of Dan. 2: 34? The record simply says—"Thou sawest.... a stone." "Little" stone is one of those deceptive terms which contribute so much to the support of erroneous ideas. The minister says "little" stone; the author writes "little" stone; the hearer and reader generally conclude that "little" stone is the reading of Scripture itself; just as multitudes have heard the term "immortal soul" used so frequently as scriptural, that they can scarcely find words to express their indignation when they are coolly told that the term nowhere occurs in God's word. What! deny the presence there of a word to be found hundreds of times! But it is not there; and the ruffled searcher has to own his error, or else take refuge in the standard orthodox mode of begging the question—"The immortality of the soul is asserted in the Scripture." But to the multitude who really believe that the expression "immortal soul," or an equivalent, is to be found in the Bible, the effect is the same in moulding their opinion, as though the language were really there; and just so the impression that Daniel records the work of a "little" stone, paves the way for interpretations of the vision of the Assyrian king which subvert the consistency, as well as pervert the sense of the Word of God.

The "little" stone! How naturally the expression applies to the "little" company, the remnant of Christ's disciples, who were gathered at Pentecost. "And it became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." How naturally follows the oft repeated assertion, that this "little" stone then commenced to roll, and has rolled and rolled ever since, gradually abrading the image, and growing, itself, by accretion, slowly enough to be sure, but ultimately to be fulfilled in the conversion of the world.

Keep the idea of "little" stone before the people, and the mistaken interpretation will be received by them. The term fits the exegesis well enough; but in the narrative, in the vision itself, it is entirely incongruous, and appears absurd. Let us read. "Thou, O King, sawest, and beheld a GREAT image. This GREAT image....the form thereof was TERRIBLE....Thou sawest till that a [LITTLE!] stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon the feet.....and BRAKE THEM IN PIECES!" What, this "great," this "terrible" image, broken as into chaff by a single stroke from a "little" stone? Could an interpretation be more absurd?

The Scripture records say nothing of the size of the stone. That is left to be inferred from its work; and inasmuch as it "brake in pieces" at a single stroke (it "smote the image;" its work was a stroke, not a slow grinding process) the "great image," we conclude that the stone itself was "great," sufficient for the work. If we change the Scriptural expression at all, the context requires that we read boulder, and reject "little" stone as an utterly inadmissible reading.

McCOSH ON MATERIALISM.

James McCosh, D. D. LLD., President of Princeton College, has been delivering a course of lectures on "Natural Religion and Apologetics," at the Madison-square Presbyterian Church, New York City. The subject of his seventh lecture was "Materialism." Among other things he is reported to have said: "The tendency toward materialism in this country must be met." We are glad to learn that the doctrine of materialism is to be met. We hope it may be fairly met. Hitherto, its opponents have relied chiefly on misrepresentations and blackguardism. Materialism asks only a fair field and no favor. Its onward tendency cannot be checked by raising the mad dog cry of "heresy" and "infidelity." Let us stand or fall according as it is true or false. Prove it false and all good men will unite to oppose it. Establish it as a truth and all good men will sooner or later accept it as such. Whoever furnishes demonstrative proof either of the truthfulness or falsity of materialism performs thereby a valuable service in the cause of truth. Dr. McCosh treats the materialist as a "foeman worthy of his steel." He has for him no gibes, or sneers, or contemptuous expressions. He is in evident good humor, for his allowances and admissions are of the most generous and sweeping kind. He says, by way of beginning, that, "it may be allowed that there is a certain relation between mind and body." This is not a very bold assertion, but what is far better, it is an eminently safe one. No one will deny its truthfulness, or charge its author with extravagance in making it. We may take it for granted, then, that there is a certain relation between mind and body. The question to be determined is, what is the relation between mind and body? Is the mind dependent upon the body, or is it not? Dr. McCosh's next "allowance" is rather more generous than his first one, and serve as an admirable proposition from which most important inferences may be fairly drawn. "It may be further allowed," says the President of Princeton College, "that there is a general correspondence between the size of the cerebral hemisphere and the power of the intellect." Why this should be so if the mind or soul be a separate entity, and immaterial, the learned lecturer did not deign to inform us. If intellectual power be measured by volume of brain; if a large brain be the exponent of great mental power, and a small brain of little mental power, why may we not in the descending scale go a step farther and say, no brain, no mind? If in this life the mind is entirely dependent upon an active brain for the manifestation of thought or intelligence, what reason have we for supposing that when the brain becomes inactive in death the mind will still exist with all its active powers unimpaired?

Near the close of his lecture, Dr. McCosh concedes the whole question in these words: "I am inclined to admit that without physical force distributed in the brain the mind will not work, as a water-mill will not run without water, and when this force is exhausted the mind is helpless for a time." This admission is as broad as the most zealous materialist could have hoped for. Without an active brain the mind is helpless. It cannot work without it. As the water-mill is useless without an active brain.

We do not claim Dr. McCosh as a convert to materialism. But we think his immaterialism is almost as "gross" as our materialism, and quite as hetrodox. J. H. W.

Changes at Rome.

In a late speech, Father Gavazzi, of Rome, speaking of the progress of truth in Rome said:

We do not expect to regenerate the Church of Rome. It is too far gone for that. Like a man with a body gangrened, the only hope of that church is the undertaker, and the sooner it is buried and put out of sight the better it will be for the State—that is the reason we don't reform that church. The aim of our church was to enter Rome. But how to do it? We were enabled to do so through God's providence. At the moment the Pope was declared infallible he lost his temporal power. On the 15th of July, 1870, Napoleon, the Pope's firmest friend and most powerful ally, declared war against Prussia. On the 18th the Council of Seventy in the Vatican, declared the Pope infallible. In a very few months Napoleon was no longer a ruler, but dethroned and a prisoner. This may have been a coincidence, but it was a very startling one. Pope Pius IX. dared to compare himself in glory with God, for infallibility belongs to the glory of God, and he punished him for that. We are in Rome through the civil justice of God. We are there to make it the Central Station of the evangelization of Italy. We have been there legally since January, 1871, and now see the change that has taken place. At that time should a man dare lift up his voice in preaching Jesus Christ, he would have been at least imprisoned for life. Now we preach him freely in the very hearing of the infallible pope. We have five churches and Sunday-schools, which are well attended; an Evangelical library; and seven colporteurs who have sold over 40,000 copies of the Testament. Our meetings in Rome are largely attended, so eager are the people to hear the word of God. During several months of last year, I was obliged to preach nine times a week in three different places, to an average of 6,000 people, to in any wise satisfy them. Now we publish the Free Christian Testament in Rome without the permission of the pope. Is it not a wonderful fact? On entering the Corso, the principal street in Rome, the first object that meets your eye is a building neatly fitted up, and over the door of which, in bright golden letters, you may read, "General Depot of the London Bible Society." That is a triumph worth recording. The forbidden book in Rome! A singular fact in connection with the establishment of the depot is that it faces, on the opposite side of the Tiber, the Vatican, from the windows of which, and without glasses, the "old gentleman" may read the sign to his infallible heart's dissatisfaction.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE
FAITH OF ST. PAUL
NEITHER
SADDUCEEAN
NOR PHARISAIC,
BUT
HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.
What did the Pharisees believe?
What did the Sadducees teach?
The pure theology—the ancient faith.
The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.
The true doctrine of a future life set forth!
Patriarchs expected it.
Prophets looked for it.
Jesus Christ demonstrated it.
Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.
Dead men are not alive.
Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?
What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.
Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.
Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Communications.

Indiana Conference.

WHAT IS NECESSARY.

First: In order to a more general acquaintance and understanding with each other, to the end that we may by consultation and deliberation have concert of action among us, it is necessary that we have a Conference.

Second: The above premise being true, it is necessary that all our ministers, and as many other brethren and sisters as possibly can, should be in attendance; and to this end let the churches help such as need help, that there be no failure.

Third: It is necessary that every church in the State, however small, be represented at this Conference. Let the elder, clerk or pastor prepare a letter and send it by some one who will represent them, or by mail to C. H. Cass, Colfax, Clinton Co., Ind., stating (1) their general condition; (2) the number of additions, if any, the past year; (3) dismissals by death, removal or excommunication; (4) present number; (5) how often you have preaching, and by whom; and, finally, inasmuch as all those general meetings are attended with some unavoidable expense, each church should collect and send a contribution to help defray the same, that the few brethren where the conference is held be not over burdened.

Come up brethren in the help of the Lord and let us show our faith by our works. E. C. Andrus.

"My Soul in Hell." (Ps. 16: 10.)

"Thou wilt not abandon my life to the grave."—Kennicot.

"Thou wilt not leave my life in the grave."—Pye Smith.

"Thou wilt not leave [Italics his own] my dead body in the grave." See the use of (nephesh) in Lev. 21: 1 etc.; and from the ceaseless rapacity of the grave, it suitably bears the name sheol here used, derived from the root, signifying to demand, beg, or crave. This reading is strengthed by what follows, 'nor wilt thou suffer etc. corruption,' a word which expresses the state of "putrefaction in a dead body."—Cobbin, vide Parkhurst.

It seems best to interpret it of the grave, for the word nephesh is rendered 'dead body' Num. 9: 6, 10; 19: 11, 13."—Gill.

"The life of the Messiah should not continue under the power of death."—Clarke.

"IN HELL." (Acts 2: 27.)

"Thou wilt not leave my life in the grave."—Beza Whitby.

Guyse says: "If, as some critics contend, the words psyche and hades were here to be rendered 'life and the grave' the beauty of the antithesis between Christ's soul and flesh, or body, would be lost, and, to me, it is scarce good sense to say 'Thou wilt not leave my life in the grave.' The objection is, however, groundless, if we read it, 'Thou wilt not leave my dead body in the grave.' [See Parkhurst on psyche 4 and hades 1.] There is then a forcible antithesis between the body and the grave; and the beauty of the verse is increased by the addition of another between thine Holy One and corruption; while by the repetition of the first member of the sentence in another form, the whole receives the spirit and force of those parallels so commonly found in scripture by repetition."—Cobbin, Condensed Commentary. Editor of Domestic Bible.

A. A.

An Idea Suggested by the Discussion.

Br. B. quotes "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good old age" (Gen. 15: 15), and says: "This does not mean mere burial; for going to his fathers and burial are mentioned as distinct events; and, also, Abraham never went to his fathers in the grave." He says, that Abraham and other patriarchs going to their fathers, refers to their spirits going to the spirits of their fathers in sheol, or the abode of spirits. Furthermore, he defined the spirit in man, to be the rational, thinking, conscious, moral, responsible part of man, which departs from the body in death, returns to God, goes to the fathers, and is with Christ as a rational, thinking, conscious entity; thus confining the power of thought and reason exclusively to the spirit, whether in the body or out of it.

He has already sent the spirit of Abraham to the spirits of his fathers in sheol, conscious, rational entities full of wisdom and knowledge! Now the wise man declared (Eccl. 9: 10), that "there is no work, nor device, nor wisdom, nor knowledge in the grave [sheol] whither thou goest;" and as the record thus debars all wisdom knowledge and consciousness from sheol, none should take offense if we differ from them on this point.

Again we read (Josh. 24: 2) that Abraham's fathers served other gods, and were, consequently, idolaters. Having stoutly affirmed that Abraham's spirit went to the spirits of his fathers, where all are conscious, thinking entities with Christ, it now turns out that these fathers were idolaters! Can any one mean to teach that men can reject the God of the Bible, worship idols, and at last when this mortal coil is shuffled off, find their spirits in company with the spirits of righteous men, and Christ, before the throne of God? Can they thus intentionally give aid and comfort to our Universalist friends? This is the unavoidable result of his reasoning, proved by the word of God.

I will now test his assumption, that the spirit is the thinking part of man, and retains all its powers in a conscious state after the death of the body. The Hebrew word ruach, translated spirit in Eccl. 12: 7, is found in Ps. 146: 4, and rendered breath. "His breath, or ruach goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." On this point our brother's logic sums up thus: The ruach or spirit in man is the rational, thinking, conscious, moral, responsible part of man, and when man's ruach, breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts (Br. B.'s thinking, conscious, moral, rational, responsible part of man) perish!

We cannot believe he intended this, nevertheless he has so constructed his theory, that the Psalmist leads him directly into the fearful doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead, and destroys his thoughts and all consciousness, with a single passage of scripture! The expression, "In that very day his thoughts perish," is a swift witness against him and entirely evaporates his theory. It is a shifty arrangement, now supporting universal salvation, and then plunging into the theory of utter unconciousness in death.

The same David who with sling and pebble, slew the iron-clad Philistine, and with the giant's own sword decapitated that bold defier of Israel; now as Br. Braden comes to the front to defend modern theology, this skillful scriptural warrior, with a single sweep of inspiration slaughters his theory with his own weapon, precisely as he cut off Goliath's head with his. And so our brother's never dying spirit, seat and source, fountain and foundation of all thought in man, is killed by a single stroke and left dead on the field of battle.

We have taken his thinking, rational entity, allowed all he asked for it, and followed it until the Scriptures pronounce it perished, left in sheol as he himself affirms, and where the record declares there is no wisdom, knowledge, or thought whatever. Henceforth we trust it will be perceived that a living, organized, material being alone can think; and when dead it is unconscious and knows not anything (Eccl. 9: 5); and before consciousness can return, must be taken out of sheol where no knowledge is, which brings us to the resurrection, without which the apostle asserts, "they that are fallen asleep are perished." (1. Cor. 15: 18.)

The more popular theory removes all distinction between idolatry and a belief in God and his Son Jesus Christ, and insures the salvation of all men. The arrangement would be agreeably pleasing, if scripturally true, but as it receives no sanction from Holy Writ, we withold our endorsement and in the language of the apostle exclaim, "What advantageth it me if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die. (1 Cor. 15: 32.)

O. D. Woodruff.

Church Festivals.

It is right or else it is wrong for churches to have festivals. There is no middle ground in this question. The evidence is either for or against. Many sincere followers of Christ are doubting and wondering in this matter. On the one hand they see great evils connected with the practice. And on the other they find many that the church calls good, giving undivided support to it. In such a perplexity as this there is no relief only in the sure word of God.

The seemingly plausible excuse that is submitted by the advocates of this custom viz: "that the church needs money, and the festival is the surest way of getting it," is, when closely scrutinized no excuse at all. "Shall we do evil that good may come?" A minister once thanked the Lord in view of an approaching festival, that the church was going to have another chance to get some of the devil's money! I think the minister hit the nail on the head. It is my candid opinion that money raised at these festivals is the devil's money. Is it necessary for the saints to borrow (or steal as the case may be) money from the devil in order to support the Lord's cause? It would seem so, from this minister's prayer. Shame on people who urge so flimsy an excuse for so great an evil. If the Lord's cause need money; go to the Lord for it, and not to the devil. The Lord is fully able to sustain his own cause without any help from the other party.

"In the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking." (Mat. 24: 38.) Does this refer to ordinary "eating and drinking," which is necessary to sustain life? I think not. Men have always been eaters and drinkers in the ordinary sense. The eating of food for the satisfaction of hunger and the slacking of thirst by drinking "pure cold water" has always been necessary for the sustenance of human life. This "eating and drinking" must therefore refer to something entirely different from the ordinary consumption of food

To what can it refer but to feasting? The human appetite when unrestrained, naturally craves dainties even though they be unwholesome. Let an "ice cream supper" be announced under any circumstances and the people desire to be there to enjoy it." But let the church announce an "ice cream supper for the Lord" and the people will go with a double motive: (1) They like the "ice cream," and (2) its novel to think its the "Lord's ice cream." This is found to be a very effectual way to get out old rusty church members that seldom go to prayer meeting or preaching more than twice per annum, and when they do go, sleep through the entire service. They are sure to be out to the festival, and as wide awake as any. The trouble is men's religion is getting out of their hearts into their stomachs. Paul gives a pretty broad hint in this direction when he speaks of a class "whose God is their belly." This is the way it was in the days of Noah; and as it was in his day, so it is to be in days of the coming of the Son of man. And it is fulfilled right in our midst. The church has left the prayer meeting and gone to "eating and drinking." Thus we have another sign of Jesus soon coming.

"The people sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play." (1 Cor. 10: 7.) Moses left the Hebrews and went up into Mt. Sinai. He tarried long in the mountain. The people became impatient. They complained to Aaron of Moses' long absence, and demanded at his hand a god that they might worship. A golden calf is manufactured and the people are invited to worship it as their god. And it is not long after this until it becomes necessary to have a church festival, and the record states that they "sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play." This case is true to history. Not until a church apostatizes does it run off after the god of this world and go to holding fairs and festivals to raise money, professedly for the Lord, but really to adorn and furnish their temples for their own convenience and comfort. What would John Wesley and the Methodists of his day have thought of a "grab-bag," or "religious lottery," or "an ice cream supper in the Lord's house," or selling a "paste board-sweet cake," worth probably five cents, for the neat sum of $65, to buy an easy sofa for the pulpit and a beautiful, velvet, cushioned stool for the preacher to kneel his broadcloth upon while he makes an earnest prayer for the salva- of the audience? How would such things have been received by the Methodists in their early days of humility, holiness and piety? Not a layman or minister in the denomination but what would have spurned such things from their midst as unholy and degrading. How is it to-day? Let the observing answer. They sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play. This is usually the order of exercises at all church fairs, etc. The first thing is to eat and drink. The scene then changes, and a promiscuous frolic ensues.

"Jesus went up to Jerusalem and found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting: and when he made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep and oxen; and poured out the changer's money, and overthrew the tables; and said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house a house of merchandise." (John 2: 14–16.) This shows how the blessed Master regarded church festivals. Indeed the above example is a very tame one compared with many that we have to-day. The selling of oxen and sheep in the temple was a very mild offence, compared with many of the gambling, deceptive and dishonest tricks that are practised under the cloak of religion in the church festivals of this century. No doubt Christ would dismiss every one of them if he were here personally. But he is here only by his Spirit. and the driving is the other way. Instead of his driving them out of the temple, they have driven him out of the church.

C. C. Marston.

The Law and the Gospel.

In order to properly understand the true relation between the Law and the Gospel it will be necessary to examine their origin. The germ of the law existed at creation. The penalty threatened in case of disobedience was death, which was to be inflicted in the day of transgression. Adam violated that law and hence incurred its penalty. But God entered Eden the same day that Adam sinned, and promised Christ, who was to suffer the penalty in the stead of Adam. His death was guaranteed to meet the demands of the violated law and hence Christ is called "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." (Rev. 13: 8.) He was slain in the mind of him who calleth those things that be not, as though they were (Rom. 4: 17), because of their certainty.

The whole human race was in Adam at the time of his trangression, and hence all fell under the condemnation of the law; and had Adam died the day in which he sinned, the whole human family would have been blotted out with him. But Christ met the demands of the violated law and hence a new term of probation was secured.

But at this time man is not placed under the law but under the gospel; and the penalty threatened in case of disobedience is death—"the second death" or "everlasting destruction." (Thes. 1: 9, 10.) Peter asks the important question—"What shall be the end of those who obey not the gospel of God?" (1 Pet. 4: 17.) and Paul replies, "Their end is destruction." (Phil. 3: 19.)

As the gospel requires obedience it is in itself a law, and is designated the "law of the Lord" (Ps. 19: 7; 37: 30), "the law of faith" (Rom. 3: 27), "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:2), "the royal law, according to the scriptures" (Jas. 2: 8), "the law of liberty" (v. 12), and also "the commandments" and "law of Christ."

It is called "the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus" in Rev. 14: 12, being both perceptive and doctrinal. It is also termed the "new covenant" or "testament" (Heb. 8 :), "the ministration of the Spirit, (2 Cor. 3: 8), and "the hearing of faith." (Gal. 3: 5–8.)

It may be asked why Adam and his posterity become victims of death if the penalty was met in the death of Christ. The answer is this. The law aroused or developed the motions of sin or passion in Adam (Rom. 7: 5). and now lest he should eat of the tree of life and live forever in this sinful state, thus immortalizing those passions, God excluded him from the garden of Eden. Death resulted as an inevitable consequence; hence temporal death is a consequence, not a penalty. As Christ, who has purchased us from the dominion of the law, has the right to also redeem us from the consequences of its transgression, and as he has promised a resurrection of the dead, "both of the just and the unjust," the whole human family will "live again in the resurrection at the last day." Therefore as "by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead, for as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 21, 22). And those who have rendered obedience to the gospel shall, "through the blood of the everlasting covenant," receive the gift of eternal life.

The atonement of Christ is twofold: the first branch of the atonement is universal in its application, extending to the whole human race; the second is limited to believers in Christ and is intended to avert the penalty of the new covenant. Both branches are illustrated in the ordinance of the Lord's supper. The first branch is represented by the broken bread which is illustrative of the body or flesh of Christ, which he gave "for the life of the world." (John 6: 51.) The second branch is illustrated by the wine, which represents the blood of Christ, "shed for many for the remission of sins." (Mat. 26: 28.) The law was rescinded through the death of Christ. Paul forever settled one point, namely, that "the law holds dominion over a man no longer than he lives." (Rom. 7: 1–4.) Hence when Christ's death was guaranteed in the stead of man's, it was the same in the eye of the law as if man were actually dead. And thus the law ceased to hold dominion over the human race. This is the sense of Paul's language when he says—"If one died for all, then were all dead." (2 Cor. 5: 14.) Although we are not literally dead yet we are to reckon ourselves as such, because of the death of Christ for us. This idea is unmistakably confirmed in the teachings of Paul. He says: "In that he [Christ] died, he died unto sin once," and adds: "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin. (Rom. 6: 10, 11.)

In Rom. ch. 7 Paul furnishes us with a demonstration of our deliverance from the dominion of the law. In the first three verses he shows conclusively the law has dominion over a man no "longer than he liveth." In v. 4 he adds: "Ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another." In v. 6 he affirms: "But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held." The Diaglott reads, "released from the law."

And now, having been released from the law, shall we seek again its bondage? For my part I choose to heed the apostle's advice, and "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made me free, and be not again entangled in the yoke of bondage." (Gal. 5: 1.)

Although the law was repealed in the day of transgression, it was afterwards reinforced upon the Jewish people, not as a rule of righteousness, but as a national code or statute. The Jews mistook it for a rule of righteousness, not knowing that it had been repealed, as such, through Christ. Their minds were blinded, so that they could not see "to the end of that which is abolished." (2 Cor. 3: 13–17.) Hence Paul says: "Israel, which followed after the law of righteousness hath not attained to the law of righteousness. Wherefore? because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the deeds of the law. For they stumbled at the stumbling stone [Christ.]" (Rom. 9: 31, 33.) "For they, being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." (Rom. 10: 3, 4.)

That obedience to the law is not the means of righteousness is clearly decided in the foregoing passages; and Paul settles this invulnerable fact beyond the reach of all cavil when he says, that "the righteousness of God" is "without the law." (Rom. 3: 21.) Saturday-Sabbath keepers and law-teachers urge in opposition to these claims that the Savior said he "had not come to destroy the law." Indeed. But the Savior had no reference to its abrogation as a rule of righteousness, an act which had been accomplished more than four thousand years before. He simply spoke with reference to it as a national code or statute, as such he had not come to destroy it; but on the contrary he told the Jews that if they violated it, they would "be called the least in the kingdom of heaven"—a fact which is true of all who violate their national laws. Gentile Christians can neither break or keep the national law of the Jews, unless they become connected with that nation by means of circumcision: and then they virtually cease to be Gentiles, and become "debtors to do the whole law." (Gal. 5: 3.) As we are not under the law we cannot transgress it: for "where no law is there is no transgression." (Rom. 4: 15.) We "are not under the law but under grace." (ch. 6: 14.) Therefore the law does not speak to us at all; for "what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law." (ch. 3: 19.) Although the law is not a rule of righteousness, yet those who have resorted unto it as such, will be condemned by it. (Rom. 2: 12), but none others.

Sabbatarians contend that Rom. 3: 19, 20 proves that the law condemns the whole world. God's design is that "no flesh should glory in his sight," that the whole word should become guilty before God. And, to carry out this design, (all having violated the gospel,) he also designs that "by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in his sight." Paul's language is unmistakable. He says: "Therefore by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in his sight." (v. 2.) "Therefore," for that reason. For what reason? For the reason just assigned in the preceeding verse, "That every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God."

Paul's question to the Romans—"Do we make void the law through faith?" is often cited in opposition to the abrogation of the law. But Paul certainly had no reference to its repealment as a rule of righteousness. It was at that time merely a national code or statute; and instead of its being made void as such, it was rather enforced upon the Jewish nation by the gospel, as the gospel teaches obedience to whatever law we are under, if it be in harmony with justice and right. (Rom. 13: 1–7.) C. M. KEACH.

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

AT HOME.

MONDAY July 8. Among our visitors to-day was Eld. C. C. Marston, of Amboy, Ill. He is well and strong for work, and is one of our most earnest workers, and, withal, successful. He brings a good report of his field of labor, and the cause generally. He says there is a deep interest felt among our brethren in the removal of the office to Chicago, and many good wishes for the prosperity of the Western interest.

I spent the night with Dr. Mathewson, at Union Mills, Ind. He is now the President of the Western Association, and being a man of integrity, and excellent business qualifications, he will be able to render important help in our great work West. Though but a few years from the East, he is in all his feelings an out an out Western man, and in full sympathy with the Adventist work and workers here. They are building a parsonage near the chapel, at the Mills. He is beloved, and is prospering in his work.

TUESDAY, July 9. Spent the evening in Buchanan, Mich., and came by the Express to Chicago, at 2 a. m., and took breakfast at the office, with William and Br. D. S. Clark, just from Iowa. We had a frugal and healthful meal at our desk.

Br. Clark was one of the first men who gave me his hand when I came West nearly ten years since, and he has ever been true. He brings a good report from Iowa, where he has been laboring of late. He likes the idea of our removal, and cheers us with his full sympathy.

We spent the day at Norwood Park. He, in looking about the premises, and I in the library taxing my brains for the advancement of the truth and the good cause.

THURSDAY, July 11. Dined with Dr. Spaulding in Aurora, Ill. I find the Doctor well, and true to the cause. There are a few here that hold fast the faithful word.

At 7 p. m. stopped with Eld. N. W. Spencer, at Waterman Station, Ill. He came to this town (Clinton) from Homer, N. Y. twenty-one years ago, and settled in what was then a new prairie country, with few inhabitants. Now, it is well settled, and a rail road passes through his farm. Land was then worth one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and now it is worth fifty dollars. He is very comfortably and pleasantly situated. He works with his own hands and has provided for his own, and preached all his life free, besides giving to others. Paul boasted of this. "These hands," said he "have provided for my wants." And yet, our observation proves that people that give nothing, as a general thing amount to nothing. They are merely negative and generally die out when the free preaching ceases. Those that pay the laborer, are themselves sustained, they have life and enterprise and power, and fruit withal. The truth as God gives it is, "They that water, shall be watered."

FRIDAY, July 12. At 4 a. m. Br. Spencer got up the colts, when we rode fifteen miles and took breakfast with Br. L. H. Davis, in Paw Paw. We had a warm welcome, and enjoyed the call. Br. D. is one of the prominent farmers of Illinois. His duties confine him somewhat, but still he finds time to go out and preach the word in destitute neighborhoods of which there are many. How much need we have of more laborers in the great harvest field. Everywhere the cry comes up for help, help. "Come over and help us."

At 10 a. m. Br. Davis took Br. Spencer, father Davis and myself five miles, to Earl. Here I called on Br. Burlingame, and family, with other dear friends. They are trying to live to God. Br. Davis showed me a building he thought to buy for a chapel. The cause here will not die.

At 11 a. m. took the cars West. I met Br. Clark on his way home to Amboy. We parted at Mendota, and I came to New Rutland, and dined with Br. Wm. Baker, a true friend of the Western cause; proved so by his words and work. Enjoyed pleasant calls also, on Eld. Lothrop, and Wm. McCullock. Br. L. is laboring with the the church here while Br. McCullock occupies the missionary field mostly. The church have passed through a scene of trial, but they have not been destroyed. The Lord still bless and prosper them.

I spoke to the people in the evening on the "bright prospects of the future." We had a good gathering. At the close bidding them adieu and took the cars for Urbana to visit my son Arthur.

On the way from Urbana I fell in with Dea. Hackley, of the Disciple church in Auburn, Ill. He is a genial, liberal soul. He took me to Br. Whitmer's, who is a wealthy and influential member of the Disciple church. I was cordially received and had a free conversation on the nature of the soul, and the resurrection. Mrs. W. said if there was no resurrection she did not see how there could be any future life.

At 6 p. m. took supper with Eld. Calkins, in Auburn, Ill. I found him sick, and never more glad to see me. He has a grove meeting appointed for to-morrow, and is not able to preach.

I have been almost suffocated to-day with heat and dust. But I am greatly refreshed in the quiet and happy home of Br. C. Thank God for homes and friends.

From Br. and Sr. T. Boylan, Osborne Co., Kas.

We have been readers of THE TIMES for a number of years by the kindness of others, for we were very poor in this world's goods, though rich in faith. Now we are isolated from all kindred and friends in Christ, and we cannot get along without the paper. We would be truly glad, too, of some efficient minister here in this new field. May the Lord turn some one's steps this way. Pray for us here in this lonely region, and may God bless the efforts that are being put forth for the sake of perishing humanity, is our prayer.

From A. J. Marsh.

C.'s article concerning the discussion, contains the sentiment of my mind exactly. As he says, "Nine out of ten men of intelligence, who have been brought to see the truth by one clear view, only require to read orthodox reasonings from that time, to build up in the perfect faith." It makes me think of my own experience. When I came into the truth of the non-immortality of man, I was in connection with the M. E. church, and my minister loaned me a work on the immortality of the soul, to read, and also about that time, preached two sermons upon the subject, all of which helped to satisfy me of the incorrectness of their views, and establish me in the truth.

From Br. J. R. S. Mowrey.

Every time I see THE TIMES I think of loved and tried friends that are engaged in its publication; for I was with you so long, that the thoughts of the office and its inmates are like the thoughts of home, where long cherished friends and brethren would gladly meet and greet each other. Though I do not expect to see them again this side of the promised and purchased possession, it cheers my heart to hear from you. I am still a bearer of the cross for Jesus; have still on the harness and in my weakness and unworthiness am trying to convince the gainsayer that Jesus is coming. The Lord sustains me in every trial. Praise his holy name! I feel that I shall come off conqueror by and by, with those that come out of much tribulation and have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb.

I have, by the help of the Lord, planted four churches since Conference. Five members at West Fork. Two of whom were M. E. class leaders. One member at Spring Creek, and one on Elk River. Another is organized and prospering at Fall's Creek, on Elk River, organized by Brn. Whitney and Hammack.

From C. C. Marston, Amboy, July 15.

We are still alive and contending for the "blessed hope" in Amboy. We have many things to contend against. Our ministry here is much as Lot's was in Sodom—the popular tide is bitterly opposed to the truth. And every possible effort is made by the so-called Orthodox to keep the people away from the light. If there is any attracting performance to be had, such as a Festival, or a Concert, or the like, it must always be on the day that I preach here, and thus some that would come under ordinary circumstances are kept away. And if there is any "union street preaching" where all the "pastors" are to participate, that must be on the sabbath when I am not here. But withal there are some that will come and hear the truth, and we are slowly gaining ground, for the truth is mighty and will prevail.

It is amusing to see how men will resort to extreme measures and even sometimes make themselves ridiculous in opposing the truth. After my debate at Foreston with presiding Elder Hurless of the U.B. church, the U. B. preacher here began to circulate the report that I was entirely defeated in the debate, so much so that I did not use up all of my time, &c. (of course he dare not talk thus at Foreston where the facts were known, but here, where I live and preach, he could raise a prejudice against the truth by getting people to believe his report.) I called him to an account for his strange proceeding and demanded that he or some of his brethren meet me in debate here, now, that he had been so free in circulating the report he had. He remonstrated and acknowledged he was not prepared to meet the issue. Finally, however, he consented to correspond with a man who would, and promised to apprise me of the result in ten days or two weeks. It has now been nearly three months and nothing has been heard from the debater. Indeed I've hardly had a chance to speak to this brother since—he is so sly. What has become of his promise? But none of these things move us—our trust is in the Lord and by his glorious grace we are going forward. Yesterday we had a good day. One soul was added to the church at night, after which we partook of the Lord's supper. Pray for us.

Says the Baptist Union:

Words should be seasoned. Some season with pepper, or vinegar or wormwood. Paul says, season with salt. Salt cools passion, prevents severity, imparts sweetness and self-control.

Words ferment like yeast, and explode like naptha. Salt prevents this.

Some ministers are badly seasoned.

Their words are hasty, sometimes bitter, often foolish. Jesus spoke gracious words, so should his ministers.

Jesus opened not his mouth when provoked, neither should his ministers.

Jesus is an example for all his saints.

When we speak as he spoke, and are silent as he was silent, we give evidence of grace and the seasoning of salt.

The Spirit of Christ will impart these blessings.

Our Book and Tract Column

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post-paid.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 3 for 10 cents.

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. every one should have a copy.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 3 for 10 cents. It silences objections.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—16 pp. Restitution—36 pp.
Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,000 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immortalism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation: a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 484 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 40 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, 25, paper, 10c. Postage, 5c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By F. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 40c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 6c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $3; leather $3 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Gould. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 20c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. [illegible]

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c. post-paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, July 30, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]
TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope: but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication, ☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

Besides the Melodeon referred to in the Advertisement, another of the $150 style has been placed in our hands for sale for the benefit of the office. It can be had at a bargain if taken soon.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 15c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

We would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $3 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 36 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

A. B. CUSHING. Could not possibly come at present.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

E H Durand
I C Wellcome
P B Livingston
A D Williamson
C Kickoff
W M Rhoads
A B Cushing
M Briggs
J H Paton
Z T Sullivan
J Powell
J S Lawver
W C Hall
L W Paul
M M Norton
W I Mann
C C Marston
F G Williams
E Green
W West
L Raimer
F C Ba' .r
F A Childs
A M Johnson
Dr I Douglass
J S Hastings
T J Giddings
W K Chandler
A Walter
P S Buck
J G Junk
C C Hiscock
M Lewis
H G McCulloch
E C Andrus
H D Hammond
L Remier
A Millett
S A Semms
A J Beach
C C Marston
L Houriet
F Johnson
R S Johnson
S Baskins
U McMahan
A E Babcock
W Good
J Ross
A W Tucker
S Ross
P Hitchcock
J A Holton
L W Wood
J Caldwell
J L Warman
T Slate
S F Gould
J Lowry
W Breech
H P Shattuck
W E Storms
S Rosebaugh
S C Wellcome
J W Thomason
J W Alston
C L Clapp
J Carr
A J Mears
A H Drain
L Record
E E Parker
C M Shepard
L J Rich
W Magill
A C Manning
A B Fabrick
J W Osborn

Books and Tracts by Mail.

G Dyson
O H Hammond
G Caldwell
P Nokes (3)
S K Gibson
M K Prescott
M M Norton (3)
R Spotswood
E Phelps
M A Tibbets
W C Lester
F C Marsh
L B Conner
A Foster
T B Rice jr
D W Fuller
W Morphy
A Brown
A Bemis
S F Allison
A S Fuller
P W Hough
E W Huson
J O Emmerson

Express.

E E Bradway
J Smith
C C Marston

Tract Fund.

A. Lothrop, 25. E. Green 10c J. S. Hastings 3,50.

Notices, Etc.

Wisconsin.

The first Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held about the first of September. Any of the brethren wishing to secure the meeting for the locality in which they live, will communicate with me (either personally or by letter), at Magnolia, Rock Co. Wis.

Please let me know in time to give notice of the place of meeting in THE TIMES. GEORGE HOWARD.

Kansas Tent.

Dear Brethren and friends who have subscribed for the 'Tent,' our Subscription Fund is nearly raised. We wish to get the Tent at work now in a very short time; so let all who have subscribed be preparing themselves for prompt response. And those who purpose helping do so at once, so there need be no delay. The Lord is blessing and will bless those that trust and obey him.

Send all money by mail to Warder Dunbar, Baro, Cherokee Co. Kan. Postal Orders, to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.

2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.

3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve,

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Coral, 6 p. m., August 11. Communion after service. E. H. BURINGTON.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCulloch, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

The place of meeting will be Saratoga, Union Co. seven miles east of Anna Station.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCullock will bring the Mission Tent with him. Place of meeting will be given next week: probably between Mt. Joy and Anna churches.

J. S. Lawver, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Hennepin, Putnam Co. Special meeting commencing Tuesday eve. July 30, to continue over the Sabbath, and through the following week, if the interest demands. The brethren and sisters scattered through the region about are earnestly requested to come to this meeting and lend a helping hand. C. C. MARSTON.

Rochelle, Aug. 12. Subject: Signs of the Times. Forreston, Town Hall, Aug. 13 and 14. Subjects respectively: The soul, and spirit of man.

Elida, Aug. 15, in the S. H. Subject: The Influence of the Reformation of the 16th Century on moral and social ethics.

White Rock, Union chapel, 3 p. m., Aug. 18, Morn. and eve. in the Tent at Elida.

C. C. MARSTON.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring food and bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

Basket Meeting, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co. Aug. 18. Picnic Dinner, Preaching at 10½ a. m. and 1 p. m. All are invited.

P. S. W. DEYO.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Particulars hereafter.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Roffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

Cascade, eve. August 3 and over Sunday.

Manchester, August 11, as Br. Lewis may arrange.

Clear Lake, 7½ p. m. August 16. Will Brn. at Clear Lake provide a tent pole? ISAAC ADRIAN.

County Corner, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Allerson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HIME, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Assyria, Barry Co., a grove meeting commencing Aug. 9 and continuing over Lord's day. A church will be organized. I expect to be present with Br. Holler. A. E. BABCOCK.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-25. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

The Southern Michigan camp-meeting will be held on James Paul's farm in the town of California, Branch co., Aug. 20-25. We hope to have Eld. J. V. Himes to preach the word; also that Br. W. C. Hicks will be on the ground with "Pioneer" Tent. Every effort will be put forth to make this meeting a success.

We hope to see Brethren from all parts of the southern district on the ground with tents, ready for action at the commencement of the meeting.

The quarterly conference will convene at that time and place.

This will be a large meeting and one of unusual interest. Let all who love the appearing of Jesus prepare for a glorious waiting upon the Lord.

Those coming by R. R. from the North will stop at Fremont Station, where they will find a team waiting to convey them to the camp ground. Those coming on the M. C. R. R. will change cars at Jackson. Take the Ft. Wayne Road to Fremont. Those on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. will change cars at Jonesville for Fremont.

Come brethren, in the name of the Lord; and come with prayerful hearts that you may see and feel a glorious revival of the work of grace among us.

Hay and grain for teams will be provided on the ground at reasonable rates.

For the Brn. J. R. PRESTON.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District will be held at the Tyndall S. H. in Dayton, Newaygo Co., commencing Friday, Aug. 16, and holding over Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance. All that come will be provided for.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Mt. Clemens, in the Court House, at 11 o'clock a. m. Aug. 11-25. D. W. FULLER.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Miflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andru's big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievious wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. C. H. CASE, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmon's S. H. eve. Aug. 3, and over Sunday. S. C. WELCOME.

NEW YORK.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-8 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

A boarding tent will be on the ground, furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, &c., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 85c. a day, for those who do not. Let all come well prepared with overcoats, overshoes, shawls, coverlets, straw ticks, &c., &c. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents.

Let all desiring tents correspond immediately (enclosing stamp for an answer) with Br. D. T. Cooper, 78 Mt. Hope Ave., Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season. WM. E. BROWN, SAM'L. H. WITHINGTON, PERRY M. GRINNELL, Committee.

The next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held, the Lord willing, in the State Tent on the Fairport Campground during the coming Campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at 9 a. m., Wednesday Aug. 14, when Br. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which the meetings will be held at such hours as will least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected and will be submitted for districting the Conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. MILTON R. MILLS, Pres't.

WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting. Providence permitting, the second annual Campmeeting of the American Life and Advent Union will be held in Springfield, in Carew's Grove, commencing Aug. 6, and to continue to Aug. 15. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come, with board and lodging on the ground. Board 80c. per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R. will be reduced the same as last year, from July 25 to Aug. 27, inclusive.

We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes.

THOS. R. WEAVER, Sec'y.

Purgatory—Its practical Uses.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

From my little cottage in sight of the mountains, whose distant canons, ravines, and inaccessible ramparts look like so many deep but softly lying shadows, I pen you a brief paper upon the few events that happen in this almost wilderness place. I have just come from the hospital, where some of the survivors of the last Indian raid, are suffering. You have read about it, of course, before this.

My principal object in writing at present is to speak of that brave young, Mexican general, or Brigadier General Pedro A. Valdes. We have just been favored with a visit from him.

Valdez is only thirty years of age. He is an enthusiastic friend of Juarez, the popular and worthy president of the Mexican republic, and entered the army when a mere youth. He says that ever since his student-days, when he diligently studied the history of the United States, the thought of civil and religious liberty has filled his brain and inspired him with an ambition to do something to save his beloved Mexico from priestly arrogance, intolerance and despotism.

When Juarez became president of the Mexican Republic, he found that the bulk of the wealth of that country was in the hands of the pope's agents—the archbishop and his priests.

Purgatory was the decoy-duck that had brought so much game to the pockets of the clergy. "The eight millions of Mexican population," said Valdez, "rich and poor, high and low all, all with the exception of the holy priests, and the holy sisters of the various orders, were doomed to suffer the anguish and horrors of purgatory, unless a policy of insurance were obtained from the archbishop and his satellites. The rich poured thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands into the pope's treasury, to save themselves and their families from purgatory, the very thought of whose torments made their lives bitter, and pursued them even in their dreams."

"Did they take the matter so seriously as that?" I asked.

"Certainly they did; and when they drew near the dark valley of death, the priest in the last confession, while administering extreme unction, succeeded in securing the last doubloon, as he eloquently pictured the dreadful sufferings of the damned."

Nearly five hundred millions of the best and most productive real estate was thus secured to the clergy, under threats and denunciations, impoverishing the country, while the bishops and the priests lived luxuriantly on this vast income, probably without the least fear of torment, as by a special bull, the pope had exempted all his faithful Jesuits from misery hereafter.

"The Mexican government made trouble for itself many years ago," continued Valdez, "by passing a law exempting all property held by the priests from taxes, so that while these latter held the most valuable part of Mexico, the government could not raise enough revenue to meet its most economical expenses. Bishops and priests rode in their carriages, then drank of the choicest vintage, and lived on the fat of the land, while the poor soldiers, defenders of the property held by the priestly power, were witout pay, and at times in a state of actual starvation."

It was most interesting to listen to this young and brilliant officer, to hear his enthusiastic prophecies of the future of his beloved country.

It was not generally known, perhaps, that Juarez received the most of his education in the United States, Here the great principles of truth, liberty, and virtue took a deep hold upon his young heart. Washington is his model; he speaks of him with the greatest enthusiasm, as if he lived but yesterday. He also talked eloquently of the pilgrims, driven from Europe by the cruel, inquisitorial laws of the dark ages.

The young general says that when Juarez became president, he made an effort by levying a heavy tax on the priestly millions, to sustain the government. This caused a vigorous complaint to be sent to Rome. The pope was implored to have the president of Mexico duly cursed, and delivered over to torment for the great crime of taxing the five hundred millions which the people had so generously contributed to save themselves and their children from purgatory. The archbishop threatened the president and his ministers, who were heart and soul with their chief, with all the horrors of excommunication; but the more intelligent of the people came to his aid. The treasury was replenished, the army paid, and the government better provided for then for many years past.

The heavy tax on church property worked like a charm. The pope called upon his beloved Austria and France for help to chastise that infidel Juarez, who dared to put his unholy hand on his holy doubloons.

You know the result. Napoleon 111. responded, and sent over sixty thousand men. Austria sent her beloved Maximilian. Juarez, with the aid of such brave and patriotic bosom-friends as General Valdez, prayed and fought until the enemies of civil and religious liberty were defeated, and the government was established upon a good foundation.

As for poor Maximilian, as the pope blessed him, and promised him paradise, he is all right, it is to be hoped, but poor Nap's case is still doubtful; and though doubtless his fear of purgatory is all gone by this time, yet he is not happy, and not altogether hopeful of his future.—Cor. Ill. Chris. Weekly.

Advent Christian Times.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.--NO. 1. CHICAGO, AUGUST 6, 1872. WHOLE NO. 432.

Advent Christian Times.

The Promises to Abraham and Christ his Seed.

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of One, And to thy seed, WHICH IS CHRIST." (GAL. 3:16.)

The Bible is full of our theme. Our theme is full of Christ. The world is in error respecting it. The learned in the Churches are in doubt how to interpret these promises, or else in utter confusion. Our most distinguished professors of theology in the same seminaries are divided, two against three, the others halting; and our commentators and editors are divided, some holding with the Jews, and others holding off, with no very clear conceptions of what is the truth in relation to Abraham's promises and heirs.

Attempting to disperse the darkness covering our theme, I will examine:

1. These promises; what they be.
2. The heirs; who they be.
3. The time and place of the inheritance.

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ."

1. What were the promises made of God to Abraham and his seed?

Several promises were made to Abraham; but to Abraham and his seed two promises were specially made: (1) "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." (Gen. 18:15.) (2 Promise.) "In thee" (Gen. 12:3), "and in thy seed, shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 22:13.) These are the promises to Abraham and his seed forever.

Mark, all the covenant promises are in two parts, separate and far asunder, yet, for all practical purposes, one; like the two horizons of the firmament, the sensible and the rational. The sensible, or first part of the promise, is temporal; the second part is rational and eternal. The two are separate, as the two horizons of earth and heaven. The first we know by sense, the second by understanding. We see the temporal with our eyes, the eternal by faith; but only through the visible and temporal can we behold and understand the invisible, incomprehensible, and eternal things of the promises.

Abraham's promises have these two parts. The promise of the land to him and to his seed had regard, first, to the visible Canaan, and to his seed of the flesh. This is the temporal form and sensible horizon of the promise, to perish with the world. The second form has respect to the heavenly Canaan, and to Abraham's seed of faith, which is Christ and his seed. This is the rational, invisible, and eternal character of the promise. As regards this world, the promise is typical and perishable; and as regards the world to come, it is imperishable and eternal. The promised land, with Abraham and his seed of the flesh, is allegorical of the heavenly country with the glorified seed of faith, which is Christ, and the elect of God. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world," made to Abraham and his seed, "through the righteousness of faith," had respect to "a land that I will show thee" (Gen. 12:1.), which Abrahem saw by faith afar off, and sought during his pilgrimage. (Heb. 11:13, 14), but never set foot on, saith the Spirit by the first martyr, Stephen, though it was promised "to him for a possession, and to his seed after him," when as yet he had no child. (Acts 7:5.)

In like manner the promise to Abraham of a seed after him, in whom all nations of the earth shall be blessed, has two parts; first, a carnal race; and second, a race of promise in Christ. In the beginning the Lord said to him: "And I will make of thee a great nation." (Gen. 12:2.) This, with every other promise of God, is on the condition of reverent obedience on the part of the receiver. The first part regards a natural seed, as Ishmael; the other, a seed of promise, as Isaac; from both of whom have sprung a multitude of nations. We drop the seed of Ishmael, and in the seed of promise behold two parts: first, Isaac and his temporal seed; second, Christ and his seed eternal. Isaac and his seed are a visible and transitory race in this world. Christ and his seed are of the resurrection unto life eternal in the world to come.

To the natural seed of Isaac the promise of the land, earth, was made, but Esau, his first born, which is Edom, was rejected, and the inheritance fell to Jacob for an everlasting possession. Neither Abraham nor Isaac nor Jacob shall fail of the promise, although they have never yet possessed the land. To them the promise had two parts: the first, a transitory life in this Canaan, as strangers and pilgrims, without any possession of the land; the second part of the promise relates to eternal life in the heavenly world to come, with Jesus and the resurrection. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world" (Rom. 4:13), was not to Abraham or his seed of this dying world, but it was that he should be the heir of the eternal world; a promise alike to Abraham and to his seed, which is Christ and to Christ's seed, born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible (1 Pet. 1:23), and "accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead" (Luke 20:35), "when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory." (Matt. 19:28).

Such was the first promise made to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ; a promise of the land for an everlasting possession; a promise having two aspects; the first, worldly and temporal; the second, heavenly and eternal. In the temporal aspect the promise has been fulfilled to the fathers, and to their natural offspring, to whom, in its present state, the Canaan of this world is no longer worth having; but to the fathers, to Abraham, and his seed, which is Christ, the promise remains to be fulfilled. They have had no possession of the land at all, beyond their sojourn in it. No mortal can have any other possession of it. Yet the covenant promise cannot fail: they shall have the land, to whom it is promised, and for that promised everlasting possession, they return in the resurrection from the dead with all "the ransomed of the Lord, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." (Is. 35: 10.) Such was the first promise to Abraham and his seed, Christ, of the land, earth, forever.

The second promise to Abraham and his seed, Christ, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," is seven times repeated in the Scriptures, and it is partially fulfilling, and was fulfilled by Christ, in the form of a servant, preaching the Gospel of the coming kingdom of God, and dying the shameful death of a malefactor, and establishing his church in this world. But all who love the kingdom of God, and pray for its manifestation on earth, as it is in heaven, are looking forward to a fulfillment of this sevenfold promise, far beyond anything yet seen or heard of in this world. The promise has two aspects, one looking toward the nations of time, the which moves very slowly. For in this 19th century not one-fifth of our race bear the name, and a much less portion bear the character of the seed of promise, which is Christ. Therefore, in this, as in every other form of the promises, we look on the blessing in this world as a foretaste and an earnest of the full feast in the world to come, prepared for all people, when the Lord God will swallow up death in victory, and "will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord, we have waited for him; we will be glad, and rejoice in his salvation." (Is. 25: 8, 9.) These are the promises to Abraham, and his seed, which is Christ.

2. Having found what be the promises to Abraham and his seed, Christ, I inquire secondly after the heirs; who they be?

Of the visible Canaan, the natural seed of Abraham are the heirs; but these have no inheritance in the land of promise, any more than Abraham, or our Savior, Christ, had. The natural seed, like their brother, Ishmael, with the mother that bare him, are all turned out of possession into the wilderness, to return no more in this world. To Abraham and his seed, Christ, the promised inheritance is for an everlasting possession, which the natural seed cannot have, though they may be restored from their dispersions. For everlasting possessions are impossibilities in this perishable state and corruptible world, under doom of dissolution, with all things therein. Moreover, "the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed," of the flesh, but to his "seed, which is Christ." Dead to this world, without inheritance in it, they are in this world heirs, but owners of the inheritance in the next world. For wherever Abaaham and Christ shall receive their inheritance, their seed must inherit also. They have not had, but, according to the promise, they shall have the land, earth, for an everlasting possession; and the children of God being joint heirs with Christ shall inherit with them. The heirs of the great inheritance, therefore, "are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." They in this world bear the likeness of the natural Adam, and are heirs only; but in the world to come they shall bear the image of the heavenly man in everlasting possession of the inheritance. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him." (1 John 3:2.) He is glorified: the heirs of the promises will be glorified with him. He is "the first-born from the dead," the first fruits of them that slept." His co-heirs and younger brethren constitute the harvest in the resurrection, and these be the heirs of the promises to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ. As it is written: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." (1 Cor. 15:50.)

The heirs of the promises, therefore, made to Abraham and to his seed, are not a race of flesh and blood, whether Jews or Gentiles; they are of the same race with Abraham, our father of the faith in this world, and of the same family with Jesus Christ, our elder Brother, in the world to come; joint heirs of the promises with Jesus, who said: "For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." (Mat. 12:50.) Know ye, saith the Apostle, "that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham" (Gal. 3:7); and if children, then heirs, for "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." The meek and lowly followers of Christ among the Gentiles bear this high and holy relationship to Abraham and to Christ Jesus. For to the Gentile Corinthians it is written: "Wherefore, come ye out from among them, saith the Lord, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." (2 Cor. 6:17.)

Therefore the heirs of the promises to Abraham and his seed, Christ, are a seed of Abraham's faith in Jesus and the resurrection; an immortal and spiritual race, on which the second death hath no power. They are children of the first Adam, manifested to be the sons of God, after the likeness of the second Adam, "according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." (Rom. 1:4.) They are a race born, "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:13); a race "delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. 8:21); a race of this fallen creation which groaneth and travaileth in pain together with ourselves, which have the first fruits of the spirit, "waiting for the adoption, to wit: the redemption of our body" (Rom. 8:22–23); a race who, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, are living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ" (Tit. 1:12), who shall destroy death, and him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and his works (Heb. 2:14; 1 John 3:8), and shall take the kingdom of the new heavens and of the new earth, and shall possess the kingdom with his saints. "And "behold, the tabernacle of God shall be with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." (Rev. 21:3.) These are the ownere of the inheritance promised to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ.

The natural seed of Abraham are taking these promises for the hope of an inheritance in this miserable and desolate land of Canaan; even for the promise of the kingdom of this world to the natural born Jews. It is right for us to follow Abraham for the pattern of our faith, and the blessed Jesus for the pattern of our life. With them we will look not for this city in bondage with her children, but for Jerusalem which is above, and is the mother of us all. We will take up our cross daily, so long as the world stands, and follow Christ, in the hope of receiving a crown of life at his appearing, and his kingdom. His suffering and waiting people are therefore, with Abraham and with Christ, the heirs of the promises. (Heb. 11:39; 10:13–37.)

3. Having examined the two promises to Abraham and his seed, Christ, what they be; and the heirs of these promises, who they be; I come now, thirdly, to examine the time and place of the promised inheritance.

Were the inheritance in this world of time. the promises would utterly fail of being an everlasting possession, and the parties to the promises named in the holy covenant would utterly fail of it. Abraham lived and died a stranger in the land of promise, without any inheritance in it; and Christ dwelt a wandering life in the same land, not having where he might lay his head. And not only they, but we also, together with all them that have lived and died in the faith of the promises since Abraham, we altogether fail of our portion of the promised inheritance, if it belong to this world.

We walk by faith, and not by sight. We look for our promised inheritance, not in this land of the dying and the dead, but with Christ, the King of the Jews, in whom all nations shall be blessed, in the land of the living, crowned with eternal life. The mistake of the Jews is pardonable in men looking on divine revelation, as all do at first, with the natural eye, but when, in ripe years, permitted to see behind the Jewish letter the Christ of God, equally near to all, and more sensibly near to such as look up to him who cometh with clouds, and with whom "there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him" (Rom. 10:12), we are constrained to glorify God for a purer and clearer understanding of the promises, with which to comfort such as are of a humble but doubtful mind, and to confirm the hope of such as are looking "for the grace that is to be brought unto you, at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1:13.) For then is the time when the promises of Abraham and his seed, which is Christ, shall be fulfilled with everlasting possessions, even "at his appearing and his kingdom." (2 Tim. 4:1.)

The time being found when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God," it still remains to examine the place of the great inheritance. Some are saying: "Leave all that; never mind the place, whether in the empyrean or elsewhere, only let me have my por-

[CONTINUED ON PAGE 5.]

Poetry.

Strength for the Day.

BEFORE.

The morning breaks in clouds, the rain is falling,
Upon the pillow still I sigh for rest,
But yet I hear so many voices calling
To work by which my burdened soul is pressed,
That I can only pray
"Strength for the day."

'Tis not a prayer of faith, but weak repining,
For with the words there comes no hope, no light;
In other lives a morning sun is shining,
While mine is but a change from night to night;
So while I weep I pray
"Strength for the day."

For it is hard to work in constant shadow,
Climbing with tired feet an uphill road;
And so, while my weak heart dreads each to-morrow,
And once more lift up my heavy load,
Desponding still I pray
"Strength for the day."

AFTER.

Now looking back to the long hours ended,
I wonder why I feared them as they came;
Each brought the strength on which its task depended,
And so my prayer was answered just the same.
Now with new faith I pray
"Strength for each day."

For in the one just closed I've learned how truly
God's help is given equal to our need;
Sufficient for each hour it cometh newly,
If we but follow where his teachings lead,
Believing, when we pray
"Strength for the day."

He who has felt the load which we are bearing,
Who walked each step along the path we tread,
Is ever for his weary children caring,
And keeps the promise made us, when he said
He'd give us all the way
"Strength for our day."

Communications.

A Good Book.

What a treasure it is! I have come to regard my library as one of my choicest and most valuable friends. "Money invested in a good book is not spent in vain," used to be Daniel Webster's opinion. All things considered, it is my judgment that Good Tidings is the best work on Advent doctrine now extant. It embraces in a most desirable dress, a succinct and quite complete analysis of the general features of our faith. Every Adventist ought to have it for reference; and it is just the book to put into the hands of inquirers. Buy it and read it yourself, and then send it out as a missionary among your neighbors.

C. C. MARSTON.

The New Book.

I have just re-read the new work of Eld. L. C. Collins, just from the Advent Press at Chicago, and I am more impressed with its worth than before. It is really an important work. He has struck a new vein of thought, and lifted St. Paul and the primitive church out of the fog of Phariseeism, Sadduceeism, and Grecian Mythology. One can hardly read this work and ever again read the New Testament with Platonic prejudices, making Christ and Paul teach, or sanction the dogmas of heathenism concerning the future life, adopted by the Pharisees from the Egyptians and others. Once for all, this matter is cleared up, and there need be no more perplexity on this subject. Christ did not sanction the doctrines of the Pharisees, nor did Paul. They taught the Hebrew [illegible] of the mortality of man, and the urrection of the dead in order to a future life; and the residence of the saints in the new earth.

I heartily commend this little book of fifty-four pages to all Bible students. It is only a dime, for which we get a valuable Biblical treasure. Let the friends of truth and a pure speech, get read, and circulate it. J. V. HIMES.

Holiness.

The doctrine of "holiness" is one of the sweetest themes of inspiration. There is a loveliness and beauty in it that attracts our finest feelings. David, the sweet singer, seems to have entertained this opinion of the subject when he speaks of the "beauties of holiness." (Ps. 110: 3.) This is the exact statement of the case. There are beauties in holiness, and their number is legion. Not beauties of color that fix our sight and make us look with wonder and delight, but beauty of thought that wins the hearty attention of the purest minds.

Holiness is the exact opposite and the perfected culmination of that opposite of all that is uncomely and uninteresting in this sin-cursed world. Paul bears witness to this in the following statement: God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness. (1 Thes. 4: 7.) "Uncleanness" here means pollution or impurity. The same word occurs and this meaning is further illustrated in Rom. 1: 24; 6: 19. Holiness is the opposite of all of this, in the most ultra sense of the word opposite. It may therefore be said with propriety that in proportion as a man approaches this state of purity and unpolluteness, in that same proportion he approaches holiness.

Absolutely speaking, holiness belongs to God. All other beings, who are holy are so relatively. They do not possess it independently. They have received it as a gracious bestowment from the Supreme Being. The nearest approach to absolute holiness in finite circles is instanced in the case of the faithful angels. In the song of Moses we find these words: "Who is like thee, O Lord, among the mighty ones? Who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?" (Ex. 15: 11.) "There is none like the Lord." He is "glorious in holiness" as is no other being. After we have come the nearest to him in holiness it is possible, still we must acknowledge that he is above us and before us, glorious in holiness. The inscription on the golden plate attached to the High Priest's mitre, was: "Holiness to the Lord." (Ex. 28: 36.) This seems to further demonstrate that holiness primarily and absolutely belongs to Jehovah. The High Priest was God's typical representative in the world. He was a sort of temporary substitute for the great Mediator in the faith of whose coming and mission the fathers died, and by virtue of which they will be finally saved. This priest then pointed to God, the great and the holy One, and to Jesus through whose atonement man was to be brought up to this divine standard of holiness. It was therefore proper for the [illegible]est to wear such a badge as this.

Sanctification is not holiness. Some may be startled at this statement, but the word of the Lord shall decide.

There is much of obscurity and indefiniteness in the declarations of many on this subject. We need to be a little more rigid in our reasoning. In 2 Chron. 31: 18 we read; "They sanctified themselves in holiness." How ludicrous it would sound if this passage read, "they sanctified themselves in sanctification;" and if "holiness" and "sanctification" both mean the same thing, why not read it thus? It is evident that they do not mean the same thing. We would conclude two things from the simple reading of the passage: (1) That the persons were holy; and (2) That in that holy state they set themselves apart, or sanctified themselves to some particular work.

Holiness is a state, but sanctification is a work. We may sanctify ourselves, but we cannot holy ourselves. We may be instruments of our own holiness; i. e. we may perform certain things upon which God has conditioned our holiness. Holiness is that perfect state of purity into which God calls us by his grace. And that ye put on the new man, which after God is credited in righteousness and true holiness. (Eph. 4: 24.)

"We see by this that the sinner is changed from a state of unholiness to a state of holiness. In other words the new man is "created in true holiness." The Christian's life then begins in holiness. He is not to be converted and follow Christ awhile and then seek a higher life and find it in what some call perfect holiness or sanctification. No, no, this is not the plan. He is to be holy from the very start. His conversion leaves him holy. He is created in holiness.

Now after we are introduced into this condition of holiness we yield our "members servants to righteousness unto holiness." (Rom. 6: 19.) And we have our "fruit unto holiness and the end, everlasting life." (Rom. 6: 22.) We move right on in this blessed work. Being created in holiness, we are fully prepared to live in holiness. I have heard men talk about their wicked hearts after they had professed to be the Lord's. If this is the case, brethren, there's something wrong with the conversion. God never pardons the sinner and still leaves him with "a wicked heart." When our feet are placed on the sure Rock, and that new song put in our mouth, are we not in a condition of salvation at that moment? Would not Jesus save us if he should come and find us there? Certainly he would. But nothing impure or unholy shall enter the kingdom. Then we must conclude that a man is pure and holy when his sins are pardoned or the song of praise put into his mouth.

God does not make the Christian holy at any set period after he becomes a Christian, but simply gives him grace to continue in the holiness, in which he was created. 1 Tim. 2: 15 shows this to be the case. We are to continue in holiness. Paul says (Heb. 12: 14): "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." It is perfectly philosophical that we should not see the Lord without holiness; for the Lord is holy, and no impure or unholy element could permanently dwell in his presence. This holiness we are to "follow." It is to be a life work. It is not to be sought and found many years after our allegianc[illegible] Christ, but it is to be the great elemental principle of our Christian life—and we are to follow it.

Again we read: "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." (2 Cor. 7: 1.) Notice, the apostle advises us to perfect holiness, but does not intimate that holiness is to perfect us. Holiness never will perfect us. It is not the mission of holiness to make us perfect. The holiest man that ever lived was still imperfect. The mission of holiness is to put us in a position to be made perfect. Here is just the trouble. We must not expect to get into the resurrection state until after we are resurrected. This super-sinless state about which there is so much said of late under the garb of sanctification etc., amounts to nothing. Inseparably associated with mortality is imperfection; and until this mortal is changed and we become immortal, we shall be imperfect. When we are perfected we shall no longer need an Advocate. But Jesus will be our Advocate until the resurrection; we will therefore be imperfect until that takes place.

Progress is one of the great laws of Christianity. No man can stand still in religion. If he does not decide to advance, he will retrograde. There is no alternation—it is onward or backward. This general fact applies to holiness as full as to any other christian grace. We are expected to perfect holiness as much as to grow in knowledge. The idea of adaptation is in this. In order that we should live with angels, and God, and in the new earth, we must become adapted to such society. With this in view we are to perfect holiness in the fear of God and in due time we will be perfected and have given to us a place with the glorified in the "world to come."

In perfect harmony with all of this is Paul's statement in Heb. 12: 10: "That we might be partakers of his holiness." Although we are not in the perfected state of holiness that is the condition of the Supreme Being, and such holiness as his may not be expected of us in our mortality, yet we are to partake of his holiness. When we say one man partakes of the spirit of another, we do not mean that he has the same spirit, but that there is an approach in quality and quantity of his spirit to that of the other. So we partake of God's holiness. We are to become as nearly like God in holiness as it is possible for us with our present imperfections.

And now to close up this glorious drama, Paul says: "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men; even as we do toward you; to the end he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." (1 Thes. 3: 12, 13.) Jesus at his coming will take his Bride into the presence of his Father, and there before God her holiness will be established. This will be the ground upon which she may claim endless existence in the eternal age to come. Without this it would be impossible to live forever with the Lord.

I could not better close this article than by the following extract from Brown: "Holiness is the essence of happiness and the basis of true dignity. It will manifest itself by the propriety of our conversation, regularity of our temper, and uniformity of our lives. It is progressive in its operation, and absolutely essential to the enjoyment of God here and hereafter."

C. C. MARSTON.

A Sermon.

BY L. F. COLE, AT ONEIDA, ILL., JULY 4, 1872.

The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, and that he should not die in the pit, nor that his bread should fail. [Is. 51: 14.]

How sweet the memory of home and early associations. We love to call from memory's depths the old orchard, laden with such fruit as only childhood can know, the babbling brook, the green fields, rocky pasture and lowing herds, and all the pleasant associations of our home. We see again father's face of gladness as he returns from the toils of the summer day. We hear mother's voice as she sings her lullaby over the cradle of the little brother or sister, or teaches us the evening orison upon the bended knee.

His is a pitiable condition, indeed, who has for some transgression of paternal command been forced to leave home and to wander up and down the earth, a stranger, uncared for, unloved, haunted by the thought that the old homestead has passed into other hands, and he can now have no more a share in the pleasures under its roof; still more to be pitied if he wanders in a foreign land where not even the cheering sound of his native tongue greets his ear.

Hard, hard indeed the exile's fate. Our hearts yearn in sympathy toward him; and while we may deplore the deed or motive that has brought all this sorrow upon him, we can but pity him in his sad condition; and if there be added yet to his exiled state the chains of a rigorous and inexorable captivity, sad, indeed, is his estate. No home, no friends, no liberty; the prison walls reeking with filth give back the echo of his groans as he sighs for deliverance. Remorse for the past and heartfelt sorrow will oft swell up, and scalding tears bedew his pallet ere the morning of deliverance comes.

Man is an exile driven from the old homestead.

The Father had prepared a place of beauty and most pleasant associations; "Out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight." The Father himself was with his children in his home of joy; every tree and shrub spoke peace, and this was all for man, to be his conditionally, as ever in the economy of God.

We read of the hanging gardens of Babylon that for many years have been "things that were." Their glory hath departed; still men reflect upon them as works of beauty. But how much surpassing these for beauty was the home of man.

But he transgressed a law of the household, and the record informs us, "God drove out the man;" not from the earth, for if so, we had not been here now, but from the garden, where he had placed him, and man begun his wanderings as an exile over earth's surface, under the curse, amid thorns and thistles, through darkness and the surging tide of sin. We cannot call this our home. This distinguishes the godly from the ungodly; these are pilgrims and strangers; these are satisfied with the exiled state, and remaining in it, share its doom.

But man is not only an exile on earth to-day, he is bound with the chains of mortality. He is in captivity to death. And if the hypothetical instance of the captive exile excites our sympathy, how much more interested are we to know that such facts exist; that we are in this position, as a race away from Father's house, in bondage. "That the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

The weariness of the exile in his wanderings and the earnest longing of the captive are ours; this was understood by the prophet when he said, "The captive exile hasteneth—earnestly desires—that he may be loosed."

We are strangers in this land, sojourning here as pilgrims, tarrying for the night, ready when the morning breaks to resume our journey again and again, until we cross Jordan's tide and enter the Canaan of rest.

We anticipate a loosing from the chains of mortality, and the woes and cares, the consequence of sin, and finally the abundant entrance into the old homestead, for the Father has pitied, yea hath loved us, and in his magnanimity given a ransom, provided a means to again unite the scattered house-hold to bring his sons from the North, his daughters from the South, to call his children from the depths of surging seas, from the "land of the enemy," to the great thanksgiving feast, the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The gods of mythology were said to have fed on ambrosia, and for drink, quaffed nectar; our God gives a feast of fat things and withal the fruit of the tree of life, and freely given to us is, "the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."

Appreciating these things, we gird our loins anew for the conflict, and strike harder blows, looking forward we see home, "Father's house," the many mansions, the sweet associations. We long for them all! We hasten unto the coming of the day of God, and oft the cry swells up from our hearts:

"Fly swift around, ye wheels of time
And bring the welcome day."

Oh, to be gathered home! Not one absent child of God; our Father's smiles to be ours again, and forever. Angels to bear us company through the ages of ages. Alleluias rolling upon alleluias like the billows of the sea when the storm-king rides his royal chariot forth, glory flashing forth encircling glory till it fills the earth, and every stain of sin is blotted from the universe of God.

"O the transporting rapturous scene."

This is the redemption for which we sigh, and pray, "Thy kingdom come." "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

Dear friend, are these your hopes? Do you desire this "loosing?" We would not inquire if you desire death, but a loosing from death is given to the child of God. Do you desire this; the resurrection that brings us into his kingdom? If not, I pray you examine the evidences in the matter, and perceiving your position, make all haste to the Rock of Refuge, and find safety only there, that in his appearing you may find the consummation of a Scriptural hope, and an abundant entrance into the Father's house where thy "bread shall not fail."

Odds and Ends.

All litterature, of modern times, is saturated with the lie and the hope of the devil—"Thou shalt not surely die." From the enchanting verse of the poet laureate of England down, down to the simpleton's lines who jingles rhymes for the left hand corner of the American country newspaper, it is one long procession of metaphors in behalf of the false theology of the day: "Our souls are immortal." The essay of the acute logician, whose treatise on the mental powers and capacities attracts and delights you for an hour of close attention, brings you up in a most provokingly non sequitur manner to an immortal soul conclusion! The secular outrages which follow the infernal doctrine of eternal misery, in the intellectual world, are even more heinous; but they are less frequent. For Universalism and Restorationism are the names for the real belief of nine-tenths of the laity in the Protestant churches of America to-day.

No wonder then that the truth is in such disrepute and contempt on the question referred to, when it is broached for the first time to an orthodox minister or layman, or to a mere "member of the congregation." You have almost committed the unpardonable sin when you mention, as possible of correctness, the sleep of the dead or the destruction of the wicked! When I was in the Eastern States, a few months ago, I was cordially invited to accept the hospitalities of a certain distant relative. I did stay at her house for a few days; but I think I so horrified my cousin, one Sunday afternoon, by "letting out" my views—on a favorable oppertunity to speak—that she was glad when the audacious character took his departure. And yet she loves me very muce. But, I mean, she became afraid of me! Now she is an intelligent Yankee woman, and gifted with much physical courage.

Dr. Packard once asked (now) Rev. Dr. Bancroft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., when this popular Brooklyn preacher was a student at Alexandria, "If there is no hell-fire, how are you going to convert the wicked?" Dr. Bancroft replied that in the first place, he did not consider that he was bound to answer that question. But he would say that if the manifestation of God's love would not convert souls, a declaration of eternal hell-fire wrath would prove unavailing.—(Dr. Bancroft is a minister in high standing in the Episcopal church; but neither before his ordination nor since has he assented to the eternal misery theory. I know not how much he says, if anything, one way or the other, on the subject, in the pulpit. Nothing, I suppose.) All high literature is choked with the great lie; and the illuminated minds of only a few of the great men in the sects give forth a shining announcement and argument for the truth on this subject, which they have discovered.

Now in conducting a warfare for the truth, it is well, perhaps, to consider these things; to bear constantly in mind the great advantage which the maintainers of error have on the Life and Death question. Inherited opinion; educated opinion; the opinion of poetry and of the most elegant prose of the age: all against the truth;—and also the comfort of gifted sinners who are often perfect in the conceit of inherent immortality.

Many conclude, I notice, that they must first get into the general good graces of Tom, Dick and Harry, and then possibly they may leak their views on the Life and Death question, with more prospect of success in advancing the truth. Let every man be persuaded in his own mind. Doubtless diversities of style are required, in action and speech. But I have seen more accomplished by a bold, straight-forward declaration of faith, and a candid argument made upon it—from the start. Sometimes I think you cannot be so sly about the inoculation that you will not startle; and if there has been ground made for suspecting the missionary of studied deceit, the surprise is certain to be followed by a repelling altogether. In other words (my opinion only), I do not think much is ever accomplished by the "Artful Dodger" in missionary life. "As it is not pretended that certain beliefs named are essential to salvation, why press them?" says one. Often, though not in themselves essential to saving, they are essential to arousing, convincing, converting; essential in a preliminary way; and so, in point of result, equally as essential in such and such cases as faith in Christ, direct and simple. I guess it is getting to be understood what I am coming at: a sneaking missionary work is no more charged with probabilities of fruitfulness; than is a bold, aggressive championship of the whole counsel. This is so, at least.

Baptists and Methodists have accused, and are now accusing, Second Advent folks with deceit, in slyly spreading the doctrines which now seem to come under the denominational name. It is not a true accusation; judging by the rule, and not by the exceptions. But, I see articles, which directly or by intimation encourage or propose the kind of missionary duplicity on the Life and Death question which I deprecate. When Christ told his disciples to be wise as serpents, he did not instruct them to be snakes in their proclamations of faith.

"Doctrine will not save a man without righteous practice." Well, that is admitted. "Some men have their heads full of sound doctrine, and their hearts full of guile." Admitted, I say. But I would like to know where the practice that is of any value is to come from without good "doctrine?" And, really, when you are marking down "essentials" in faith, you are undertaking a great thing. Because, so much depends on circumstances and opportunities of illumination.

I have great confidence in the working power of a full counsel of truth in a man. And I remark that a man full of orthodox falsehoods is apt to have a stereotyped form of godly life. You must do so and so; or refrain from this really unessential act—the deeds being matters of pure voluntary choice, no moral principle involved—or you will be damned. There is no freedom in orthodox society. If they do not set you up a form of precise words for every prayer, they will be sure, at least, to set you up a narrow, high boarded path for every day of life. Now, I say, there are no dangers of carelessness or levity in true religious freedom of daily life. The dangers really are in bigoted formalism,—the greater proportion. There is moral freedom, as there is mental freedom. Choose ye!

Now the doctrines of orthodoxy so afflict the human reason, that, fully possessed of the creed, the mind is in a condition to accept this or that make-shift, or prescribed set of deeds, so as to be set from under a penalty that is inexplicable. So the gloom of orthodoxy. So its microscopic attention to petty details of life. No wonder people grow crazy in service under the eternal hell-fire creeds. There is all along in correspondence with it a stereotyped way for hourly service, that cramps, disheartens, renders desperate, drives into madness. And so there is always on earth a minute criticism of others, as well as an atomic introspection. Got something inside of me that is to live forever! Can't touch it! Can't see it! Neither in myself or in another! There! Heaven help me, I'm afraid I laughed too loud! That intangible something in me has been blackened by that shout of levity! And so much time is taken up in morbid self-scrutiny;—for this is not mocking an occasional, proper compunction, but setting forth a staple of every minute of every earthly day of remorse, under legitimate workings of the eternal misery theory. And that men, Christian men and women of the prevailing Protestant sects, are not all crazed, is because they do not live up to the full lively apprehension of their own creed. Facing that, the learned, unprejudiced, bold minister is compelled to say—"It blanches the human intellect!"

Here is the true doctrine, as I understand it, for a re-statement. On this little ball in the mighty universe God has created an order of beings, called man. An opportunity vouchsafed, through the life, death and resurrection on earth of a divine Son of the Creator. Now will you have eternal life on this globe, when it is renewed, and when the divine Son shall come again to this planet, to raise the dead, and set up his kingdom here? Or will you lose your conditional right of eternal life? Obey and live. Disobey and die. My son, give me thine heart. Use your best judgment from henceforth, soliciting the aid of the Spirit to inform that judgment in defining your service for the God of heaven.

Daily circumstances, over which we have no control—as the phrase is—will change, modify or dismiss this or that plan, break up this or that unessential habit, enlarge or contract (seemingly) power to work efficiently or with evident success. About this we shall be less and less concerned. To run the race, as free-will competitors, we need freedom; and in the whole truth we have it. In orthodoxy we have it not.

The eternal-hell-fire doctrine accelerates the speed of no Christian.

I once conversed with a man who with his comrade had run a race for life from the Indians. They were given a stint for a life race. One was not so strong as the other, and a less agile Indian was appointed as his pursuer. The chasing savages were each supplied with a burning brand, with which they might spur up the fleeing captives, or with which they were to beat out their brains if the boundaries appointed were not reached in so many hundred seconds; the signal of the safety or appointed death of the two white men to be given by the beating time-keeper of the savage clan. The least fleet of the two had a full view of his companion and pursuer throughout the successful race for life. Sometimes the flaming moxa would be close to the leading white man's back. But both escaped the ordeal. I asked the man who ran ahead if he felt the fire from his pursuer's brand. "O, no; I was running for life. I knew my life depended on my getting to the stake in a certain time, and if the prairie behind me had all been on fire, I could not have been in any more of a hurry."

The eternal hell-fire doctrine never converted a soul. Poor old Dr. Packard did honestly desire to know how a sinner could be converted without the fear of eternal torment in hell-fire set plainly before his eyes. No man is brought to the Father, as a repenting sinner and an acceptable child, by a lie. All lies come from the father of lies—the devil—who is the arch-traitor and enemy of God. Reason and reverence alike compel us to say, no one was ever converted, or moved to conversion, by the lying doctrine of orthodoxy, of which we are talking.

By falsehood, at the beginning, the devil deceived the woman. And by this same falsehood—it must be recorded—thousands upon hundreds of thousands have been kept from the truth and the acceptable service of God. All declarations have a positive character. Demonstrations of every character have some results. Every breath affects the atmospheric proportions of the heavens above us. And we are getting into the region of the most important of human utterances when we touch this doctrine. As it could not do good, it must do harm. And in proportion as it has been insisted upon it has done evil, and that continually. It is in the nature of a lie to vitiate, demoralize, corrupt, and destroy.

"How are you going to convert sinners, without the eternal misery dogma?" The rather: How many millions have gone down to the grave of shame, on account of this awful, God-dishonoring doctrine? How is any man, properly enlightened, going to do his duty by mixing without protest of any sort in the eternal-torment sects? Let every man be persuaded in his own mind; but as for me, except it be a plain matter of secular business, or that I may gather, as I think, force or ground for condemning the horrible, blasphemous creed, I will not go near their assemblies. It is a part of my freedom to keep away from them. The Father they hold up for adoration is not the Father of my Bible; he is a heathen Deity to me—patterned after the fiends that the ignorant idolaters of Asia worship. I know their faith is secretly better than their articles, oftentimes; and that there is a wide difference, sparating them in sanctifying measure from the heathen; but they have imported the worst doctrine of the heathen, or, having inherited it, they retain it, with bitter and willful bigotry, from their fathers.

I argue from no harsh sentiments. I think there is freedom only in the full truth as seen, and that the best way for the re-discovered truth on the question named to be brought forward, is in distinct, separate organizations and proclamations.—C., in Crisis.

Analysis of the Popular Theory of the First and Second Death.

We observe, that the two deaths should resemble each other. Two things of the same name, and so alike as to be designated the first, the second, certainly ought to resemble each other enough to belong to the same class. Now what is this resemblance on the common theory?

According to that, the 'first death' of a wicked man is not to him the cessation of existence, although that is the primary meaning of death, and the idea involved in all its secondary meanings, as given by Webster. It is the separation, the tearing asunder of two parts of his complex being. As a result of this, one part decays, loses its organization, and so ceases to exist; the other part continues to exist in unspeakable torment. At last comes the resurrection, when that part which passed out of existence is again brought into being, and the suffering part is united to it. But are we to understand that the body, which is all that has a resurrection on this theory, can be brought into being at such a time? The body is not imperishable; it could not endure the unending torture before it. This hypothesis then must presume that it also is changed and made immortal like the bodies of the righteous; although no warrant in Scripture is found for this, and that change for the righteous—the putting on of immortality, their bodies made "like unto His glorious body"—is spoken of as "the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 15: 54, 57.) Does he indeed bestow the same gift upon the wicked.

But if we except this unwarranted suppositon, what then? The two parts re-united appear before the Judgment seat: they, or the individual, is judged according to the deeds of the life on earth: the verdict of condemnation is pronounced, and the second death is now inflicted. (2 Cor. 5: 10; Rev. 20: 11-15; 21: 8.) How does this second death resemble the first? In no respect; the two parts of the man are not torn asunder again, but on the contrary, joined together they are cast into the same torment which, on this theory, one part has long been enduring without even the formality of a trial. We might stop here and inquire, what need of this judgment on a question already decided? and why this apparently needless restoring of the body?

But the point is this: if we compare the first with the second death, the act of sundering two parts of a being and the act of casting into torment the two re-united, we find no analogy whatever. And are we to believe that the word of God applies the same term to these two entirely different processes, and numbers them the first, the second death, as if the latter were indeed a repetition of the former! Shall we charge such inconsistency upon the All-wise?

An advocate of the popular theory may seek to avoid our conclusions, by objecting to the definition of the first death already given. He may claim that it is not the simple separation of the two parts of a man, but that it also necessarily involves the idea of suffering in the part still existing. In that case, he confounds the result of dying with the death itself. And, if the idea of future suffering be essential to the conception of death, then, since Christians are not to suffer, they cannot die. But though poetry may utter such fancies, observation and the Bible declare they do die. "In Adam all die."

But it may be claimed that the popular definition should be more exactly stated that the first death embraces the separation of the two parts of man, together with the consequences to the part still living, according as the previous life had been a righteous or a wicked one. If this be correct, not only have we the before-mentioned confounding of results with that whence they proceed; but if death be, not only the setting free the living part but also the results that follow, the actual carrying of it, for the righteous, to inconcievable bliss, how can Paul call Death their "last enemy," (1 Cor. 15: 26,) and speak of it (1 Cor. 1: 10, 11; Phil. 2: 27) as a thing they should pray to be delivered from? Such an evident absurdity forces us back to our previous definition, that the first death, on the popular theory, is simply the separation of two parts of a human being. Under the word 'Death' in Webster's Unabridged, in a note as an exception to the regular definitions, we find the following: 'Spiritual death (Scripture)" —from which we learn that theologians give this out as a peculiarity of the Scriptures—"the corruption and perversion of the soul, with the loss of the favor of God." This is the death, we are told, that Adam suffered when he ate of the forbidden fruit. But what death is this? It is in fact utterly unknown to Scripture by any such name! That speaks of a second death which passes upon the wicked, who have already suffered death once and have been brought to life again at the resurrection. Only one death can precede a second, and the second death is a final one: therefore the Bible treats of only two deaths. The so-called Scriptural death is neither of these! It cannot be the second death, for the Revelation shows that does not occur till after the Judgment. It cannot be the first death, or Paul teaches us rank Universalism, when he declares to us "As in Adam all die"—that is, on this view, are corrupted and lose God's favor: "so in Christ shall all be made alive" —that is, all shall be restored to purity and God's favor again! There is then plainly no such death in Scripture, as that represented in this carefully worded definition of the schools.

Surely a theory, leading to such inconsistencies and contradictions, cannot be part of that revelation which God gave to mankind. It needs but to be carefully scrutinized and tested by God's word, to have its pretentions totally refuted and rejected.

But if we take the word 'death,' in its literal meaning, as the cessation of existence; the first death terminating at the resurrection, the second, unending, eternal; then the previous obscurity and contradictions vanish, and our belief harmonizes with the statements of the Bible.—Prof. Ives, in Banner.

When you see a man with a great deal of religion displayed in his shop window, you may depend upon it he keeps a very small stock of it within.—Spurgeon.

Make it a rule never to utter any unnecessary complaint or murmurs, but in patience to possess your souls.—Mrs. Cameron.

Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come; but resist it. A spark may set a house on fire; a fit of passion may give you cause to be sorry all your life

WELLCOME'S WORKS.

We have a supply of Br. Wellcome's publications, and will promptly fill orders.

Berean's Casket; cloth, $2. Leather, $2.50.

Plan of Redemption, $1.25.

Matthew 24, 25c.

Christian Baptism, 25c.

TRACTS: Christ our Life, 5c; 35c. a dozen. Light of Prophecy, 5c; 25c. a dozen. God's Special Gift—Immortality, 5c; 35c. a dozen.

The Gospel Hope, and the Faithful Watchman. The two for 5c; 20c. a dozen, each.

The Inquirer. A Sketch of the Roman Apostasy, 10c.

Church Spectacles, 5c; 40c. a dozen

The Bible Class.

The Saddusees Silenced.

LK. 20: 37, 38.

"Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him."

The ordinary explanation of this passage and of the parallel accounts by Matthew and Mark, makes the argument of Christ to turn on the use by God, at the burning bush, of the present tense instead of the past: "I am the God," &c., and not "I was the God," &c., thus implying the continued existence of the patriarchs long after their death. The objections to this are: (1) There is no verb at all in the original account in Exodus, to which Christ refers: it was left to be implied, and would, therefore, hardly be made emphatic. (2) Luke does not mention it in his statement of Christ's argument, but lays the stress on God's calling himself "the God of Abraham," &c. (3) It seems to turn Christ's argument into an ingenious quibble, the force of which his auditors might have denied, even if the verb had been expressed in the present tense: claiming that "I am the God of Abraham," &c., meant "I am he who was known as the God of Abraham," &c.; or "I am he who through their lives was the God of Abraham," &c. Thus, to get an argument at all, one must first believe in the infallible interpretation of Christ; which his auditors did not at all admit. (4) At most it would not prove the resurrection, but only a future life after death. A better, and more defensible exposition, as it is also much loftier in conception, is suggested by Luke's form of statement, to wit, that the perpetuation of their whole manhood, body and soul, (both being necessary to a full humanity) the victory of their entire nature over sin, was necessarily implied in the promise "to be a God" to the patriarchs. The meaning and fullness of such a declaration could not be exhausted on a brute, for want of the necessary receptivity and immortality; nor yet on man who lived only the short and imperfect life of the patiriarchs on earth. Eternal development of body and soul is wrapped up in the very fact that God, in redemptive mercy, said, "I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob." To our mind, there is much more originality and cogency of argument in such an appeal of Christ to the Sadducees, than in representing him as making so grand a doctrine turn on what they would assuredly regard as a quibble.—Advance.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 6, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON OF GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

IF the truth that 'he who blackens others does not whiten himself,' could only be impressed upon all minds, there would be less appetite for scandal than now exists. No one can be the better for proving another to be as bad as or worse than himself.

AMONG the many remarks called out by Norman McLeod's death, we find the following, from the London Spectator, to the effect that he would have been considered perfectly orthodox in England, 'but in Scotland there was always a suspicion that he did not sufficiently delight in the prospect of eternal punishment for the majority of the human race.'

BR. WILLIAM MCCULLOCK remained a few days after filling his appointment in Chicago on Sunday week. He is large of frame, and sound of heart, and his presence was really inspiring. Some natures seem to act as cloud gatherers, while others disperse sadness and gloom. Br. McCullock is certainly not of the former class. He will attend the campmeeting in Southern Illinois, and is arranging to give all his time to the work of proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom on missionary ground.

A WRITER in a Presbyterian periodical says: 'As the sun was sinking beneath the horizon we came in sight of the Jordan and hastened down to the ford where the Savior is thought to have been baptised. We turned our faces away from the baptismal font of Jesus—away from the huge liquid grave.' etc. 'Liquid grave.' One could not ask a more candid admission that Jesus was immersed. We venture to say that Presbyterian brother didn't think what he wrote, but unconsciously admitted the truth, overcome by the impressions made upon the spot.

THE cheapest salvation yet advertised for money is that vended by the Archbishop of Avignau (France) who has issued a circular announcing that one can save not only his or her own soul from purgatory, but also that of any relative or friend, by, once for all, paying one franc to the Abbey of Notre Dame de Senaugue, Diocese of Avignon. It is very easy to see that the priests know the use of the doctrine of purgatory, and, also, that it is falling into disrepute. Twenty cents will accomplish now what once required the transfer of all one's possessions to the Abbeys.

A FRIEND enjoying his summer vacation writes: I find many in different places of orthodox churches who are earnestly looking for the predicted and speedy coming of Christ. One old lady in this place who held to this view, conversing with me, said: 'What a pity the Second Adventists fall into such an error.' 'As what?' 'On the subject of future punishment.' Wife and I conversed with her for some time giving reasons of our faith, and found her open to conviction, strangely so. No doubt another is by this time rejoicing in the truth.

BR. GEO. W. MILLER called upon us last week and spent a few days watching our work, and looking after the Minnesota tent. Br. Miller traveled with his father in the old man's declining years, and became imbued with something of the spirit of that master mind, especially in respect to loving 'that blessed hope and the glorious appearing' of our Savior. We learn that Br. Miller is minded to remove to California. Minnesota seems to tend that way—Brn. Reed and Fassett were from that State, and Br. Wilson from a locality near by. This is not so pleasant for Minnesota, but California should be grateful.

A LATE writer says:

"I have seen a woman, professing to love God more than the world, clad in a silk dress costing $75; making up and trimming of same, $40; bonnet, or apology for one $35; velvet mantle $150; diamond ring $500; watch, chain, pin and other trappings, $40; total, $1,100—all hung upon one frail, dying worm. I have seen her at a meeting in behalf of homeless wanderers in New York, wipe her eyes upon an expensive embroidered handkerchief at the story of their sufferings, and, when the contribution box came round, take from a well filled portemonnaie of costly workmanship twenty-five cents to aid the society formed to promote their welfare.

WE enjoyed a brief call from Prof. Ives, a few days since. We learn that his attention was first called to the subject of the future punishment while in England. A friend connected with a prominent religious society handed him a copy of Constable's work, as first published at London. His first impulse was that Mr Constable could not be right. But the prejudice of early education yielded to inexorable logic, and Prof. Ives republished the work in this country, where it is doing for many others the same good work it did for him. Prof. Ives is at work in his own way—quietly, but effectively. And we bid him God speed. He is reaching many that none of us could touch.

WHEN you send for a minister and expect him to 'go a warfare' in your interest 'at his own charges,' always tell him so in your invitation, that he may know what to expect. Don't tell him his expenses will be paid unless you mean it. Our brethren in the ministry are ready to do their full share in sacrificing; but they cannot be expected to relish the financial burdens of long journeys, made upon the ground of special invitation and general, though comprehensive promises. But some seem to think that 'a hearty invitation' will pay a minister's railroad fare out, and a 'God bless you,' meet the expense of the way back. They are mistaken. Tell the ministering brethren you invite just what you can and will do. Don't say his expense shall be met, and then only half meet them.

There is a revival of religion in Manchester, N. H., but it seems to be conducted upon novel principles. Elder Lutz preached there recently, and maintained the rather startling doctrine that, "the immortality of the soul is the foundation of many errors." To comprehend this it is necessary for the reader to be informed that in the opinion of Elder Lutz the wicked "will be utterly destroyed just as though they never existed." For the righteous there is an immortal life; for the wicked annihilation. This doctrine has been preached before, but this is the first time we ever heard of a revival of religion conducted upon the strength of it.—N. Y. Tribune.

—If the Tribune would take pains to read the New Testament it would learn that quite an extensive revival of religion occurred under the preaching of just that doctrine about eighteen hundred years ago.

IT was in Illinois not long since that a preacher undertook to preach about heaven. He had nothing definite to offer as to where it was—there was no revelation, he said, of the locality of the saints' future abode. He would offer suggestions, only two of them. The first was that heaven was inside the outer light-giving envelope of the sun; the other that it was the ether supposed to be distributed through space. In this attenuated medium, our spirits may float forever for all he knew. A visitor (orthodox, in church relations, at least) present was in another exercise of the day called upon to express an opinion, and very much astonished the people by not only affirming that the Scriptures tell us just where our future heaven will be, but by proving that it would be on earth. Some friends got for the first time a glimpse of the idea that when Jesus said, 'the meek shall inherit the earth,' he meant just what he said!

WE hope the immaterialists who pin their faith to the sleeves of great men, will not be startled by the following item from the Chicago Tribune:

In a late book-review in the Boston Globe, Mr. E. P. Whipple quotes approvingly Wordsworth's famous words on the souls of plants:

> It is my faith that every flower
> Enjoys the breath it breathes, and recounts a conversation with Agassiz on the souls of animals. The two had been boating together, and had brought in a number of jelly fish. Whipple, viewing them with a microscope, was amazed at the delicacy and thoroughness of their organization, and said: "Agassiz, is there not soul there?" "Certainly," was the quick reply, 'and immortal soul." Why not?

—Jelly-fish immortal—that is they possess an undying entity, which survives as a spirit jelly fish. Of course it has a spirit ocean to float in. And what is the next absurdity?

A FEW days since a man walking on the Railway track near Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was struck by a passing engine, caught and carried for some distance by the cow-catcher When recovered 'he was entirely unconscious.' The narrative says further:

"Shortly before three in the morning, the Doctor arrived, and about the same time Carter suddenly returned to consciousness, and inquired how far it was to Hughsonville. On being informed of the accident, he showed signs of great surprise, and could tell nothing whatever about it.

—What became unconscious? That which possessed consciousness before the engine struck him. What was that? 'The spirit,' says the immaterialist. Then Carter's spirit was unconscious, entirely so, for about five hours; knowing nothing all that time, Now for the funny part of the matter. If the engine had disembodied Carter's spirit, instead of becoming unconscious, it would have known more than it ever did before! So immaterialists persist in believing, although the Scriptures plainly declare that 'death is an injury that renders man entirely unconscious, so much so that he 'knows not anything.'

CORRECTION.

In the letter signed Dydimus, in THE TIMES two weeks since, for 'India' read Judea; and for 'Great the household of the sanctified,' read, Greet the household, etc.

AMBOY.

That's the place where the Campmeeting is to be held. Have you ever been there? Then you will want to go again. If you have never attended one of the meetings on the old campground, make up your mind that this year you will prove for yourself whether the reports concerning it are true. It is a good place. And Philip said to Nathaniel, so we say to all Ilinois, come and see!

Get ready before you come. Give yourself fully to the Lord. Fall in love with him, his people and his truth. Then come up, and we pledge you a foretaste of that great feast which the prophet announces as yet in the future and the signs of the times indicate as the near future, that feast of fat things, of wines on the lees, well refined. Come and taste, and see that the Lord is good!

PRAYING FOR YOUR PAPER.

There are many prayers requested as a mere matter of form. We have often thought to print a permanent request that THE TIMES and its editor might be remembered in the prayers of its readers, but have feared such a standing advertisement might be looked upon as a mere formality, and soon lose its power.

But we do feel the desire that would be thus expressed. We believe in prayer—believe that it avails, that it has availed many times in behalf of this journal and its office. Means have been furnished in answer to prayer, and we expect more in the future by the same exercise of faith that has prevailed in the past. And the bare thought that from many a family altar prayer steadily rises in our behalf has steadied our convictions of duty, and nerved us to meet sometimes unpleasant responsibilities.

Continue then to pray for us. Do not pray that we may do just what you would like, but that we may please our Heavenly Master in all things; that THE TIMES may be in his hands a 'Valiant-for-Truth," bearing a "Jerusalem Blade." One can effect nothing with a pewter knife; the Sword of the Spirit is of keener metal. Pray, then, for your weekly visitor that it may be an effective messenger, and its message be not merely "seasoned" with grace, but imbued with it, through and through.

RAILROAD TRAVEL.

I am an old traveler and journeyed much by Stage-coach before the time of railroads. Since their introduction I have traveled on them largely. As my duty has called me in many directions, I have had little choice of roads, as I must take those which would convey me to my destination, regardless of the desirability of the route, or the manner the road was conducted.

In my late tour into Iowa, I took the Burlington Route. My attention was called to the great improvements which had been made on this route West. Everything has been arranged by the Supreintendents of the different departments of this great route from Suspension Bridge to Omaha, for speed, comfort and safety.

On the Burlington Route from Chicago to Omaha, the cars are equipped with the Miller Platform which prevents unpleasant jarring. The Pullman cars, both the sleeping and the Hotel coaches, are attached to the through trains. They have added one of the most important improvements of the age, the "Safety Atmospheric Brake," which has saved thousands of lives, and makes Railroad travel more safe than anything which has been invented.

I came to Burlington on the C. B. & Q. Road, and then connected with the Burlington and Missouri River Road, of Iowa. I find this Road in excellent condition, and quite equal to the line further East. This part of the line extends direct to Omaha, and is every way the best route to this western center.

To those coming West from New England, I would say take the New York Central at Albany to Suspension Bridge; then the Great Western to Detroit; thence to Chicago by the Michigan Central. Then the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, connect at Burlington, with the "B. and M. Road" to Omaha, and so on direct for San Francisco, Cal.

From a personal acquaintance with the most of the Presidents and Supreintendents of the Roads connected and now constituting this direct line to the Pacific coast, I can speak with great confidence. Nothing can be better, more comfortable or safe in the way of travel.

And to those seeking homes in the Interior, or far West, in Kansas or Nebraska, can for $18, get 160 acres of land, under the Homestead act, on the Line of the great Burlington Route.

Those going West, and wishing full information on the whole subject, should send to the general Passenger Agent of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad, Burlington, Iowa, for their pamphlet. It will be sent free. It contains a good map, and the Homestead Law, and all information about connections with other roads—in a word, all information wanted by travelers to the West.

THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST.

[Second Article.]

"All men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father who hath sent him." (Jno. 5: 23.)

On another occasion, our Lord in addressing the Jews in the temple, said: "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." (Jno. 8: 54.) The Jews thinking that by such an announcement he assumed to be greater than Abraham and the prophets, indignantly asked, "Whom makest thou thyself?" Jesus replied, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it and was glad." Abraham had seen the day of Christ by the light of prophecy, and accordingly this statement was a claim on the part of Jesus to be the true Messiah.

The Jews evidently thought that Jesus meant by his 'day' something more than the years of his human life. At least they determined by asking him a question to know whether he claimed to have lived in the days of Abraham. "Then said the Jews unto him, thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" Thus by perverting the Master's language, they directly raised the question of pre-existence. Now if our Lord had only claimed to be a human Messiah, he undoubtedly would have most earnestly disclaimed any such inference from his words. He had not said that he had seen Abraham, but that Abraham had seen his day. By the light of prophecy and with the eye of faith Abraham had seen the day of Christ and rejoiced thereat. Abraham had looked forward to Christ as the promised seed in whom all the nations should be blessed. (Gen. 22: 18; Gal. 3: 16.) Our Lord's design appears to have been to show that Abraham believed that in due time the Messiah would come, and that to him would the gathering of the nations be, and that as a consequence, he, as the true Messiah, was greater than Abraham. He might, indeed, have replied to the impertinent question of the Jews by assuring them that he meant only that Abraham saw him by the light of prophecy, and that this did not necessarily imply that he was Abraham's contemporary. But in his actual answer he mounted up far beyond Abraham both in rank and time, and more than justified the suspicions of his jealous examiners concerning his real meaning. "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am,"[1] Greek—Frin Abraam genesthai, "before Abraham was born, that is, before he had an existence, ego simi, I am." Observe, our Lord does not say "Before Abraham was, I was," but "I am." He claims pre-existence indeed, but he claims more than this. He is the I AM. The speaker was "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever." (Heb. 13: 8.) The phrase "I am," denotes existence merely with no note of beginning or end. "Applied to God it denotes continued existence without respect to time, so far as he is concerned....The manner in which Jesus used it would strikingly suggest the application of the same language to God. The question here was about the pre-existence of Jesus. The objection of the Jews was that he was not fifty years old and could not, therefore, have seen Abraham. Jesus replied to that that he existed before Abraham.[2] The passage corresponds with John's affirmation already noted, that 'in the beginning was the word,' and proves most conclusively the personal pre-existence of Christ....It may be interesting to notice the Socinian hypothesis by which the plain teaching of this passage is sought to be evaded. The first exposition is, 'That Christ existed before the patriarch Abraham had become, according to the import of his name, the Father of many nations, that is, before the Gentiles were called.' The second is, 'Before Abraham was born, I am he, i. e. the Christ, in the destination and appointment of God."[3]

A little attention will serve to show the exceeding absurdity of these expositions. Neither of them claims anything peculiar for Christ, nothing indeed more than his auditors, without arrogance, might have claimed for themselves. The first would make our Lord talk thus irrelevantly: "I solemnly assure you [verily, verily, I say unto you], before Abraham shall have become what his name signifies, the father of many nations, I am. Be not indignant at this answer, nor think I magnify myself, for what I assert of myself is equally true of each of you; for before Abram be made Abraham, ye are." The second would make him say to the Jews: "Do not look thus angrily upon me and contemptuously ask, Hast thou seen Abraham? It is true that Abraham has been dead eighteen hundred centuries, and also true that I am not yet forty years old; but notwithstanding this I repeat it, Before Abraham was born, I was. But do not mistake my meaning, I claim only to have existed in the foreknowledge and decree of God. Nor do I elevate myself above humanity by this claim, for each of you likewise thus existed before Abraham was born."[4] It is difficult to understand how such expositions could ever have been received by any Christian, and utterly impossible to account thereby for the exasperation of the Jews. They evidently understood him as claiming all the attributes and majesty of the Messiah, and the highest honors of God. The action of the Jews showed in what light they regarded his words. Filled with rage at the blasphemy, as they thought it, of his claiming Divinity for himself, "they took up stones to cast at him, but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by." There is nothing in the text or context of this famous passage that serves to support the Socinian scheme. Observe the force of the expression, "Before Abraham was, I am," or as Dr. Murdock's translation of the Syric reads—"Before Abraham existed, I was." Just so surely as he spoke of Abraham as a person, just so surely did he speak of himself as a person; and just as certainly as Abraham had a real existence, just so certainly had Christ a real existence before Abraham was born.

---

[1] Meyer in loc: "Ehe Abraham ward, bin ich, alter als Abraham's werden ist meine existenz." Erasmus in loc: "Antequam Abraham nasceretur ego sum."

[2] Barnes, Notes, on John 8: 58.

[3] Watson's Inst., Part II. p. 243.

[4] Pearson, on the Creed.

The attention of the reader is next called to the solemn and significant language in which our Lord addressed his disciples on the eve of his betrayal. "The Father himself loveth you because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father." (Jno. 16: 28.) This language is very explicit and to the point. Just as certainly as the second clause of the last verse quoted, is to be understood literally, just so certainly must the first clause of the same verse be taken in its literal sense; or, as certainly as Jesus now exists personally with the Father, just so certainly did he exist with the Father before he came into the world.

That our Lord's language was neither ambiguous nor obscure is clearly seen from the disciples' reply. They said unto him, "Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now we are sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should tell thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God." Well would it be if all would have the disciples' implicit faith in the words of the Master, and not seek, as do many, to obscure or destroy his meaning by resolving his words into some figure of speech that will inevitably destroy the sense intended. The language of John 16: 28, literally understood, would forever settle the question of Christ's pre-existence. Few and feeble have been the efforts of Socinian writers to meet the direct and conclusive testimony of this remarkable passage. The disciples acknowledged as clear what had before been obscure, and confessed their belief that he came from God. In plain language when one speaks of his existence, he is never understood as speaking of an ideal existence, but always and invariably of a real or personal existence. In John 16: 28, our Savior uses what the disciples acknowledge to be plain language, and therefore, the conclusion is inevitable, that the existence which he said he had with the Father was a personal and not merely an ideal existence; or, in other words, that Christ pre-existed as a person, and not as an attribute merely.

In connection with this, and as fixing the sense of the passage beyond successful controversy, the reader is referred to Paul's language in the fourth chapter of his letter to the Ephesians. Speaking of Christ's glorious ascension and resurrection—as most expositors allow—the apostle by way of parenthesis exclaims—"Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens that he might fulfill all things." It is here unequivocally declared that the same person—meaning Christ—who ascended above all heavens, was the same Being who first descended into the lower parts of the earth. On no other supposition than that of his pre-existence as the Son of God, does the assertion that he ascended imply that he first descended. As he was exalted, so was he first abased; as he rose victorious he returned to his Father, so he first came from his Father. J. H. W.

[CONTINUED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

tion in it." Answer. We know of such a state at all, only by the revelation of God. When he tells us of the state, we praise him; when he tells us of the place, we ought further to praise him, and not turn thankless away.

"Does he tell us the place?"

Hearken. "All the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." (Gen. 13; 15.) Again. The text: To Abraham and his seed were the promise made—his seed, which is Christ. Then the earth is promised to Abraham and to Christ, forever, not only in the text, but everywhere in Moses, and the Psalms, in the holy prophets, and in the Apocalypse. Neglect of the fact that all the covenant promises must be discharged in this regenerate earth, has been the source of regarding the promises as made chiefly for the Jews. Let it be once understood that the promises to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ, are to be fulfilled to us with them in the earth, and Judaism falls, only to rise again with Jesus from the tomb; and all the promises of the restoration of Israel, and of the glory of Messiah in his kingdom of Israel, at once change their aspect from the mortal seed to the spiritual and incorruptible seed of the faith of Abraham, and from the inheritance of this present evil world, in mortal bodies, to the everlasting possession of the habitable world to come, of which all the Apostles and prophets speak, in the spiritual body of the resurrection, as it is written in Ezek. 37.

Though the place of the inheritance is not in this world, it is on this earth, in that world of which Abraham is the heir. (Rom. 4: 13.) And when all things are made new, there is reason to believe that the new-born children of God will recognize and know each other's forms and features, and will also recognize and know the former places; so that Abraham's seed of promise shall possess Canaan, and David's son, the Christ of God, shall reign in Jerusalem; and Egypt, Assyria, Elam, and Moab, and Ammon, and Sodom, every one named in the prophets among the nations to be restored from their captivity at the same time with scattered Israel, and to be brought back to their own border, shall find the innate love of their own native land gratified with an everlasting possession under the sceptre of the seed of Abraham, which is Christ, in whom "all the nations of the earth shall be blessed."

You who have followed me in this examination of the promises to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ, in order to learn what they be, and to know the heirs, who they be, and also the time and the place of their great inheritance, have already seen that the promises are of the land forever, and of a seed in whom all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, which land is, with its nations, in the world to come, and which seed is Christ, and Christ's seed of the resurrection, while the time of our possession of the inheritance is eternity. As it is written: "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs, according to the promise" of an everlasting possession. (Gal. 3: 29.)

To conclude. Under the Mosaic dispensation, the love of the world, with its riches and joys, its power and glory, deceived the Jews to their national ruin and dispersion; so now worldliness assails our churches with a vigor not surpassed since the Christian Emperors. In the Apostolic Church, the first love of the risen and glorified Savior, and the cherished hope of his soon appearing in his kingdom, exalted the disciples above the fear of the chief priest and the rulers of the people, leveled all distinctions of rank, wealth and learning among the brethren, opened wide the channels of their benevolence, put off covetousness, and the grasp of every brother upon his possessions as his own, while it filled their hearts with the love of the brotherhood and of God. So now the same first love of the risen and glorified Lord Jesus Christ, coming with clouds, to bless all the nations of the regenerate earth in his everlasting kingdom, bears similar holy fruits, and offers the best, the only hope of ever rising above the barriers of sects, and of opening the Christian's heart toward all who love Christ, and the liberal hand to all the poor heathen in our own and in foreign lands.

God the ever-blessed help us by his grace so to accept the precious promises to Abraham and his seed, which is Christ, that we may, with our heart and life, in this world, and in the great day of the Lord be accounted heirs, and have our portion with the saints in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—H. D. Ward.

Minnesota Tent.

Our State Tent will be ready to go into the field about Aug. 15. We expect to pitch at Mankato, or in that vicinity, as the friends may determine. Due notice will be given. I would say to those that have not paid their subscriptions for the new tent, that they can remit the same to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill., who will acknowledge the same. We were under the necessity of getting time on a part of the price of the new tent; but if the friends will respond soon, interest will be stopped and our credit maintained.

GEO. W. MILLER.

"The Lord is at Hand."

These are the words of the Holy Ghost. They are given to us that we may know with unerring certainty our Lord's purpose. They present themselves to us with favor or disfavor, according as the subject of them is known and loved. The faithless wife receives the announcement of her husband's return with amazement. Not so the faithful and devoted sharer of his joys and sorrows. To her the absence of her husband is painful, and his near approach the signal of rising, swelling, outbursting love and joyous expectation. Our Lord is the husband of his wife—the bride—the Church. He is absent; gone to receive for himself a kingdom. Faithful witnesses testify, as also does the Holy Ghost, that he ascended. We have testimony from the sure word of prophecy that the heavens have received him. He is seated at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens. He fills all things.

Now as to the time of his continuance there we are sure, in the first place, that it will not be forever. Secondly, the time will not be long. "Behold," said he. "I come quickly." And since his gracious intentions respecting his Church are so clearly expressed, it is but to be expected that her testimony concerning him will corroborate his own. I believe that these words relate to our Lord's coming to judgment. They unmistakably show this. Unlike the great mass of unscriptural teachings of this time, the Spirit's testimony through the word is, that "the end of all things is at hand." And if any are willing to sacrifice their own wisdom and conform to the testimony of the divine record, they will say the same things. Accordingly, Paul, a loyal servant, proclaimed it as of prime necessity to quicken the obedience of saints. Besides, one verse in thirty in the New Testament points with eager gesture to our Lord's return; and in all we are warned of the probability of its occurrence at any moment. It is to no purpose that the objection is urged that the early disciples misunderstood our Lord as to the imminence of that day in their time. The Judge of all reserves to himself the authority of prolonging or shortening this dispensation. This age is his own, as were all ages before. He is not bound to continue it one day more. And if he has not pledged himself to prolong this order of things to a certain limit, why may he not come to-day? Yea, would it not have been perfectly legitimate to judge the world within the first hundred years after his ascension from Mt. Olivet? Surely it would. The patriarchal age ended suddenly with an overwhelming flood. And this will end in precisely the same way: "As it was in the days of Noah so shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed," Were all converted before that time of universal judgment? Did the mighty preaching of that great prophet produce the reformation of a considerable number of the people? Was the awful doctrine [illegible] their rapidly approaching judgment [illegible]ed by those who heard? [illegible] questions may easily be answ[illegible] but we must remember that our Lo[illegible] called for the comparison between that time and the coming day with emphasis. Let us read: "So shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed."

If, therefore, there are devout and pious men who have a lively sense of this great truth, and are living in readiness for it, and teaching others this way, then we are to say, "this is just as it should be." Holy Scripture shows that it is one of the chief thoughts in God's mind. If so, it must find a conspicuous place in God's word. And so it does. Faith sees this, and laying hold of it makes it the watchword of the church. The Lord is at hand. Faith marks the advancing rays of millennial glory and shouts: "The morning cometh, and also the night." The morning comes to the waiting bride of the Lamb; the night comes to the enemies of God, the period of their perpetual dissolution.—Cor. Church. Advocate.

Not an Open Question.

Bp. Foster, in a recent sermon at Cincinnati, made the following eloquent statement with reference to the foundations of Christianity:—

"The passage which declares that Jesus Christ bought life and immortality through the light of the Gospel does not at all mean that he brought the idea first into the thoughts of men; but it means that he illustrated that subject. He made it plain; he made it explicit. He took it out of the category of conjecture, of imagination; made it cease to be a problematic question, and made it a settled question.

"He demonstrated the doctrine of a future life, and of an eternal life, and he did it in two ways. He did it in the very act of coming as a messenger from God announcing the truth. Why, my friends, that question is not any more a debatable question. I sometimes hear men hypothecating and discussing the question whether there is any future life, as if there was any discussion upon the question, as if it were a question for men to settle for themselves, as if it were an open question.

"I say no, it is not an open question. It has been closed long ago. The debate ended 1,800 years ago; closed up when Jesus Christ walked up and down Palestine, telling men about God and heaven; closed up when he preached his great doctrine concerning eternal life, and most of all, closed up, and closed forever, when, after three day's confinement in the grave, submitting to the power of Death himself, he broke down its doors of double bars, and carried them upon his shoulders, shouting in the open world, and under the broad and open heavens, "O, Death, I am thy conquerer! O, Grave, I am thy destruction! I am the resurrection and the life!"

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The Editor is in Wayne Co., Iowa, for two or three weeks' labor.——The Clinton, Iowa, church have a box in a conspicuous place for contributions for the tract cause. The Chicago church have a special collection for this purpose at one of the stated prayermeetings. Good examples, both.——A brother in Macomb, Ill., 'learning accidentally' of the TIMES, sends for it and other sources of information. He says of Adventism. 'The whole matter was entirely new and unheard of among the 'laity' here, and the ministry utterly ignore it; and some of my orthodox friends call me a lunatic, while others taunt me of my lapse into infidelity.'——Br. R. P. Shattuck sends for tracts for Jackson Co. Ala. He is our only subscriber from that section of the State. May 'the handfull of corn' sown by him, in harvest 'shake like Lebanon.'——Br. Virgil Hunt relates a pleasant incident of an encounter with a lawyer who laughed at the idea that man is mortal and unconscious in death, until he was induced to exchange merriment for investigation. He laughs no longer, but is seriously searching the Scriptures, thoroughly convinced that our eternal life is 'hid in Christ' and not in an immaterial nothing.——A correspondent inquires about a book published by N. Tibball of New York, called, 'The Coming of Christ in his Kingdom,' followed by a title page—we won't say how long. It is one of the poorest messes of theological trash that have been gathered in a volume since the days when dialectitions disputed such questions as, Whether A. B. was a relative of his mother. Mr. Wm. B. Orvis, however, has a right to hold his opinions, and publish them. Unfortunately he forgot that he had no right to misrepresent opponents, or state of them what is not true. ——Br. A. F. Dugger held a discussion in June at Alanthus Grove, Mo., with Jay Coffy, a disciple preacher, upon the intermediate state and future punishment. Br. Dugger was in feeble health, and entered the debate against the advice of his physician; but was sustained, and able, in turn, to fully sustain the truth. He is now at Sycamore, Ill., recruiting, and hopes in a few months to be able to return to Missouri. We have a report of the discussion, which we hope to find room for presently.——The late meeting at Elida, Ill. was a success. Br. Marston baptised two souls, and the Lord added four to the church. The coming tent-meeting is anticipated with much interest.——'Card-tables, games, and dancing until three the next morning' were the wind-up of a late church festival in Girard, Kas. The end that justified the sinful means was a building lot for the church. 'Everything was arranged for the amusement of the party.' Proceeds $50. Unless lots are very cheap, this seems poor pay for prostitution of the church to the world.——Br. Norton writes from Oregon that his first fruit there is 'a Lutheran brother, who loves the blessed hope,' and has engaged in the work of circulating tracts and papers.——We received an order for a lot of Minstrels from South America, last week: and a still larger order from Oregon. Our spiritual songs will help introduce the truth in those distant regions.——The third Q. M. of the Arkansas Conference is described by Br. W. M. Bonham as of deep interest. The tracts received are not enough to 'go round' among the people anxious to read about Adventism.——Br. Albion Ross suggests that the best way to insure a good campmeeting is to get ready before you go, and not after you get there. Try it.——Br, Rhines found a hall in Rougby, Me., fitted up for religious meetings—free to any Christians—by an unbeliever who utterly refuses to let it for dances, etc. This item ought to make some professed 'believers' quite thoughtful, to say the least. The contract between an unconverted man providing means of grace, and lovers of Jesus furnishing the world with its pleasures for the sake of 'gain,' is somewhat suggestive.——A brother in Nebraska tells the Crisis how some books and tracts led him to the discovery that Adventism is not a modern theory, of human invention, but 'ancient and Scriptural,' besides being glorious. Who says books and tracts do not pay for themselves?——A 'Baptist minister, South' is mentioned in the Crisis as a faithful worker for Advent truths—so much so that his exclusion from his Association is already threatened. Two churches will go with him.——The Southern Illinois brethren seem all awake on the subject of their campmeeting. We admire this self-reliant, go-ahead spirit, such as has been shown in this section, and also in Kansas. These do folks will always outlive mere talkers. We exhort every Adventist in Southern Illinois to be at their first Campmeeting. Its your business to be there. Don't fail!——Brethren in Southern Wis. will please find matter of interest to them in Br. Howard's 'Notice.'——Br. A. E. Babcock has arranged his business so as to devote quite all his time to the ministry of the word of truth. To secure his service write to him at Jonesville, Mich. He will do you good.——A brother in Oconto, Wis. sends for the paper and books, and gives as a reason—'I also am a man waiting for the Second advent of my Lord to restore all things!' And he wants some passing that way to preach to his neighbors who are interested in reading the paper. He lives six miles from town. Inquire for Milton Weaver.——Br. Graves' labors near Baraboo have been effectual in the conversion of some souls to Jesus.——The tent meeting at Montfort, Wis., by Br. Sheldon, is reported a success in the good cause. Five were baptised, sixty teams forming the procession to the baptismal waters. Br. B. Hitchcock labors there and in the vicinity. His P. O. Address is now Montfort.——Mitchell Co. Kas. has a few believers in the 'blessed hope,' and they long, like thousands, for 'some good preacher' who will speak words of life, and talk of Jesus' coming. If brethren pass that way, inquire for J. E. Proctor, at Solomon Rapids.——Alton Bay campmeeting is set for Sept. 7 and onward.——The church at Rochelle, Ill. maintains two prayer and conference meetings each week. As might be expected, they are growing and gaining ground.——The tent pitched at Oshawa, Ont. was blown down in a storm; but the meeting was not overturned by any means. Five have been baptised, and a church is to be organized.——Eld. Fenn held a discussion with Eld. Clendennen, of the Disciples, upon the kingdom and intermediate state. On the former question Eld. C. took the position that the 'little' (?) stone of Dan. 2, did not smite the feet of the image, but the image on its feet. What next?

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

Sabbath, July 14. We have a beautiful day, and considering the heat and harvest, we have a good congregation in the grove, five miles from Auburn. The people of the neighborhood are friendly to Br. C. and his society, and solicited the meeting. Many of the church went out from Auburn, to assist in doing a kind of missionary work. All our churches ought to hold meetings and cultivate destitute fields about them. They that water shall be watered. A church that simply meet for their own interest, live too much to themselves, and will lose their life and spirituality.

I spoke in the a. m. from Titus 3: 13, on "the blessed hope." It never looked better. It is indeed the blessed hope of the coming of Jesus, resurrection, and the renewed earth, as our home.

In the p. m. spoke on Mat. 19: 29. "We have forsaken all, what shall we have therefore?" The answer was, a hundred fold, and in the world to come everlasting life. In serving Christ we gain in this life one hundred fold, and then in the new earth endless life. Man is mortal—dying. But in the new earth, God will give him endless life. Some claim that they have it now—an "immortal, never-dying soul." If so, then Christ cannot give them what they already possess. There is a mistake here somewhere. But it is not on the side of Jesus. Plato is the mistaken one. I had a pleasant hearing. The people gave absolute attention to the last to hear every word. And the songs of Zion were never more sweet. We were loth to leave the place.

Br. Calkins is some better to-day but not able to be out. He told me that he believed the Lord had sent me just in this time of need. It may be so. I hope I am not without his guidance in my travels. He has perfect knowledge of all my steps, and gives me his approbation, which is more than I can say of some who know less of my plans and labors. All will be known soon, and each will be rewarded. Those who work, and those who complain of the way others do it.

Monday, July 15. Came to St. Louis and dined with Sr. M. K. Prescott. Spent part of the day with the Freedmen. I find a remnant of Adventists left among them who meet at Lowell, some two miles out, under the care of Eld. N. Macon. He is a good man, and much liked. The church is small, but true and faithful. The many among the Freedmen do not receive the Advent doctrine any more than among the white people. The Freedmen like to be on the popular side as well as their white neighbors. But a few among the many who have heard the truth received it. At 8 p. m. came to Memphis, Tenn., and met Dr. Leslie at noon next day. It was a surprise, and a joyful one. He had written to me on business that could only be done in person, but did not expect me so soon. I find him in health but well worn down with work and heat. He has done a noble work for the Freedmen in the past few months, in two respects: first in organizing them anew, and second in building them a new chapel. The location is excellent, and it will really be better for them than the larger one that was sold. The Doctor has economized, and put up a neat, commodious and substantial house. They are all pleased with it, and all the more that it is to be their own. They feel grateful both for the appropriation of the Board, and for sending Dr. Leslie, who has been welcomed by all, both by the parents and children of the Freedmen. They appreciate his past and present service in their behalf more and more. And well they may. He has been a faithful and laborious servant for them. I might say in truth almost their slave. But his work is now about done. And he can meet his people boldly in the judgment.

The Adventists here among the Freedmen are true. They have tried the preaching of the churches, but it did not feed them. They want "meat in due season," a thing they did not find in the fanciful preaching of the day. And so with the opening of their new chapel they mean to have the truth, and live for the coming of the Lord.

At night had a meeting in the new chapel, with a good gathering at short notice. I never enjoyed a better season in speaking to this people. The Lord was with us indeed. Many shouted for joy. They are delighted with their new chapel home. They had felt so sad in the loss of the other house that they are all the more joyful in the new one. Poor people! how happy they now are!

I put up with Br. M. Southall, a Freedman, receiving kind and Christian attentions. Though poor, I shared with him what his shanty afforded. They love to be respected and in turn to show their hospitality.

Wednesday, July 17. Arranged the business of the chapel for the Freedmen, so that the Trustees of the church could take charge of the property and hereafter manage their own business; whereupon they gave the following testimonial to Dr. Leslie and others:

Testimonial of the Advent Christian Church, (Freedmen) Memphis, Tenn.

Whereas, Dr. I. I. Leslie has labored with us as a minister of the gospel, and a school teacher for a number of years; and

Whereas, he has just built and finished a new chapel, under the direction of the Missionary Board at Boston; and

Whereas, he has now about concluded his last work among us, therefore

Resolved, that we cannot allow him to leave us without a testimonial of our esteem, with an expression of our gratitude, and that of our children for his faithful and valuable service among us. And as we have no wealth to bestow, we have what may be better and more enduring, this testimony to his integrity of character and purity of life, and that as a father among us he has exercised a love, forbearance and faithfulness, that merit our highest regard. No words can express the esteem in which we hold brother Leslie. We part with him in sorrow, and pray that every blessing may rest on him and his household, who have shared in sacrifice for us, and that we may at last meet them in the kingdom of God.

We also feel that we owe a debt of gratitude to the Mission Board of Boston for sending us so many good, faithful teachers and preachers in past years to lift us out of our ignorance and sin

And, also, to all our friends in the North, for their liberal support of the laborers sent among us; and last, though not least, that they have caused to be built for us a neat and commodious chapel, which answers all our purposes and meets all our desires for a place of worship, and have placed it in our hands for us and our children. They have our prayers and best wishes.

And, furthermore, we should be ungrateful if in this connection we did not bear testimony to the faithfulness of Eld. J. V. Himes in the great cause he has had for us in this mission. And especially for his efforts in connection with the Mission Board to secure to us our new place of worship.

Our meeting continued until one o'clock a. m., in the utmost order and interest. The officers of the church were chosen, with the trustees of the chapel. They have elected tried and reliable persons, which had not been the case always, so that they may now hope for prosperity as never before.

We have had trials with this people, and sometimes have been discouraged about them. But after the mission was closed, and the house sold, expecting that the church would be scattered, they have lived, and outlived all their mistakes, and to-day we have a stronger and better church than at any former time. It is the work of God and will stand.

Old Father John Carrol has recently died. He was a slave for many years, but a man of mind; and when he saw the Advent truth he embraced it with all his heart. He lived and died in the faith. The mortality among the Freedmen in our society has been large. Both the young and the old have fallen asleep in considerable numbers, but others rise to take their places.

As a general thing the Freedmen are rising out of their former condition. The school is elevating the rising generation. Our Mission has done substantial good by its schools, and by the preaching of the gospel of the Kingdom. The present condition of things show that we have not labored in vain. And although we have not done all we desired to do, very much more fruit is now manifest than we could have reasonably expected to see. The church has risen out of its trials, and like the "burning bush," though in flames, has not been consumed, but grown the more for the trials.

This has been a happy day for Dr. Leslie, and this report will cheer the hearts of Brn. Reed, Cole, Eastman and others who sowed here in tears, and will now hear of the harvest with joy.

Thursday, July 18. As I could not leave this a. m. for the North, I had an interview with Br. R. C. Johnson, the new pastor of the Advent church here. He is a young man of some promise, and should he give his attention to the study of the Bible, with the light he has, he may become a useful and successful minister. And I trust the church will prosper under his labors.

I was glad to hear this morning from Morgan's Point and Osceola, Ark., that the cause still lives there. Br. Leslie has been invited to meet with them next month in their conference. This interest is the fruit of the Memphis Mission. The truth is working its way among the Freedmen in spite of all opposition. Some of them will be enlightened and saved.

Friday, July 19. Came to Jonesboro, Ill., where my heart was cheered with a "God bless you," from Br. F. A. Childs. "We have work for you," he said, "and you must stay over the Sabbath."

This is the fruit region of Southern Ill. I find that the early peach crop has failed. Br. C. shipped 3,000 boxes last year, and this year he has scarcely any that are fit to ship. They have rotted on the trees. Other fruits and berries have done better. There is nothing certain about fruit, here or anywhere else. It is like the moral vineyard. Sometimes God comes seeking fruit, but finds none. He looks for grapes, and behold wild grapes. "He looked for righteousness but behold oppression." (Is. 5.)

But I am glad to find the aspect of the moral vineyard in this part of what is called "Egypt," is such as to cheer the heart of Brn. Lawver and Childs. The late visit of Br. Wm. McCullock was blessed to the people. They think to hold a campmeeting next month.

I visited the new Dry House to-day, just established here. Its capacity is five hundred bushels of apples or peaches a day. Dr. Woelfle showed me the process of drying or evaporating, and the fruit as it came out in the most perfect condition. They also dry the apple parings, for which they get six cents a pound. These are sent East to make apple jelly. By this new process the fruit growers will be able to save a large amount of fruit that might otherwise perish.

At night I spoke to a good audience, many of the church followed me in living testimonies. The church in Anna and Jonesboro will live. They are a praying people.

> "Long as they live should Christians pray,
> For only while they pray they live."

Saturday, July 20. Br. Childs took me to Br. Lawver's, some ten miles through the fruit region. The peach orchards here will yield about half a crop, but north from Du Quoin a full crop, and other points about as usual. Br. Lawver is an energetic practical farmer, and has brought everything to a high state of cultivation and success. And he has become interested in the Advent doctrine also, and is preaching it as his time will allow. But his farm now requires nearly all his time, especially in the season of sowing and reaping. And his work is increasing on his hands. He feels that he must leave his secular business and devote more time to the work of the Lord. And it is on this account only, that he has made up his mind to sell his farm. Could he continue this business he would not give up his present home. But he wishes to make a change that he may have more time for the work of the Master. Whoever gets his farm will, in my opinion, do well.

TOUR TO ARKANSAS

Br. Lawver said to me to-day, if you will wait till I get my harvest in, I will go with you to Arkansas this fall. I will find two good horses, and will ride one and you the other, and we can preach as we go. I will 'Timothy' for you, and help all I can in the Mission. What say you?

Well Br. L., I hardly know what to say. It is most too much of a sacrifice for you to make. Yet if you see your way clear to make it, I most thankfully accept the offer and will fill the saddle of the other horse, if providence permit.

"All right, I will be ready about the first of November."

In the cool of the evening I took a ramble among the peach and apple orchards, walking till I was weary, amid the thousands of trees with their golden fruit. Would that the church were as fruitful. On our return we had a talk on personal religion. How may we know that we are now saved? It was decided that we may know by the fact that we bear fruit, or continue in well-doing, seeking for glory, honor and immortality.

Sabbath, July 21. Went ten miles to Saratoga for meeting. Br. McCullock broke ground here and a good interest is coming up. It is a small country town among the hills. There are mineral springs in the neighborhood, but they are not much noted as yet. We had two meetings, and but for a misunderstanding about the notice by which some failed to be out, a church would have been organized. But this was left to another time. They arranged to hold their campmeeting, and hope to enlarge their membership. The field is ripe for harvest, and they need more laborers, who can devote their whole time to the work, and live on what they can get among the people of those hills. It is much like West Virginia, and we need such men as S. P. Whitney and Geo. Wright to occupy.

Monday, July 22. Spent part of the day with Br. Gile in Urbana. Br. G. is a working Adventist. An humble and unpretending man, but always saying or doing something for his Master. He is now settled in Urbana and wants help in the Lord. But the difficulty is to find it. All are employed. The Lord raise up laborers. Coming to Chicago, I put up with Br. Wm. Hines. I find Sr. H., who has been so hospitable, ever ready to wait on the saints in time past, sick and disabled. Let prayer be offered in her behalf. May the Lord speedily restore her to health.

Wednesday, July 24. I received the following letter.

Br. Himes: I wish to tell you that I have been cured of my cancer without pain or money. A cancer came on my nose eight years ago. In the last two years it grew fast and ate into my left eye. I paid one hundred dollars to one Doctor. I tried many others, far and near, without relief.

Last summer I began to drink Wild Tea, and put the grounds on the cancer, as a poultice at night. In six weeks I was cured. I am now sixty-two years old. I gave this remedy to others, of whom two have been cured. Wild Tea, I believe grows over the country, generally on high land.

Pittsburg, Pa. Charles Yardley.

This is the first reliable testimony I have had on the subject of the Wild Tea as a cure for cancer. I am not acquainted with the herb. But as my nose is giving symptoms of breaking out again, I shall try it. If it will cure cancer it will be an invaluable medicine, and the fact should be known.

In spending a day at home I am happy to find all things right at the office. The recent changes made in the Board, have lifted somewhat of a burden and care from my shoulders, and younger men, having energy and zeal in the cause, will do more and better than myself. Let us all unite to hold up their hands, and second all their efforts in the publishing department for good.

At this time, what is most called for is tracts. And the Board need help in this direction. Shall the ignorant cry for knowledge in vain? I trust not. Let us give the Publishing Committee the means of supplying at least the most earnest of the calls for light.

Thursday, July 25. Took breakfast with Br. D. Winter, in Burlington, Iowa. I had not seen them in six years, and was joyfully welcomed. I find them firm and true in the faith, though for a time they have not had Advent preaching. I also visited Brn. Brandebury and Everall, both aged disciples, and ripe for the kingdom. They are all steadfast in the Advent faith.

I spoke words of cheer to them in a meeting at Br. Everall's at night. Some of them spoke of their hope, as also of their regrets that they did not enjoy stated worship as formerly; but they trust there are better days in store.

From W. W. Cate.

I am laboring in a new field, where the people have never before heard of the glorious proclamation of the soon coming King, and kindred truths; but as a general thing the common people hear me gladly, until their teachers try to turn away their ears from the truth to fables. But some, thank God, take the liberty to think for themselves, and as a result many are beginning to see the difference between truth and fables. Last August I held a two days discussion on the nature of man and destiny of the wicked, with Eld. J. W. Randall, a Disciple minister of ability. A large audience was in attendance with some twelve or fifteen ministers. This afforded me an excellent opportunity of publishing the truth, and I frequently meet with demonstrations that the seed then sown took root and is now bringing forth fruit.

Last winter I held a protracted effort in this neighborhood. Our faith being new to the people, it was received with caution, yet the good Lord blessed my labors. Sinners were converted, wanderers reclaimed, and the church members (Baptist) were revived and took hold of the work. At this juncture the Baptist minister came and made a strong effort to sweep all the awakened into his church, and several whose relatives were there went with them. In February I organized a band of believers, twelve in number, into a church called the Oak Grove Advent Christian Church. Brn. Wm. E. Moss and Samuel S. Johnson were chosen deacons, and Arthur C. Cate, clerk. Our stated meetings are every third Sunday. Pray for this isolated vine, that it may enjoy the blessing of God, be enriched with Christian graces, and that the little one may become a thousand.

God's blessing has been with us since our organization. The baptismal waters have been moved at each of our last three meetings. I have lately immersed five, and received eight into the church, we now number twenty members. But we are passing through a season of persecution, in the way of slurs, abuse, hard speeches, unkind wishes, and culminating in nocturnal despoliation of property. God give us grace that we may bear all as we should, endure hardness as good soldiers. Mat. 5: 11, 12 often comforts me: "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven," &c.

Our hearts were recently made glad by the arrival of Eld. L. J. Rich, and several other brethren and sisters with their families, from Iowa, seeking homes in this beautiful and fruitful country.

I preach in four different places monthly, and have many calls that I cannot fill. This is a missionary field. I have labored over a year, relying entirely upon my own resources. I cannot sustain my family and do more. Were there not so many Macedonian es for help ringing in the ears of the irch, I would say to God's stewards, I had a little help to relieve my fam- of some pressing wants, I might e myself entirely to the work and or for the salvation of this dear peo- , as my heart yearns to do. I be- ve it would be for the glory of God. wever, I shall continue to do what an, expebting God's blessing.

Thank you, Br. Himes, for those cts, they are doing their work; but, ! we want more. I wish you could ve been at our meeting in Johnstown nonth ago and seen the eagerness people manifested to get tracts; :, alas, I had but few for them. enty hands were raised for the last .

m Sr. C. Wise.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ: end you greeting to-day as one ong you in like precious faith. It ut a short time since I embraced faith, as taught by the brethren e1 Adventists. Although I do not inclined to receive or embrace any t name myself, knowing that the ne of Jesus Christ is sufficient to w my spiritual relationship to him, well as my temporal relationship; by faith I stand and build on Christ corner stone, every day, and hour, l moment of my probationary life, s seeking after immortality, with a ght hope of gaining eternal life en the Life-giver comes to give it ne. I bless God to-day that we n eternal life through Jesus Christ. so thank God to-day, that he has red my sight so that I can see that means life, and death means death. at an inconsistency there is in be- ing that death means life, when it ust the opposite. But it is only a rt time since I believed in just this easonable way, and was sincere and est in it. And now I look with y upon others, who are in like con- ion. But thanks be to God, who- ver will, may come and see whether re is any good thing yet to come of Nazareth to love and admire for us' sake. I, for one, am determined keep looking. I feel so delighted h the light and the knowledge that ceive, that I keep hungering and sting to know more. I expect to in this way, feeding on the body drinking the precious blood of us Christ by faith, until he comes give me life in his kingdom. Then all not need faith to make me a taker of the rich things, and my e will have become a tree of life ne. Although it will show me in a y unwise light in some respects, yet ill be humble before the Lord by confession. Nearly five years ago rote a long letter to you, trying to w and convince you that you was ching false doctrine, by not believ- in natural immortality. I used e very plain and cutting arguments I then thought, that were right to point, and that you could not gain- . I was honest in my belief, and d saw and pitied my condition in or and came to my relief in such a der fatherly way, that I cannot p but love and admire his wise judi- us plan in my behalf. He did not roach me; he did not even intimate me at that time that I was wrong; ause he knew what I could bear ter than I did myself. But in wis- n's way he worked the plan, so that ould see God in every step, and en I was truly convinced that you really teaching God's truth, I felt embrace it with all of my heart; and rejoice in it. The instrument used to help me to see the light arly so that I felt that I must wit- s for it or backslide, was his hon- d servant, Br. Isaac Adrian. I do ss God to day that I ever saw and rd his truth spoken by that man of d, and I will do him justice by ac- wledging it. And now, I feel to you all God speed, believing the l is at hand.

They are spiritual, not material, who to correct these external conditions, o insist upon cleansing the neigh- hood, neutralizing the poison, ven- ting the chambers, improving the ysical circumstances of these help- thousands of degraded paupers as first condition of exerting any more vating influence over them. We r of the uses of sickness, but great they are the uses of health are far ater. Life, not death, is the great cher—health, not sickness, the great ralist. The world has got itself into narl of paradoxes on this whole sub- t, which makes the honest truth nd almost paradoxical and unde- t. Let us no longer poetize over wholesale destruction of infant or the beauty of early death or the vantages of ill-health. We must r what measure of these falls upon us without our fault with patience. But all violations of natural law, all loss of normal states of health, all bodily weakness and premature decay are evils to us, to society, to morality and religion—evils which God calls on us to resist and repair, both in our private sphere, and by our influence as citizens, as men, and as Christians.—Liberal Christian.

Our Young Folks.

The Stubborn Boot.

Bother! was all John Clatterby said.
His breath came quick, as his cheek was red,
He flourished his elbows, and looked absurd.
While, over and over, his "Bother!" I heard.

Harder and harder the fellow worked,
Vainly and savagely still he jerked;
The boot, half on, would dangle and flap—
"Bother!" and then he bursted the strap.

Redder than ever his hot cheek flamed;
Harder than ever he fumed and blamed;
He wriggled his heel, and tugged at the leather
Till knees and chin came bumping together.

"My boy!" said I, in a voice like a flute,
"Why not—ahem!—try the mate of that boot;
Or the other foot!" "I'm a goose," laughed John,
As he stood, in a flash, with his two boots on.

In half the affairs
Of this busy life
(As that same day
I said to my wife),
Our troubles come
From trying to put
The left-hand shoe
On the right-hand foot,
Or vice versa
(Meaning, reverse, sir,)
To try to force,
As quite of course,
Any wrong foot
In the right shoe,
Is the silliest thing
A man can do.

—Hearth and Home.

Joe's Enemy.

"It's my dreadful temper. I try to cure it. I think I have, and then it breaks out worse than ever. O, mother! what shall I do? what shall I do?" cried poor Joe, in despair.

"Watch and pray, dear; never get tired of trying; and never think it is impossible to conquer your faults," said Mrs. March, drawing the rough head to her shoulder, and kissing the wet cheek so tenderly that Joe cried harder than ever.

"You don't know; you can't guess how bad it is! It seems as if I could do any thing when I'm in a passion; I get so savage I could hurt any one and enjoy it. I'm afraid I shall do something dreadful some time, and spoil my life, and make every body hate me. O, mother, help me, do help me!"

"I will, my child; I will. Don't cry so bitterly, but remember this day, and resolve with all your soul that you will never know another like it. Joe, dear, we all have our temptations, some far greater than others, and it often takes us all our lives to conquer them. You think your temper is the worst in the world; but mine used to be just like it."

"Yours, mother? Why, you are never angry," and, for a moment, Joe forgot remorse in surprise.

"I've been trying to for forty years, and have only succeeded in controlling it. I am angry nearly every day of my life, Joe; but I have learned not to show it; and I still hope to learn not to feel it though it may take me another forty years to do so."

The patience and the humility of the face she loved so well was a better lesson to Joe than the wisest lecture, the sharpest reproof. She felt comforted at once by the sympathy and confidence given her—the knowledge that her mother had a fault like hers, and strengthened her resolution to cure it; though forty years seemed rather a long time to watch and pray, to a girl of fifteen.

"My child, the troubles and temptations of your life are beginning, and may be many; but you can overcome and outlive them all, if you learn to feel the strength and tenderness of your Heavenly Father as you do that of your earthly one. The more you love and trust him, the nearer you will feel to him, and the less you will depend on human power and wisdom. His love and care can never be taken from you, but may become the source of lifelong peace, happiness, and strength. Believe this heartily, and go to God with all your little cares and hopes and sins and sorrows, as freely and confidently as you come to your mother."—From "Little Women."

Karl's Letter to Jesus.

Before little Karl's father died, he was often told that when he got a little bigger he would be sent to a Moravian school. But after his father's death, his mother was left very poor, and found it very difficult to get food and clothing for little Karl. What was the boy to do? Reading in the Bible the many stories how Christ helped the poor, how he opened the eyes of the blind, and made the deaf to hear, and the lame to walk; how he fed the hungry multitudes with bread and fish; yes, and even made the fish in the sea to bring up money when it was needed—"Ah!" said little Karl, "he is the one to help me. If I could only get him!"

He studied long and hard for a plan. At last he said: "I know what I will do; I will write him a letter."

This he did in the German language, and nearly in the following words:

"My dear Savior Jesus Christ: I have lost my father. We are very poor, but thou hast said, in thy Word, that all we ask for in thy name, God will do it for us. I believe what thou hast said, Lord Jesus. I pray thee, then, O my God, in the name of Jesus, to give my mother the money to send me to the Moravian school, where the boys get to be wise and good. Then I can serve thee and help my mother. Good by. KARL.

The letter was then folded and addressed: "To our Lord Jesus Christ in heaven." Away he ran with it to the postoffice, and dropped it in the letter-box with a hopeful heart.

After a while, the postmaster was sorting his letters, when he came to this one: "To the Lord Jesus Christ in heaven." But how was he to send it there? That place was not on the mail route. No rail-road car or steamboat goes to that place.

"Oh, I guess some crazy person has written it." And so he threw it aside.

After the day's work was over, he took up the letter and opened it. His heart was touched by it, and so he gave it to a Moravian friend, who read it aloud at church. A rich lady listened to this touching appeal, and sent an answer to Karl, saying that she answered it for the Lord Jesus, and would send him to that school. Oh! how glad little Karl was for this kind answer to his letter!

Now, dear children, you and I know of a quicker and better way to make our wants and wishes known to the Lord than to send them by a slow mail train. A simple look of faith will do. Christ says: "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet; and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret will reward thee openly."

Conference Minutes

Michigan.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Held at Jackson, June 16th-23, 1872.

Ministers present—Elds. J. V. Himes, A. E. Babcock, L. C. Collins, J. R. Preston, C. Fox, Peter Vos, J. Marin, A. N. Seymour, A. D. Mackie, J. Smith Nowlin, Wm. L. Himes, J. H. Whitmore, E. H. Durand, J. Bower, Joel Barnhart, Chas. E. Darrow, P. Martin, James Ferris, Geo. Wright, Wm. Branch, J. H. Paton, W. C. Hicks, J. M. Snook, P. Holler, A. H. Wilson, W. Turner, and R. Tuttle.

Br. P. Vos was received as an ordained minister. Dr. J. Douglass, of Romeo, and Chas E. Darrow were received and licensed to preach. Jas. Farley, T. J. Giddings, Samuel Pope and D. F. Quimby were referred to their respective Quarterly Conferences.

The following churches were represented by delegates:

California—Br. Wilkinson. Algansee—M. B. Wakeman. Moscow—Br. Buel. Elk. Buchanan—Brn. Harding, Mead, Dumbolton and Fox. Clinton—A. B. Fabrick. Almont, Berlin, Fairgrove, Caro, Almer, Grant, Gagetown, Campbell's Corners, Cecil, Ohio, Lapeer, Millbrook, Ashland, Hinton, Marcellus Center, Texas, Sumption's Prairie, Speaker, East and West Elk, Lexington Ridge, Marlett, Sanilac, N. E. Lexington, Woerth, Columbus, Mt. Clemens, Jackson, St. Johns, Bridgeville, Woodhull, Delta, by ministers.

Churches at Almont, Fairgrove, Charlevoix and Woodhull were received.

The following were the committees appointed:

Ordination and License—Brn. Bower, Snook and Paton.

Business—Babcock, Wright and Bower.

Finance—Brn. Snook and Babcock.

Devotional—Brn. Babcock, Wright and Paton.

The following officers for the ensuing year were nominated and elected:

J. V. Himes, President. (He having been invited by vote to remain a member.)

A. E. Babcock, Vice President; George Wright, Sec'y. and Treasurer.

Directors—A. Richards, J. Bower, J. R. Preston, J. H. Paton.

The Business Committee presented the following resolutions, which were discussed and adopted:

WHEREAS, Our quarterly conferences have recommended that our young men be requested to seek to improve and cultivate their minds by procuring such books and other reading matter as will best prepare them for the work of the ministry; and

Paton

WHEREAS, We as a people have no place of learning where they can receive all the assistance so much needed that they may be efficient workers; and

WHEREAS, A respected citizen of Harvard, Ill., has offered to Eld. J. V. Himes a beautiful lot of land, located in the town of Harvard, for the purposes; and

WHEREAS, Some other citizens of Harvard have offered money and other help to build and establish a seminary of learning in the interest of the Adventists of the Northwest; therefore,

Resolved, That Eld. Himes be requested to make further inquiries and learn what more the citizens of Harvard will do toward this object, and at the same time open a correspondence with other parties as to what citizens of other towns will do for the same object, at some central point in the Northwest, and report the result to this Conference.

After considerable discussion pro and con it was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we approve of the removal of the publication office of the Western Association from Buchanan to Chicago; and will give it our united support, notwithstanding we regret to have it leave our State.

WHEREAS, Two cannot walk together except they be agreed; and

WHEREAS, As a general thing the Adventists with a common faith and common object, East and West, have sought to maintain unity in their labors and plans, and have greatly promoted these objects, so that one has planted and the others have watered, and thereby built up the cause in health and strength; therefore,

Resolved, That we welcome to our field of labor in the West all who come to act in harmony with us and build up the cause in unity and love, while we could not give countenance to any one whose labors tend to divide and distract our churches. We seek to preserve the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

Resolved, That the county of Barry be detached from the Western and attached to the Southern District.

WHEREAS, We observe with pleasure the growing interest of the cause in our State; and

WHEREAS, A greater and more united effort on the part of our ministers and churches is demanded; and

WHEREAS, We know that in union there is strength; and

WHEREAS, We look upon our Annual Gathering as of vital interest to the ministers and churches, giving the former an opportunity of becoming acquainted with many of like precious faith they would not otherwise meet; and

WHEREAS, We would deplore the abandonment just at this time of our annual campmeeting; and

WHEREAS, Some of our brethren have expressed a desire or suggested the propriety of holding campmeetings in the several districts; therefore,

Resolved, That this Conference recommend that each District endeavor to hold such a meeting the present season; and at each of these meetings the interest of our general meeting be thoroughly discussed, and brethren be especially urged to attend the next Annual Gathering, prepared with tents, and to give it full support.

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to select and prepare a suitable place for our Annual Meeting some where in the bounds of our Conference, where it will be easy of access to all, and where the community will have an interest to encourage our gathering.

WHEREAS, The missionary field of this State and the West generally presents open doors, with incessant calls for help, which it is not in our power to supply with our present organization; and

WHEREAS, Our Publishing Association is not receiving all the help and strength that is needed to supply the demand for Advent literature; therefore,

Resolved, That we recommend the calling of a General Western Conference, next year, to consist of delegates from all the Advent Christian conferences, who will truly represent the great body of the Adventists in the West; who shall take into consideration the necessities of the missionary field; and to assist in every laudable way the Publishing Association in its efforts to disseminate the truth. We propose with the consent and approval of a majority of conferences that the General Conference be held in October, 1873; and that all conferences having less than ten ministers and churches send one delegate, and all with more than that number be entitled to send two.

Resolved, That this Conference tender to our dear brother, J. M. Snook, for his untiring faithfulness and sacrifices, and his labors in building up our cause in this State, this expression of our gratitude: and that this resolution be placed upon the minutes of the Conference.

SIGNS OF THE SPEEDY COMING OF CHRIST.

As Adventists, we see in the signs of these times the evidence of nearing deliverance. Among the signs, we may notice the waning of the Papal hierarchy, which is now in its last stage of consumption, ready to be destroyed by the brightness of the second coming of Christ.

The next sign we notice, is the waning of the Turkish power, whose seat of government is at Constantinople. Since the pouring out of the sixth vial, on the great River Euphrates in 1822, this power has been wasting, and soon must fall; and in immediate connection with that event, we learn that Christ will come in his glory. (Dan. 12: 1-3.)

We have also had celestial signs, which were to appear just previous to the coming [illegible] Lk. 21: 25-36.) The sun has been [illegible] e moon has withheld her light; [illegible] fallen from heaven. Also, [illegible] been in perplexity, and [illegible] for fear, for looking after the things that are coming on the earth.

At this point of time the Divine Word declares that the coming of Christ is "nigh, even at the door." We believe that we are in the last generation, and near its close, and we are to wait and watch in readiness.

In addition to the above signs, there are many who believe that the prophetic periods point to this or next year as the Jubilee, or year of release.

As Adventists we are all agreed that the coming of Jesus is the next great event, and will occur soon: and so, with our views of both the signs and the periods, we are agreed in expecting the coming and kingdom of God to be at the door, and labor in harmony to prepare men for that event.

We therefore call upon all who wait and watch for the Advent as near, to put forth their energies to spread this truth among all classes of men, by giving their support to faithful and competent ministers, and to hold them up also by our prayers and sympathy in their good work. Let the missionaries be sustained. Let our tent-meetings be sustained. Let us be liberal with our means for the support of all the agencies in use among us to promote the cause of the the coming King.

Campmeeting Committee—A. E. Babcock, John Bower, L. P. Fox, Geo. Wright and J. R. Preston.

The name of E. P. Daniels was dropped from the record.

A mutual counsel was selected to consider the case of Eld. A. N. Seymour. They reported two resolutions to the Conference, the second of which was the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that any member who steadily refuses to act in harmony with the principles, objects and aims of this organization, who repea[illegible] attacks the moral character of its [illegible] and most prominent members, in [illegible] sence, assigning to them the most [illegible] motives, who writes letters to parties [illegible] States, calculated to injure members [illegible] the Conference, who affiliates with expelled members of other conferences, who at every favorable opportunity throws an apple of discord concerning a name dear to the hearts of a large majority of his fellow-members, that such a person who will do this ought not to remain, nor can he honorably remain, a member of this Conference.

Upon the adoption of this last, Eld. A. N. Seymour withdrew from the Conference. His withdrawal was accepted.

Conference voted that the Secretaries of Quarterly Meetings, in the case of reception of members by license or ordination, or ordination of licensed ministers, report the same with name and particulars, at once, to the Secretary of the Annual Conference, with P. O. address, that he may send them Certificates.

Conference also voted thanks to the officers of the Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R. for reduction of fare.

Also to H. H. Smith and others for use of grounds. Also to Br. J. Jordan, for care of transportation of passengers to and from grounds.

REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Cash on hand from last year........	$ 17 19
Rec'd. for lumber....................	10 00
By collections, offerings, and 'bus fare	109 63
	$136 82
Paid for stationery, postage and telegraphing..........................	$ 7 76
Paid for freight and printing......	12 38
" tacks and nails............	1 65
" lumber....................	10 00
" 'bus and team............	45 00
" minister's board..........	37 80
" to help some of the ministers to get home......	20 70
	$135 29
Balance on hand........	$1 53

Some of the churches reported by letter; and some did not report at all.

The summing up of those that reported is as follows: 45 churches reported 997 members; dismissed during the year, 24; withdrawn, 16; moved, 33; died, 7; baptised, 114; average attendance at prayer-meetings, 402; S. S. scholars, 433; average, 323; teachers, 68. Number of churches from whom no reports were received, TWENTY-NINE!!! representing a membership of about 475; ordained preachers, 32; licensed, 8; churches added, 11; chapels, 7.

From every direction comes the call for laborers. Some of the above twenty-nine churches not reporting are in Ohio and Indiana, and have united with the conferences of those States. Those in this Conference that did not report are Camden, Deerfield, Berrien, Speaker, Muskegon, Denver, Dayton, Ortonville, N. E. Lexington, Hesperia, Greenwood, Aurelius and Leavitt, besides some that have probably died out. GEO. WRIGHT, Sec'y.

Illinois.

NEPONSET DISTRICT, Q. M.

Met according to notice for social meeting. The Holy Spirit was indeed with us in power, so we had a heavenly season; then preaching by Br. M. McCullock, from Rev. 3: 21—overcoming through and with Christ. It was meat in due season.

The Conference was then organized by the selection of M. McCullock as President, and L. F. Cole as Secretary; it was left with the officers to appoint the next meeting; and also suggested that the church or churches that wish the next meeting held with them, send the request to the Secretary, stating their condition and needs, that the meeting may be appointed where the most good may be done

In the afternoon a sermon by Br. H. Willett, from Gal. 5: 1, on the liberty of the gospel; his remarks were well chosen and appropriate; the day furnishing the theme. In the evening by Br. Cole, from Is. 51: 14—man as a "captive exile."

Thus closed one of the best meetings it has ever been our lot to attend. There were representatives from Toulon, Milroy, Henderson, Ionia, and Bishop Hill. The last place was represented by a goodly number of Swedes. Bless the Lord. We are all one in Christ.

Not a jarring note was touched during the day, and the people "had a mind to work," and all were greatly encouraged. Preaching brethren present—M. McCullock, H. Willett, Br. Goff and L. F. Cole. L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 6, 1872

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.

Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
I. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1 10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

WE would call the especial attention of business men to Emerson's patent clip and file. It is an arrangement for binding in durable form at an expense of one cent for 500 pages, bills, invoices, receipts, letters, &c., etc.

Prices: Letter size, $1.50; Foolscap size, $2. Fasteners or binders, 50c. a box of 100. No man of business will do without it, after once using.

For sale at this office.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

E. A. MARSH. We do not consider any answer necessary. No casuistry should be allowed to set aside a plain command of the Scriptures. The less is always included in the greater. The omission of mention of a part or parts does not necessarily imply that they do not exist.

To my Friends.

I would be very glad if I could leave the office to attend some of the many tent and other meetings to which I have been invited. And I need a vacation, too, if ever I needed one. But I seem to be tied to office duties for the present. I had hoped to find rest, recreation and new strength and vigor in a trip East to the campmeetings and elsewhere: but am compelled to remain here. I would be glad to go out every Sunday to supply in destitute places; but even that is impossible at present. I feel that I have an interest in your prayers, and am sustained thereby.

WM. L. HIMES.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

W C Hall D B Day A A Wilber E J Roe O A Stewart H Champion J Hamilton C B Colman H F DeWolf M L Little A Brown O Tabbut D H Fisk P W Hough L Reimer P N Prewitt Z T Sullivan J O Creeks J P Babcock A Carlisle A Armour A E Babcock E Ruthman D Cogswell A F Dugger J H Hammond G Benfer M Parse E C Bronaugh (2) H Welty S West P Deming E H Durand M A Newcomb J B McGinnis P Foster F Stephenson H Campbell G W Turner J Danforth M G Tice D S Way E Spotswood H E Pierce J Catlin S P Miller W H Mingle H T Miller E Cheney W E Robinson M Beals S A Keyes C W Conolly F H Kenny V Seaton W Copland S Tyler J H Whitmore W E Brown A Sanford A Morse H L Hastings V Hunt A C Pierce T Baker T R Way J Olver J B Green J S Lawver E Butler E Lewis J T Ongley H Smith E A Marsh W Johnson J M Snook J Wolverton C C Marston G C Meigs C E Mitchell R R Hollister C E Tucker J S Hastings J Greaves H A King S B Humphrey L Norton M Weaver H Leiderbach C C Marston T G Baxter J E Newhouse M Grinnell S S Babcock W T Gilbert L H Davis A S Johnson 2 F Rice J P Eshleman J M Dennis O D Gibson C D Jones C E Barnes E Chase L C Collins A S Barber J E Brown W E Lansing H J Munson R V Phillip E H Burlington O L Nettleton J C Post F S Sage.

Tract Fund.

S A Keyes $5; A S Johnson 3.50; D V Burroughs $10.

Expense of Removal.

Avery Brown $4.26; P. N. Prewitt 5.00.

Obituary.

RUSSELL.—Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, July 17, 1872, in Gagetown, Tuscola Co. Mich., youngest daughter of Br. and Sr. Russell: aged 4 years, 2 months, and 13 days.

Sermon by E. H. Durand, from 1 Thes. 4:14.

KLIBER.—In Chicago, July 31, 1872, Frank A., infant son of George and Elizabeth Kliber.

Services at the house, by Br. F. Burr, with remarks upon 2 Ki 4:8-37. Br. G. W. Miller was present and assisted in the services. We may truly say, it is well with the child. The little ones thus laid to sleep in Jesus slumber securely. In God's own good time they will awake, and return from "the land of the enemy."

W.

PERRY.—Died at Deerfield, Waushara Co. Wis. July 18, 1872, Minna L., wife of G. W. Perry; aged 23 years and 11 months.

Her last words were for us all to meet her in the city of God. She longed to see Br. S. C. Wellcome and other friends during her sickness. Words of sweet comfort were spoken by Br. C. P. Rood. G. W. P.

Book Notices, Etc.

"A TRUMPET for the Watchmen on the walls of Zion." —By Geo. Thomson.

The nature of this work may be gleaned from the following outlines: The Christian Minister a Watchman—the Duties of a Watchman—Watchman, what of the Night?—Time of the End—Signs of the Times—Fulfillment of Prophecy—Prophecy in relation to the First Advent—Prophecy in relation to the Second Advent—Signs of the Second Advent,—Celestial, Terrestrial, Moral, National—The Papacy—Spiritualism—Time, Tarrying Time, etc., etc., etc. 128 pp. Single copy, by mail, 20c. Per dozen, $1.75. By express, one hundred copies for $11.

"YAHVEH CHRIST. The Memorial Name;" or, the "Coming One."—By L. T. Cunningham.

The object, or design, of this tract is to set forth the divinity of Christ, as taught in both the Old and New Testaments, as appears in the history and significance of the memorial name—YAHVEH. 44 pp. Price, 8c. per copy; postage 2c.; 75c. per dozen; $5 per one hundred.

Notices, Etc.

Wisconsin.

The first Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held about the first of September. Any of the brethren wishing to secure the meeting for the locality in which they live, will communicate with me (either personally or by letter), at Magnolia, Rock Co. Wis.

Please let me know in time to give notice of the place of meeting in THE TIMES. GEORGE HOWARD.

Kansas Tent.

Dear Brethren and friends who have subscribed for the 'Tent,' our Subscription Fund is nearly raised. We wish to get the Tent at work now in a very short time; so let all who have subscribed be preparing themselves for prompt response. And those who purpose helping do so at once, so there need be no delay. The Lord is blessing and will bless those that trust and obey him.

Send all money by mail to Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co. Kan. Postal Orders, to H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co. Kan.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Coral, 8 p. m., August 11. Communion after service. E. H. BURINGTON.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

The place of meeting will be Saratoga, Union Co. seven miles east of Anna Station.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCullock will bring the Mission Tent with him. Place of meeting will be given next week: probably between Mt. Joy and Anna churches.

J. S. Lawver, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Squaw Grove, 10.30 a. m. Aug. 11.

Aurora, with the Colored Baptists, 11 a. m. Aug. 18. At Br. Spalding's, 1 p. m. same day.

Jericho church, 5 p. m. same day.

Milroy, Sabbath, Aug. 25.

C. W. SMITH.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

There will be a Grove Meeting in Henderson's Grove, about four miles N. of Ionia, Warren Co., near Br. Jonas Smith's, Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sunday.

Brn. G. W. Hurd and L. F. Cole are invited to assist in preaching the word. The brethren and sisters scattered through this region are earnestly requested to come to this meeting, and help in the name of the Lord. Provision made for all.

In behalf of the brethren. M. McCULLOCK.

Hennepin, Putnam Co. Special meeting commencing Tuesday eve. July 30, to continue over the Sabbath, and through the following week, if the interest demands. The brethren and sisters scattered through the region about are earnestly requested to come to this meeting and lend a helping hand. C. C. MARSTON.

Rochelle, Aug. 12. Subject: Signs of the Times. Forreston, Town Hall, Aug. 13 and 14. Subjects respectively: The soul, and spirit of man.

Elida, Aug. 15, in the S. H. Subject: The Influence of the Reformation of the 16th Century on moral and social ethics.

White Rock, Union chapel, 3 p. m., Aug. 18, Morn. and eve. in the Tent at Elida.

C. C. MARSTON.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

Basket Meeting, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co. Aug. 18. Picnic Dinner, Preaching at 10½ a. m. and 1 p. m. All are invited.

P. S. W. DEYO.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for [illegible] cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reifsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. F. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HINE, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Assyria, Barry Co., a grove meeting commencing Aug. 9 and continuing over Lord's day. A church will be organized. I expect to be present with Br. Holler. A. E. BABCOCK.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-25. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

The Southern Michigan camp-meeting will be held on James Paul's farm in the town of California, Branch co., Aug. 20-25. We hope to have Eld. J. V. Himes to preach the word; also that Br. W. C. Hicks will be on the ground with "Pioneer" Tent. Every effort will be put forth to make this meeting a success.

We hope to see Brethren from all parts of the southern district on the ground with tents, ready for action at the commencement of the meeting.

The quarterly conference will convene at that time and place.

This will be a large meeting and one of unusual interest. Let all who love the appearing of Jesus prepare for a glorious waiting upon the Lord.

Those coming by R. R. from the North will stop at Fremont Station, where they will find a team waiting to convey them to the camp ground. Those coming on the M. C. R. R. will change cars at Jackson. Take the Ft. Wayne Road to Fremont. Those on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. will change cars at Jonesville for Fremont.

Come brethren, in the name of the Lord; and come with prayerful hearts that you may see and feel a glorious revival of the work of grace among us.

Hay and grain for teams will be provided on the ground at reasonable rates.

For the Brn. J. R. PRESTON.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District will be held at the Tyndall S. H. in Dayton, Newaygo Co., commencing Friday, Aug. 16, and holding over Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance. All that come will be provided for.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Mt. Clemens, in the Court House, at 11 o'clock a. m. Aug. 11-25. D. W. FULLER.

WISCONSIN.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will all these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

The first Q. M. of the Western District will be held in Burns, Friday eve. Aug. 16, and hold over Lord's day. We expect Br. Brown, of Minnesota, to assist. Come one, come all.

P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. WM. SHELDON.

The Western District Campmeeting will be held at Tomah, on the Milwaukee and La Crosse R. R., at the junction of the West Wisconsin Road, 50 miles east of La Crosse, commencing Aug. 20, and holding over Lord's day. Hay and stable room will be furnished free for all who come and camp on the ground. This is a new place, but the people seem anxious to hear on the Lord's coming and kingdom. It is therefore desirable that we all make a sacrifice to attend from the beginning, that we may prepare a people for the coming of Jesus, and warn the perishing to flee from the wrath to come. Let all come forward to labor for the salvation of the perishing and thus get ready for the marriage feast. We shall have preachers who will preach Jesus. HE is sure to be there. Is not this sufficient to induce all the children to come?

Excursion tickets will be given to all going to Campmeeting on the West Wisconsin Railroad during the meeting. See that you ask for excursion tickets to and from the Advent Campmeeting at Tomah.

Now is the time for our friends to Rally, for the camp. Bring Jesus with you, and come praying.

Board and lodging can be had at the hotels for $4 a week.

What ministers? Brn. Sheldon, Adams, and Putnam. P. W. HOUGH.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andrus' big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievous wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited. C. H. CASE, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Kasota, where Brn. Butters and Chadwick may appoint, Saturday eve. Aug. 10, and over Sunday.

Plainview, Bently S. H. Sat. eve. Aug. 17, and over Sunday, 10½ a. m.

Viola, Stone S. H. 7½ p. m. Aug. 18.

St. Charles, Vowles S. H. Sat. eve. Aug. 24.

Utica, Cheatham's Grove, 10½ a. m., and 2 p. m. Aug. 25.

Neoka, Page S. H. 7½ p. m. Aug. 25.

S. C. WELLCOME.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The yearly grove meeting of the Church of God (called Adventists), will commence in the grove of Br. J. T. Ongley, in Bootville, Crawford Co., Aug. 23. Eld. C. F. Sweet will be (D. V.) present to preach the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus, having the spirit and the cause of the Master at heart. The meeting is expected to continue a week.

Friends from the east and west can take the express train to Union, on the A. & G. W. R. R., connecting with the train that leaves Union on the U. & T. R. R., at 1.45 p. m. for Lincolnville, arriving at L. 3.20 p. m. Friends from the South on the O. C. & A. R. R. R., arrive at L. 11.30 a. m. and 7 p. m. There will be a team to take passengers to the ground from Lincolnville on the arrival of the train at 2.20 p. m. The grove is 2½ miles west of L. In case of rain, a barn near the grove will be prepared.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Sycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawver, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open. J. V. HIMES.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Haye Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

NEW YORK.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

A boarding tent will be on the ground, furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, &c., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 85c. a day, for those who do not. Let all come well prepared with overcoats, overshoes, shawls, coverlets, straw ticks, &c., &c. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents.

Let all desiring tents correspond immediately (enclosing stamp for an answer) with Br. D. T. Cooper, 73 Mt. Hope Ave., Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season. WM. E. BROWN, SAM'L. H. WITHINGTON, PERRY M. GRINNELL, Committee.

The next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held, the Lord willing, in the State Tent on the Fairport Campground during the coming Campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at 9 a. m., Wednesday Aug. 14, when Br. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which the meetings will be held at such hours as will least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected and will be submitted for districting the Conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. MILTON H. MILES, Pres't.

WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 2. CHICAGO, AUGUST 13, 1872. WHOLE NO. 433.

Advent Christian Times.

Hear the Church of England

WHICH IS PROVED TO HAVE EXPELLED FROM HER ARTICLES THE DOGMA OF ENDLESS TORMENTS.

The deep and growing interest which is now taken by thousands in the inquiry, whether the holy Bible teaches the doctrine of endless torments, has led to serious, impartial, prayerful investigation, and has resulted in the undoubted conviction that such a doctrine is founded only on the tradition of Christian elders, and maintained only by unbelief in the sacred oracles and by a false, heathen philosophy. It was not held by the ancient Jewish church, nor by the primitive Christian church, and it is not taught by the word of God. When it is thought to be there, it can be supported only by a perversion of its inspired teaching and by imposing upon the texts which bear upon the subject a non-natural and illexical meaning. With deep sorrow, it must be confessed that it is still held by most denominations of Christians, and by some of them it is made an essential doctrine, which their ministers are obliged to teach.

A peculiar honor belongs to the church of England in this respect, for long since she has formally and authoritatively expelled it from her standards of doctrine; and in this she has been happily upheld by the chief court of the realm. For this vindication of God's revealed character, and this honor put upon his word, he will, in her day of trial, honor her. Let us enter upon the question as becomes those who wish to know the real truth, whether it be held by many or by few.

In 1552 a code of forty-two articles was framed and enacted by convocation of the whole realm. It was promulgated by royal authority and subscribed by the clergy at large. Among these the following were found:

> "XL. The souls of them that depart this life do neither die with the bodies, nor sleep idly."
>
> "They which say that the souls of such as depart hence do sleep, being without all sense, feeling, or perceiving until the day of judgment, or affirm that the souls die with the bodies and at the last day shall be raised up with the same, do utterly dissent from the right belief declared to us in holy Scripture."

This article clearly taught the immortality of the soul, and that it had a principle of life in itself and from its own nature.

> "XLII. All men shall not be saved at the length."
>
> "They also are worthy of condemnation who endeavor at this time to restore the dangerous opinion, that all men, be they never so ungodly, shall at length be saved, when they have suffered pains for their sins a certain time appointed by God's justice."

This article is opposed to what is now called Universalism, but what at one time was called Origenism, because it was invented and first introduced by Origen into the Christian church as a relief from the inconsistencies and perplexities in which this Alexandrine philosophy had involved him and others who received it.

In 1562 the whole synod of the church met in convocation, reviewed these forty-two articles, and deliberately expelled the above two; and the amended code, in its reformed state, was again promulgated by royal authority and again subscribed by the clergy. The legal ratification by the synod bears the above date of 1562, and in 1571 the reform code of the thirty-nine articles was rehearsed before the convocation, "which articles were deliberately read and confirmed agayne by subscription of the handes of the archbyshop and byshoppes of the vpper house, and by the subscription of the whole cleargie in the neather house of their convocation, in the yeare of our Lord God 1571."

For proofs of these acts, see the Liturgies of Edward VI., published by Parker society, and the prayer book interleaved by the Rev. W. M. Campion, B. D., fellow and tutor of Queen's, and Rev. W. J. Beamont, M. A., fellow of Trinity, with a preface by the Lord Bishop of Ely.

Now no one will suppose that by the expulsion of these two articles, the church of England intended her ministers to hold no doctrine on the future of the wicked; or, still less, that she intended that doctrine to be retained by them which she herself in assembled synod had expelled. Taking these two positions for granted, we may reasonably conclude that she intended, that the opposite of the expelled articles should be held, unless in any of her authorized utterances or formularies she had forbidden such a conclusion. Let us examine both the expelled articles in this point of view.

The opposite of the expelled fortieth article is, that the soul of man is not innately immortal; and as the prayer book does manifestly and everywhere teach that man was intended to be immortal, and is capable of immortality, the only inference is, that fallen, sinful man can be rendered immortal only by a vital union with him "who only hath immortality," and "who is the only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords," even Jesus our Savior. Now has our church any where or in any way forbidden us to take this the opposite view to that which was taught by the fortieth article? It is absolutely certain she has not done so. In no part of her teaching in the prayer book does she even hint that the wicked have intrinsic immortality, and that they must necessarily remain in endless living existence; but, on the contrary, she teaches again that fallen, helpless, sinful man can obtain immortality and eternal life only by Christ Jesus. By expelling, then, the fortieth article of the code of 1552 she has expelled also the unscriptural doctrine of the innate immortality of man; and she nowhere utters a contrary sentiment, but much that is confirmatory of the opposite to that which was expelled. In one of her oft repeated Bible texts she shows that it is "when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive;" implying that if he remains in his sins he shall die; as the prophet, in the same chapter, testifies, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." In another of her selected texts she leads her children to pray, "O Lord correct me, but with judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing." In one of her admirable collects we pray, that in the "last day we may rise to the life immortal;" which implies that all men do not necessarily rise to immortality, as if this were an intrinsic natural quality; and in another we ask, that "we may ever hold fast the blessed hope of everlasting life which is given to us in our Savior;" which implies that if life is only in him, it must be death out of him. These are given as specimens. Others might be easily found. And how indeed can we "thank God for our creation," if that creation renders us capable of, and liable to, endless torments, which the vast majority will indeed experience if popular opinion be true.

But how does this mode of argument stand with respect to the expelled forty second article? We have seen that it protested against Origenism, and if so, it might seem that its expulsion affirmed "that all men, be they never so ungodly, shall at length be saved." None indeed could effectually resist this inference, if the church, in other places had not carefully guarded her children from this "dangerous opinion" of Origen. Though she has nowhere said anything against the opposite of the fortieth article, she has unmistakably said much against the opposite of the forty-second; and if any should ask, Why then she expelled this article at all? the answer is, that unless she had done so she would not have conclusively announced the Scriptural doctrine of life through Christ only, and of death through sin only; nor would she otherwise have announced the extinction of the wicked and the termination of their torments by the "second death." This she has done by the expulsion of both the above articles; but the expulsion of either one of them alone would not have done it.

Where, then, does the prayer book still testify against the opposite of this article; that is, against Universalism?

Out of others, the following proofs are selected. In the Athanasian creed we meet with the phrases "shall perish everlastingly," and "they that have done evil shall go into everlasting fire." In the Communication service occur the following sentences: "He will burn the chaff with unquenchable fire," and, "Go, ye cursed, into the fire everlasting." Now if any perish, and that everlastingly, if they are like chaff burnt up with unquenchable fire, there can be no hope or possibility of their condition being any other than that described by "perish everlastingly," and "burnt up with unquenchable fire." The doom of such is final, and never to be reversed. Origen taught that wicked men, and even devils, would at length be saved; but these, and other such phrases, teach that if either men or devils are once lost, they shall be endlessly lost, without the possibility of ever being saved. We may, then, and we must, believe and teach, the opposite of the fortieth article; but we may not, and we must not, believe and teach, the opposite of the forty-second, if we would hear the church of England.

But it will be said that the above phrases are as much against the opposite of the fortieth article, as against the opposite of the forty-second. This, however, is an entire fallacy, arising from the fact that we have been accustomed to take them in a non-natural sense. "Perish everlastingly" has been thought to express—in the comparatively few cases where thought about it has been employed at all—an endless process, not an endless result. That is, a process of endless perishing, without the victim ever becoming perished. Whereas it expresses an endless and final result, arising from a temporary but decisive process. The words are not "shall be perishing everlastingly," but "shall perish everlastingly." "Perish" expresses that the act or process is finished, and "everlastingly" expresses that the perished state shall never be reversed, that there shall be no resurrection from it. "Burnt up with unquenchable fire," too, does not express an endless process of burning up the chaff, without the chaff ever becoming ashes, and never "burnt up;" as if the fire preserved the chaff, and never destroyed it. A more unnatural and senseless meaning than this was surely never imposed upon words. Nor is there any language in which "unquenchable fire" means a fire which shall be endlessly burning, but a fire which has gained such a mastery, that it cannot be put out till it has entirely devoured what is subjected to it; and it figures the final, inevitable, irreversible doom of the wicked. It expresses the absolute certainty of the punishment of the wicked, and the utter folly of hoping for an escape, not the endless process of torture of a living man without his ever becoming dead or e[illegible] not. The words "everlasting fire" mean the same thing; as St. Jude teaches, when he tells us that the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrha is set forth as an example or type of this very thing, and which certainly was not a type of an endless process of burning, but of an endless, irresistible result. Surely we should never have put any except these natural meanings upon the above phrases, were it not to make them square with a foregone conclusion; and now we have been so long accustomed to the non-natural, that we deem it natural, and thus put darkness for light. (To be concluded.)

A Word to the Weak Ones.

Why are you so weak? There must be some cause. Paul could say, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." Now the same Savior is ours. He is "made of God to us wisdom, righteousness and sanctification." To him we may look and live; for it has pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell. And Paul adds, "Ye are complete in him." So if we are weak it is not because the lack of supplies of strength, nor yet in not being free; for Jesus says he gives the Spirit (to them that ask) more freely than we give our children bread. Is it not rather (in part) found in the devices of Satan that we have listened to; that when a special meeting was appointed we thought we could not go until Lord's day, and then when we went we did not get the meat we most needed, neither had we a desire for the sincere milk of the word, because we have made no sacrifice indicating such desire; and because we have lost the order of the meeting. It is expected professors of religion will make the congregation on week days. Your minister adapts his discourse to the wants of his audience and thus builds up the church in holiness to the Lord. But on Lord's day the skeptic and unbeliever and the inquirer are before him. He must convince the gainsayer and give the reason of our hope to the inquirer. Ah! when will we learn to redeem the time?

Be the first at your meetings.

P. W. HOUGH.

The Only Alternative.

When the primitive church lost its power, the simple rites of the apostolic church were amplified and adorned and the self-denying spirit of apostles and martyrs took its flight. Christianity ascended the throne of the Cæsars, clothed itself in barbaric splendor, fared sumptuously every day, and became a proud, bloated carcass, splendid to the eye of men, but corrupt and offensive to the sight of God. Antichrist arose; and then formalism and bigotry were enthroned in the professed church of Jesus Christ.

What a lesson does this brief history of bygone days read to the living gospel churches of our day! Does it not say to them in tones of profound emphasis: Rest not satisfied with present attainments! Beware of indolence and inactivity. If you would enjoy the vigor and freshness and enthusiasm of youth; if you would maintain the purity and simplicity of the first love; if you would meet the demands of God, and of the age, become not proud of success; cease not your earnest efforts! Rest not from your self sacrificing toils! You must conquer or be conquered; either exist aggressively or not exist at all.—Primitive Piety Revived.

Sanctification.

"As aids in the blessed undertaking (to the higher life) let every means of grace be faithfully employed. Let there be more study of the sacred truths of the Bible. For the doctrine of revelation is the life of the soul, the foundation of all experimental and practical religion. A man's creed influences his conduct. Opinions are the seeds of actions. The heathen exemplification of the doctrine of the gospel in the Christian's life, must be the result of a clearer view, and a consequent more realizing persuasion of those doctrines. It has been well and truly said, that "the basis of a vigorous and intelligent piety can be laid only in correct Christian doctrine"—displace one of them from the system, or mismate and pervert it, and you give a new turn to the entire Christian life. Neglect them wholly, and your piety withers like a tree severed from its root, or is driven by the gusts of enthusiasm "like a paper kite cut loose from its string."

There can be no true religion without some knowledge of God's law, and man's guilt, and Christ's sacrifice. As well might we conceive of a building without a foundation, as of religion without doctrinal knowledge; for the duties of religion are all founded upon its doctrines, and from them all the motives to a godly life are derived. And, besides, it is divine truth that the Spirit employs in the work of sanctification. "Sanctify them through thy truth."—Old Work.

It is a terrible thing for one man to speak evil of another; and I think it is worse to think it. If you speak it, the man has time and opportunity to defend himself; put he cannot trace the thought. It is neither heroic nor manly to permit in yourselves judgments which nobody can reverse.

Poetry.

Your Life and Our Life.

A CONTRAST.

"What is your life? It is even vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." (James 4: 14.)

"When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.)

What is your life? A vapor!
A vain and empty show;
The glimmering of a taper.
The life to which we go
Is stable as its giver,
And full of holy love;
And, as a crystal river,
Flows through the land above.

That land, where naught can enter
But what is pure and bright;
Christ is its glorious center—
The Lamb, he is the light!
There shall be no more dying,
No more disease and pain;
And sorrow, sin, and crying,
Shall ne'er be known again.

For God throughout that nation
Will banish doubts and fears;
The God of our salvation
Will "wipe away all tears."
There friends shall meet each other,—
The father and the son,
The daughter and the mother,
And all in Christ be one,

When we God's time have waited
For Christ—our Lord and King,
With angel blast inflated,
The "Trump of God" will ring,
Resounding through creation!
Then all "in Christ shall rise."
(People of every nation,)
To meet him in the skies

All who through him are saved—
Their sins on Jesus cast—
All in the "Fountain" laved,
Will find a home at last.
Earth's weakest with its strongest;
Its meanest with its best;
Its oldest with its youngest,
Shall there forever rest.

—The Rock.

Hades.

We now proceed to see what the New Testament says of the soul of man. Its term for soul is psyche. There is no doubt that the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament, is identical with the psyche of the New Testament; i. e., that both terms are put for one and the same idea when they refer to the soul as a constituent part of man. The invariable translation of nephesh in the Septuagint version is psyche; and wherever in the New Testament a passage from the Old Testament is quoted, or referred to, in which the word nephesh occurs, it is translated by psyche. (Acts 2: 27, compared with Ps. 16: 10; Rom. 11: 3, compared with 1. Ki. 19: 10; 1 Cor. 15: 45, and Gen. 2: 7; Mat. 20: 28, and Is. 53: 10.) We therefore assume that the psyche or soul of the New Testament is equivalent to the nephesh or soul of the Old.

It is at once apparent of what advantage this is to us in the prosecution of our inquiry. It enables us, even before we have examined into the meaning of a single passage in which the word psyche occurs, to affirm of it everything that we have already established of the nepesh or soul of the Old Testament Scriptures. As, for example, that it is distinct from the spirit, and that it means that animal life which man shares in common with the brutes, that it is mortal and dies when a men dies, that during the entire state of death, i. e., the period of time ending at the resurrection, it is in hades, i. e., within the heart of the earth. All these things, established of the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament, are also established of the psyche or soul of the New Testament, for the simple reason that nephesh and psyche mean one and the same thing.

An objection may perhaps be raised to this, which, though it has no real foundation, may yet operate with some minds against the reception of truth. It is that the Greek psyche or soul had in the Greek language one uniform and established sense, which sense therefore must be supposed to be carried into the Septuagint and New Testament Greek; and that consequently this uniform Greek sense of the term is to be our absolute law in the interpretation of the Greek phrase, and may even be taken as determining the sense of its synonym nephesh in Hebrew instead of being determined by it. The supposed uniform sense of the Greek psyche or soul is by such objection supposed to be an immortal principle or person within the body, whose existence is not at all affected by the destruction of the body.

Now if the Greek had any such uniform and established sense, we freely admit the tremendous power of the argument. It is one which we ourselves used to determine the sense of the terms of the New Testament relative to future punishment, and to which no serious attempt at reply has ever been made. ("The Duration, etc., of Future Punishment." Third edition, ch. 4. Longmans & Co.) But to suppose that the same uniform sense is given to the term psyche or soul in the Greek language that is given in it to its terms for destruction, corruption, perishing, dying, is only to exhibit an utter ignorance of the variety of sense attributed in the Greek language of the term psyche according to the philosophical or theological sentiments of the speaker. Psyche, in the mouth of a Platonist, a Stoic, or an Epicurean, schools which represent the universal sentiments of Greek speakers and Greek thinkers, meant a totally different idea. It will be sufficient for this purpose to quote a passage from Arnobius, a Christian father of the third century, who was thoroughly conversant with Grecian sentiment. "This one," he says, speaking of the condition of souls, "thinks that they are both immortal, and survive the end of our earthly life; that one believes that they do not survive, but perish with the bodies themselves; the opinion of another, however, is that they suffer nothing immediately; but that, after the form of man has been laid aside, they are allowed to live a little longer, and then come under the power of death." (Arnobius, Adv. Gentes. 2: 27. Ante-Nicene Library. Edinburg: T. T. Clark.) Such were the widely different ideas entertained of the soul by Grecian speakers. In the mouth of a Platonist it meant a never-dying principle, more properly, person; in the mouth of an Epicurean it did not mean a person at all, but simply animal life which perished with the body; in the mouth of a Stoic it meant a principle or person of greater vitality than the body, and which would therefore survive the body; but which was, after all, but mortal, and must therefore after a period of survival, itself yield to death. It is quite evident, therefore, that we come to consider the meaning of the Greek psyche or soul wholly unfettered by any uniformity of sense attached to it in the Greek language. It had no such uniform sense. Grecian thinkers were wholly at variance with one another as to its meaning; Grecian speakers used it in senses wholly opposite to each other. In the mouth of one speaker it meant a person or individual; in the mouth of another it meant a quality of a person: in the mouth of one it meant what was immortal, and could never die; in the mouth of another it meant what was mortal, and must die. We are free, then, to examine the New Testament to see what is its view of the soul; we are free to assume that the sense attached to the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament is that attached to the psyche or soul of the New. The Grecian thinker was at fault upon the nature of the soul; we may examine wholly independently of him what God is pleased to tell us about it in his word.

We observed in our last chapter that the Old Testament attributed the possession of souls to the lower creatures as well as to man. We have now to remark that the New Testament does the same. In Revelation we are told that "the third part of the creatures that were in the sea and had life," literally "and had souls," "died." (Rev. 8: 9.) It does not matter at all for our argument whether the creatures here spoken of be literally creatures living in the sea, i. e., fishes, or men symbolized by such creatures. In either case the possession of souls is attributed to the creatures themselves. Our translators have to some extent disguised this by their translation of "life;" but the Greek scholar will at once see the force of the original Greek, stronger by being put in the plural than if it was put in the singular.

This possession by the lower creatures of soul naturally leads us to see, what we now will proceed to show, that the New Testament means by soul that which the Old Testament signified by nephesh; namely, animal life, that life which is possessed by every creature that has existence, and which perishes when the creature dies.

Such was the primary meaning of the Greek psyche or soul in the Greek language. Thus, Liddell and Scott's Dictionary gives us as the primary sense, "the breath, life, spirit, of man and animals." It came also, with the spread of the Platonic theory, to convey the idea which this philosopher entertained of the psyche, viz., as an immortal principle within the body. That animal life is its true sense in the New Testament appears in our authorized version in spite of those strong Platonic prejudices which forced our translators to suppose this fact as much as possible. Let it be remembered that the English word "soul" is that which Platonic theorists prefer to "life" as the translation of psyche, as conveying from usage better that idea which they attach to the Greek psyche. Yet in spite of this strong prejudice, which led them as frequently as possible to translate psyche by soul, out of ninety-eight places in which the Greek psyche occurs, and is translated either by soul or life, they have been compelled to translate it "life" in no less than forty-one places, because "soul"—meaning by soul their sense of it—would be in those places wholly inadmissible. Nor will it be thought out of place in this inquiry, that in the Gospels, where our Lord's words are recorded, our translators have been compelled to translate psyche by "life" in twenty-four places, while they have translated it by "soul" in only twenty places.

Now what is the force of this fact? A certain Greek word, psyche, occurs in the New Testament a certain number of times. The translators of that New Testament had two different meanings in their minds for this word; one of these meanings was "animal life," such as all living creatures have: another was "an immortal principle," which they supposed to exist within man, and which they called by the word "soul." Their strong prejudice led them as frequently as possible to suppose that psyche was put for the supposed immortal principle; and yet with all their prejudices they are compelled to acknowledge by their translation of it, that in very nearly half the places where it occurs in the New Testament, it cannot by any possibility be supposed to mean the immortal principle; while, as used by Christ himself, they are forced to confess that in the majority of instances he cannot be supposed to have intended by the psyche an immortal principle in man. Surely such a confession, coming from such a source, is argument of no weak nature that "animal life," and not an "immortal principle," is the true and proper sense for psyche in the New Testament.

But we must examine a little closer into this matter. We affirm that, whatever be the meaning of the Greek psyche in the New Testament, it should certainly have one uniform meaning throughout that New Testament whenever it is used as descriptive of a constituent part of human nature. We do not deny that it may have, when thus used, different translations; but we do contend that those different translations should be taken as expressive of one and the same idea. We find no fault with the word being sometimes translated "soul" and sometimes "life;" but then we do insist that "soul" and "life" should mean one and the same thing. To suppose the word psyche to have two different senses when spoken of as an important constituent part of human nature, and that we are sometimes to take it in one of these senses and sometimes in another, when the New Testament itself does not hint that it is to be differently understood,—that we are to mix up and alternate their sense just as we please, is, to our minds, to interpret the language of God's word as we would not dare to interpret any book of man.

Let us take an example. Plato has written a book, his Phædo, upon the nature of the psyche or soul of man. This word psyche occurs in a great number of places throughout this book. He affirms and denies a great many things of this psyche. What would be thought of an interpreter of Plato who would venture to give to this important word of Plato two entirely distinct senses, and attribute now one sense and now another to the word, without the smallest intimation from Plato that he ever used the word in different senses, or the smallest clue from him to distinguish, if he so used it, how he used it in the various places? what, I say, would be thought of an interpreter of Plato, who would say that in one paragraph Plato used it in one sense, and in another paragraph that he used it in another, while Plato himself never hinted anything of the kind? What would be thought of the interpreter of Plato who would in one sentence of Plato take this word in one sense, and in the very next sentence take it in quite a different sense, although Plato himself was proceeding in one unbroken line of argument? we confidently say that such an interpreter would be dismissed with contumely as assuming a task for which he had shown himself utterly unworthy, and held up to scorn as introducing a principle of interpretation which would throw into utter confusion all human thought. This principle of interpretation, which would be rejected in the case of a commentator or translator of Plato, or any human author, is the very principle which the translators of one authorized version of God's word have gone upon, and hitherto without rebuke. Against it we for one, raise our voice.

HENRY CONSTABLE.

Will there be War?

BY A BERLINER RESIDENT.

BERLIN, July 2, 1872.

To several intelligent Prussians, versed in political affairs, I have offered to bet a groschen that within two years there will be a general war in Europe; but all are more ready to bet on my side than to take me up. That Von Moltke thinks so, is evident from his earnest plea in Parliament for extending over all the empire the strong military discipline of Prussia, and also for completing railways which should facilitate the transport of troops. That Von Roon thinks so, is evident from the extraordinary diligence in the manufacture of war material and the testing of improvements, and also from the number of regiments held in readiness for marching-orders. That Bismarck thinks so, is evident from his anxiety to unify and consolidate the empire by a vigorous internal policy, and to cultivate friendly relations with Italy, Austria, and Russia. That the Emperor thinks so, is evident from the frequency of his military councils, and the assiduity with which he follows up all the details of army organization. He can never be imposed upon, as Louis Napoleon was, by an army on paper, which has no equivalent in the barracks and arsenals. The undertone of society and the press indicates the same feeling of uneasiness about the future peace of Europe; and at times this finds a bold utterance in leading political journals. For instance, in taking up my paper, this morning, my eye was arrested by the good, homely English of Oliver Cromwell—"Keep your powder dry"—applied as a timely maxim for the German Empire; and there are frequent warnings of a like tenor in papers representing every shade of political opinion.

Yet one every deprecates war. The memory of personal losses in thousands of families is too recent, the pressure of taxation is too heavy, the cost in every way is too terrible for anybody to desire a repetition of the scenes of 1866 and 1870–71. Nor can any one give a definite reason for the prevalent feeling that war is likely to break out afresh upon fields hardly yet dried from the stain of battle. There is not a speck of war to be seen on the horizon; there is no question of diplomacy that threatens a disturbance of the peace; the very article that warns Germany to keep her powder dry argues that never since German politics began to command a place in Europe have the indications of peace been so favorable as now; yet, as Palmieri sitting in the observatory on Mount Vesuvius one day in the spring of 1871, with his practised eye studying the most delicate movements of the seismograph, said "There is going to be a great eruption; it may not come for a year, but it is sure to come,"—so men who are supersensitive to political symptoms detect the premonitory tremors, feel the electric currents in the air, and make ready for another great explosion.

Germany has two deadly enimies, and also two jealous neighbors. France hates Germany as the cause of her ruin (though Germany only unmasked the inner degradation of France)—and Rome hates Germany for presuming to be. Neither of these just now appears to have much power of mischief against the colossal strength and the scientific discipline which Germany has exhibited; yet the past ten years have shown what trivial events or unlooked-for combinations may cause an outbreak of war, and all evil is possible to a persistent hate and an unscrupulous bigotry. One is surprised at the numerical strength which France already exhibits in the reorganization of her army. Shrewd observers here even look upon the Thiers plan of conscription as better adapted to a speedy "revenge" on the part of France than the more solid and durable Prussian system of universal military training. The hatred of Germany by even the most enlightened and fair-minded Frenchman is intense and undisguised; and so long as a whole nation is fed upon the one idea of revenge, we know that the volcano is seething within, and "a great eruption is sure to come."

As to Rome, it is the fashion of Anniversary-platform oratory in America, to represent the Papacy shorn of its concordat in so many States, and stripped of its temporal power, as a cipher in the affairs of Europe; but as Autocrat over the church, the Pope is stronger than ever before in just those countries where the State has declared the concordat at an end. He now wields his infallible power directly over the whole body of the clergy as his personal dependents and his helpless tools; and he is seeking to make the Jesuits masters of every commanding post within the church as an entrenchment of Roman power against the State. His ambition to repeat the role of Innocent III. is thwarted by the new position and policy of Germany, and the disruption of the German empire is now the watchword of the Vatican equally with Versailles. For this the agency of Rome is two-fold; first, embroiling other powers in war with Germany, and next promoting popular disaffection in Germany itself. The recent fiasco of Don Carlos was an attempt of the Ultramontanists to reconstruct the map of Europe in the interest of Rome, and to convert Spain into an ally of France against Germany. It is well understood that the Pope is dabling in the politics of Russia and Austria in the hope of kindling their jealousy of Germany to a flame of hostility, and hence the announcement of the intended visit of the Emperor of Austria to Berlin has stirred the whole Ultramontane press to the liveliest rage.

In Germany itself the political war with Rome has come to a pitched battle. A Roman bishop excommunicates a catholic teacher for refusing to teach in the public schools the doctrines of the infallibility of the Pope, and of his supremacy over the Emperor. The Government threatens to deprive the Bishop of his revenues derived from the State. An Archbishop excommunicates a catholic chaplain for celebrating a service upon the "Old-catholic" model; the government insists that he shall recall his denunciation of an officer of the army who had simply performed his duty to his regiment. The Council of the Empire has now formulated the act of Parliament concerning the Jesuits into a decree, excluding the Order from Germany, and forbidding its members to act in its behalf in church or school, or by missions and other modes of propagandism. The Pope replies by exhorting the catholics of Germany to redouble their activity for the faith, by warning Bismarck that a government founded by violence and wrong ,and directed against the church, cannot stand, and by predicting that the stone out of heaven shall fall upon the feet of this new Colossus, and break it to pieces. All this is an appeal to the passions of the catholic population of Germany.

The Jesuits are courting the internationals or Social-democrats—as yet, however, with no marked success. At a great meeting of Socialists held last Sunday in one of the Theater-gardens of Berlin, a speaker proposed a union of the Democrats with the clerical party; but he was drowned in the clamors of the assembly, and a vote was passed approving the new law against the Jesuits. With all our strikes, etc., there are no symptoms of a popular outbreak; and yet, as when Mephistopheles has been upon the stage, there is a smell of sulphur in the air.

With these data, you can form your own judgment of the probabilities of war. Just now you may be disposed to laugh at my prognostications; but if war does come, then please remember that "I told you so." Meanwhile let me advise the Evangelical Alliance to hurry up its meeting of international fraternity in New York before the next storm-cloud bursts upon this side of the water. Your "indirect" war-talk gives us no apprehension. The press laugh at it, and everybody is tired of it.—Chris. Union.

The Body, and its Relation to the Soul.

There never was a greater perversion of the Gospel than that which makes this world and the people in it, their physical and their moral health, their virtue and their obedince to all God's laws, anything less than its precise and special object. It was to save the world that Christ lived and died. His attention was divided between men's bodies and souls, healing their sickness and curing their sins, now the giving light to the physically blind and now light to the spiritually darkened, now food to the starving and the sick, now the bread of truth and the water of life to them that hungered and thirsted for righteousness.

To save men's lives, not to destroy them, to make the world the abode of happy peace instead of cruel wars, the scene of well-regulated appetites and life-insuring moderation, in place of reckless passions and shortlived lusts; to establish justice and truth, mild government, social equality, domestic faithfulness, simple habits and tastes, charity, temperance, cleanliness—these were Jesus' more immediate aims. And if he had been the actuary of a vast Life Insurance company he could not have promulgated principles and precepts better fitted to extend the length of human life, to make men happy and charming, than he has done in the Gospel. Probably no rules of longevity ever equalled the beatitudes, and if the great offices of Life Insurance took no policies except on truly Christian lives, their fortunes would be most speedily made.

As a rule, health and virtue, physical and moral well-being, are not separable, nor can they be dissociated. Of course there are numerous exceptions, but they are not worth considering in the rule. It is capable of absolute demonstration that neglect of the body is injury of the soul; that unhealthy communities are immoral communities; that the statistics of longevity and of virtue accurately agree; that a high death-rate is a high vice-rate; that times of pestilence, violence and war are times also of moral degradation and spiritual indifference; that to render life stable and secure is to make virtue, order and piety abundant and firm.

No greater fallacy ever prevailed than the opinion that panic, pestilence, apprehension and uncertainty of life summon men to duty, create a wholesome fear of God, and induce preparation for death. They create, on the contrary, recklessness, intemperance moral apathy, unhappiness, want and sorrow, when made the rule and habit of life. It is the occasional affliction falling like a passing cloud on a happy life, it is the exceptional adversity, the temporary grief, that benefits the soul, arouses thoughtfulness and chastens and elevates the heart. But prosperity, abundance, health, happiness are the great friends and upholders of virtue and piety. Those who, from age to age, ascribe the downfall of public morals to the growth of material prosperity, the increase of wealth, the diffusion of comfort and luxury, will one day be reckoned with the dreamers who anticipated the ruin of England from the substitution of machine work for hand-labor, or from the passage of the Corn laws. The more comforts and luxuries (for all comforts are luxuries at first) you can secure to the people, the more do you increase their interest in order and peace, refine their manners, soften their sensibilities to moral considerations, and increase their amenableness to reason and duty. Is it the prosperous, the comfortable, the well-housed and well-clothed, the plenteously-fed and happily-situated half of a community of whose moral and spiritual condition we have least hope? If we could raise the other half to their level of comfort how comparatively easy would it be to moralize and religionize their hearts.

It seems to be a superstition of the pious, that body and soul are natural foes—that what is good for one is bad for the other; that the interests of man, considered as a denizen of this world and as an heir of the next, are at war with each other. It is a terrible admission. Made in defence of spiritual interests, it acts only as an ally of worldly ones. Teach men that body and soul cannot live in harmony, that they have separate policies and require treatment by incompatible rules; allow them to believe that morality and piety are sacrifices of the body to the soul, and you have given them a fatal reason for plunging into vices that destroy both. But persuade them, demonstrate to them that immortality and irreligion are sources of present as of future misery; that they are as wasteful of this world as of another; that God is the Ruler of the body and the soul; that his laws are equally sacred over both; that he is just as anxious to make men happy now as at any future time, and just as ready to set up his kingdom here as any where, and you will then get the body on the side of the soul and man's instincts of happiness on the side of morality and piety.

It is amazing what confusion exists in regard to the relation of matter and mind, and how eagerly the world has separated theoretically what God has practically bound inseparably together. The materialism from which we suffer most is the gross blindness that allows the moral and spiritual welfare of man to be crushed under physical disadvantages: When bad air, crude food, crowded tenements, filthy gutters, or dust-laden atmosphere are suffered to brutalize thousands of human beings, to keep them in a state of desire and to require constant stimulants to debase their instincts of delicacy and their taste for virtue, to sow the seeds of early death or lingering disease and make life either burdensome or hateful; when such external conditions are found to promote cruelty, malignity, theft, and murder; when the schoolmaster and the missionary return from such neighborhoods and tell us that you might as well send the dogs and horses to school or preach the Gospel to the swine as seek to educate and Christianize, by primer and catechism, these brutalized human beings, then it is that Materialism is wreaking her vengeance —then it is that we are fallen under her curse.

Holy Living.

The best argument for the possibility, and for the power, of a holy life, is the fact of such a life itself. There is no scriptural defense of the doctrine, even, and no verbal illustration of its character so effectual as the actual triumph, in a human experience, of grace over nature, love over selfishness, quiet over restlessness, trust over doubt sweetness of temper over the fretting cares and sharp troubles of life, spirituality over worldliness, and purity over the thought and experience of uncleanness. There is no gainsaying such an exalted life as this. Its involuntary power convinces the unbeliever, and its sweet, spiritual, and manifest triumph encourages the struggling but weak believer. All the forcible professions that human lips can utter, and all the constraining power of repeated Scripture declarations, have far less ability to move the hearer, than this truth of God made flesh in the daily life and temper of a consecrated child of his. It is not indispensible to be able to prove that divine love can conquer the human affections, and reign over them; and that our motives and trust in God may be perfectly pure and unwavering, but it is requisite that we should be holy, as our Father in heaven is holy. When Christ fully triumphs over the heart, and reigns supreme in his kingdom there, the sublime fact is declared to all, by a silent eloquence more persuasive than words. No man can trouble such a soul, and no man will call in question his full discipleship; for he bears in his body—in all his conversation—"the marks of the Lord Jesus." The Church needs illustrations of holiness more than defenses of the doctrine. The humble saint may not add to the growing literature on this great topic, but may do a higher service by ornamenting the argument with an "illustration from life." Stop not then to prove the doctrine; experience all that is involved in it, and then force a doubting world to believe it, by the actual exhibition of truth before their eyes.—Zion's Herald.

The Prevalence of Falsehood.

It is always far easier to denounce the vices of other times than to refrain entirely from those of our own. One of the most common among the prevalent evils of our day is falsehood—lying—in its various forms and shades. We think there has been no time since the days of Luther when the standard of truth-speaking among Christians was so low as at present. Certain small unveracities steal into the speech of good men and women, and become habitual because they are supposed to be harmless. It would be more frank to say, because they are so convenient. "They do not deceive, everybody knows what they mean," we often hear people say of these current equivocations. But the children of each generation have to learn over again the lesson of this double-dealing, this playing with words, when we say one thing and mean another. The lesson is, to every well-born child, a painful and most mischievous one. Besides, the use of the "harmless" conventional fiction takes off the fine edge of our sense of truth; it lessens our feeling of the obligation to be strict and exact, and leads to loose and careless habits as to statements and promises.

It seems clear that there has been a great increase of these evils within the last few years, especially in the Christian Church. We hear on every side of men who make the highest profession of Christian character, who make promises and engagements apparently without any thought of keeping them and who seem to think a failure to keep their word a very trivial matter, unless there is some important financial interest depending upon the fulfilment of their engagements; in which case policy plainly favors the same course of action that is required by rectitude. Let us beware of lying—Lib. Christian.

Activity Essential to Real Life.

Very few people perceive how much of the true life and successful work of a church depends upon its members meeting each other frequently, knowing and seeing one another, uniting in some kind of duty or activity. The real life of a church is not a matter of numbers or of wealth,it is a matter, on one side, of intercourse and sympathy between the individual members of the church. One great reason that people in the church do not care more about their religion and get more good out of it is, that they have so little to do in the services and worship and whole work of the church.. They are in a large measure passive in all of it. The minister preaches to them, and preaching is often a means of grace to a minister, simply because it requires activity on his part; but the people listen to the preaching, listen to the singing, listen to the praying, without taking much part in either of them.

Now no one can live upon what is done for him. Our powers can grow only by use. There is no healthful life without activity. And a cordial and sincere intercourse with our fellow-Christians is necessary for personal growth in religian and for the success of the church's work—Liberal Christian.

Clean Scrip.

How do, I know he's converted? Why, this way: When I carry round the hat in my Bible class he always puts in clean scrip. Never a ragged and tattered shin-plaster—never a bill on a far-away bank from him. He always gives to the Master the best he has, and always gives a little more than any body expected of him. And so, I regard him as a convert. Can anybody question the reality of that conversion which bears such practical fruit?

And yet, perhaps, we are too censorios. How many worthy disciples there are who will, instinctively, pick out the torn scrip—rather than the bright and clean—for the contribution-box. How many members, "in full and regular standing," put a doubtful bank-note into "the Treasury of the Lord" now and then, in the hope that "the church may collect something on it." Our convert does nothing of the sort. He gives "clean scrip" every time.—Ex. and Chron.

The Christian Life.

Almost a Christian.

If we be almost Christians, let us see what it is to be almost a Christian. Almost a son, is a bastard; almost sweet, is unsavoury; almost hot, is lukewarm, which God spueth out of his mouth (Rev. 3. 16). So almost a Christian, is not a Christian, but that which God squeth out of his mouth. A Christian almost is like a woman who dieth in travail: almost she brought forth a son but that "almost" killed the mother and son too. Almost a Christian, is like Jeroboam, who said "It is too far to go to Jerusalem to worship," and therefore chose rather to worship calves at home.

Almost a Christian is like Micah, who thought himself religious enough, because he had gotten a priest into his house. Almost a Christian is like the Ephraimites, who could not pronounce Shibboleth, but Sibboleth. Almost a Christian is like Ananias, who brought a part, but left a part behind. Almost a Christian is like Eli's sons, who polled the sacrifices; like the fig tree which offered Christ nothing but leaves; like the virgins who carried lamps without oil; like the willing unwilling son, who said he would come and would not.

What is it to be born almost? If the new man be born almost, he is not born. What is it to be married almost unto Christ? He who is married but almost is not married. He who gives almost, gives not, but denieth; he who believeth almost, believeth not but doubteth. Can the door which is but almost shut keep out the thief? Can the cup which is but almost whole hold any wine? Can the ship which is but almost sound keep out water? The soldier which doth but almost fight is a coward. The physician which doth but almost cure is a slubberer. The servant who doth but almost labor is a loiterer.—Henry Smith.

Prayer.

Christ is the New Testament Temple, and the House of Prayer for all people. "The time cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father." Formerly, the Lord said, "In all places where I record my name, I will bless you;" but now he has recorded his name in no place, but in a Person; and that person is everywhere—not seen, but really and truly present—and hence he says (Mat. 18: 19), "If two of you on earth"—in any part of earth—"it shall be done for you by my Father in heaven." Now mark the reason: "For where two or three are met together in my name, there am I in the midst"—in the midst between you and my Father—and I will get the thing for you. And it is no matter whether Jesus is seen or not seen; for he is as effectually present when not seen as when seen; and hence Paul says, he is the one Mediator between God and man; and this being the case, he says, "I will that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands;" for the Mediator is everywhere. What Job longed for we now possess; we have "the day's-man between God and man, who can lay his hand on both;" we can come to him, and he can go to God for us or take us to God.

We must not think that God will not hear our prayers till we are very holy. We look at the men whose prayers have been heard and the answers recorded, and we say, Well, I am not like Abraham and Jacob, and Moses and Elijah; and when we compare or contrast ourselves with such men we are apt to be hindered in prayer, if not from prayer. But see how David puts it: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." (Ps. 66: 18). He does not say, If I have iniquity in my heart: for David had iniquity in his heart; the best man that ever lived had; but he says, If I regard it—if I look on it with pleasure—if I indulge it, God cannot hear me. And mark, though David had iniquity and it came out in ugly forms, he got victory over it. There was always penitence connected with his earnest prayer; hence, when he prayed for his child, he fasted as well as prayed. He had sin in his heart, but he did not regard it. But you may say, How do we know that we do not regard it? Well, we are not regarding it when we are struggling against sin, when fighting with it, and when we get the length that "our heart does not condemn us."

The answer to prayer often comes in the influence of prayer. Even God's people are often looking for an answer to prayer when they have got it. God sometimes does not give what we ask, but gives us something more honoring to him, and, on that account, better for us. He makes us satisfied to want what we ask, because it pleases him. He does not give us what we ask, but he gives us himself in a new way and a fuller measure. David's child grew sick, the life of the father seemed bound up in the child, and he fasted and prayed for seven days and nights. At last the child dies; but the prayer was answered in David's sweet experience; for we read that he rose and washed himself, and went to the house of God, and came back and said, "Set on bread," and he did eat. He lost his will in God's, and was happy; and he would gladly have lost many a sweet earthly blessing if made up by heavenly comforts. Paul had a thorn in the flesh that made it a day of trouble—a day of deep distress. Well did Paul call on God; yea, "I besought the Lord thrice," that the thorn might be removed, and the messenger dismissed. And did God answer or deliver? Yes. But how? Not by plucking out the thorn, and sending away Satan's messenger; but he strengthened Paul with strength in his soul—"My grace is sufficient for thee, and my strength is made perfect in thy weakness." And Paul glorifies God, "Most gladly will I glorify in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me; for when I am weak, then I am strong."

God often gives us a personal acceptance, and, in that, an assurance that our petition will be honored in due time. I think this is a very sweet way of dealing with us. He says, "Come near, my child;" and "if we know that he hears us, we know that we have the things we desired." Hannah prayed and wept; old Eli reproved her by mistake, but Hannah got an assurance of her personal interest in God, which was better to her than ten sons; and in this she had a sweet persuasion that her prayer would be answered in a way that would honor the father and benefit the child; and so "she was no more sad." In the acceptance of our offering is an evidence of the acceptance of our person, and that secures the acceptance of our prayer. Hence Elijah said to his servant, as he went up the mount to meet with God, "Tell Ahab to rise, &c., for there is a sound of abundance of rain." (1 Ki. 18: 41.) Where did the prophet's ear catch the sound of rain? He saw sights that others cannot see, and heard sounds that others cannot hear. He heard the rush of rain in the presence of God; and when God opens, every promise becomes vocal with the sound with which the promise is filled. I can say I hear the sound of rain—of abundance of rain—when I put the shell of God's promise to the ear of my faith. I listen to that promise—"I will pour water on the thirsty, and floods on the dry ground;" and I see "the dry land a pool, and the thirsty land pools of water."

But then, when our persons are accepted our prayers become wrestling with God. And hence we read that Elijah prayed in prayer: for you will see that there is prayer without prayer and a prayer in prayer. A form without a substance, and a body without a spirit, is dead. So it is with a form of prayer. Take a nut, and break it and plant the shell, and it will not grow; but plant the nut with the kernel in the shell, and it will grow. So let the spirit of prayer be in the form, and it will prevail with God.

But when our persons are accepted, prayer becomes a fed desire in the heart. When will Zion begin to prosper? When God sets watchmen thick on her walls, and when we see them restless with desire. Yes, prayer is the new man desiring; it is cardiphonia—the heart vocal with desire—and hence, 1 John 5: 14: If God hear our prayer, we know that we have the things we desired. Yes, God must grant the desire he has awakened in the new heart. When my heart is big with a heaven-born desire, I am sure I shall be satisfied with a heavenly blessing. Hence this is so beautifully embodied in that emphatically expressed form (Mk. 11: 23): "Verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed and be thou cast into the sea, and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith." Yea, "he will fulfil the desires of them that fear him."—Wilson, of Abernyte.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 13, 1872.

JOSHUA V HIMES,........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

THE first response to a recent appeal for help for an afflicted family, was, we are told from an Advent minister. So was the second. And quite half of the sum received was from the ministry. These gifts certainly were not of their abundance; for in general they know much more about lacking than abounding. Our ministry possess large hearts and noble souls, and are doing a great and good work. Let us not in addition tax them with the support of our poor that the church or families should see to.

OF one thing we are tired and sick, at least as coming from respectable opponents. It is the subterfuge involved in the following proposition: 'If spirit means breath, translate it so in all your quotations.' To urge such points as these upon an intelligent materialist will surely serve to confirm him in his faith. The objection is so senile that it is almost impossible to separate contempt for it from contempt of a cause that can employ on any terms such disreputable reasoning. Is there an intelligent immaterialist who dares deny that 'spirit' does mean breath? Not one. Very well then: just remember and thus "translate it in all your quotations." You have made your own bed, do not complain that it is too short.

LOOKING over our "copy" last week we found some articles written with a lead pencil, blurred and difficult to read, requiring more time than we can afford to fit them for the printer. We wonder that writers will pay so little heed to an editor's reasonable requests. He says, Please use a pen, and white or light colored paper, and they will straightway send a letter written with a lead pencil, and perhaps on dark colored paper. We do not make such requests just for the pleasure of making them, but because they involve practical points in our work. Those who will write on only one side of the paper, and leave a margin of one inch on the left hand side of each page, and write with ink (not red) will really confer a favor upon us. Will not all our correspondents please read the 'Business Agent's Department,' and make a note of the requests there set forth?

IT is unfortunate for theories that facts will sometimes give them a staggering blow. For instance, the Christian Era asks, can a dog reason? Does instinct, as popularly understood, account for all the actions of brutes? We submit to the thoughtful the following incident taken from the Lawrence American:

> A tradesman in this city, owner of a dog and cat, has been in the habit of letting the dog go to market and buy his own meat. The dog would bring the meat home and deposit it somewhere in the store, and when feeling the gnawings of hunger would go and get it. The cat acquired a habit of stealing his meat, and the dog would lie down near it, watch for the thief, and when the cat came would drive her away. But at last he become tired of this business, carried the meat down cellar and covered it up in the sand. One day the owner of the dog thought he would get the meat, bring it up stairs, and see what the dog would do. After taking a nap, the dog went down cellar in search of his meat, and commenced digging, as usual, but there was no meat to be found. He laid himself down a minute, as if in thought, and then rushed up stairs, and, espying the cat, "went for her," and chased her all around the store, as closely as a police officer in pursuit of a thief. Can a dog reason?

SOME little time since we received a letter —anonymous—asking 'where all the good people mentioned in "the Editor's Journal" lived.' The writer complained that 'he couldn't find such good folks.' Very likely. Writers of anonymous letters could not be expected to discern the good qualities of their neighbors. But they exist for all that.

There are two ways of passing through the world: One picking out for consideration and, too often, talk, the poorer qualities of the characters of those we meet—something as asses will take to thistles, though there be the best of grass or clover in the pasture; while others look on the best side of every character, and endeavor to encourage and develop it. Any who wish to do so, can find out the worst qualities of all their associates. Our own experience is that 'the thistles' of human nature will make themselves felt with sufficient frequency if we neither seek to know or cultivate them. Without looking for perfection in anyone, we can find 'good people' everywhere we go, and we must be pardoned if we persist in loving best to consider the sunny side of every character.

HO, FOR AMBOY!

We call special attention to the Amboy campmeeting from Sep. 7 to the 15th. Brethren and sisters of the Advent churches in Illinois, let us make a noble and generous sacrifice to the Lord this year, in a feast of tabernacles, that shall be worthy of our faith and hope. Let us give the whole week to the Lord. Please do not delay coming until the middle or close of the week. This is an error. Let nothing within the bounds of reason detain you from the meeting. Come and spend the week in work for God and souls.

Come with your tent. Make a tent to meet the wants of your family, and keep house. Be at home and free, that you can engage in the service of God without distraction. Come one and all, and make this meeting with God's blessing, best of all. Let all come with the purpose of renewing their covenant with God. Let us seek a fulness, all the followers of Christ, in entire consecration, in preparation to meet our soon-coming Savior.

We repeat it. Let all make a sacrifice of time and means for the Lord. And this not alone in Illinois, but in every State.

THE THREE THEORIES.

There are among Christians three theories of the condition of man in death. The most widely accepted view is that the soul enters heaven or hell immediately at death. Others think the saint then enters Paradise, a place not equal to heaven, but still where it is good to be; while the sinner is thrust into Tartarus, another apartment in hades, to be tormented, but nothing to the extent he will be after the reunion of soul and body in the resurrection, when he will be consigned to the unending and more awful miseries of gehenna—the "twin hells" of C. H. Spurgeon. The third theory is that the dead are unconscious.

The first two theories mutually destroy each other, and leave a clear field for the third. The first has been aptly termed "the Radical Theory." If it was apostolic it early fell into disrepute, for Justin Martyr affirmed that those who believed it should not be esteemed Christians at all, any more than Sadducees or other heretics. But the Radical Theory flourished and in time became, as it yet remains, the standard of orthodoxy. Indeed, the premises being granted the Radical position cannot be turned. Their argument is thus briefly stated:

When the righteous die their disembodied souls go to be with Christ.

But Christ is in heaven.

Therefore the souls of the righteous go to heaven at death.

No immaterialist dare dispute the major premise. The minor proposition is confirmed by the undeviating testimony of Scripture that Christ is gone "into heaven," even "heaven itself," "to appear in the presence of God;" to whom, also, the spirit returns when the dust goes to dust again. There is no escape from the conclusion: it is inevitable. If the major premise is admitted; it must also be admitted that the righteous go to heaven at death.

But the advocate of the second theory here reminds the Radical that Jesus and the repentant outlaw both went to the same place on the day of the crucifixion, to Paradise. But after his return from hades Christ said to Mary, "I am not yet ascended to my Father," who is in heaven (Jno. 20: 17); but that event is yet future: "I ascend unto my Father" hereafter. He had been in Paradise, but not in heaven. Paradise is not heaven, but an apartment in hades, just as is taught in the heathen mythology, and believed by the Pharisees, whose opinion was endorsed by Christ in the parable of Dives and Lazarus. And his opponent further urges upon the Radical that David is not ascended to heaven (Acts 2: 34); and that Jesus himself said that no man, save the one, hath ascended up to heaven. (Jno. 3: 13.) The dead all go to sheol or hades, and not to heaven.

It will be seen that each party admits the other's premises, and each as flatly denies the inevitable conclusion. It follows, therefore, that both are in error, else the Scriptures contradict themselves. As the latter alternative cannot be entertained for a moment, we must accept the first; and we find the error lying on the surface of either theory—the notion that the real man, the ego, is a rational spirit entity capable of conscious existence apart from its body. "Thou shalt not surely die" was the first promulgation of this doctrine upon record: it brought disaster and ruin to Eden; and its fruit from that day to this has been of a character to condemn it. Establish the doctrine of any proposition as truth, and Romanism, Mohammedanism, Spiritism, the false notions of a future life maintained by the heathen, and a thousand minor forms of error fall like the house upon the sand in the Savior's parable. But the word of God is not affected. Not a promise has to be reworded; not a threat revised, or a phrase altered. "Immortal souls," or "undying souls," or "undying human spirits" were never found in its pages, and are not missed therefrom. THE RESURRECTION remains, as it has ever been, the only revealed hope of a future life.

It is unfortunate for immaterialism that its phraseology does not occur in the Bible, and that its propositions cannot be affirmed in Scriptural language. And when we add the fact that its phrases and propositions can be found in exact terms in systems of philosophy and theology constructed by uninspired men, the imputation of a base origin is quite unavoidable. For Alexander Campbell well said—"We choose to speak of Bible things in Bible words, because we are always suspicious that if the word is not in the Bible the idea which it represents is not there:....the things taught by God are better taught in the words under the names which the Holy Spirit has chosen and appropriated than in words which man's wisdom teaches." Or, as Mr. Braden once said, more concisely, "Our doctrine must be in the words of the Spirit....We must call Bible things by Bible names. Possibly this principle might be pushed to unwarrantable extremes, but certainly those who inscribe "Bible names for Bible things" upon their banner should not resort to human philosophy or either phraseology or ideas. If they do so, they certainly become obnoxious to the suspicion which Mr. Campbell throws upon them—they leave the Bible because the idea they wish is not there.

CHRISTIAN ZEAL.

Zeal is but another word for earnestness, coupled with energy—without it little can be accomplished for ourselves or for others. Misdirected zeal working in the interests of ambition, and self-aggrandizement, has wrought much evil in the world. It was zeal that lighted the fires of persecution and gave the martyrs to the cruel flames. It was zeal that fired the heart of the crusaders to fight with carnal weapons for the recovery of the Holy Sepulcher. It was zeal, cruel and malicious, that founded the inquisition and caused first the Romanist and afterwards the Protestant to seek a correction of heresy by an appeal to brute force. It was zeal, kindled by blind hate, that caused the horrors of St. Bartholomew's day. Zeal carried the Moham[illegible]dan flag in one hand and the sword in the other, and a falsely called Chri[illegible]y has done little better. An [illegible] German writer has computed [illegible] not less than forty millions of pe[illegible]ns have been destroyed in so-called religious wars and persecutions. [illegible] Roland, standing on the sca[illegible]med victim of Jacobin zeal, said [illegible] Liberty! what crimes are c[illegible] thy name!" So the stud[illegible] history looking over the [illegible] of the past, may well exclaim [illegible] Religion! what crimes are commit[illegible]d in thy name! What we want then is not zeal of any kind in any cause, but Christian zeal. What we need, what the world needs is a people zealous of good works. Christian zeal is zeal for Christ. It seeks to honor him and to advance his cause, not by hate, but by love. Love is of God, but hate is of the devil. Christian zeal does not expend itself in words alone but is seen to best advantage in works of love and in deeds of kindness. John Howard, visiting the prisons of Europe, carried with him the spirit of the Master and illumined many a dungeon with the light of the gospel. Christian zeal enabled Henry Martyn to leave the comforts of his English home and give his life to the cause of foreign missions. A true Christian is a power at home or abroad. His influence is always salutary. No person can do a good deed or think a noble thought without doing himself good. "A beautiful behavior," says Emerson, "is better than a beautiful form, it gives a higher pleasure than statues and pictures; it is the finest of the fine arts." Let us all try to make our lives beautiful. Christian zeal is the motive power, and love to God and man the controlling principle. "It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing". Remember the Tuscan Proverb:

> "Work as if thou hadst to live for ages;
> Worship as if thou wert to die to-day."

J. H. W.

THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST.

[Third Article.]

"All men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father who hath sent him." (Jno. 5: 23.)

How full of solemn significance is that passage in our Lord's intercessory prayer, in which he asks—"O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was!" (Jno. 17: 5.) There could hardly be a more distinct declaration of the pre-existence of Christ than this. So far as this great doctrine is concerned, this text ought at once to remove every doubt, silence every cavil, and answer every objection. The Socinians, who deny not only our Lord's Divinity, but his existence before he appeared in the world, make a very weak attempt to evade the obvious teaching of this important passage. Their exposition may be seen in the following paraphrase: "O Father, glorify thou me, with the glory which I had with thee in thy immutable decree, before the world was." But it is obvious that our Lord did not ask to be glorified with predetermined glory, but with the glory which he had with the Father, before the world was. He had once possessed glory with the Father, but he divested himself of this glory when he took upon himself the nature of man. He desired to be re-invested with heavenly honor and dignity. It seems very unlikely that Jesus in his last solemn prayer with his disciples, should speak of having enjoyed blessings with the Father which were only to be given to him in the future. It is also clear that since our Lord had glory with the Father before the world was, that he then existed as a person, and not merely as an attribute. His pre-existence was personal, not ideal. It would not only be absurd, but irreverent, to represent the Son of God as asking his heavenly Father to reinvest him with the glory which he had with him as a Divine Attribute, Purpose or Idea.

In fact, so decisive is this passage, so impregnable does it stand against all Socinian assaults, that, as Dr. Harwood very justly observes, "were there no intimation in the whole New Testament of the pre-existence of Christ, this single text would irrefragibly demonstrate and establish it. Our Savior, here in a solemn act of devotion declares to the Almighty, that he had glory with him before the world was, and fervently supplicates that he would be graciously pleased to reinstate him in his former felicity. The languege is plain and clear. Every word has great emphasis: "Glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. Upon this single text I lay my finger. And if plain words be designedly employed to convey any determinate meaning; if the modes of human speech have any precision, I am convinced that this plain declaration of our Lord in an act of devotion, exhibits a great and important truth, which can never be subverted or invalidated by any accurate and satisfactory criticism."[1]

There are many passages in the writings of Paul in which the doctrine of the pre-existence of Christ is very plainly taught. Two of these we will notice. In the second chapter of his letter to the Philippians, the apostle, in exhorting his readers to practice humility, presents for their imitation the example of Christ, "who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men."

The antithesis in this passage is between the expressions 'form of God,' and 'form of servant." In his pre-existent state Christ was in the form of God; but, when born into the world he appeared in the form of a servant. Leaving the glory which he enjoyed in the presence of God, "He made himself of no reputation"—Greek eautone eknose, literally, he emptied himself; divested himself of the form of God, and took upon himself the form of man.

In another place the apostle Paul speaking of Christ says—"By him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist."[2] In this passage which is paralleled only by the prologue to John's Gospel, Christ is said to have existed before the universe, and to have created it. The language, though grand in expression, and sublime in meaning, is utterly misleading unless it teaches the personal pre-existence of Christ. If Jesus had no pre-existence how did he, though rich, for our sakes become poor? (2 Cor. 8: 9.) Of what riches did he divest himself? If he had no conscious existence before his incarnation, how could he say, "I proceeded forth and came from God, neither came I of myself, but he sent me.' (Jno. 8: 42) Observe that the I, the person speaking, is ever the same, whether in the form of God, or in the form of a servant; whether as the Son of God, or as the Son of man; whether as the Divine Logos, or as Jesus of Nazareth, the personal identity is ever preserved —"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

In the days of Noah he preached by the Spirit to the wicked antediluvians; but this could not have been the case if he was not formerly existent at the time. From the Theophanies and Messianic prophecies of the old Testament, very plausible, if not wholly conclusive arguments, may be found to show that he who was called the Angel of the Lord (Ex. 3: 2.), the Angel of God's presence (Mal. 3: 1), was none other than the pre-existent Jesus Micah evidently alludes to Christ where he speaks of him who is "to be Ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." (Mic. 5: 2.) Isaiah calls him Emanuel (Is. 7: 14), and Jeremiah says his name shall be called THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. (Jer. 23: 7.) Zechariah terms him the Fellow of the Lord of Hosts (Zech. 13: 7), and Malachi points to him as the Angel of the Covenant, who would suddenly come to his temple. (Mal. 3: 1.)

---

[1] Harwood's Socinian Scheme.
[2] Benson, in loc.

The time is fast hastening and cannot be far distant, when the blessed Jesus shall come "to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day."

"Soon all shall hail our Jesus' name,
Angels shall prostrate fall;
For him the brightest glory claim,
And crown him Lord of all."

J. H. W.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, July 26. Took leave of Br. Winter, and his family, whose hospitality will be remembered, and came to Seymour, Wayne co. Iowa, a pleasant ride by rail of about one hundred and forty miles. On arrival I met a man, of whom I made some inquries, who, seeing a copy of THE TIMES, wanted to know what we used the name Advent for. "Don t all Christians believe that?" I said, No. "Who?" Well, spiritualists in the churches everywhere reject the idea of Christ's future second coming. They say he came the second time at the destruction of Jerusalem, and he is never coming to earth again. When they die they think they go to him, to live with him in heaven, the place they say he has prepared for them. But Jesus said, "If I go away I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am, [when I come back] there (on the earth) ye may be also." (John 14: 2-3.) Much more was said, but it was a repetition of the heathen notions of the soul, and the future state.

I soon learned that a hall had been engaged, and a meeting was appointed by Br. S. K. Gibson for this evening, he not knowing that I should be here.

Seymour, is a new village of a year old, and located on the Southwestern Branch, of the Chicago, and Rock Island R. R. A few hundred people live in the village and neighborhood, some of whom are interested to hear the truth. Brn. Baldwin and Gibson have opened the way and well begun the work, and I am here by special request to help them in this new field.

At night we had a good gathering. Br. G. gave an interesting sermon on the promises to Abraham, and I followed him, backing up the discourse. A good impression was made, and here, as in all places we labor, the truth will triumph. At the close Br. Evans, took us over the prairie, three miles towards Corydon. We enjoyed his hospitality. He is an old settler, for this new country. And until Br. Gibson came here two years ago, lived in sin, and knew nothing of religion. They have now all become interested in the truth. It was pleasant to have the head of the family hand me the Bible before breakfast for reading and prayer; and all kneeled at the family altar, and united in the morning devotions. There are many cases of this kind in all this region. A goodly number of families, who had lived godless lives, have become pious and praying families, under the preaching of the Advent doctrine by Brn. Gibson, Baldwin and Wm. McCullock. Other preaching had had no effect on these persons. But as soon as they heard the Advent doctrine, they become interested, and gave themselves to God. And yet it is declared by some to be a doctrine pernicious in its influence.

SATURDAY, July 29. Br. Gibson and I came in the saddle to Corydon. On the way we called on the sick, and many others, living on the line of the road. There has been a great and good work in all this region. The church now numbers between sixty and seventy members, most of whom are the owners of their farm homes, and are prospering.

This part of Iowa, is about as rich, and beautiful a farming country as any in the West. They are now gathering in the rich harvest. There is no end to the grain. And the corn fields will yield heavily. But the trouble with the farmers, is, that grain is so cheap. It hardly pays the expense of raising at present prices.

We put up with Br. Shotsman, at noon, and found a shelter from the burning heat, and refreshment for ourselves and horses.

I spoke at night at the school house. The people are in the midst of harvest, improving every hour; but though wearied with the labors of the day, the interest was such as to bring out a large number to hear the word. There is a blessed interest here.

Here I met Br. Baldwin, one of the first Adventists in this region. His labors have been blessed to many. He has met with much opposition, but now sees the fruit of steadfast labor and faith.

SABBATH, July 3. Heavy thunderstorm and gloomy prospect for meeting this morning. But it cleared off, and the people came in through the mud from every direction and filled the house. I spoke to them on the prophecy from 2 Pet. 1: 16-21. The good word took effect and was appreciated by the hungry souls, who seek the truth.

In the p. m. rode three miles to Corydon and spoke in the large school house, showing our whereabouts in the stream of prophecy; that the kingdom of God is right at hand.

Corydon is one of the older towns of this country—some fourteen years. It has about a thousand inhabitants, and five churches, with four chapels, and a school room used for worship. The people generally here are hostile to the Adventists and their doctrines. But some are favorable and come out to hear. In the surrounding country the Advent people have the greatest numbers and influence.

A New Movement.

What does it mean? Are Adventists not holy? Are they opposed to the doctrine of holiness? I had supposed that Adventists, and especially Advent ministers, regarded "holiness" an important practical truth, and a sanctified heart, person, and life as an essential requisite to meet the Lord at his coming. What means this new movement then in the direction of lifting "this standard higher," and adopting it as a motto? Is it simply as a practical truth, to be held up in connection with the Advent faith? If so God speed the effort. To this we say Amen. But the subject is being introduced with a renewed zeal for the purpose of making it a test question of piety among us, and these are to be regarded as "Christians" who go in for being "Sanctified" in the way marked out for such experience to be gained; and as an entering wedge of division to form a party under another name, "Christian," or what not; or for the intent of putting in the back-ground our specific work of proclaiming the Lord's immediate coming, and warning the world of his Advent, and the kingdom at hand, with the rewards he brings both to the just and unjust, we object.

I do not believe that the Advent body are opposed to the doctrine of "holiness," as a great and important practical truth. And they never have been. They have been opposed from the beginning to that kind of "holiness," and "sanctification," and the "higher life," and the manner of attaining it taught and maintained in these modern days, which they regard not as Scriptural holiness and sanctification: and th[illegible] method is most objectio[illegible]ing it in the foreground of [illegible]al truths, and ignoring [illegible] trying to gain the experience by a fancied faith, or state of mental excitement, and without God's [illegible], as Jesus prayed—"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."

There seems to be an attempt to make it appear that Advent ministers, and Adventists at large, are behind others in the experience of holiness; and even those who "look not for," nor "love the appearing of Jesus," but scoff at the doctrine, and turn out from their communion ministers and members who do "wait for God's Son from heaven." And also the attempt is made to make it appear that if the Advent body do not accept of the modern doctrine as taught, and regard it simply as practical truth to go hand in hand with that of the Lod's coming, and other kindred doctrines, but object to its being put before us a head light, that they are not "holy" and are opposed to the subject. This is untrue. And this attempt has been got up among us. All who do not come up to receive the faith as set forth, or light as their advocates make it shine, are but backslidden and "the whole congregation are unholy."

We wish it distinctly understood, and we mean by the grace of God that our Christian deportment and holy walk shall make it to be known, that we are by no means opposed to the doctrine of scriptural holiness. But we do protest against the modern faith, and the use to be made of it.

From the beginning of our eventful history as a people, called to the special work of proclaiming "The gospel of the kingdom" (Mat. [illegible] 4), and to warn the nations, and the [illegible]ld to "Fear God, and give glory [illegible] him; for the hour of his judgment is come" (Rev. 14: 6, 7), there has been a constant and persistent effort of the adversary to cause us to desist from our specific work, and turn aside to some other question, doctrine, or issue, and cease to make prominent the God-given message with which we have been honored. None acquainted with the history of Adventism for thirty years need be informed of this; or of the fact that there have been found, men among us, who though exceedingly conscientious as to their supposed duty, have been ready to do the adversary's work, to divert the body from their special calling. The subsequent history of these agents has been anything but pleasing to contemplate, and their ship-wreck of faith and of Christian character in some instances, has been most deplorable. And none more so than those who in our early history advocated "voluntary humility," and made most prominent the doctrine of "holiness, sanctification, and consecration." Their names need not be mentioned. They were once men of pure mind, and irreproachable character, but fell from their high position while preaching and urging upon the Advent body, daily looking for their Lord, a sinless state of perfection, as preparatory for the coming of Christ.

The adversary has tried again and again to bring our message and position into contempt and a world-wide reproach, by the presumptuous fixing of definite time, the passing of which would only bring into disrepute the great startling truth that the Lord's coming is "nigh, even at the doors." And it should not be forgotten that the advocates of time, while pressing upon the Advent believers the importance of receiving their interpretations of the prophetic periods, and of historic dates, did sometimes endeavor to make it appear that all those who received their views were the "wise virgins," while the others were "the foolish" and would be lost. And furthermore let it be remembered that while some of these men were pressing the question of "definite time" to the division of our people, they themselves were living wicked lives, impoverishing honest brethren by teaching them to consecrate all their gains to the cause, while they did it to gratify their own greed and covetousness. All preachers of definite time however, to their praise be it said, were not of this class. Some, we are sorry to say, have ceased their work, and lost their confidence.

The adversary is not able now to switch the Advent body off on that track. Adventists will only believe definite time, when the time comes for its revelation, and it is given unmistakably. Then they will know. But we must look out for some other effort of the wicked one to close our mouths, and divert us from our position and duty. He is no friend to the Lord or his coming. He hates those faithful servants, and noble men and woman ready to sacrifice home, honors, and all they possess and hold dear on earth, to sustain and proclaim the coming of the great Redeemer to a slumbering and lukewarm or apostate church, and world wallowing in sin.

Brethren: Suffer a plain word of warning from one who is the least of you all, and most unworthy of the great trust and treasure of truth our Master and coming Lord has committed to me, with yourselves, to publish to the church and world. Let us believe it; and have this "hope in him," that he will soon appear, and we shall be like him, and see him as he is when he shall appear, and then we will live pure and holy lives as ministers, and as a people. "Our Lord is coming," and "his reward is with him, to give every man as his work shall be."

O. R. FASSETT.

The Duke of Somerset, in his Christian Theology and Modern Skepticism, says: "It would be a grave mistake to assume that skepticism is in its nature irreligious or immoral. Some minds in their search for truth, while recoiling from dogmatic theology, have indeed wandered beyond the confines of Christianity. But the mass of society is anxiously seeking a belief which shall not be at issue with the moral sense of educated men."

A Christian should never plead spirituality for being a sloven. If he be a shoe cleaner, he should be the best in the parish.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. L. J. Rich formerly in S. W. Iowa is now at Hudson, Mo., preaching in the vicinity. Brethren in the region should call him out and help him.——A brother in closing a business letter remarks, "I have not much to say; but that I glory in the truth of the Gospel and the love of Jesus reigning in the heart." Go on brother Day. That is everyday religion.——Br. Dan'l S. Way of Elk Rapids would like to get acquainted with brethren living in Antrim Co. Mich. or vicinity. Get acquainted, brethren. Find each other out, and combine your strength.——A large and good Fourth of July meetidg was held at New Boston, Mass. Brn. Hemenway, Cole and Potter were present. We hope to report more such meetings next year.——A church was organized at Monroe, Wis. in June, with nine members. Br. Horace Cushman, Deacon, and A. M. Gladding, Clerk. Br. Adrian has helped them by preaching the word.——Br. Burington has been sick, unable to labor, but expects now to be able to fill his place in the gospel field.——Seven were baptised at the Tremont, Mass. Campmeeting.——The Mission Society has received about $2,300 the past year. Shall it be $5,000 the next? Why not? We are able to raise that amount, besides attending to the other departments of our work.——Br. C. Pike has immersed seven since his removal to Massena N. Y.—four recently. Six were added to the church on the same occasion, and the brethren there enjoy good days again.——The Springfield Campmeeting commences Aug. 17. The Mission Society will meet Aug. 22., and the Advent Christian Association Aug. 19.——Br. Walter O. Higley was ordained at the late session of the Hoosic Valley Conference.——Three were baptised at Broughton, Ill. lately, the fruit of Sr. A. E. Rathbun's labors. Our sister's influence in this intelligent community is decidedly healthful, and the cause thrives under her preaching. They are arranging to have two or three tents at Amboy.——A church of nineteen members was organized at Oshawa Ont. as the result of the late meeting there in the N. Y. State tent.——Br. Marston's. late meeting at Hennepin, Ill. is reported as an enthusiastic success. The Court house could not hold the people that came out, and the meeting Sunday afternoon was in the public square. He will be called to return.——Br. C. W. Conolly is working faithfully in Florida. He says he finds the people dreadfully wicked; but this only makes work the more essential

The Times.

AT HOME.

~~~ The Colt Manufacturing Company have a contract for 80,000 guns for the new German Empire—one of the many preparations for peace by that pacifically inclined power.

~~~ Last Thursday night beheld a magnificent display of the electrical phenomena known as the Aurora Borealis. Careful investigation seems to have established a connection between apparent storms in the sun, magnetic disturbances in our own atmosphere, and the Aurora.

ABROAD.

~~~ King Amadeus of Spain has issued a decree providing for the gradual abolition of slavery in Cuba and Porto Rico. Good news, that.

~~~ The priests at Rome have, of a sudden, become very civil and kind to the soldiery—who in turn seem to be very unpromising material for the practice of Jesuitry.

~~~ Women may now attend the Edinburg University as medical students—the courts having decided the long contested claim in their favor.

~~~ The Tribune's Vienna correspondent asserts that Russia patronizes a Society active in Austria for the "Russification" of all the Sclavic provinces of the latter empire. Russia appears to have other aggressive designs which forbode war. Some, however, hope that Germany will enforce peace. An idle hope.

~~~ The Pope has been congratulating Thiers. We trust his unofficial blessings will not have the result attendant upon those bestowed officially. We remember Isabella of Spain, and Maximilian, and Napoleon: the Pope's favor was the signal of their doom. Does not Thiers know that the Papacy will drag down all who ally themselves to it?

Obituary.

CLARK.—Died at the residence of her son-in law (Br. A. Freeman), in Union Mills, Ind., Aug. 9, 1872. Sr. Ruth Clark: in the 90th year of her age.

Sr. Clark united with the Baptist church in Kingsbury, Wash'n. Co. N. Y., over sixty years ago, and had maintained her Christian union with the church until death broke the bond. In her last sickness she trusted wholly in the Lord, and desired to fall asleep and rest until the resurrection.

D. MATHEWSON.

FREEMAN.—Died at Union Mills, Ind., Aug. 7, 1872, Willie G., son of F. A. & S. Freeman: aged 2 years and 21 days.

This is the first time the enemy has visited the family to snatch a lovely flower from the parent stem. Willie was a lovely child, and now sleeps in Jesus. The parents mourn, but not as those who have no hope. They rely on the promise of God, and therefore expect to meet their darling boy all radiant with immortality in the morning of the resurrection. Blessed hope!

May God's sustaining grace be ever with these afflicted parents and prepare them for a blessed union with their child in the kingdom of God.

D. MATHEWSON.

Book Notices, Etc.

Master Spirits of the World, and American Citizen's Treasure House; Goodspeed & Co., Chicago. 700 pp. profusely illustrated. Price, $3.00 to $4.50, according to style of binding.

This is emphatically a campaign work, yet it contains much valuable information in a condensed form: the lives of one hundred leading men, from Socrates to the present time; statistics, finances, industries o the nation, platforms of the political parties "now struggling for the ascendancy," &c., &c

Its generally quiet tone and freedom from party rancor and bombast, commends it to those who wish an interesting work, and at the same time one valuable for reference. Its publication at this time, when the political elements are at fever heat, will insure it, undoubtedly, a large sale.

"A TRUMPET for the Watchmen on the walls of Zion."
—By Geo. Thomson.

The nature of this work may be gleaned from the following outlines: The Christian Minister a Watchman—the Duties of a Watchman—Watchman, what of the Night?—Time of the End—Signs of the Times—Fulfillment of Prophecy—Prophecy in relation to the First Advent—Prophecy in relation to the Second Advent—Signs of the Second Advent,—Celestial, Terrestrial, Moral, National—The Papacy—Spiritualism—Time, Tarrying Time, etc., etc., etc. 128 pp. Single copy, by mail, 20c. Per dozen, $1.75. By express, one hundred copies for $11.

"YAHVEH CHRIST. The Memorial Name;" or, the "Coming One."—By L. T. Cunningham.

The object, or design, of this tract is to set forth the divinity of Christ, as taught in both the Old and New Testaments, as appears in the history and significance of the memorial name—YAHVEH. 44 pp. Price, 8c., per copy; postage 2c.; 75c. per dozen; $5 per one hundred.
~~~

Communications.

A Cardinal's Voice.

Cardinal Cullen, speaking of infidelity, says that the professors of Trinity College, Dublin, are openly contradicting the gospel by teaching that the wicked shall not be punished with eternal torment.

No doubt; but the Pope's gospel may not be identical with Paul's. "Contradicting the good news," and to whom is eternal torment good news? To the lost or to the saved?

Let all engaged, like the professors of Trinity College, in openly teaching that the wicked shall not be punished with eternal torments, take notice, that Cardinal Cullen says they are contradicting the gospel, or "good news"—and there are many Cardinal Cullens, and Popes too, nearer than Ireland.

A. A.

The Love of Jesus.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (Jno. 15: 13.)

But Christ has bestowed greater love than this upon us, inasmuch as while we were his enemies, he died for us. Who can meditate on the wonderful love of Jesus in his death, and of God in giving his only begotten Son, for, our sins, without bowing in humble submission. Who could not trust their all in the hands of such a friend as this. All-wise and all-powerful, with greater love than is possible for mortal to bear, and with outstretched arms pleading for us to come unto him, and cast every burden of life upon him with the promise that we shall rest. But oh! how unheeded are his pleadings. How scoffingly the world passes by, and how waveringly the few that love him lay hold of his promises. Why should it be thus? He died for us; he died for all: not for a select few, but for all. This reaches every case rich and poor, high or low.

Who then can be disheartened? What could he do that he has not done?

It is for us to decide whether or not we will accept of his love, and be saved from existing evils on every hand, and from the wrath to come;

Sinner can you slight your Savior?
Can you thrust him from your arms?

Oh! will you not flee to Christ for a refuge, for a sure hiding place from every storm, of earth, and for an eternal haven, in the future?

F. C. Bailey.

Trials.

"That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1: 7.)

"Tried, almost beyond endurance," was the remark of a good brother a few days since, and only yesterday a dear sister said, "I am so tried, I fear I shall be lost. Why does God permit me to be so tried?" It is just because God don't want you to be lost, that he permits you to be thus tried. Have you forgotten that in all ages of the past God's people have ever been a tried people, and will continue to be, until mortality is swallowed up of life. If you think your trials are greater than you can bear, stop and reflect a moment on those of the ancient patriarchs and apostles. How do your trials compare with those of faithful Abraham, when called upon to offer up an only son as a sacrifice to God? or with those of an intrepid Daniel, when about to be cast into the lion's den? or of the three worthies who, rather than bow in idolatry, humbly submitted to be cast into the fiery furnace?

The Bible abounds with some of the most touching incidents of the faithfulness and fidelity of God's tried children, and in no instance, except the one just mentioned, were their trials the same; but on the contrary, each one's trial was varied, according to time and circumstance. Job's trial was not David's, neither was Isaiah's Jeremiah's; nor Peter's Paul's; but the Son of God was tried and tempted in all points like as we are, and can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and can succor the tried and tempted as no one else can. God's word also contains many precious promises that are calculated to cheer and comfort the hearts of his people in every condition and circumstance in life. How like healing balm to the sorrow-stricken heart come the loving words of the Savior—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

Peter, in addressing his brethren in a time of peculiar trial, comforts their hearts, with these words: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened to you, but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also, with exceeding joy." We have also, the blessed assurance, that the Lord loveth whom he chasteneth, with the promise, "that if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." Then in view of realizing all these precious promises, let us cheer up, dear brethren and sisters; and while we labor, and suffer, and wait, for the consummation of the Christian's hope, we will sing in the language of the poet,

"Our troubles and our trials here,
Will only make us richer there,
When we arrive at home."

M. E. Orr.

Will Our Campmeetings Prove a Blessing?

For this all should labor and pray. As campmeetings have come to be a settled institution in this country, but one of two results can be anticipated: either a deeper experience in things divine, and a consequent stronger unity in the body; or a religious demoralization and profligacy, which cannot but be fearful in all their tendencies.

In order that we may escape the latter and secure the former, the hardest campmeeting work should be done before we go. I mean the work of consecrating your heart to Christ before hand, that you may go with but one thought and avowed purpose, and that to honor God, and save men. If we wait till we get to camp before we put forth an effort to get nearer to Christ, the same disposition will lurk about us there, and we shall find ourselves still waiting the troubling of the waters; and then after the waters are troubled, waiting for some one to feel a deep interest for us, and help us into the pool; and while all this waiting goes on, perpetual losses are being felt. Remember the fountain of cleansing is close by thy door, and the time for stepping in is now. This work should be done by Adventists as a preparation for campmeeting, and not as a result of going. All your labor at campmeeting should not be for yourself, while such multitudes are perishing out of Christ. How can we labor understandingly for others, unless we are entirely submitted ourselves?

Judicious financiering and table serving may be essential to the success of a campmeeting, but cannot take the place of consecration. Where this is lacking, you may speak of wiping out old debts, and the escape of contracting new ones; but the whole thing miscarries without a deeper work of grace in our own hearts, and an interest awakened in the minds of the perishing. As "eternal vigilance is the price of political liberty," so consecration, constant watchfulness, and prayer is the price of all success in Christian labor in every place. We should feel a personal responsibility, who contemplate attending campmeeting, however seemingly humble or obscure may be our position. The success of a campmeeting does not depend altogether on the committee, nor the ministry; but alike on all who profess to be the disciples of our Lord. And it is for the want of acting on this principle of individual responsibility that some of our campmeetings have proven detrimental, we fear, to the general interests of the cause of Christ.

What do you say, brethren and sisters in Christ? As the campmeeting season comes on, have you been gleefully contemplating going to the meetings, in view of whom you are to see when you get there, and the campmeeting promenading you are to enjoy? Should the hearts of any be thus moved, I would recommend to such to linger at home the first day of campmeeting and spend it in prayer for God to create in them a clean heart, and renew a right frame of spirit; and if victory did not turn for entire submission to God, and against the old man the first day, try the second day, and so on to the end of the week; and unless your motives are such as you know God can approve, take up thy cross, stay at home, and have a week of prayer; and I will warrant you a richer experience in things of God at the end of the week, and a more sacred nearness to Christ, than if you should go to gratify the vanity of your own mind.

It can but be obvious to every mind that campmeetings are like all other meetings of a religious nature, where the leading thought is divine worship and religious improvement. That being the case, what would be improper for a meeting of worship in the sanctuary, in the thronged city, would be equally improper for an assemblage of a like purpose in the forest, or tented grove. What would be thought of an assembly of professed worshipers in New York, or Boston, if, in time of divine service, two-thirds of them should be promenading the street in front, or around the house, paying no attention to what was passing within? Would they not be looked upon as guilty of sacrilege? And why do not the same things apply at campmeeting? The time was in the days of primitive Methodism, when the presiding minister at campmeeting would not allow the service to commence until the congregation was seated, and all the ministers gathered at the stand; and if there were victualling stands, all were closed in hours of worship. And then the reading of the Scriptures in so clear and worshipful a tone of voice—"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of God," &c. And then the hymn:

"Where'er thy saints assembled are,
There is a house for God."

Led by a score or two of veteran ministers (some of whom, like John Nelson, could preach, without complaining, three sermons a day, and do a day's work at stone cutting besides) joined by the whole assembly of the saints, singing with grace in the heart, making melody unto the Lord, praying in the Holy Ghost, preaching the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from above. What mighty results followed. Sinners bowed under the majesty of divine grace, calling on God for mercy, and rejoicing in the consciousness of free pardon. We will not say O Methodism, nor O Adventism, but O campmeetings, how ye have fallen! —A. Ross, in Crisis.

Fundamental Truths to be Chiefly Preached.

There is an excellent use of other ministerial labors, as they tend to beautify and adorn, yea, enrich, the Christian with the knowledge of spiritual mysteries. But that which is chiefly to be regarded is the constant, faithful opening of the main truths of the gospel. These are the landmarks, and show us the bounds of truths. And as it is in towns that butt one another, if the inhabitants do not sometimes perambulate and walk the bounds to show the youth what they are, when the old studs are gone the next generation may lose all their privileges by their reaching neighbors, because not able to tell what is their own. There is no fundamental truth but hath some evil neighbor, some heresy, butting on it; and a main reason why a spirit of error hath so encroached in late years upon truth, is, because we have not walked the bounds with our people in acquainting them with, and establishing their judgments on, these fundamental points; and because the people count a sermon on such points next to lost, and only child's meat.—Gurnall.

The Same Jesus.

When Christ our life shall appear! What a thrilling scripture is this! He shall appear. The Conqueror of Death, alive forevermore, shall come again, and all our eyes shall behold him. It shall be a real and corporeal appearance and not a vision. Christ shall not appear as in a dream or imaginarily; nor shall he appear merely in accordance with his divine nature. He shall appear bodily and absolutely. The same human form which was in the grave, and afterwards ascended into heaven—this same Jesus shall descend from heaven. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man. The humanity shall appear. The angels distinctly so state the manner of the second advent. As he visibly to mortal eyes ascended, so shall he visibly and tangibly descend. God has promised to honor the human nature of Christ upon the earth. Our blessed Jesus is not a mere abstraction, but a person. They who pierce him shall look upon him. The same risen flesh which vacated Joseph's tomb, which Mary beheld in the garden, which entered through bolted doors into the upper room where the disciples were assembled—this same identical Jesus shall come again. And the time draws nigh. In such an hour as we think not—not in answer to our call, or by the counting of our calendar, but in his own set time—he will surely, quickly come!—Meth. Recorder.

Correspondence.

Journeyings.

Left home June 22, incompany with my wife and two children. Spent the Sabbath at Castle Rock, and came to our State campmeeting, arriving on the campground the 27th. We found many old and tried friends of the Advent faith, and some new ones. This cheered our hearts, to meet with such and enjoy their society. The meeting commenced with a good interest, and continued to increase until the close. We shall never forget the kindness shown to us by the friends in the vicinity of Utica, upon the campground. On the 4th of July we took our way down the River, to Moline, Ill. Here we found some of our old friends, Brn, White, Gault and others, and we tarried over the Sabbath. The friends obtained a church, and I spoke to them twice on the Sabbath upon the subject of the speedy coming of the Lord. The brethren here were very much refreshed. On Monday we traveled about sixty miles into the interior of Iowa, where we found some old acquaintances and formed many new ones, and then made our way to Galva, Ill., arriving on the 19th. Here we found some of the Swedes, who were once members of the Bishop Hill Colony. They have embraced the Advent faith within the past five years. I gave them two discourses on the Sabbath, in their chapel at the Hill, which seemed to be appreciated by them very highly. We spent two evenings with them at Galva at private houses, all of which were pleasant seasons to us as well as them. On the 25th came to Batavia, where I have a brother whose faith and hope is still in the coming of the Lord. We shall hope and ever pray that the family of "Father" Miller may be an unbroken one in the kingdom.

On Tuesday the 30th came to Chicago to visit the friends of The Times office, and look after our Minnesota State Tent. On our arrival at Norwood Park, where the press is located, we found all hands busy at work, both in and out of the Office. We made our way to the Press Room, in hopes that we might have an opportunity of conversing with it (as we had often read that it has seasons of being social.) But we found it with its iron nerves strained to their utmost capacity, performing its work, which was done with an accuracy and dispatch, that we were held spell-bound in watching it. And there were other qualities about it that we admired; one that it was perfectly mute, only when engaged in sending out light and truth to the world. We were also very much interested in witnessing the rapidity with which the mailing machine did its work. Truly this is a day of wonders. And among the wonders is that the Association has grown up to what it is, from so small a beginning, while others with greater means within the same time have failed. I think it speaks well for those who have had charge of the business. And I cannot refrain from giving it as my opinion that the change from Buchanan to this place, will work for the best interest of the Association. And while the brethren may be engaged in the different fields of labor for the Master's truth, let us remember in our prayers and our alms, those who are laboring so assiduously for the building up of the Western Press, that we may have the light and truth to scatter far and wide.

We start for home this week, having made arrangements so that our State Tent will be into the field soon, and thus afford additional means by which to get the glad news of the coming kingdom before the people.

Geo. W. Miller.

Kansas Jottings.

Thursday, June 6, I started to visit and labor with brethren scattered in this State. Stopped first in Osage County, at Br. Smith's. Br. J. C. Smith I found to be a genial and earnest laborer in word and doctrine, but in very poor health and only able to preach part of the time. May he soon be restored, and be able to do more for the Master.

In this neighborhood a little church was organized the day I arrived. The Lord gave them much grace and zeal in our glorious cause. After several days labor in this region, Br. Smith kindly gave me the use of a pony to travel northward. I went across the Kansas River, preaching the gospel of the kingdom. I found brethren scattered here and there, who were glad once again to meet an Advent minister, and others who were willing to hear and receive the "present truth." The Lord seems ready to bless the efforts made in this State, and we do feel that, as the means are used agreeable to his will, all real Christians will give attention to the truth, and study to know "whether these things be so."

It is scarcely six months ago that we first began to feel that the Lord's blessing specially attended our feeble efforts, and that "our cause" under his blessing was destined to prosper. We have organized a "State Association" to unite in one common interest all Adventists, (and all who may become such,) for a general State work, This was about four months ago; and although we are generally quite poor here in Kansas, and have labored almost single-handed, and under many disadvantages, yet the Lord has blessed, raising up friends and helpers in various parts of the State, many of whom we have been as yet entirely unable to visit, but we hope to at some future time.

A State Evangelist has been supported for three months, and a "tent fund" of three hundred dollars is now subscribed and being received into the treasury. And just here we would say to those who have subscribed to this fund, that we have ordered the "tent," which will be sent very soon; and we desire to have the subscriptions sent in at once, that the work may go forward unretarded. This fund has all been raised within the State, except about sixty dollars, which has been contributed by a few brethren East, to whom, in behalf of the Association, I would here express our gratitude, and may the Lord's blessing attend such. We also thankfully acknowledge the receipt of several packages of tracts from the Crisis office, the Scriptural Repository, and the Western office.

We trust in the Lord to see a steadily growing interest in our cause and work in this State, and while a goodly number have taken hold with true Christian earnestness and self-sacrifice, we hope that every Adventist in the State will feel a direct and lively interest in our general State cause, and as fast as they learn of the existence of the Association, become members of the same, by sending in your names, P. O. address, and at least the nominal annual membership fee—which is only one dollar—within the reach of the poorest.

But donations of large sums are earnestly solicited from all who have the cause at heart, and are not really too poor to give more. Remember, brethren, as our means increase so will the magnitude of our general State work, so that, instead of only being able to support one Evangelist, several may be bidden, "Go forth unto the master's vineyard here in this State. While we look upon the times as signally important, O! let us arouse ourselves, and "put on the whole armor, working while the day lasts."

When the "tent" arrives, it will go into the field immediately as a State mission "tent," under the "Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association," to be pitched from time to time at such places as promise to give it the most hearty support, or where we may deem it likely to result in most good. Therefore, we solicit friends throughout different parts of the State, who desire the "tent" pitched in their locality, to go to work at once, with a will, see what can be raised in support of the cause in consideration of having the "tent" pitched in your town or neighborhood, and make your application as early as possible, that we may be able to make a well-directed campaign. Remember that people in Kansas will go often several miles to attend ordinary meetings, and would doubtless be more interested in one of this kind. Brethren, if we trust in the Lord, and are not "fearful and unbelieving," it is our confidence that he will in the future bless our efforts in this State, as he has in the past; and if we remain humble and wait upon him, far more abundantly than ever before.

We herewith subjoin acknowledgments not previously made:

TENT FUND.

J. C. Smith, Avonia, $10; Levi S. Smith, Avonia, $10; John F. Linville, Plowboy, $50; Chas. A. Covey, Plowboy, $4; Oliver Howard, Eskridge, $2; Sr. Gurnsey, Marysville, (pd.) $1; Sr. J. E. Proctor, Solomon Falls, (pd.) $1; A. M. Sidwell, Girard, $4; Jesse Faulkner, Bero, $2; T. J. Wilder, Bero, $2; F. S. Hunter, Bero, $2; Amos Sanford, Columbus, $10; A. F. Childs, Columbus, $10.

MEMBERSHIP AND DONATIONS.

J. C. Smith, (donated) $4; Levi S. Smith, (mem.) $1; S. D. Smith, (don.) 25c.; J. F. Linville, (don.) $46, including the following persons as members of the Association, viz: J. F. Linville, Sr. M. E. Linville, of Plowboy, Kan., and Sr. Mary K. Williams, of Topeka, Sarah E. Olds, (mem.) Dover, $1; O. L. Olds, (mem.) $1.

Address money sent by letter for the Association to the Treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee County. Send postal orders to the President, H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford County, Kansas. Send requests for meetings, &c., to the President, H. J. Munson, or to the Chairman of the Business Committee, A. M. Sidwell, Girard, Crawford County, Kansas.

In reply to some inquiries made, we would state our tent is to be about 60 feet in diameter. The campaign for the remaining part of the present season is not marked out, only that the tent will be sent direct to Columbus, in Cherokee County, in which county it will doubtless be pitched once or twice. In directing the campaign further, the friends in different localities within the State will aid us by at once seeing what can be raised in support of the Association work, with a view of having the tent pitched in their locality at an early date, and report the same to the President or Chairman of the Business Committee. Meanwhile continue to send in memberships and donations to the Treasurer, that there may be no lack of funds to carry the work actively forward.

When the "tent season" is over," the Evangelists employed will continue to labor in different parts of the State, as the Lord may seem to direct; therefore, we wish to know the locality of all brethren, sisters, and interested friends. If any are really too poor to give material support, we wish to know your whereabouts, that as we go forth we may be able to call on you.

In answer to another inquiry, it is expected that the present "State Evangelist," H. J. Munson, will, for the present, go with and conduct the tent work, aided by such helpers as we may be able to obtain. We earnestly invite any live preachers of "like precious faith" in other States, to come and cast their lots with us, and co-labor to build up our common cause here, by proclaiming "the present truth and gospel of the kingdom."

H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.
TENIE BOZLEY, Sec'y.

From Francis S. Morgan.

We in Lapeer are all still waiting and watching for the coming of the Master, hoping and praying that he will not tarry much longer, looking forward to the time of his appearing with joy filling our hearts, knowing that we shall then reap if we faint not. The church here is prospering under the care of Br. A. D. Mackie. We have preaching once in two weeks by him, and prayer meeting every Thursday evening, and Sundays when we do not have preaching. We also have a very good Sunday school. We have now a nice chapel to worship in, and we invite any of the preaching brethren that can make it convenient, to call and spend a short time with us. Our hearts and our houses are always open to such.

From John Smith, Joliet, Ill.

We have no church in Joliet, and though there is a population of some 10,000 or 12,000 I know of no Advent people here save Br. and Sr. Mann. But we are not so exclusive but we can go amongst the other churches, and give our testimony for Jesus; for we sometimes think of the meeting of Abraham and Melchisedek. Though Abraham was the called of God, he was not the only person in those parts who, like himself, was a patriarch, and enjoyed and ministered the true religion. The Prince or King of Salem was another, in no respect Abraham's inferior, and in some respects greatly above him. Melchisedek was the priest of the Most High God. Nor was this all. He was the type of the Messiah, of whom Abraham was only the remote progenitor. And it is truly delightful, and a fine example of the catholicity of true religion to observe the manner in which these great and good men proceed when the providence of God brings them together. And what is the lesson? Plainly this: that when, by the events of Providence, two pious men, both of whose hearts are right with God, are brought together, they ought to recognize each other as brethren; and each treating with respect the creed and ritual of the other, both ought to enter on that friendly and sacred communion which is meet for the sons of God.

And what are the facts in this case? When Melchisedek met Abraham, does he begin their intercourse by religious precognitions as to denominations, as to what points they were agreed on, and what points they differed on? Does he consider an uniformity in all points between himself and the righteous man who came from the East, as essential to their religious communion, and the first point to be ascertained? Or does he in the capacity of superior priest, proceed to impose his own ritual upon Abraham? No, nothing like this. And how different from what we are accustomed to now! Melchisedek, we are informed, brought out with him, when he came to meet Abraham, and before he had seen this patriarch at all, the symbols of bread and wine; and as soon as he met him he presented them to him and blessed him. And forthwith the two men of God enjoyed full religious communion together, their great hearts overflowing with the love of God and each other. Nor was all the openness of heart on the part of the king of Salem. Abraham in return, and without inquiring whether he who assumed these most exalted functions of the priesthood had the genealogy of the sacerdotal order, but perceiving his moral greatness and superiority to himself in his presence and words, accepted his benediction, and in return presented him with a tithe of all his spoils.

Such was the meeting of Abraham and Melchesidek. Nothing finer ever occurred in the subsequent history of the church. The patriarchal state admits of all that is finest in religion and humanity. And when the Spirit of Inspiration led David to say, "The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than the dwellings of Jacob," it was chiefly in respect of the fact that from Zion should proceed the salvation that should be catholic, as may be seen from the Psalm where these words occur. But in the incident which has just been noticed, we have a fine example of the catholic spirit which the patriarchal state also tends to cherish. And this utterance occurring in the church in that early epoch, and handed down to us, is of the greatest value, not only for its own sake, as happening in the true church, but from the admitted fact that Christianity is more nearly related to the patriarchal religion and is more truly a return to it and development of it, than of the peculiar economy which intervened between the patriarchal age and the birth of Christ.

Our Young Folks.

Adine's Guest.

One golden morn to Adine's home there came
The angel bearer of a sweet behest—
"With loving care,
Adine, the house prepare,
For Christ the Lord this day shall be thy guest."

With awe Adine the heavenly message heard—
A holy hush fell on her heart and face—
And going to and fro,
She whispered low,
"To-day his presence shall make glad this place!"

Long hours she watched: and while she bent her ear,
And through the twilight strained her eager sight,
A shadow crossed the floor,
And at the door
A sad eyed child begged shelter for the night.

But Adine, waiting for her kingly guest,
With hope and fear at war within her heart,
No thought or care
The weary child could spare,
And with ungracious alms bade him depart.

Then suddenly the childish form was changed,
And with a look that smote her like a sword—
All fair and bright
In robes of silvery white—
He turned and said, "Adine, behold thy Lord!"

And while with trembling hands her face she hid,
The glory faded out that through the place had shone;
The sheen of pinions fair
Swept through the silent air,
And in the twilight dim she stood alone.

Still for the Master's coming Adine waits,
But help from those who need no more withholds,
For evermore,
In all who seek her door,
Adine the image of her Lord beholds!
—Little Corporal.

A company of boys were playing very earnestly one day, and were evidently enjoying themselves finely. One, in particular, seemed to be the leader of their sports, and his whole heart in the play.

Just as he was proposing a new game, and instructing his comrades about it, a neighboring window was thrown up, and a sweet gentle voice called:

"Charlie, your father wants you."

The window was closed at once, and the gentle lady immediately withdrew; not even stopping to see whether Charlie heard, much less to ask him if he was coming.

The boy was so busily playing that it seemed doubtful if the mother's quiet voice would reach his ear, but she knew her boy, and the words had hardly escaped her lips before everything was dropped, playmates and play forsaken, and Charlie was within the doors in answer to the call.

I think I have seen a boy somewhere, who does not obey quite like that. Do you know what his name is?—Little Christian.

Two Ways of Coming Down.

There are two ways of coming down from the top of a church steeple—one is to jump down, and the other is to come down by the steps; but both will lead you to the bottom.

So, also, there are two ways of going to hell: one is to walk into it with your eyes open;—few people do that—the other is to go down by the little sins; and that way, I fear, is only too common. Put up with a few little sins, and you will soon want a few more; even a heathen could say, "Who ever was content with only one sin?"—and your course will be regularly worse and worse every year.

Well did Jeremy Taylor describe the progress of sin in man: "First it startles him, then it becomes pleasing, then easy, then delightful, then frequent, then habitual, then confirmed. Then the man is impenitent, then obstinate, and then he is damned."

Reader! the devil only wants to get the wedge of a little allowed sin into your heart, and you will soon be all his own. Never play with fire; never trifle with little sins. Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.—Sel.

Plain Counsels for Young Christians,

I.—A STAFF FOR THE DAY.

1. Dress yourself by the glass of God's Word (James 8: 23-25.) Begin the day's work by knocking at the door of prayer: and turn nightly mercies into a morning song.

Daily blessings me shall move
Thee all day to serve and love.

2. Mind what is worth minding. Run for a prize worth winning, and keeping;

Something sterling, that will stay
When life's bubbles melt away.

3. Whatever you do, do it willingly. He that wants a whip to work well, will want a second for his ill work.

The grumbler in the slough will stick;
But cheerful spirits get on quick

4. While you keep your feet warm by diligence, keep your head cool by kindliness. Resist a hot temper stoutly. A moment's passion has made a life miserable.

The revengeful never rests:
'Tis the meek have peaceful breasts.

5. Go in to God for a light, if the day be a dark one. (Ps. 81 : 28.) Trouble will come, even where angels walk. Fear only to sin.

The blackest night must end with morning;
And sunshine comes without a warning.

6. Our worst enemies are bad thoughts: you are safe from lions anywhere in the land; but a bad thought, like a dog, bites in all counteies. But will a full cup hold more? Fill your head and heart with good thoughts out of the Lord's bushel (Is. 21: 10; 1 Peter 1: 23), and surely Satan shall lack room for his chaff.

Be on your guard—still watch and pray!
And Christ shall wash your spots away.

II.—A PILLOW FOR THE NIGHT.

If you would sleep well, lay these things under your head:—

1. A hearty prayer to God.
2. A choice verse of some Gospel hymn.
3. A conscience washed by faith and penitence in the Lamb's blood.
4. Feelings of forgiveness and love to all men.
5. An earnest purpose to serve God on the morrow.
6. Such a promise as Ps. 17: 15; Ps. 31: 5, in case you should die in the night!
7. Cast a glance at the Lamb on the Throne before you fall asleep. Then,

Should health decay and vigor fail,
Christ will thy strength and portion be;
Into the haven waft thy sail,
And softly whisper, "Trust in me."
—Sec.

Conference Minutes

Convention of Adventists.

IN SOUTHERN IOWA.

Agreeable to a call for a convention of Adventists brethren from St. Johns, Seymour, Bethlehem, Warsaw, Corydon, Clio, and elsewhere, in Southern Iowa, assembled in the Grove near Young's Mills, in Corydon, Wayne Co., Aug. 3, at 11 a. m. Eld. J. V. Himes was called to the chair, and Lyman Z. Lotspiech was appointed Secretary.

Eld. S. H. Gibson, S. Baldwin, and A. M. Corbit were appointed a Business Committee, to report a plan of organization for the Conference. The Business Committee reported the following items of business.

Brethren of the Convention: Your committee beg leave to report remarks on an organization:

WHEREAS, a goodly number of churches of Advent believers have been raised up in Wayne, and adjacent counties in Southern Iowa, and,

WHEREAS, in the same region, in the border counties of Northern Missouri, there are churches of Adventists rising; and

WHEREAS, these churches are so distant from the Advent Christian Conference in the Eastern part of the State, and also from the South Western Conference, that they can enjoy little or no privilege of meeting with either except at great expense which makes it impracticable for them to do so; and

WHEREAS, there is a wide and effectual door opened for labor in this field, and a large territory which calls for the organization of a Conference of Elders and churches, we therefore offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we, the ministers and churches now assembled under a call, to counsel and advise as to the best course to be taken at this time for the organization and future growth of the Advent interest in this vicinity, do hereby advise, that the convention do now proceed to the organization of a conference to be called the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri Advent Christian Conference, to act in harmony with other Advent conferences in the West.

The committee would also suggest the following boundaries for the Conference. North in Iowa, on a line East from Warren to Keokuk county, and South in Missouri from Livingston to Shelby. counties, making in all, twenty-four counties, which embrace one of the destitute fields of labor, and one of the best in the West. A field that should be occupied as speedily as possible. (Adopted.)

Permanent officers were then chosen. Eld. S. K. GIBSON, President. S. Z. Lotspeich, Secretary, Wm. H. Fulsom, Treasurer.

STANDING COMMITEE.

P. Spotsman, A. M. Corbit, Silas Farnsworth.

On motion the following members were elected to report a constitution at the quarterly conference in Bethlehem, Iowa, Oct. 11 and over the Sabbath:

S. K. Gibson, P. Baldwin and N. C. Miller.

The Business Committee then offered the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, a wide and effective door is open to us within the bounds of this Conference, and we have but few laborers compared with the great harvest,

Resolved, That we hereby invite faithful and efficient laborers to come and work among us as missionaries, and we do hereby specially invite Eld. Wilson McCullock, of New Rutland, Ill., to settle among us, and help in building up the cause in this new and important field.

Resolved, That, at present this is missionary ground, and the churches are not able to give a full support to all the ministers laboring among us, that we will do what we can; and those coming among us will, if able, like the apostle Paul, "work with their own hands," so that with what they get from the churches, they may be comfortably situated, until churches are raised up with such numbers and strength as to meet all expenses. Adopted.

Ministers will find cheap houses, and plenty of cheap provision, who come to live among us. Persons thinking to visit us will please correspond with the Secretary or President.

Resolved, That we will give our sympathy and fellowship to the Advent Christian Conference in this State, and elsewhere in the West, and crave their sympathy and co-operation in the work of spreading the Advent faith among the people in the Western field. (Adopted.) Adjourned.

S. Z. LOTSPEICH, Sec'y.

NOTE. During the day Eld Himes gave two sermons in the grove, of much interest. The first was from Rev. 14: 6, 7, on the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom, by the angel flying through the midst of heaven. He showed that we were living in the closing scenes of this world, and the kingdom of God was nigh at hand. In the p. m. he spoke on the blessedness of unity among the people of God, and the means by which it is maintained. It was indeed a glorious day for the Adventists in this region. We have suffered much for the truth, and now we have victory. All we need now is faithful workers. We hope Br. Gibson will be able to continue among us, and that others will be added to the list of workers. L. Z. L.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER
SADDUCEEAN
NOR PHARISAIC,
BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.

What did the Pharisees believe?

What did the Sadducees teach?

The pure theology—the ancient faith.

The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.

The true doctrine of a future life set forth!

Patriarchs expected it.

Prophets looked for it.

Jesus Christ demonstrated it.

Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.

Dead men are not alive.

Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?

What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.

Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.

Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subcriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 13, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.
☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope, but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,
☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.
☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.
☞ Do NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O. Address.

A. F. Dugger, Sycamore, Ill.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address: WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price. Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lead it.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

J. C. POST. We are always happy to forward subscriptions for the Crisis, Banner, or any other Christian or respectable journal. Still the best way is for subscribers to correspond direct with the publishers of each paper. It saves trouble and complication. When two papers "club" together at special rates, then, of course, both subscriptions should be sent to one office. But we are always pleased to accommodate any of our subscribers who wish another paper. We send the specimens you requested....F. STEPHENSON. Your case did not exactly come within our terms; but we send the desired favor ....A. S. BUTTERS. It was rec'd ...C. B. COLMAN. What is your P. O. Address? We cannot tell where you take THE TIMES?

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

D M Canright G F Cranston F W Duncan W H Cook D A Bradley S J Hollins O Prescott N P Hathaway E C Jewsbury J W Blaisdell J B Morgan E Dyer P Sawyer J H Cotton A Farrow W Coates E A Marsh C Goud A King E A Clapp M A Tibbets C Cole C C Marston L C Collins H F Gallup D D Reed J Wilcox M R Miles E C Bronaugh G W Rossiter S Thayer C D W Scott A Anderson C L Jones S J Brewster W E Hathaway W Strode J Smith M M Morton L Bush E C Andrus E More L F Cole A Sanders F S Morgan J Mitchell H D Cushing A DuPaul A McClure C Gillespie M J Wellman W N Hendrickson J Sidney Thorp W S Covey A S Butters M E Orr I Adrian J H Whitmore A S Butters E E Wheeler G Thomson W L Reddington J S Galloway A M Fitzsimmons J Hommel C W Conolly C L Ives W M Dickey G Wright W C Hicks J R Towle J Smith W Demoss P C Marsh A M Gladding J Sutherland J C Wellcome E L Williams D Mathewson W J Williamson M B Hubbell J F Huber D Felch P Rice J W Bray L Scott A Raab.

Communications.

O. R. F. (3), W. A. F., M. A. T., C. C., E. A. M.

Tract Fund.

J. Mitchell 65c. M. E. Orr 1.00.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4 Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawver, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open.

J. V. HIMES.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The yearly grove meeting of the Church of God (called Adventists), will commence in the grove of Br. J. T. Ongley, in Bootville, Crawford Co., Aug. 22. Eld. C. F. Sweet will be (D. V.) present to preach the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus, having the spirit and the cause of the Master at heart. The meeting is expected to continue a week.

Friends from the east and west can take the express trains to Union, on the A. & G. W. R. R., connecting with the train that leaves Union on the U. & T. R. R., at 1.45 p. m. for Lincolnville, arriving at L. 2.20 p. m. Friends from the South on the O. C. & A. R. R. R., arrive at L. 11.30 a. m. and 7 p. m. There will be a team to take passengers to the ground from Lincolnville on the arrival of the train at 2.20 p. m. The grove is 2½ miles west of L. In case of rain, a barn near the grove will be prepared.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited.

J. T. ONGLEY.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURLINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service.

L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice.

GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion.

C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

The place of meeting will be Saratoga, Union Co. seven miles east of Anna Station.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCulloch will bring the Mission Tent with him.

J. S. Lawver, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings.

C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks.

ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Aurora, with the Colored Baptists, 11 a. m. Aug. 18. At Br. Spalding's, 1 p. m. same day.

Jericho church, 5 p. m. same day.

Milroy, Sabbath, Aug. 25.

C. W. SMITH.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks.

L. H. DAVIS.

There will be a Grove Meeting in Henderson's Grove, about four miles N. of Ionia, Warren Co., near Br. Jonas Smith's, Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sunday.

Brn. G. W. Hurd and L. F. Cole are invited to assist in preaching the word. The brethren and sisters scattered through this region are earnestly requested to come to this meeting, and help in the name of the Lord. Provision made for all.

In behalf of the brethren. M. McCULLOCK.

Foreston, Town Hall, Aug. 13 and 14. Subjects respectively: The soul, and spirit of man.

Elida, Aug. 15, in the S. H. Subject: The Influence of the Reformation of the 16th Century on moral and social ethics.

White Rock, Union chapel, 3 p. m., Aug 18, Morn. and eve. in the Tent at Elida.

C. C. MARSTON.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

Basket Meeting, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co. Aug. 18. Picnic Dinner, Preaching at 10½ a. m. and 1 p. m. All are invited.

P. S. W. DEYO.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. Callamsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice.

H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren.

D. O. HIRE, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Union S. H. Sanilac, 10½ a. m. Sunday Aug. 25.

Port Sanilac, Advent Chapel, 2½ p. m. same day.

Brick S. H. Lexington Ridge, 7½ p. m. same day.

JOHN H. PATON.

This is an exchange with Br. Paton, so the friends may expect me to fill his appointments in Almont, Baker Corners, and Riley Center, the same day, Aug. 25.

GEO. WRIGHT.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-25. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

The Southern Michigan camp-meeting will be held on James Paul's farm in the town of California, Branch co., Aug. 20-25. We hope to have Eld. J. V. Himes to preach the word; also that Br. W. C. Hicks will be on the ground with "Pioneer" Tent. Every effort will be put forth to make this meeting a success.

We hope to see Brethren from all parts of the southern district on the ground with tents, ready for action at the commencement of the meeting.

The quarterly conference will convene at that time and place.

This will be a large meeting and one of unusual interest. Let all who love the appearing of Jesus prepare for a glorious waiting upon the Lord.

Those coming by R. R. from the North will stop at Fremont Station, where they will find a team waiting to convey them to the camp ground. Those coming on the M. C. R. R. will change cars at Jackson. Take the Ft. Wayne Road to Fremont. Those on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. will change cars at Jonesville for Fremont.

Come brethren, in the name of the Lord; and come with prayerful hearts that you may see and feel a glorious revival of the work of grace among us.

Hay and grain for teams will be provided on the ground at reasonable rates.

For the Brn. J. R. PRESTON.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District will be held at the Tyndall S. H. in Dayton, Newaygo Co., commencing Friday, Aug. 16, and holding over Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance. All that come will be provided for.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20, and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m. Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange.

P. W. HOUGH.

The first Q. M. of the Western District will be held in Burns, Friday eve. Aug. 16, and hold over Lord's day. We expect Br. Brown, of Minnesota, to assist. Come one, come all.

P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays.

WM. SHELDON.

The Western District Campmeeting will be held at Tomah, on the Milwaukee and La Crosse R. R., at the junction of the West Wisconsin Road, 50 miles east of La Crosse, commencing Aug. 20, and holding over Lord's day. Hay and stable room will be furnished free for all who come and camp on the ground. This is a new place, but the people seem anxious to hear on the Lord's coming and kingdom. It is therefore desirable that we all make a sacrifice to attend from the beginning, that we may prepare a people for the coming of Jesus, and warn the perishing to flee from the wrath to come. Let all come forward to labor for the salvation of the perishing and thus get ready for the marriage feast. We shall have preachers who will preach Jesus. He is sure to be there. Is not this sufficient to induce all the children to come?

Excursion tickets will be given to all going to Campmeeting on the West Wisconsin Railroad during the meeting. See that you ask for excursion tickets to and from the Advent Campmeeting at Tomah.

Now is the time for our friends to Rally, for the camp. Bring Jesus with you, and come praying.

Board and lodging can be had at the hotels for $4 a week.

What ministers? Brn. Sheldon, Adams, and Putnam.

P. W. HOUGH.

INDIANA.

The Indiana A. C. Conference will assemble Aug. 9, and continue over two Sundays, at Colfax, Clinton Co., on the Indianapolis and La Fayette R. R. at the crossing of the Logansport Crawfordsville and South Western R. R. All should come prepared to stay on the ground, and as far as possible provide themselves with a family Tent. Br. Andrus' big tent, "Indiana Tabernacle" will be pitched on the ground for use in bad weather, and as a sleeping place for those not otherwise provided. All who come should have at least a straw tick and blankets for every two persons.

All who are seeking for the blessed hope and the coming of the King are invited. Come up friends of Jesus to this first Conference and reunion of the Lord's sheep since grievous wolves entered in and scattered the flock. And may the "Jehovah of armies" come with you, that God may be honored and sinners eternally saved in our Father's kingdom. Brethren every where cordially invited.

C. H. CASS, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Kasota, where Brn. Butters and Chadwick may appoint, Saturday eve. Aug. 10, and over Sunday.

Plainview, Bently S. H. Sat. eve. Aug. 17, and over Sunday, 10½ a. m.

Viola, Stone S. H. 7½ p. m. Aug. 18.

St. Charles, Vowles S. H. Sat. eve. Aug. 24.

Utica, Cheatham's Grove, 10½ a. m., and 2 p. m. Aug. 25. Nooka, Page S. H. 7½ p. m. Aug. 25.

S. C. WELLCOME.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year.

GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church.
GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

NEW YORK.

The undersigned committee appointed at the recent Annual Conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But on account of other meetings to be held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided by the Conference. It will therefore commence Aug. 10 and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to the feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in that State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, 1 1-2 miles north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (Direct) R. R. ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens offer to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground.

A boarding tent will be on the ground, furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, &c., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 85c. a day, for those who do not. Let all come well prepared with overcoats, overshoes, shawls, coverlets, straw ticks, &c., &c. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents.

Let all desiring tents correspond immediately (enclosing stamp for an answer) with Br. D. T. Cooper, 72 Mt. Hope Ave., Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season. WM. E. BROWN, SAM'L. H. WITHINGTON, PERRY M. GRINNELL, Committee.

The next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held, the Lord willing, in the State Tent on the Fairport Campground during the coming Campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at 9 a. m., Wednesday Aug. 14, when Br. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which the meetings will be held at such hours as will least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected and will be submitted for districting the Conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early.

MILTON R. MILES, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 3. CHICAGO, AUGUST 20, 1872. WHOLE NO. 434.

Advent Christian Times.

Hear the Church of England:

WHICH IS PROVED TO HAVE EXPELLED FROM HER ARTICLES THE DOGMA OF ENDLESS TORMENTS.

[Second Article.]

What, then, is the conclusion of the examination made here? It is, that in the Code of Articles of 1552, there were two which together affirmed the dogma of endless torments for the wicked; that the whole Synod of the church deliberately expelled these Articles in 1562, and legally ratified the new Code of Articles; that in its reformed state it was promulgated by royal authority, and subscribed by the clergy of the day; that nine years after it was again read, and ratified by Convocation, and solemnly subscribed by all the members of both houses. These are historical facts which the clergy are taught, or supposed to be taught, and they are worthy of the deep, candid, solemn attention of the public at large.

Nor is this all; another Article was expelled at the same time, and this instance will both confirm and illustrate the position here taken.

The Forty-first Article of the old code was against millennarians, and unless this also had been abolished, no clergyman, in consistency with his signature, could have held and taught the personal reign of Christ upon earth, and the consequent universal spread of his religion; but the obstacle to this glorious truth was removed, and we cannot sufficiently praise God for giving such spiritual knowledge, wisdom, and foresight to our Reformers. A large number of the clergy avail themselves of the liberty, and preach, with happy effect, the opposite of this expelled Forty-first Article. We would respectfully and affectionately entreat all classes of them to do the same with respect to the other two expelled Articles. They will find themselves on safe ground if they thus follow their church.

Now this act of Convocation made the church of England consistent with herself, and brought her into complete harmony with the Holy Scriptures and with the primitive church, and gave her the purest doctrinal code which has ever existed since Apostolic days.

Before this step in the Reformation, one of her Articles affirmed, and does still affirm, that "Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation, so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of faith, or thought requisite or necessary to salvation." Now the Platonic dogmas of the innate immortality of the soul and of the endlessness of torments are not contained in the Bible, nor is there a single text by which either of them can be proved. But as some see the supremacy of the Bishop of Rome in the words, "Thou art Peter," &c., and transubstantiation in "This is my body," so some think they see the immortality of the soul and the endlessness of torments in the phrases, "Burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire," and "everlasting punishment," words which terribly describe the endless result of punishment, though not an endless process of it; just as they themselves see that "eternal judgment" indicates the same endless result, and they do not see here an endless act or process of judging. In the pamphlet above mentioned this is demonstrated, and the whole question examined upon the sole ground of the Bible; and love to the Great Master's truth, and desire for the salvation of souls, make his servant bold to say that the world may be challenged to prove endless torments from the Book of God literally, lexically, grammatically, and primitively interpreted.

It has been above affirmed that, by the expulsion of the two Articles, the Reformers brought the Church of England into harmony on this point with the primitive church, an object which these wise and good men never lost sight of in all their reforms. Now the dogmas of the intrinsic immortality of the soul, and of the endlessness of torments, were not held by the early Christian church, nor are they found in the writings of the primitive fathers. One clear quotation will be sufficient, taken from Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, who died A. D. 181. It is from the treatise to his friend Autolychus, and may be found in the second Book. "But some one [among the heathen] will say, was man made mortal by nature? By no means. Was he then made immortal? Nor do we say this. If immortal, he would have made him a god. If mortal, God would have seemed the author of sin. Therefore he made man neither mortal nor immortal, but capable of both; that if he were borne to the things which lead to immortality, he might receive immortality as a reward, and become thus a god. (Voos.) But, on the contrary, if he turn to the works of death, he might become the author of death to himself. God now [in this life] repairs the evil, for as man brought death upon himself by disobedience, so he that chooses, may obtain for himself eternal life by obeying the will of God. God has given to us a law and holy precepts, by which every one who keeps may be saved, and, obtaining the resurrection [of the saints] may inherit immortality." This is really a fair view of the doctrine held up to the time of Theophilus and some time after by many. But it soon became the custom to make Christianity acceptable to the heathen, by adopting some of their own ceremonies, and even some of their philosophical dogmas. It was thus that its heaven-born doctrines were corrupted, and their intended efficiency impaired. "In the third century, Porphery makes it a matter of accusation against Origen that he made use of the philosophy of the Greeks, in order to give a better appearance to his religious teaching; that he introduced Platonic notions into the same by means of allegorical interpretation." See Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, 6: 19, and Neander's Life of Julian. Though this corruption of Christianity was as much opposed then as its purification is now, yet the great name of Origen prevailed; and it became the fashion of the day to square the Bible, on this subject, with Platonic teaching, and its fatal effects have lasted ever since. This, however, is no fault of the standards of our Reformed Church. She has expelled it from her code of doctrine, and if her ministers still teach the rationalism of the heathen, instead of the pure word of God, and they ought to answer for it to the State and to the public, and justify themselves if they can, and confound this plain paper.

But there is still more evidence on the point, and this as clear and decisive as the other. No longer ago than 1864 the question was tried by the Judicial Committee, whether endless torments was a doctrine of our church or not. In the case of Wilson vs. Fendall, it was argued on both sides by most able counsel, and, after mature deliberation, the Lord Chancellor gave judgment that it was not a doctrine of the Church of England, for, remarked his Lordship, "to affirm it was so would be reinstating the expelled Article, which we have no power to do." It should be specially remarked that this judgment was given with the approval of the two archbishops. An account of this judgment may be found in the reports of the Law Times for February 20, 1864.

For a moment let the reverse of all this be considered. Suppose that in the original code there had been an article in favor of extinction; that in the revision it had been expelled; that, notwithstanding, after a time, a clergyman was tried for teaching what was expelled; that the judgment went against him because it had been expelled, and because the whole teaching of the Prayer Book fell in with that expulsion, would not our church opponents, if they knew the facts, adduce all this as demonstrably in their favor? The opposite to this has the facts. Endless torments was in the original code —it was expelled. A trial took place whether the expelled doctrine was to be retained, and the judgment was that it had been expelled, and that, therefore, endless torments was not a doctrine of our church, and we rely on the expelling action of the Convocation, on the one hand, and on the confirmatory act of the Supreme Civil Court on the other. The writer of this paper has been twitted with his want of honesty for eating the bread of the church while he does not preach endless torments. He leaves the public to say— if any are to resign their benefices— which of the combatants ought to do it. He has no wish to decide this point, but only to exhibit the facts, and leave them to judge for themselves. Let them believe and teach in accordance with their church and the Bible, and they cannot be wrong.

Now let these facts be calmly and dispassionately looked at. Here was the deliberate action of the synod of the church, legally convened by legal authority, to reform, among other things, the dogmatic Articles; and in executing their duty, as the keepers of Holy Writ, they expel those two Articles which together taught endless torments. They recommend that the reformed Code should be the law of the land for the clergy. This is done by royal mandate, and the clergy by their subscription give their assent and consent to the new, and now scriptural, code of doctrine. All these facts, however, have become ignored or forgotten; and now most of the clergy teach as if they had never taken place, and one object of this pamphlet is to revive the recollection of them, and by their side to place the confirmatory decision of the Supreme Court in 1864.

Do we, then, assume too much, or assume at all, when we say that it is proved that the Church of England has expelled from her standards of doctrine the opinion that the wicked must live forever in endlessly burning fire, and be there endlessly tortured? And can the inference be rebutted that, what she herself expelled, she could never intend her ministers to retain and teach? On two occasions, and two only, it has been observed that the church has omitted a good many truths from her Articles, and that the omission does not prove that these truths should not be received. But is there not a wide difference between a thing only omitted, but never introduced, and a thing which had been wrongly introduced and afterward deliberately expelled? This is the case with the dogma of endless torments; and none can fairly or justly overturn the argument drawn from it. Nor need any one regret this great act of the church. What she expelled is not a doctrine of the Holy Bible. Why, then, should she retain it? It has been the hinderer of the salvation of souls, and the chief promoter of infidelity, and why should she retain what is so pernicious? How, indeed, could she have been faithful to her Lord, unless she had expelled it? Let her ministers be also faithful, and return to the guidance of the mother of them all, to the model of the apostolic and primitive church, and to the inspired teaching of God's Word.

Would that the historical facts here adduced could be conveyed to the Upper House of Convocation, composed as it is of the respected spiritual rulers of our church; but it cannot be done. The writer of these pages has tried, by the only two members that were properly open to him, to present a memorial and petition to that house, embodying the above facts, and praying that the intention of the legalized Acts of Convocation may be observed; but both refused to present it, though it was humbly worded, and drawn up in due form. One said it was vague, it was indefinite; but that it would have been definite if the petitioner had prayed for the restoration of the expelled Articles. The petitioner was simple enough to think that if he had prayed for that, he would have prayed for an illegal thing, and one which neither the Upper House nor the Lower House, nor both combined, had any power to do. The petitioner set forth the legal acts of the church, and prayed that these might be observed; and inasmuch as the Upper House is composed of those who are duly authorized to see that the legalized behests of the church are obeyed, he prayed for what was possible and legal. The other revered member appeared to refuse on what may be called "prudential grounds." But can anything be prudent when it is against what is true, and what has been legitimately declared by the chief court of the realm to be lawful and right? Should the Convocation of the present day refuse to consider the legalized deeds of a former Convocation, and to regulate its acts by those legalized deeds, and which are formally and authoritatively declared to be legalized deeds? If the doctrine petitioned against was expelled from the church, is it right to retain it? If it is not God's truth—as it certainly is not—is it safe to retain it? On the contrary, must it not be a fruitful source of weakness and disintegration? Is it not already producing direful results among thousands of thinking Englishmen? They cannot believe what one of them in the House of Commons called "a ferocious superstition." It is not too much to say that they are seriously zealous for the good character of the great, good, Supreme Being; and when it is represented to them that he will endlessly torment more than three-fourths of his helpless creatures, they cannot and will not believe it, and they are right. But then they are told that this is taught in the Bible; and inasmuch as they think that the authorized teachers of the Bible ought to know what is there better than themselves, they identify these utterances with the Sacred Book, and despise it. We who have opportunities of learning the state of the case, know well that in the far larger majority of the multitudes of the indifferent and the infidel, this odious and untrue notion is the first point of departure. If they choose to depart from the Bible for anything that is really taught there, we are not responsible; but we are deeply and awfully responsible if we add to God's words what is untrue and revolting, and then try to make the people believe that it is part of the Holy Book, and, in consequence, alienate their minds from it. What right have we, whether in or out of the Church of England, to take Satan's poison, and palm it off as heaven's medicine? Is it any wonder that so few are cured, and that so many perish through the fatal disease of sin? It sickens the heart and makes it bleed to observe all this. Yet it must be kept to oneself. To stir in the matter is disrespectful to those who seem to be pillars; is imprudent; is heretical; is conceited. If we consulted our own ease or profit, or social esteem, we should say no more, we should do no more. It is hard to live in turmoil and weariness, and find persecution and loss. But then there are the sweet drawings of truth, and the joy of heaven's love, and we dare not rest. (Jer. 20: 7-9.) The living Church of England is at fatal variance with the legal, documentary Church of England, and if it continue it will destroy our apostolic body and alienate still more of her children, and our Zion, the place of our joy, will be in ruins. While we hold such a lie of the wicked one, how can our injured God uphold us and give us peace and prosperity? How can he do otherwise than leave us in disunity and discord, and let our own ways whip us, seeing that we refuse to obey his word? If we could, we would humbly and earnestly entreat our spiritual rulers, as if upon our very knees, to impartially and prayerfully consider this heart-rending state of irreligion among the millions of their flocks, and examine the foundation upon which the allegation is here made. There is a festering sore at the very heart of our church, which they, if they will, can cure. May we not use entreaty? Dare we be silent? No! we cannot rest, but must lift up the voice still, though it may be like crying in the wilderness. A great and crying evil exists. We

[Continued on page 20.]

Poetry.

Trust in God, and Do the Right.

Courage, brother! Do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble—
"Trust in God, and do the right."
Though the road be long and dreary,
And the end be out of sight,
Foot it bravely, strong or weary—
"Trust in God, and do the right."

Perish "policy" and cunning,
Perish all that fears the light;
Whether losing, whether winning,
"Trust in God, and do the right."
Shun all forms of guilty passion—
Fiends can look like angels bright—
Heed no custom, school, or fashion:
"Trust in God, and do the right."

Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight,
Cease from man, and look above thee,
"Trust in God, and do the right:—"
Simple rule and safest guiding,
Inward peace and shining light,
Star upon path abiding—
"Trust in God, and do the right."

—By Rev. Norman McLeod.

The Way of Safety.

How shall the church, under God, preserve itself from defection? This is easily answered. It is by being aggressive and diffusive. Here as everywhere, soundness of health is energetic activity. In this way the early church maintained its purity and power. So long as they pressed their bloodless conquests in the work of the Lord, the were kept in purity. But when they became strong and had need of nothing, as they imagined, they fell into a lukewarm state, when the Savior neglected them. Work, work is health and safety.—Primitive Piety Rivived.

A Good Example.

The Moravians are few in number, not exceeding twenty thousand, and possessed of comparatively little wealth, and yet they sustain seventy missionary stations, with two hundred missionaries, at an annual expense of $50,000. Some portion of this sum is said to be contributed by others, not of this church, but this shows that God disposes his stewards to help them. If the members of evangelical churches in the United States contributed, severally, in the same proportion for foreign missionary purposes, more than $11,000,000 would be received, a sum four times greater than is now received in both England and America.—Anon.

Choice Scripture Quotations.

WISDOM.

"Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou cans't desire are not to be compared unto her. Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her ways are peace. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her: and happy is every one that retaineth her. Wisdom is the principal thought; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding."

"But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding? Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living. It cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof. No mention shall be made of coral, or of pearls: for the price of wisdom is above rubies. Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding, seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living? God understandeth the way thereof, and unto man he said, "Behold the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." How shall he obtain it? If "thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and lifteth up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith nothing wavering.

But what kind of wisdom is here spoken of? Let Paul answer: "And I brethren, when I come to you, came not in excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God, and my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men but in the power of God. But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom which God ordained before the world unto our glory; which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise, for the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocricy." Therefore let us all seek for that wisdom that cometh from on high.

J. R. C.

"The Lord is at Hand."

These are the words of the Holy Ghost. They are given to us that we may know with unerring certainty our Lord's purpose. They present themselves to us with favor or disfavor, according as the subject of them is known and loved. The faithless wife receives the announcement of her husband's return with amazement. Not so the faithful and devoted sharer of his joys and sorrows. To her the absence of her husband is painful, and his near approach the signal of rising, swelling, outbursting love and joyous expectation. Our Lord is the husband of his wife—the bride—the church. He is absent; gone to receive for himself a kingdom. Faithful witnesses testify, as also does the Holy Ghost, that he ascended. We have testimony from the sure word of prophecy that the heavens have received him. He is seated at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens. He fills all things.

Now as to the time of his continuance there we are sure, in the first place, that it will not be forever. Secondly, the time will not be long. "Behold," said he, "I come quickly." And since his gracious intentions respecting his church are so clearly expressed, it is but to be expected that her testimony concerning him will corroborate his own. I believe that these words relate to our Lord's coming to judgment. They unmistakably show this. Unlike the great mass of unscriptural teaching of this time, the Spirit's testimony through the word is, that the end of all things is at hand." And if they are willing to sacrifice their own wisdom and conform to the testimony of the divine record, they will say the same things. Accordingly, Paul, a loyal servant, proclaimed it as of prime necessity to quicken the obedience of saints. Besides, one verse in thirty in the New Testament points with eager gesture to our Lord's return; and in all we are warned of the probability of its occurence at any moment. It is to no purpose that the objection is urged that the early disciples misunderstood our Lord as to the imminence of that day in their time. The Judge of all reserves to himself the authority of prolonging or shortening this dispensation. This age is his own, as were all ages before. He is not bound to continue it one day more; and if he has not pledged himself to prolong this order of things to a certain limit, why may he not come to-day? Yes, would it not have been perfectly legitimate to judge the world within the first hundred years after his ascension from Mt. Olivet? Surely it would. The patriarchal age ended suddenly with an overwhelming flood. and this will end in precisely the same way: "As it was in the days of Noah so shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Were all converted before that time of universal judgment? Did the mighty preaching of the great prophet produce the reformation of a considerable number of the people? Was the awful doctrine of their rapidly approaching judgment believed by those who heard? These questions may easily be answered, but we must remember that our Lord has called for the comparison between that time and the coming day with emphasis, let us read: "So shall it be when the Son of man is revealed."

If, therefore, there are devout and pious men who have a lively sense of this great truth, and are living in readiness for it, and teaching others this way, then we are to say, "this is just as it should be." Holy Scripture shows that it is one of the chief thoughts of God's mind. If so, it must find a conspicuous place in God's word. And so it does. Faith sees this, and laying hold of it makes it the watchword of the church. The Lord is at hand. Faith marks the advancing rays of millennial glory, and shouts: "The morning cometh, and also the night." The morning comes to the waiting bride of the Lamb; the night comes to the enemies of God, the period of their perpetual desolation.—Cor. Church Advocate.

The Rationalist.

In our day, however, there is a class of righteous teachers who profess to know all about God, and all about the soul of man, and all about religion—scarce a doubt of immortality and of gaining heaven when they die—and yet they declare they have no other revelation, no other logos than what Socrates had, or Confucius, or Buddha, or Zoroaster. Will these friends please to tell us on what they base their confidence? Not in the transcendental style of mystification, for which some of the writers of this class are so remarkable; not in bold assertions which evidently can have authority and value only on the supposition of infallible inspiration; but in plain, simple terms, that plain, simple men can understand, will you please state just what is the basis of your firm hope of immortality? It cannot be you are depending upon the argument of the heathen philosophers, as these, as we have already seen, left those noble souls still in doubt and fear. If you have added to these others more powerful and satisfactory, where are they? Being somewhat familiar with your writings, I must confess that, save what has been manifestly borrowed from Scripture, I am utterly unable to find anything calculated to advance us one single step beyond the age of Cicero or Plato. Take away the Bible, and I cannot conceive how that all that has been said, however eloquently or beautifully, could confirm in steadfast faith and hope the soul of one single earnest inquirer. If even a Seneca had to confess that their doctrine of immortality was "that which our wise men do promise but do not prove," and a Cicero had to acknowledge that the doctrine of a future life was "a sort of conjecture or surmise of future ages," how can you expect reasonably that your teachings can confirm the unlearned and vicious in the embrace of this doctrine? Or if, assured by the positive tone of their teacher, the many should receive at their word what the mind of man indeed is naturally inclined to adopt, the belief in immortality, what could give them, as another has well put it, "conscious as they are of guilt and of ill-desert, the confidence that their future would be an immortality of bliss." An eloquent writer of this liberal—very liberal—school, "the light of the New England metropolis" in his day, has declared that "the New Zealander who has often gorged himself with his cannibal repasts; the Aztec who has offered the hearts of his human victims by thousands in sacrifice; the vile, thieving Bushman of South Africa; the stolid fetich worshiper of the interior; the thug of Asia, whose life has been a a trade of murder; the Mohammedan, with his reeking sword, and the enlightened Christian of New England, shall all sit dow with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God." And another, "the philosophical sage of the suburban town," assures us that "the Divine effort is never relaxed; the carrion in the sun will convert itself into grass and flowers, and man, though in brothels or jails or on gibbets, is on his way to all that is good and true."

Very comforting assurances these, surely, to those who can receive them as truths. But why, I ask again, do these men know these things to be so? Has God told them? If not, then what is the "ground and pillar" of their hope? Is it a mere speculation? Then, manifestly, it is utterly unworthy of confidence. Have these men, perhaps unconsciously, become confirmed in their belief of a future life, which they pretend to have attained by their own thought and study, through the influence of the prevailing belief of the Christian world, received by inspired teaching? Then certainly it is not fair thus to ignore and condemn the revelation which has taught them; to take advantage of the light which through centuries that very revelation has shed upon the Christian world; to make their rhetoric pass for the wisdom of spiritual insight, and rob mankind of their joyful confidence in that book which has proved to them the source of more wisdom and consolation than all other books put together.—D. D. Howard, in Chris. Advocate.

The Christian Life.

Words of Wisdom.

DOUBTING.

We often find within us a doubting of Christ's willingness, when there seems to be a persuasion of his power and ability. But we shall find, that on a more strict attention to the workings of our hearts, that we doubt the former, because we do not sufficiently believe the latter.—Dorney.

THE WORK OF FAITH.

Believe not your own heart or reason against the naked word of truth.

In cases of scruple or discouragement of any sort, give yourself the same counsel, as by the Scripture you would give to another person in the same case.

The work of faith is not to make sin no sin; but because of sin, to bring the soul to the Redeemer; that the more sin it sees, it may the more abhor it, and triumph the more, in consideration that grace doth superabound through a Mediator—Henry Dorney.

TROUBLE AND REST.

He who promiseth soul-rest to others, could not have soul-rest himself. If the spotless soul of our Savior, that never sinned, was troubled, what wonder then many troubles be to the sinner?

Christ's soul is above troubles, and rests sweetly in the bosom of God. Troubled souls! rejoice in hope. Soft and childish saints take it not well that they are not every day feasted with Christ's love, that they lie not all the night between the Redeemer's breasts, and are not dandled on his knee..... But they forget the difference between the inns of clay and the home of glory. Our fields here are sown with tares; grief grows in every furrow of this low land. You shall lay soul and head down in the bosom and between the breast of Christ. That bed must be soft and delicious; it is perfumed with eternal glory. The thoughts of all your now soul-troubles shall be as shadows passed away ten thousand years ago, when Christ shall circle his glorious arm about your head, and when you shall rest in an infinite compass of surpassing glory; when glory (or ripened grace) shall be within you and without you, above and below.

The street of the city is pure gold; yet gold is but a shadow to the glory that is there.—Samuel Rutherford.

The Influence of Fiction on the Mind.

I am not to enter upon a crusade against the perusal of works of fiction. I should be sorry to debar the child from Robinson Crusoe or the Pilgrim's Progress, or to prevent any one from becoming acquainted with the character of "Jennie Deans" or of "Uncle Tom;" but I do protest against that constant and indiscriminate perusal of romances in which so many indulge. In the use of such stimulants I am an advocate not of total abstinence, but of temperance principles. I am not afraid of an occasional glass of fiction, provided persons be not constantly sipping at it, and provided they be taking solid food in far larger measure. For every novel devoured, let there be eaten and digested several books of history or of biography, several books of voyages and travels, several books of good theology, with at least a book or two of science. If you examine some of our circulating libraries you will find a very different proportion—far more works of fiction than works of truth. Those who consume this garbage will soon take its hue, as the worm takes the color of the green herbage on which it feeds; and the furnishing of their mind becomes excessively like the circulating libraries to which I have referred; a strange medley, in which the vain and fictitious occupies a far larger place than the real and the solid.

Nor let it be urged by the novel reader, that as he does not believe the tale when he reads it, so no evil can possibly arise from the perusal of it; for the mischief may be produced altogether independently of his belief or his disbelief. It arises from the impressions produced, unconsciously produced, unconsciously abiding, and unconsciously operating. Like the poison caught from visiting an infected district, it is drawn into the system without our being aware of the precise spot from which it comes, or even of its existence. Like the evil influence of companions, these "evil communications corrupt good manners," all the more certainly because they work pleasantly and imperceptibly.

Even when the novels are all proper in themselves, the immoderate use of them has a pernicious tendency. It has been shown by Bishop Butler and by Dugald Stewart that it is injurious to the mind to stimulate high feeling—as is done in the novel—when the feeling is not allowed to go out in action. It is a good thing to cherish compassion towards a person in distress, when we are led in consequence to take steps towards the relief of that person. But it is not so good a thing to indulge in sympathy towards an imaginary personage whom we cannot aid. .... "From these reasonings it appears," says the philosopher last named, "that a habitual attention to exhibitions of fictitious distress, is in every view calculated to check our moral improvement. It diminishes that uneasiness which we feel at the sight of distress, and which prompts us to relieve it. It strengthens that disgust which the loathsome concomitants of distress excite in the mind, and which prompts us to avoid the sight of misery; while at the same time it has no tendency to confirm those habits of active benevolence without which the best dispositions are useless."—Dr. McCosh.

"I can, with the greatest assurence (to the honor of our highest, and greatest, and dearest Lord let it be spoken), assert (though I be but a child in Christ, and scarce able to walk but by a hold, and the meanest and less than the least of saints), that we do not come nigh, by twenty degrees, to the due love and estimation of that fairest among the sons of men; for if it were possible that heaven—yea, ten heavens, were laid in the balance with Christ, I would think the smell of his breath above them all. Sure I am he is the far best half of heaven—yea he is all heaven, and more than all heaven; and my testimony of him is, that ten lives black with sorrow, ten deaths, ten hells of pain, ten furnaces of brimstone, and all exquisite torments were all too little for Christ, if our suffering could be a hire to buy him; and therefore faint not in your sufferings and hazards for him."—Rutherford.

When we are alone, we have our thoughts to watch; in the family, our tempers; in company, our tongues.

Seek not to please the world, but your own conscience. The man who has a feeling within him that he has done his duty upon every occasion is far happier than he who hangs upon the smile of the great, or still more the favors of the multitude.

The only way to meet affliction is to pass through it solemnly, slowly with humanity and faith, as the Israelites passed through the sea. Then its very waves of misery will divide, and become to us a wall on the right side and on the left, until the gulf narrows before our eyes, and we land safe on the opposite shore.—Miss Muloch.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

MONDAY, July 29. Came to Bethlehem, where we have a small society raised by Br. Baldwin. The town is small. There are two places of worship, Baptist and Methodist. We are to have the Baptist chapel for our meetings.

In conversation with some to-day in another town, on the importance of unity of faith and practice in order to growth, a sister remarked that she and some members of her family had been confused and distracted with tracts and papers that had been recommended to them. They had been sorry they ever saw them. She liked the Advent papers and tracts and thought they had better patronize them.

At 8 p. m. I spoke on the blessedness of the meek in the present and in the future. It was intensely warm and in the hight of harvest, and yet the people turned out in considerable numbers. They value the gospel in the country more than in the villages, where but few attend. It is here just as in other portions of the country. The people come into town from the country from two to six miles, while even professors of religion, who live next door to the chapel, often neglect meeting. Many of the village chapels depend on the country for audiences. Why is it so? Fashion, and business, and lukewarmness.

TUESDAY, July 30. We are greatly oppressed with the heat, yet the people continue to turn out and fill our place of worship. Such is the love of truth. I spoke on the "Blessed Hope." (Tit. 2: 13.) Brn. Gibson and Baldwin followed in earnest appeals.

THURSDAY, Aug. 1. Leaving Bethlehem we came to Corydon where we called on a number of Advent families, reading and praying with them. Among these was the household of Br. W. H. Falsom, from Holyoke, Mass. It is pleasant to meet dear ones from the East on the wide prairies of the West, still looking for the kingdom. In communication with families here I often hear the name of Br. Wm. McCullock referred to in kind terms. He did a good work here, and they want him to return and do more. We had a blessed meeting at night. The cause is coming up in Corydon.

FRIDAY, Aug. 2. Had a talk with Br. Gibson on sanctification. He said he heard Dr. Palmer and his wife, the great leaders in the sanctification movement, in the Methodist church at Rock Island two years ago. The Doctor read and commented on Rev. 22. He made the river of life to be death and spiritualized the whole chapter after the same fashion. Never heard anything like it before! Mrs. P. spoke on her favorite theme of sanctification. She was dressed in ordinary style, so that of course she could not sustain Wesley in his views of the plain dress. She appeared before the people with bonnet and gloves on—very different from the style of our women speakers. I had looked to her for an example of great plainness of manners and dress, and confess I was disappointed. The discourse was without argument or connection. She followed her husband in spiritualizing and in expressions relating to the living and the dead. For example, "Father has the same care for his children on this side of the river, that he has for those on the other side," making death the passage over the river without dying! And going to heaven at death was the burden of the theme, without even a hint at the Lord's coming or the resurrection. She advocated holy living and said some good things; but what they said was based on a false view of the great facts of human nature and of the Bible.

Charles Fitch, who died in 1854, was one of the intimate friends of Dr. Palmer and family, and enjoyed with them a state of sanctification before he embraced the doctrine of the Lord's second coming. And if ever a man did enjoy a high state of blessedness, I believe Br. Fitch did. But while he enjoyed most in that vein, was the farthest, as he said afterwards, from the truth of the Lord's coming. And he told me that when the light of the Lord's coming, as an event near at hand, broke on his mind he found himself unprepared to meet him. He thought he was ready, but the sanctification he possessed was not sufficient to meet the Lord. "The doctrine of the speedy judgment searched me," he said, as Jerusalem was searched with candles. And I had to repent in dust and ashes, to get ready to meet the Lord. And after this he did enjoy a sweet, precious and high state of Christian blessedness such as he never enjoyed before. The Adventists East and West who heard him, will remember the heart-cheering, aye, and often ravishing discourses he gave on sanctification "by the truth," and many embraced and enjoyed this blessing.

Br. Fitch told me he had conversations with Mr. and Mrs. Palmer after his great change. But they did not change with him. They remained in the M. E. church and continue in the old view, except that Mrs. Palmer within the last few years has been favorable to Millennarian views, and has said and written some good things on the Lord's second coming. But few of her readers or hearers receive it, as it is not made prominent or shown to be of any special importance. The old theory of going to heaven at death is the established theme.

With my acquaintance among the modern doctrines of Methodist and campmeeting sanctification, I have not been able to see the justice that Mr. Wesley and the first Methodists brought forth and which they claimed would follow. Many of the modern converts of sanctification, follow the fashions in dress, live luxuriously, go to feasts and festivals like the rest of the membership. There is not much gained except a happy feeling which they get at the altar under the influence of those who profess this high state of religious blessedness.

There are evidently different kinds of sanctification: but the best, and the only kind that I could recommend, is that which Jesus prescribes to the obedient soul—"through the truth." For this let us all seek. Sanctification of soul, body and spirit, as a preparation, not to believe the error of going to heaven at death, but to meet the Lord in his coming and kingdom. It is not wise or safe for brethren to go to altars of strange fire to get the truth on sanctification; or to go where they have to conceal their faith and hear the truth neglected and error preached without the liberty of testifying for the truth or against error. Many who are week in the faith, are in danger of being led astray, and, under such influence, making shipwreck of the Advent faith. Jesus is coming soon. Let us come out and be separate from all sin, and from all who persistently reject the doctrine of the Lord's coming. Let our light shine amid the darkness that surrounds us.

Spoke this morning from John 4: 8: "For this purpose was the Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil." He destroys sin by his mediation in the conversion of men to holiness; and those who will not submit to God, and forsake sin, he will destroy, at his second coming. Two ministers of the M. E. church were out to hear. Prejudice is giving way

S[illegible]ug. 3. Having finished my work in Corydon, Br. Beal took me to the grove, for our Convention and Basket meeting, at Young's Mills.

I spoke on the first angel's message (Rev. 14: 6, 7), showing that it consisted in a proclamation of judgment on Babylon or the papal power, and the consequent nearness of the kingdom of God. The extent of the message was to all nations, and it would be proclaimed until Jesus should come. One mission is to proclaim this message and to further this work, we have now met in convention to organize the brethren to carry it out. At the close of the discourse the convention was called to order, and after a consultation on the subject of a Conference, it was resolved unanimously to organize a Conference.

I spoke in the p. m. on the blessedness of Christian unity "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." (Ps. 133.) Many spoke to-day on their religious joys and hopes. They enjoy unity and prosperity. May it continue. They are out and out Adventists, and stand nobly for the cause and the truth.

At night I spoke at the School House upon the sufferings and the glory of Christ. This closed the week of toil. When will the rest come? I sought temporary rest with Br. J. M. Bryant, a lately enlisted, but bold soldier of the cross.

SABBATH, Aug. 4. Met in the grove at 10 a. m. The day was pleasant, and we had the largest gathering ever seen in this neighborhood.

At the close of the afternoon service Br. Gibson immersed four believers, in the Chariton River. We had a blessed season at the water side. This makes twenty-two that have been immersed by Br. Gibson since the first of July, and there are more to go forward. I gave a third sermon on fulfilled prophecy at night. Brn. Gibson and Baldwin followed me, pressing home the truth, and this closed the interesting service of the day.

The more I become acquainted with this people, the more I am interested in them. They are an intelligent, and reliable community. And very many are fully "established in the faith."

Socrates.

"Though Socrates had more just ideas concerning the nature and character of Deity, and also of the nature and obligations of virtue, than the generality of his countrymen, and even of the philosophers, he does not appear to have had any more knowledge than others concerning the great sanction of virtue, in the doctrine of a future state. In none of his conversations recorded by Xenophon, on the subject of virtue, with young men and others, is there the least mention of it, or allusion to it; which was certainly unavoidable, if he had really been acquainted with it and believed it.

"Speaking of the happiness of his virtuous pupils, he mentions the pleasure they would have in this life, and the respect that would be paid to them, and says that, 'when they died they would not be without honor consigned to oblivion, but would be forever celebrated.' Having said this, could he have forborne to add their happier condition after death, if he had any belief in it?

"It is particularly remarkable that nothing that Xenophon says as coming from Socrates, not only in his conversations with his pupils, but even at his trial, and the scenes before his death, implies a belief of a future state. All that we have of this kind is from Plato; and though he was present at the trial, and therefore what he says is, no doubt, entitled to a considerable degree of credit, it wants the attestation of another witness; and the want of that of Xenophon is something more than negative; especially as it is well known that Plato did not scruple to put into the mouth of Socrates, language and sentiments that never fell from him, as it is said Socrates himself observed when he was shown the dialogue entitled Lysis, in which he is the principal speaker, as he is in many others.

"In Plato's celebrated dialogue entitled Phœdon, in which he makes Socrates advance arguments in favor of a future state, we want the evidence of some person who was present; for Plato himself was at that time confined by sickness, so that it is very possible, as nothing is said of it by Xenophon, that he might not have held any discourse on the subject at all.

"Besides, all that Socrates is represented by Plato to have said on this subject is far from amounting to anything like certain knowledge and real belief with respect to it, such as appears in the discourses of Jesus, and the writings of the apostles. Socrates, according to Plato, generally speaks of a future state, and the condition of men in it, as the popular belief, which might be true or false. 'If,' says he, 'what is said be true, we shall in another state die no more.' 'In death,' he says, to his judges, 'we either lose all sense of things, or, as it is said, go into some other place; and if so, it will be much better; as we shall be out of the power of partial judges, and come before those that are impartial; Minos, Rhadamanthus, Alacus, Triptolemus, and others, who were demigods.' Taking his leave of them, he says, 'I must now depart to die, while you continue in life; but which of these is better, the gods only can tell; for in my opinion no man can know this.'

"His first argument is that, as everything else in nature has its contrary, death must have it also, and if so, it must be followed by life, as day follows night, and a state of vigilance always follows sleep. But might it not be said that, for the same reason, everything that is bitter must, some time or other, become sweet, and everything that is sweet become bitter?

"His second argument is, that all our present acquired knowledge is only the recollection of what we knew in a former state. But what evidence is there of this?

"His third argument is, that only compound substances are liable to corruption, by a separation of the parts of which they consist; but the mind is a simple substance, and therefore cannot be affected by the dissolution of the body in death.

"This is certainly the most plausible argument of the three, but it is of too subtle a nature to give much satisfaction. If the mind have several powers and affections, and be furnished with a multiplicity of ideas, there is the same evidence of its being a compound as there is with respect to the body; and if the power of thinking, or mental action, bear any resemblance to corporeal motion, it may cease, and be suspended, though the substance remain." J. PRIESTLEY.

—Selected by F. H. Burbank.

Revival Meetings.

The leisure season is nearing, when protracted meetings should be held by our preachers over the land. Special efforts should be made to infuse the spirit of labor for perishing men into the hearts of our membership. We should not be content with the impressions that we are in as good working order as other religious denominations around us, for we ought to be far in advance of them, for we see the day of God approaching, and this should make us a working people. And we should make special efforts to get ready for that great day. This cannot be done by bitter contention, under the claim that we must preach the truth; for truth preached in such a spirit is often ruinous in its present effects. Of course we must preach the truth, but always in the loving spirit of Jesus instead of the combative spirit of warfare, which never fails to awaken the same contentious spirit in the hearts of some of the hearers—an element that never promotes the revival spirit, but always blights in its incipient stage.

This has led some to suppose that the truth must be suppressed in revival efforts in order to success. But such a conclusion is entirely wrong. A revival that can be killed by the truth of heaven, when presented in the spirit of Christ, ought to die, and angels would say amen to its death. The more truth we present, the stronger will the converts be, and the less liable to be caught by chaff. Revivals minus truth, are like a porridge without salt or meal; and converts, though born alive under the excitement, live only while it stimulates them, and then die for want of nourishing food, having been born without a relish for the truth, rejecting it when presented to them.— W. Sheldon, Crisis.

The Problem of Evil.

Perhaps, by giving them perfect health, and everything they wanted, with absolute good temper, and making them very fond of each other besides, God might have provided himself a people he would have had no difficulty in governing, and amongst whom in consequence, there would have been no crime and no struggling or suffering. But I have known a dog with more goodness than that would come to. We cannot be good without having consented to be made good. God shows us the good and the bad; urges us to be good: wakes good thoughts and desires in us; helps our spirit with his spirit, our thought with his thought; but we must yield; we must turn to him; we must consent, yes, try to be made good. If we could grow good without trying, it would be a poor goodness; we should not be good, after all; at best we should only be not bad. God wants us to choose to be good, and so be partakers of his holiness; he would have us lay hold of him. He who has given us his Son to suffer for us will make us suffer too, bitterly if needful, that we may bethink ourselves and turn to him. He would make us as good as good can be, that is, perfectly good, and therefore rouse us to take the needful hand in the work ourselves—rouse us by discomforts innumerable.—George McDonald.

The Bible Class.

No Contradiction.

There are here and there intimations in the Bible that God tempts or tries his children, and in other places it is plainly expressed that God does not tempt men to wickedness. Just look upon that careful mother as she tempts or tries to induce her little child to walk. Holding its little hand, or walking close beside it to prevent its falling, she endeavors to develop its walking powers; and like this may our Heavenly Father be said to tempt or try his children. He would have their spiritual powers developed by exercise, but at such times he walks close beside us to prevent our falling; "for he will not suffer us to be tempted above that which we are able to bear." That loving mother would not place anything before her child to cause it to stumble, neither will God cast his children down. But the temptations of the wicked one are all to cast us down and destroy.

The Rev. F. S. DeHass, D.D., of the New York East Conference, has in his possession a splendid copy of the Pentateuch, written in clear and beautiful characters, on parchment. It is sixty-seven feet long by thirteen inches wide—the columns of writing on pages—as they would be if bound in book form, being about ten inches high by four wide.

The ends of the roll are evidently very ancient, being decayed and worm-eaten. The writing, however, is very legible. The skins in the middle of the roll are in better preservation, and of more recent date.

Such is the opinion of Tischendorf, to whom Dr. DeHass showed it when in Leipsic. Tischendorf estimates its date to be anterior to that of the Christian Era. Dr. Wright, of Cambridge, England, thinks it cannot be more recent—even the middle portion of it—than the third century. Certain suggestive archaisms in the roll give strength to Tischendorf's opinion. The Messianic promise in Gen. 3: 15, does not read "It," but He shall bruise the head, &c., and in all other prophesies of Messiah the same difference between this and our modern versions of the Pentateuch is apparent. The change in the gender of the pronoun from the masculine to the neuter gender was made by the Jews in the first century. This copy, therefore, must be of older date.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 20, 1878.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

SOME time since we referred to the controversy in the Church of England over the Athanasian Creed, and also gave our readers the document in full. The attempt to expunge this relic of the dark ages from the Episcopal Ritual, proved a failure. It was then that the Earl of Shaftesbury conceived and suggested a compromise. He put in circulation petitions that the reading of the Creed should be made optional, and not mandatory. The high bishops have considered the compromise favorable, much to the disgust of the strait orthodox, who will insist that he who cannot think the unthinkable assertions of this ancient Trinitarian confession concerning the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, can be only fit food for eternal perdition

THE Illustrated Christian Weekly has an article on children's mistakes. We propose a supplement upon the mistakes of adults. The children had been to Sunday-school and learned this lesson:

"Why can we not see God?"

"God is a spirit, and therefore invisible."

One of the qualities of spirit is, then, upon orthodox authority, invisibility. But the Bible says angels are spirits, and they have been seen frequently. Clearly, then, either the Bible or orthodoxy is wrong. Those who have more confidence in the last than the first will, of course, accept its unwarranted ipse dixit. For ourselves, while fully believing that God is spirit, we equally believe that "the pure in heart shall see God."

A SPIRIT IN MAN.

"There is a spirit in man." This we believe more fully than our opponents do. We believe there is a spirit in man. The spirit is not the man; but a man without the spirit is a man still, though a dead man.

Spirit is a generic term. Primarily it means wind or breath; then life or the life-principle; the mind or some of its affections or passions; a being; an influence proceeding from a being. Now while it is true that the word has borne another sense—that of "a rational, conscious, thinking, moral responsible entity" in man, it is not true that the word ever occurs in that sense in the Scriptures. Certainly this sense has been placed there, but it is injected, and non-natural.

Let us here call attention to a fundamental law of language: The primary sense of a word is always the sense intended, unless the context, or consistency demand a secondary definition. In such case, the context, or scope of the writer, or his usage of the term, or all these combined must determine the meaning. In other words, it wind or breath make sense in every case in the Bible where the term spirit occurs, that is the sense intended. If it does not, we must supply a secondary sense, according to the principle laid down above.

Our opponents have an advantage in dealing with this subject, in the fact that most people suppose that "the immortal soul" is the primary sense of the word spirit, and they have been drilled from infancy to attach that sense to the word in certain passages, so that they take it for granted that it is the sense intended. They do not perceive that this result is based entirely upon assumption. To illustrate. One will quote from Job that "there is a spirit in man," and from Daniel that "his spirit was grieved in him," "its sheath," and dares us to deny that there is a spirit in man—as if we had ever thought of doing such a thing.

But if one wishes us to deny that there is such a spirit in man, as the popular idea asserts, we do deny it in as round terms as the assertion itself. We appeal not to a popular understanding of the term, but to the usage of the writers: and we find that the Holy Spirit uses spirit from Genesis to Revelation for mind, or state of feeling. When we read Daniel's spirit was grieved it no more implies that spirit is a separate entity, than when we read of one's being grieved at heart, that "heart" is a separate entity. Paul's spirit "was stirred"—his mind, his feelings were affected. 1 Cor. 2: 11 is sometimes cited. "Who knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man which is in him." If our opposers would give us just one passage containing a definite statement that the spirit of man is intelligent when disembodied, or out of him, it would be to the point. Unfortunately for them, all such passages read in him. The coveted passage assuring us that the spirit of man when out of him as well as when in him, knows the things of a man, is lacking. Definitely asserted in ancient heathen writings, and the modern spelling book, hymn book, and mental philosophies, but nowhere affirmed in the Bible, the notion is of doubtful parentage, and may safely be treated with a most cordial distrust.

THE ERRORS OF THE AGE.

Let us not be unjust, either to an individual or an age. Let us be charitable to both; not discoloring, nor distorting, nor gathering up hasty inferences; but speak calmly, remembering that we ourselves are part of the age, and so, doubly bound, not to be mere haters of the false; but lovers of the true; not satirists nor slanderers, but men alive to the magnitude of the very least of good or evil, and desirous not to be mere assailants of the evil but upbuilders of the good.

He who sees nothing but error in an age is quite as likely to be mistaken as he who sees nothing but the truth; and yet, on the other hand, he who sees nothing but progress in our time is, beyond all doubt, afflicted with as sorrowful a delusion as he who sees in it nothing but retrogression.

It is not everything done in an age that is part of the age; and an error may be in the age, and yet not of it. It may be an isolation, an exception, an excrescence, not a characteristic; an exotic, not a thing of native growth. The solitary rock in mid ocean is not a specimen of the sea; one weed is not a specimen of the garden, nor one palm-tree of the desert. One hasty word does not represent the man; nor does one blundering sentence stamp the character of the book. Let us deal fairly with the age and its utterances. As every freckle is not leprosy, and every leprosy is not epidemic, so every imperfection is not deadly, and even that which is deadly may perhaps stand alone. Before we can attach the error to the age, or the age to the error, let us see that the error is wide-spread or deep-rooted, or chronic, or influential, giving tone and complexion to theology, or literature, or public opinion; not a mere summer-ripple, raised by a momentary breeze, but a broad tidal wave moving shoreward, and imparting its brackishness to the stream up which it is noiselessly working.

It is well that this should be kept in mind in order to prevent either an over-estimate or an under-estimate of the evil.

Besides, the greatness of an error is one thing, and its capacity for mischief is quite another. That which in one age, or kingdom, or stage of the human mind and conscience, would be potent for evil, in another age, or kingdom, or stage of the human mind and conscience, is totally innocuous. What a book of error and cunningly-devised fable is the Koran! But its power of injury commensurate with the magnitude of its errors? A thousand years ago it was a book of power; in our age it is feeble as the voice or hand of a child. In Bagdad, or Cairo, or Constantinople, it is powerful: in London or Paris, or Edinburg, it is impotent. Among the oriental races, even half a century ago it went forth and was responded to by the eastern mind and conscience of that generation; now the scepticism of the age has so told upon the Moslem race, that their prophet's volume is beginning to lose its hold upon the multitudes: conscience has passed into a new stage, and it no longer responds to the appeals which once would have stirred all its depths.

In fact, we may say that in many cases it is the magnitude of the error that is its weakness. Were it less in size, or less audaciously untrue; were it less audible, less visible, it would be more pernicious and more infectious, more seductive and perilous. So that often that which error gains in greatness it loses in influence and efficiency. Of two lies, or systems of lies, it is frequently the minute and half invisible, not the imposing and colossal that is the more extensively mischievous. The volcano thunders and smokes, but you see it and keep aloof; the scorpion, hidden under the stone on which you are sitting, or the snake, dropping from the bough under whose shade you are cooling yourself, strikes its tiny fang into your limb, and the little drop of invisible poison into your veins. A Voltaire rages and blasphemes. He proclaims the Bible to be a fable of the priesthood. You stand afar off, and his voice reaches you not. Another man rises, clad in priestly garb, uttering no blasphemy, and professing to venerate religion. He blandly suggests that the Bible is "unhistorical." Unhistorical! Yes; that is all. It is a smooth word, but under it is hidden the poison of the adder. By "unhistorical" he seems to the unpracticed ear to mean only at variance with common history; but he really means by it all that Voltaire and Paine did—fabulous and false; no truer than the Koran or the Shasters; the weak invention of some unknown impostors, who, like the camel-driver of Mecca, or Manu the son of Brachmar, compiled volumes of miracles, whose genuineness they did not themselves believe. Satan, as the Prince of darkness, had overreached himself; he is now clothing himself in the garb of an angel light, of and arraying error in the seemly raiment of science and philosophy, and poetry or humanity; he is sending it abroad to decieve, if it were possible, the very elect. The vulgar blasphemies of other days would not serve his purpose now, so he makes a selection of the least offensive; and even for that select number he is at pains to provide a more polite and less audacious phraseology, which will not altogether shock even religious men, and which will yet lodge in their minds the seeds of the same remorseless infidelity that from the beginning, has set itself to overthrow the book of God. He has picked up the spent shafts of Celsus, and Porphyry, and Blount, and Toland, and Hume, and Bolingbroke, and Voltaire; and having painted, feathered pointed, and poisoned them anew, he puts them not into the hand of the scoffer, not into the quiver of the profane, but into the hand and quiver of men who are called friends of religion and ministers of Christ. The goddess of reason has put on the mitre now, and speaks from sacred ground. It was once but the infidelity of the press and the platform, it is the infidelity of the pulpit and the altar now.

Thus many of the errors of the present day go forth with an authority which they never had before; and are listened to by thousands who denounce the infidelities of the past. A new standing-point, new vantage-ground has been secured for error. An undue and undeserved (not to say dishonest) position has been attained by it; and the resurrection of exploded sophistries is received as the discovery of new and irresistable argument.

Besides all this there is great difficulty in taking the measurements of many modern errors, of ascertaining their exact dimensions and character and tendencies. They are so intangible and indefinite. You can lay hands on a skeleton of however gigantic dimensions, but no one can undertake to deal with a spectre—a ghost, however imposing in its stature or aspect. You can measure a mountain, but not a cloud, still less a mist; you can grasp the shower-drops, but not a rain bow; you can analyze the light, but not the darkness. So indeed we find it difficult to handle the dreamy abstractions, the incoherent sentimentalisms, the broken reveries, the gorgeous pictorialism, the swamp-born exhalations which meet us on every side in connection with the "young" theologies and philosophic transcendentalisms of the day. They raise the cry of liberality, progress, geniality, large-mindedness, freedom from old-world fetters, and they brand the defense of old creeds as the mere poverty of intellect or the timorous conservatism of men who are too stupid, too indolent, too cowardly to think for themselves. their battle word is "young England," "young Germany," or "young France;" as if they had monopolized the youth of the world; or perhaps "young faith," "young truth," "young Christendom," as if in them and through them theology and philosophy were renewing their prime—assuming a nobler form, and brushing aside the obsoleteisms of a trammeled and uninstructed past, to emerge into a largeness and a liberty such as Moses or Daniel, such as Paul or John, had never known. And may we not predict that the watchword "young Christendom" will soon be drowned in that of "young Rome" or "young Babylon," when the fermenting theologies and philosophies of the day shall subside into one dark creed of satanic error, a compound of positiveness and negativeism, of supernaturalism and atheism, of superstition and infidelity, of all beliefs and of no belief; a strange dualism of religion and irreligion, of spiritualism, and secularism, of socialism and despotism, which will unite the world in submission to the great anti-Christian enemy of God? That which now worships unsanctified genius, and to whom goodness apart from high intellect is a term of reproach, which shelters itself under the name of progressive theol ogy, or philosophic eclecticism, or a re-adjustment of Christianity, will develop into a disbelief of all fixed creeds, it may be into a refined heathenism—certainly into a denial of the one Jehovah and his incarnate Son.

I enter into no comparison between the present and the past; nor do I attempt to ascertain what and how much we may have gained or lost; yet let me say that it ought to be acknowledged that the modern developments of evil have been met with large compensations and counteractions in the growth and evolutions of good; and that the argument and intensified energy of error has been, in no small measure, the result of the new life and power which have, by the all-quickening Spirit, been infused into truth. That which was "from above" came first, and was met immediately by that which is "from beneath." The resurrection of the false was preceded by the resurrection of the true. While truth slept, error also slept; when truth awoke, error also awoke; and the aggression of the former was the signal for the aggression of the latter. The armies of hell have mustered because the hosts of heaven had already taken the field.

I do not attempt either to enumerate or to classify the errors of the age; I simply point out a few of the more prominent and perilous—those especially that have both root and seed, not broken branches, nor cut down stems, but living and productive. It is of errors connected with man's religious being, or with religion itself, that I mean to speak; understanding by religion, not a cluster of abstractions, but the acting out of each man's personal relationship to God. (To be continued.) have tried to point this out, and get rid of it in a quiet, unobtrusive way, but it fails, and now, as the work must be done, nothing is left but to appeal to the public, by the press and on the platform. This course has been entered upon with marked encouragement and success, and it will be pursued, especially on the platform, wherever the heavenly Master shall open doors of entrance. There is wide distrust of the so-called orthodox doctrine of endless torments, and it needs but the exhibition of Bible truth to call forth the grateful belief of tens of thousands, who are now burdened with doubts of the doctrine and fears of going wrong. If others will do this necessary work, gladly will I stand aside; but if not, I will still write at home, and go out to lecture wherever I may be invited. I ask all lovers of the truth to communicate with me; but if no answer come for awhile, surprise must not be felt, for already the correspondence on this subject is at times more than I can well sustain.

Hear the Church of England.

[Continued from First Page.

A concluding remark should not be omitted. It is, indeed, high time that Convocation should be reformed, and, as it was in the ancient church, that the lay element should be introduced into it, since it appears that there is no way by which a petition from a member of the church or a presbyter of the church can be conveyed to the Upper House if any of its members choose to intercept it, though there be no plea for refusal on the ground of informality or disrespect, and though the prayer be only that the legalized acts of a former Convocation may be observed. The Constitution allows any Englishman to present a petition to the House of Commons and to the House of Lords, and even to her most gracious Majesty, if it be properly worded and in due form; and no member of either House would refuse to present such petition, even though he might not agree in the prayer of it. But so it is not with the Upper House of Convocation; and if it be not already unconstitutional and unusual for members of this House to intercept petitions to it, surely it is time that it should become so.—Henry S. Warleigh, Rector of Ash Church, Tewkesbury.

"They Rise."

Under the above caption, Rev. D. A. Dryden, of the California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has written a book, which is just issued from the press of the Western Methodist Book Concern, being published for the author. After the general caption above given, the title of the book is, "Suggestive Inquiries Concerning the Resurrection of the Dead, as taught in the New Testament." It is always pleasant for us to commend books written by our brethren, especially when devoted to the elucidation or defense of the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, but we cannot do this at the expense of positive convictions. In the present instance, our high esteem for the author, and our natural timidity about differing from brethren, fail to overcome an impression that this well-intended publication is a mistake.

The book came into our hands only the day before our departure for the General Conference, so that our reading of it has been hasty and fragmentary; yet we think the true idea of the author has been gathered, and no injustice will be done in the remarks we make. The author differs from the standards of the church very decidedly, and therefore expects the majority of evangelical Christians to differ from him. According to his view, there is no resurrection of the dead at all. He affirms th[illegible] death, or in the transition known as death, the spirit-man, the real man, is not unclothed, but clothed upon; that it simply exchanges one body for another; that the earthly body that dies goes to the dust forever, while the spirit body is possessed at death. This is, substantially, the old Swedenborgian notion, as revamped by Universalists and Unitarians—a plausible substitute for the Scriptural doctrine of the redemption of the whole man. We cannot believe that any such transition from one body to another, or development of one body out of another, meets the force of the words death and resurrection.

Not long since we had occasion to remark on this point, in reviewing an article on the subject, written by a Universalist, and we need not now repeat what we then said. The fatal thing in the hypothesis is, that the part of man that rises does not die, while the part that really dies is allowed no share in the rising at all. This was not the case in the resurrection of Christ, the pattern as well as the ground of our resurrection; for if anything is plain in regard to that event, it is that the body, which was nailed to the cross, and which was afterward taken down from the cross, and laid in the tomb, disappeared from the tomb, and was seen alive, with the print of the nails still visible, and was recognized by the disciples as the veritable body of the son of Mary.

The author very properly regards the term hades, as used in the New Testament, as having an important bearing on the subject of the resurrection, and we are happy to observe that he has some very distinct glimmerings of the truth in relation to that term. He shows conclusively that it does not mean the grave, and should never have been so translated in the New Testament, as it is once; and he shows, also, as we have long taught, that it does not mean what gehenna means, and should never be used interchangably with that word, because it does not express the final state of the lost after the resurrection, as gehenna does; but then he fails to do justice to those of us who agree with him in these particulars, and yet believe in a real, conscious existence of the soul in the disembodied state. He intimates that the common idea of the separate existence of the soul, regards the soul as an unformed, shapeless, unsubstantial sort of thing, divested of its proper attributes, and retaining only a misty, ethereal, dreamy kind of existence, without any proper home, or life, or occupation.

Now, we protest against this as an injustice, and one that cannot be of advantage to the author's argument. We have not failed to see that Romanists have abused the doctrine of an intermediate existence, by their crude notions of a purgatory; nor have we overlooked the fact that the saints in paradise are in the "third heaven," near the throne; and yet we rejoice in the belief that the disembodied existence is real; that the soul knows, and enjoys, and loves, and anticipates the final glorification with Christ, when death shall be destroyed, and the bodies that fall beneath its power shall be delivered unto corruption.

The author reasons well on the resurrection of Christ. We quote from Acts 2: 27, 31: 'Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hades; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. He seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hades, neither his flesh did see corruption.' In both these verses hades, in the Greek text, is in our English text translated hell. Now, the question is, what was the meaning of Peter, and of contemporary authors, in the use of this word? What place or state is meant by hades in these texts? And it may assist us in this inquiry to give a brief exegesis of the context, and thus clearly see of whom Peter is speaking. Verses 27, 28, are a quotation from David in the sixteenth psalm. In verses 19–34, it is shown that David did not speak of himself. He was buried, and his sepulcher remained to that day in Jerusalem. He was not ascended into the heavens, and his flesh did see corruption. In verses 30, 31, it is shown that David spake in the spirit of prophecy concerning Christ; that his soul was not left in hades, neither did his flesh see corruption, Then manifestly the doctrine is concerning the resurrection of Christ, that his soul rose from hades, and his body from the tomb. The second part of this teaching, in verse 31, we can readily understand. It is that the material or earthly body of Jesus did not see corruption—though dead, it was raised from the tomb before decomposition had commenced. What are we to understand by his soul? Manifestly his immortal, human soul—not in the sense of breath of life, or unorganized physical essence, but his real substantial self, or personality—the real human Christ. For the body left in the tomb was not the real, personal Christ, any more than the shadow is the real substance, or than your body is your real, personal self. Yet we have been so long under the teaching of the old Platonic and other metaphysical philosophy, or naked, disembodied soul-immortality, of mere shades and ghosts, that it is difficult for us to perceive that a living soul out of the earthly body is still a living, real, substantial person, and that the New Testament knows the dead as persons, not as breaths, or unorganized shapes. The soul of Christ was the real, personal, spiritual Christ, for a time out of the earthly body, which was in the tomb."

This long quotation is given to show that the author recognizes the fact of the resurrection of Christ, and in such a way as to suggest that he must have felt that, as this was the "first fruit," the pattern and pledge of our resurrection, so it ought to be considered as direct proof of the resurrection of the body. But it seems that he immediately lost sight of this point, and so bewildered himself in the pursuit of the locality of the soul, that he failed to explain the bearing on the main question of the resuscitation of this earthly body. We admit all the essential points in the above, and find them in perfect harmony with our doctrine, but in conflict with any theory of the resurrection that leaves the body forever under the power of sin and death. The two main facts in the resurrection of Christ are, that his soul came back from hades, and his body came back from the tomb. He arose with soul and body reunited, and nothing short of this constitutes the resurrection of the dead, as taught in the New Testament. We may admit all the author says about the locality and condition of the soul, while separate from the body, and yet the truth abides that this is not its final state. The resurrection is not attained until the reunion takes place. This, and nothing less than this, constitutes the destruction of death.

There are many points in this argument that we have neither time nor space to mention. We always fear for the result when a Methodist preacher cuts loose from the moorings of accepted theology, and starts to drift on the sea of speculation. In this instance we shall hope for good, but it looks very much like hoping against hope. The resurrection of the dead is a miracle, and, therefore, it cannot be tested by the laws of nature, either as to its possibility or its manner. It lies outside the range of the philosophies of men. The great point in this discussion, which our author has treated altogether too lightly, is the decisive fact that the resurrection is connected with the second personal advent of Christ, and, therefore, cannot be a progressive, spiritual development within the sphere of the invisible world.—Bp. S. N. Merrill.

Eyes.

What a variety of eyes there are in the world! There are loving eyes, admiring eyes, longing eyes, inquisitive eyes, jealous eyes, envious eyes, malicious eyes, smiling eyes, tearful eyes, meddlesome eyes, penetrating eyes, and eyes that look and yet see nothing; besides many other kinds of eyes which, in their own peculiar way, are peering into the world's mysteries.

A good way to make loving eyes is to be true, devoted and thoughtful of home comforts.

To attract admiring eyes, be cheerful, tidy, and industrious.

To cure longing eyes, call in and give some supper to the poor, half-starved little creature, who is gazing in at your bountifully supplied table.

To satisfy inquisitive eyes, let them see the very thing they had rather not.

To avoid jealous eyes, be neither distrustful nor do that to another which you would not have done to you.

To avoid jealous eyes, be squint-eyed, hump-backed, squatty, disagreeable, and no sort of use to anybody.

To keep clear of malicious eyes, die at once, and go to heaven.

To cause smiling eyes, speak kindly, deal gently, be light-hearted and merry, remembering life is to enjoy.

Have tearful eyes whenever the heart is full. It is a good way to work off troubles and lighten the spirit.

To avoid meddlesome eyes, stay at home, lock all doors, and draw the curtains. Then if they look through the key-hole, throw hot water on them, if you are over-sensitive; otherwise go ahead with your own affairs in your own way, and let them meddle.

Penetrating eyes must look up and try to forget all the secrets discovered of the short-comings of others, only remembering the beautiful things which the blind cannot see.

For eyes that look and see nothing there is no cure, excepting an awakening of soul or intellectual energies. Will it not be heaven when all eyes see clearly and from kindly motives? —Elm Orlou.

Joseph Priestley.

Speaking of the inauguration of that eminently successful statue in Central Park, Mr. Ward's Shakespeare, the Journal of Popular Science, goes on to speak of the discoverer of oxygen, whose statue is shortly to be set up at Birmingham. And the strange remark closes the article that, while his theology is forgotten, his scientific fame grows brighter with the ages. Now, what he means by Priestley's theology I do not know—perhaps he does not himself; but at this very moment his theology is more read and more admired than anything else about him, and will be so in the coming age. While not one in a thousand knows him as the discoverer of oxygen, the people at large remember his bitter persecution, the destruction of his invaluable MSS. by an infuriated mob, and the very pitiful compensation offered by the British government.

I remember an anecdote by Rev. James Kay which ought to be preserved. In an evening party a snuff box was passed round with the Savior's face upon it. "That is the face that never smiled," said somebody. Priestley fired up at once. "What!" said he. "Would children have thronged his steps and leaped into his arms had he never smiled?"

He thought the gloomy notion needed to be scouted away, and he was right. Children especially ought to feel that Christ's peace flowed out in a sunny smile; that love made his face a perpetual invitation, and joy breathed through his common tones.

But equally impressive is the fact that, when little Joseph brought back a pin he had picked up on a neighbor's floor, his aunt made him carry it back. And so, as the twig was bent the tree inclined. Priestley grew up one of the most honest men that ever lived. His enemies gave him credit for a soul clear like crystal, He never distorted what they believed, nor exaggerated what he believed himself. He left a richer legacy than any fortune—his noble character. He does not require a statue, though few have deserved it so well. He does not want our eulogy; he desires to be remembered for just what he was—a thoroughly true conscience, a wholly brave soul!—Lib. Christian.

A Short Sermon.

My text is these words: Mind your own busi[illegible]. And each word shall form a division of the sermon.

1. Mind your business. I assume that you have a business—a lawful business of some sort. If you are an idler, you will probably be a tattler and a busybody in other men's matters, and have no business in the world. The world was not made for vagabonds. Adam and Eve were children, but the garden was something more than a playground. It was their business to dress and keep it. They might attend flowers for beauty and fragrance, but they must not neglect the peas and early potatoes.

Mind your business. Be sure it is something useful. If it be hurtful, it is none of your business, and you had better let it alone. If the thing be wrong, the busier you are the worse it will be for you. If you do not mind your business, you may be certain that Satan is contriving some mischief, and will promptly set you to work.

2. Mind your business. Have nothing to do with Satan's business. It is always improper work. A certain man, it is said, made his fortune by minding his own business. Yet your business may have somewhat to do with your neighbor. Am I my brother's keeper? was Cain's question. Thou shalt in any wise reprove thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him. It is part of your business to bear another's infirmities and burdens. The text does not say mind his business, but mind your business. Destroy the weeds in your field as well for his sake as for your own. It is not intermeddling to pull his ox out of the mire. Christ said, I must be about my Father's business. He made it his own.

3. Mind your business. Study to do your own business. Keep your mind upon it. Not slothful in business, is linked with "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Push your business. Do not suffer it to push you. Remember the ancient rhyme about "the busy bee." Do your business with all your might; do not go about it grudgingly and fretfully. Let your thoughts be, "I delight to do thy will." Do not find fault with Adam. You ought to be something more than a pair of hands. Keep your mind upon your business, but remember that worry is not work. Be diligent in business. In one word, be a busybody, and yet be not a busybody.

In this paradox endeth both the text and the sermon, with a benediction.—Sel.

The Times.

AT HOME.

– – – There were twenty-three cases of sunstroke in New York, one day last week, five of which were fatal. Seven cases were reported in Brooklyn on the same day.

– – – Under the late law of Congress granting to disabled soldiers artificial limbs, or, in lieu thereof, commutation, those who have been paralyzed or have sustained some bodily injury depriving them of the use of their limbs, can make application on commutation to the Surgeon General of the Army.

– – – Father Alessandro Gavazzi and Rev. J. B. Thompson, distinguished clergymen of the Free Church of Italy, preached in Chicago last Sabbath. The object of their visit to this country is, in the language of their commission, "to make known to Christian friends in America the details of the interesting work of God going on in Rome and throughout the kingdom of Italy, and to ask their sympathy, prayers and aid in carrying on the evangelization of this beautiful country, so long barred against the entrance of truth as it is in Jesus, but now open from one end to the other for the free proclamation of the everlasting gospel." Father Gavazzi is celebrated in Europe for his brilliant oratory, and was, at the early age of sixteen, appointed Professor at the University of Naples.

– – – The yellow fever excitement has been considerably increased in New York by the arrival of two more infected vessels. The second ship arrived in the bay on the 15th inst., and a tale of fearful suffering was related by the survivors of the crew. This vessel is the German bark Johann Fredericks, of Stetin, bound from Sanarra La Mar on the north coast of the Island of Jamaica, to Stetter. She sailed from Jamaica on the 9th of July, under the command of Captain Kell, with a crew of nine men, beside her commander. She carries a cargo of logwood, pimento, coffee and rum. On the fourth day out the yellow fever made its appearance. They were utterly without medical attendance, and the horrors of the voyage are unutterable. Six out of nine men died, and there is good reason to suppose that one of these, the carpenter, who was terribly afflicted, jumped overboard and drowned himself. The last of these men died August 7, the bark being at the time north of Hatteras. The Captain, two men and the cook alone survive, and of these the cook and one seaman have been down with the fever, but are now convalescent. For days and weeks they have been too short handed to work their vessel, and literally drifted into New York in distress. A third yellow fever vessel lies in the lower bay, the American brig Liberty, Captain Devereaux, from Manzanville, Cuba. She has now three sick on board, and one seaman died on the voyage. Her Captain and crew deny that they were suffering from yellow fever, but the Health Officer in New York thinks differently. There are now six ships with yellow fever on board at anchor in New York Bay, within twenty miles of the city. The Health Officer claims that no new case has appeared on any of these vessels since their arrival. Every precaution is taken to prevent articles from being thrown into the harbor, even the ashes of an infected steamer being carried thirty miles and dumped into the sea.

ABROAD.

– – – The St. Petersburg and Florence Geographical Societies have each sent to Stanley, the African traveler, a gold medal.

– – – An English correspondent says the German Government has intimated to Thiers its intention to retain possession of Belfort, though it is willing to make compensatory concession to France.

– – – The religious disturbances at Belfast, Ireland, continued on Saturday and throughout Saturday night. The populace is divided into hostile Catholic and Protestant mobs, and whenever they come into contact a fight is sure to ensue. A large number had been wounded up to last accounts. Five deaths have been reported.

– – – The London papers publish full details of the damage done at Antioch by the earthquake of April 3. Of 3,003 houses, only 149 are habitable. Of 1,183 shops, 349 are now standing. There is one mosque left out of forty-one. All the churches, inns and cafes, and all the factories, with one exception, were destroyed. Of 17,005 people, about 300 were wounded and 500 killed. Up to July 11, the Government, for some inexplicable reason, had forbidden all rebuilding. Unless this embargo is removed, there will be great suffering during the rainy season, which will soon begin.

– – – Advices from Berlin represent that city to be in a deplorable condition, owing to lack of dwellings in the city for the increased number of the inhabitants. While whole districts of Germany are being nearly depopulated by emigration to the United States, an exodus far surpassing anything ever known even in Ireland, in the city of Berlin the reverse is taking place. The large open space known as the Butchers' Meadow is said to present an extraordinary spectacle. Hundreds of homeless families have betaken themselves to that spot, where, under cover of improvised houses made out of planks rudely put together, chests of drawers, tables, and other articles of furniture, temporarily fastened together, they manage to eke out an existence. During the warm weather this may answer; but it is painful to think what may be the condition of these people when winter sets in.

– – – Late reports from the San Salvadorian invasion of Honduras, read more like a chapter out of a burlesque history than serious news. Mendieta, who had captured Omoa, a small seaport of Honduras, and proclaimed himself President, seems to have managed affairs very well for a time. He was able to subdue Medina, the real President, so that that functionary, instead of routing the invader, actually hob-nobbed with him, and probably the twain sipped their "mescal" in amicable companionship. If Sanchez, Commander-in Chief, had kept quiet, all might have been well; he arrested his President, and, after demanding and receiving a ransom of $10,000 for him, put him on trial. The curious conclusion of the whole affair is, that Mendieta is a fugitive, Medina a prisoner, and Honduras, so far as we can see, has no President.

– – – Peruvian advices furnish a detailed account of the recent short-lived but bloody revolution in that country. Guiterrez, who, with the army, seized the reins of Government, and declared himself dictator, commenced by imprisoning Balta, the lawful President. This act was succeeded by a reign of terror both at Lima and Callao. Soldiers filled the streets and fired indiscriminately upon the inhabitants. The troops, soon tiring of their bloody work, began to forsake the usurper, and he was finally left without a supporter. He made a desperate attempt to escape, but was caught, executed, and his body hung to a lamp-post. Guiterrez's brother, hearing of the President's death, stole into the prison where President Balta was confined, and murdered the latter in his bed. The murderer had barely quitted the prison before he was seized by the populace, murdered, and every indignity offered to the corpse. Yet another of the Guiterrez brothers was murdered, and the bodies of the three were immersed in kerosene and buried in the plaza. Pardo, the President elect, who made his escape to the fleet in Callao harbor, had returned at last accounts, and matters were quieting down.

Correspondence.

From Arkansas.

I am neither dead, nor in a dying condition; nor is the blessed cause in which I labor come to naught. No, we are not asleep, but at work, and our numbers are on the increase. Adventism is in its infancy here. We have built a chapel in connection with the Disciples at the Head Stream schoolhouse. Br. Brown, of the Disciples, furnished the nails; Sr. Nelson gave the money for the sash and glass, and we commenced work on Monday morning, and by Saturday of the same week had a house 22x32 feet, ready for meeting on Sunday. Thus we have secured a comfortable place of worship.

Prejudice is giving way before the light of truth. Oh, for earnest workers in the vineyard! "Cæsar" and the world have had a heavy burden lashed on my back; and I have been trying to cut the cords and let it fall, or in other words, be free from debt, which, I think, by the blessing of God, I shall be able to do this year. And once free, I am determined, by the grace of God, that the like thing shall never happen to me again. But my faith has not failed, nor my ardor for the Master cooled.

For twenty-three years I have prayed that some one would come this way to preach the Lord's coming, and show the true nature of man. The most of those years have been spent in solitude, so far as faith is concerned; but I have endeavored to be instant in season and out of season, and preached these truths in all hours of the war. I took no part in it, feeling it was no place for a man of God, but could see the finger of God in it as one of the signs of the times, and the approaching judgment. Darkness covered the earth, and gross darkness the people, as to these precious truths. Oh, how I sighed for some one with whom I could take sweet counsel!

In good time the Lord sent Br. Fletcher to Arkansas. Through him, or the results of his labors, I got a clue to THE TIMES, then the Voice. How we drank down its contents! It was cool water to a thirsty soul. We had studied and sought to understand dearly the blessed truths, and now it seemed as if some took us by the hand and led us straight into their clearness and beauty. We had but to see and feed upon the ripe thoughts of those who, with greater privileges, had advanced far beyond us, and had removed difficulties that stood in our way.

I thank the Advent brethren who furnished the means for those books and tracts sent down here. And when I saw the list, I felt like engaging anew in the work, for I did not wish to enjoy the blessing all alone, but rather that others should share in it. Being an ordained elder in the Baptist church, I ceased not day nor night to proclaim the coming and kingdom of Jesus, the sleep of the dead, and the resurrection. I was called to an account by the Association, and the doors of the Baptist church were virtually closed upon me as a minister. Seeing this, I decided to withdraw, and wished to give them my reasons for doing so. They desired me to defer my remarks until another time. The case was put over several times, and finally came up again. The pastor in charge protested against any action that would give me a chance to be heard. The clerk joined with him. The moderator then declared I was an opposer, and had been borne with long enough. A motion was put and carried, and I was excluded without an opportunity for defending myself.

I then put up my petition to God, and wrote to Br. Himes to come and help me. Ere long I got a letter, in which occurred these words: "Brother, be of good cheer. You shall have help. If there is no one else, I will come myself." The tears of joy flowed freely. Br. Himes came at the time appointed, and brought us the word of light and truth. And his visit, with his teaching in public and private, and all his walk and conversation among us have been a blessing to many in this region. And we are looking for his return here this fall. Everywhere we go we are asked, "is Father Himes coming?" Yes, we tell them, if life continues. We are making arrangements for meeting when he comes, and we are trying to get Father Raymond to come here from Minnesota, which we hope to do.

Thus we are greatly blessed, and our prospects for the future are encouraging, for which we thank the Lord. Pray for us. S. ROSENBAUGH.

From J. N. Dennis, Taylor Co., Iowa.

While visiting my brother, I saw the first copy of your paper, and it comes so near advocating my religious views that I would like to become a constant reader. 'Tis true our views are not very popular in this vicinity, yet I hope the day is not far distant when the veil of superstition and false teaching will be removed, and all will be willing to accept the truth. There is much need of labor here, and I wish I had aid to advance the good work. I would like a few copies of the paper. I may induce others to subscribe.

From S. P. Miller, McDonald Co., Mo.

Having gained considerable information in regard to your views, called Adventism, from some of your brother preachers and from God's word, I wish to have a still more clear view with reference to the covenants made to Abraham. I am not now a member of any denomination of worshipers. I have been formerly connected with the Disciple church, but have been denounced by them as unworthy of their fellowship in consequence of holding and advocating the unconsciousness of man between death and the resurrection, and for believing that the wicked, after the resurrection, will die the second time. In short, for believing that God told the truth, and that the devil told a lie in Eden.

From T. R. Way, Erie Co., Pa.

Having received THE TIMES from a friend, on trial, and seeing your offer of the Bible Triumphant to any one who becomes a permanent subscriber, I herein inclose the subscription. I am anxious to get the light as fast as I can. I joined the Methodist church last winter, but I was half inclined to be an Adventist at that time, and am now two-thirds. Adventists are scarce in this part of the country, and I have never heard an Advent sermon in my life. Yet I believe the doctrine to be Bible doctrine. But I associate daily with an eternal misery believer, who says that he has thoroughly sifted the doctrine, and found it to be anti-Scriptural. I am inclined to think he "sifted" a good deal as the marine said the officers did the prize: "Run it through a ladder, and gave the privates what stuck to the rounds." The more I sift it the more I find to believe. I wish I was more decided and living up to it better.

From Wm. Breech, Kentucky.

I wrote you a few lines some six months ago, requesting some papers and tracts, which I duly received. I read them and became interested in them, and gave some of them to my neighbors, some of whom have become almost Adventists. One old man, of eighty years, said he never in all his life before saw any works so true to the word of Christ, as your publications. He wishes me to send for more. And I do want to read all your books; but I am a poor man, and have to support my family by my daily labor; but I will spare a little now, and a little at another time.

We have a great many about who call themselves Christians: but if I am any judge, they are far from filling Paul's standard of a Christian. But I am endeavoring to show them the plain word, and some have commenced reading their Bibles, and are almost convinced of their need of a Savior. I hope and pray this good work may go on.

From A. A. Judkins, Jefferson Co., Ind.

Being a believer in the Advent faith, I feel like lending my influence to that cause. I am a young believer of one year's experience. I was converted while an inmate of Br. Tibbet's family, and by the example and influence of Christian friends I became convinced of the need of a Savior, and then was led to confess him. I now feel that I am building on a sure foundation, which is Christ our Lord, who will soon come to receive his waiting people home and give them their inheritance in the new earth, where they will ever be with the Lord.

This thought gives me courage to press on in hope of gaining the kingdom, immortality and eternal life which our Savior has promised to every one that loves his appearing. I am numbered with the little church at Volga, which is trying to let its light so shine that others may be induced to come in to work with us. Many are interested in the Bible truth, which is being spread before the people daily. "The truth is mighty and will prevail."

From S. F. Rice, a Baptist Minister, Macoupin Co., Ill.

I wish to let you know that there are some lovers of the truth in this part of the world, and that we are persecuted for the truth by our brethren. It does appear that some professed Christians can persecute every one that differs from the old dogma they were taught by their forefathers with more zeal than they manifest in anything else. We are passing through some of the trials all true lovers of Christ have to undergo who come out for the truth as it is in Christ, especially the truth that man out of Christ is in death, and eternal life and immortality are put on at the resurrection. There are about thirty of us that hold the Second Advent views, that belong to one Baptist church. The Association has called the church to account, and will deal with them the last week in August, at church in Green Co. Then the ball will be thrown that is to kill all "soul sleepers" in these parts.

We ask your prayers and sympathy, and we want some good and strong in-the-Lord Advent preacher to come and see us. There are three ordained ministers in our ranks, all belonging to the same church. Two are young, and one has been preaching for some time. There are some ten churches affected with the truth. I do think there is a good chance now to build up the cause of truth in these parts.

From B. J. Goodwin, Iowa.

I think we have great reason to be thankful that we have been called into the vineyard after the heat and burden of the day is past, and the cool shades of the evening are setting down, giving us assurance that "pay day" is just at hand. The early laborers entered the vineyard at the risk of being defamed, of having their property taken from them, and even themselves cast into prison; yea more—of being put to death. But we have to guard against the cool influences of popularity and pleasure. We ought not to be conformed to this world in the evening of time any more than they in the middle of the day, but be transformed by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove what is that good and perfect will of our Employer, that we may receive every man his "penny." We should not seek to please our friends, nor ourselves, even, but the husbandman of the vineyard, that when the new day dawns, and all nature is clad in perfect purity, we may put on a crown of eternal life which will not fade away. Let us watch lest we become chilled by worldly mindedness, and that day overtake us as a thief in the night, and we be unprepared to go in when the door is opened to celebrate the marriage supper of the lamb.

I feel thankful that the terms of admittance are so easy. We have only to keep his commandments, which are not grievous, and watch and be ready at a moments' warning. Let us girt up the loins of our minds, and watch unto prayer, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

From a Brother in the "Christian" Ministry, Iowa.

I have received your books, papers, etc., with which I am much pleased. I send you my kindest thanks for the same. I would like to take your paper but am not financially able at present, but may be soon. The doctrine advocated in your paper is not new to me. I was reared in that belief, and my parents and grandfather now living at Mineral Ridge, although members of the Christian church at present, are, and always have been, very strong adherents to the Advent system. For myself, I am a steadfast believer in the main features of Advent doctrine. I look upon the doctrine of "natural immortality," "endless misery," etc., as pagan and false. I am trying to live a Christian life, but I do not expect I shall go to heaven when I die, but that God will "hide me in the grave" until the day of eternal joy shall dawn upon the world. With Job of old, I have a fixed and earnest hope, that he will "call and I shall answer." And that in the great day of God's eternal glory, at the appearing and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, I expect with Paul, to receive my reward. Yes, upon that glorious event my hope is anchored; and "if the dead rise not," "if in this life only, we have hope in Christ," then with the apostle I must say, "I am of all men most miserable." May God speed the day of our Lord's coming and kingdom. I will get some subscribers for the paper if I can.

From J. F. Eshelman, Ohio.

I see by the little bill on the wrapper of my paper that I am somewhat in arrears, and I here send the money for the paper one year more. I have now been a reader of this paper over five years, and at the coming of Christ the fruit thereof will be made manifest. I only wish every family in the world could have the chance to read it, and would interest themselves in the doctrine advocated. I often talk with persons who seem to think they are well "posted" in Scripture, who sneer at the idea that "all the wicked God will destroy," "root and branch;" who say that if they believed so, that they would not care what they did while here in time. But I then ask them to point out to me the man that does so believe who is not an honest, fair, patient, good person; which somewhat staggers them. And I believe the love and justice and mercy of our God and Redeemer being shown to us makes us love, and leads us to serve him. Though there are very few of this faith around here and they are much scattered. We do not keep the light under a bushel. May the love of God and his dear Son sanctify us all, and we be accepted by him, at his coming, is my prayer.

[It will always be safe to watch those persons who insist that only the fear of eternal misery prevents their plunging into the depths of iniquity. If that is their only motive for doing right their hearts must necessarily be corrupt, as must be seen by a moments thought. ED.]

From J. T. Ongley.

I am trying to hold up the banner and the cross, endeavoring to get men and women to see the truth in relation to the kingdom of God—what, when, and where located; also the nearness of, and the necessary preparation for it. I saw in Br. Himes' notes of travel in the oil region that through Br. Dodge of Titusville, he heard of me. I have preached at McClintockville more or less for nearly two years, also preached a number of discourses within about a mile of Kansas City. I have been, of late, preaching mostly in new places, finding some opposition, and some that have taken hold of the truth, and are trying to live it. I have just returned from a meeting at Sutton's Corner. Sunday afternoon we repaired to a beautiful grove close to the water, and with saw logs for seats, and a large concourse of people, I preached the word. Five then put on Christ by baptism. The above is a strong sectarian place, and the few that have come out will have to trust in the Lord, and keep near the throne of grace, to be able to stand. Brn. C. F. Sweet and G. Wendell have labored there, the result as above; and other fruit will appear soon.

The Methodists lately got one of their preachers to come and preach five discourses on the immortality of the soul. He would not discuss the subject, but said he would preach the five sermons for fifty dollars; and he did so. Yes, "preach for hire and divine for money," and "say, the Lord saith, when he hath not said it." Truly a wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land. Four weeks ago a Christian preacher in Lycoming Co., Pa., where I have been preaching once in four weeks, gave a discourse of three hour's length, to prove the immortality of the soul, in opposition to what I had taught. But the truth will stand. We can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth. The Lord direct us into all the truth is my prayer.

From Amos Sanford, Columbus, Kas.

I am contending "for the faith once delivered to the saints" more earnestly than ever before. A few of us here are keeping in view our Savior's second advent and praying for the kingdom to come soon. Some professed Christians call us infidels, and not a few use the word "insane" when speaking of me and the views I entertain, which they are unable to meet with any other argument. But the truth is progressing and it rejoices me to find that, in the minds of some, prejudice is giving place to Gospel reasoning and the true light.

A strict communion minister preached at the Baptist chapel last night and took occasion to remark that he believed mankind immediatel[illegible] into another state of conscio[illegible] ence at death; that he would [illegible] stop to prove his position, but he [illegible] not question the motives of those who differed with him, and by no means intimate that they were not Christians. This was more liberal than anything I have heard from the pulpit recently. This morning he called upon me at my office and frankly stated that he always took it for granted that his theory was correct and had never given the subject a critical examination. He asked for some work to read, and I loaned him "Whitmore on Immortality," and gave him some copies of the TIMES, hoping that he may see the error of his way of preaching and embrace the Bible doctrine, which gives Christ all the glory for securing to mortal man the blessings of life and immortality beyond the grave.

Another evidence of liberality is found in the fact that the Baptist church of this place retain me as the Superintendent of their Sunday School and positively refuse to accept of my resignation, notwithstanding I am no longer even a nominal member of their organization and will not pervert the plain reading of the Scriptures to accommodate their creed.

Elder Murray, with whom you held the discussion here, has recently manifested kindly feelings towards "this sect which is everywhere spoken against." He now advocates a union of the Free Will Baptists, the Christians and the Adventists of this place and vicinity, and says there is no essential difference of opinion to justify a separation. The spirit is working here and although we have been much discouraged, yet I have hope that the "early and latter rain" will produce an abundant harvest at this place.

From Isaac Adrian, Cascade, Iowa.

I was compelled to return home by the sickness of my son, but he is now recovering, and I am in the field again. He has talents that may be a blessing to the church and the Lord if consecrated to the work and service of God. He gave his heart to God when fifteen years of age, and although his studies have engrossed much of his attention, he has not abandoned the cause. Pray for my son, that God may direct him in life's duties. I left home July 26, and met a glad welcome from the church in Clinton, Iowa. I hope I was enabled to do them good. They are a self-sacrificing people, and maintain their meetings, with a place of worship, paying more than many churches far better off do for preaching. Will our preachers going East or West take a little notice of this struggling society. Coming to Monticello I learned that Br. Samuel Calkins lived three miles East. Met them at the door of their pleasant home, and was instantly recognized after a separation of twenty-seven years. It was pleasant to remember that this dear brother and sister opened their house to shelter the weary pilgrim and their hearts to welcome the glad tidings of the Savior's return. Of them I learned that the venerable Br. Starker and his faithful wife, with their children settled around them, lived in the village I had just left. I could but return. It was indeed a reunion of long absent brothers and sisters. I found Clinton, N. Y., fully represented in their town. Nearly all their large family were converted at a meeting I held in Clinton, twenty-eight years ago. Here also I met with a lady, who on a visit to Wisconsin two years ago, was induced to attend a grove meeting I was holding in Belleville, and was converted to the truth, baptised and returned to this place, I trust, a true missionary. The husband of this lady, a man of extensive business, very kind and honorable, yet not a Christian, disgusted by the popery, and dandyism of the clergy, who, he thinks, only strut and beg. Most too true. Yet may God grant that he may obtain the blessed hope of immortality. Br. Calkins left his harvest field and safely landed me at the door of Br. Dickinson, in Cascade. This church is in a discouraged condition and needs help. They are surrounded by a foreign element, mostly Romanists. There is but little to hope for, unless a railroad to the place, shall cause the inflate of a more intelligent class.

I will close this letter by saying that at no time in my life have I coveted any thing more than now to be worthy he name Adventist, expressive o: hope and Christian character and e.

n Daniel S. Clark.

left home in May to attend the ference at Greenfield, Adair Co., a, a distance of more than three lred miles. I found the friends wake and ready for meeting. This place where the Advent faith had r been preached till last winter. they have a small church with prospect of a healthy growth. We a good meeting, and a full house he last. Many of the brethren and rs were kept away by the rain. y for them, but we were blest in ng the spirit of the good Lord with One was baptised and more, I hope, oe soon. We had some opposition. an by the name of Mershon came fifty miles to attend this meeting, aid, to show the people that this Clark was deceiving them. He l to set some of them "right," but could not be moved from the of God's blessed word. Then ought he must take another course, gave me a challenge to meet him public debate, which was accepted will come off the first of October . Due notice will be given in The :s. I left Greenfield for Arbor June 6. On Sunday held the ing in the grove on the bank of lle River, some eighty rods from Stowell's house. After the sermon ptised two happy souls in the wa- where I baptised twenty-seven winter. This church is doing well. Lord is with them. Br. Philander es is their Elder, and preaches for some, but not as often as they . He should give more of his time e ministry. May the way be open- he can go out more, is the prayer is friends. This church was organ- some two years ago by Br. Himes, only eight members, now some -five. I believe the Lord sent Br. es there in the right time. What lp I found it when I was called to a meeting with them last winter nd eight all ready for work. May Lord bless Br. Himes as he goes place to place gathering up the ered ones and bringing them into ready for work. And may the l send men into the field that will l up and add to, and not tear down scatter.

hen came to Penn Center, where Hubbell and Hough live. Br. es organized a church of six mem- here some two years ago; now number over thirty. They have od Sunday School, but no regular ching. Br. Nokes preaches for occasionally. Br. Hubbell is Elder, and the church is doing . I left the brethren in this place the promise to come back and a grove meeting, and went to ter and preached twice in the Pres- rian house. I was called to this e to baptise the sick daughter of S. Shirk—one that came out in the ing last winter. She wanted to orward last winter when her broth- iid. Her friends thought her health d not permit. So it was put off he present time. Br. S. arranged ptistry in his front yard, and when time came the people flocked to see y buried in the watery grave to forth her faith in the resurrection ne dead. She was taken from her to the place prepared for the occa- , and was planted in the likeness hrist's death and raised in the ness of his resurrection. I never a more glorious sight in my life. was carried back into the house, ng the Lord had blessed her, and felt better. At the time she was tised she could not walk across the e alone, nor sit up any of the time. she sits up a part of the time and walk out of doors. Coming to is I held meetings in the Metho- church. Had a good hearing. y I think are interested in the ns we hold. Visited Br. E. Blanch- who lives at Milford, where he ying to hold up the truth. They a small church some two and a miles from this place, I believe ed up by Brn. Blanchard and Mor- , which is doing well. I commenc- ay meetings at Milford, Thursday and held over Sunday, with a good ing for the time of year. At Red I found some old friends. We Br. Gibson on the way. He had ted for me to bring me to his place. er two good meetings visited the rch raised by Br. Morphy in Br. tin's neighborhood. I visited a nber of places, meeting old and new nds, but had not the time I wish I d spend with them. I then attend- he grove meeting already reported The Times, near Br. Hubbell's, and n returned home. I spent some six eks with the friends in Iowa, and my prayer is that the Lord may send some good man filled with the Holy Spirit to preach for them, as they are in need of help. But if they cannot have the right kind, they had better have none. Oh! how we need more good laborers in the field. And men that think more of the cause of God than they do of themselves, will build up and not tear down. I cannot find time to find fault with others, there is so much to do for the blessed Master. And if we have his Spirit we shall love each other and work in harmony. How much the Lord has done for us as a people in the West. Only a few years ago we could find one here and there looking for the blessed hope; now we can find them in many of our towns West. Little did I think this when Br. Himes first came West and called for some one to take the old Mission Tent and go out, and at the call I answered and laid by the jack plane, and we went from place to place. I am glad the Lord put it into Br. Himes' heart to come West and to start that paper. The Lord was in the move. We have a good paper. How many I find are brought into the truth by reading the paper and the tracts that are sent out from the Association. Now, dear brethren, let us all work together, as one man, for Jesus and the cause. Time is short. We have no time to lose. Let us awake out of sleep. O blessed hope of Jesus' coming! Are we all ready? If not, may we get ready before it is too late.

Our Young Folks.

Deeds of Kindness.

Suppose the little Cowslip
Should hang its golden cup,
And say, "I'm such a tiny flower,
I'd better not grow up;"
How many a weary traveler
Would miss its fagrant smell,
How many a little child would grieve
To lose it from the dell.

Suppose the glistening Dewdrop
Upon the grass should say,
"What can a little dewdrop do?
I'd better roll away;"
The blade on which it rested,
Before the day was done,
Without a drop to moisten it,
Would wither in the sun.

Suppose the little Breezes,
Upon a summer's day,
Should think themselves too small to cool
The traveler on his way;
Who would not miss the smallest
And softest ones that blow,
And think they made a great mistake
If they were talking so.

How many deeds of kindness
A little child may do,
Although it has so little strength,
And little wisdom, too.
It wants a loving spirit,
Much more than strength, to prove
How many things a child may do
For others by his love.

Big Brothers and Little Sisters.

BY C. A. G.

"There's always two sides to everything," said a positive, boyish voice outside my window this morning.

"There ain't two sides to a string," answered a smaller voice, equally regardless of grammar.

But while I smiled at the speakers, the words of the first fitted into my thoughts aptly, for I had just been reading a pleasant little volume called "Talks with little Girls," in which the duty of sisters to their young brothers was particularly set forth; and I was thinking how, as I read that chapter, a pair of bright eyes looked over my shoulder, and their owner said:

"That's so; the girls do plague us awfully. I just wish you'd write another book, and give it to 'em harder!"

But "there are always two sides to everything," and it is the tother side about which I want to talk to you boys, a few moments. There was once a tiny girl toilfully going through her Sunday-school lesson, and it was observed that as she studied the small face grew more and more clouded, until at last she lifted up her voice and wept loud and long, whereat there was great consternation, until it occurred to somebody to ask what was the matter.

"Because—because"—sobbed poor little Polly, "the verse says, 'Add to your godliness, brotherly kindness,' and if that's kindness like Tom's, I don't like it at all!"

What did she mean? Well, I suspect she meant that Tom was just such a brother to her as a great many of you are to your little Pollies at home. I suspect she knew what it was to have her dolls hung up in the apple trees, and her kittens' tails tied together, and to be leaped at from behind doors, and growled at in dark corners. I imagine she had been tickled and pinched and locked into the closet; she was used to being called a pickle and a cry-baby, and a little pug, and to trotting with patient feet upstairs, downstairs, out to the orchard, into the tool-room, hither and thither on errands, for the doing of which she received only a tweak of the ear or a careless jest in the place of thanks.

Yet, I also suspect that Tom was a generous lad, who despised a "sneak," and who, if he had seen another boy abuse or torment Polly, would have promptly offered to bestow on that individual a black eye. I have no doubt that in the play-ground or at school he was good natured and honorable, disdaining a "mean" action and emulous to be manly. He would open wide eyes of astonishment at any suggestion of cruelty in his conduct toward his sister, and reply with honest candor:

"Why, it's only Polly; she don't mind."

Ah, boys! "only Polly" has a tender little heart, and it aches many a time, when you don't know it, with the sting of your careless teasing. The words you utter so lightly, and forget in ten minutes, are arrows to her sensitive little soul, and the tricks which seem to you so trifling are weighty trials to her.

"Well, but," says Tom, "it's so silly of her to mind; because she knows we don't mean anything."

That is one view of it. I suppose if she was a boy, or grown up, or wise, she would not mind; but being just Polly, little and weak and silly—if that is what you call it—she can't help it. You know if you squeeze a rubber ball tightly in your hand it will expand again into as round a ball as ever, and you cannot even see the place where it was compressed. But if you try the same experiment on a handful of rose-leaves the result will be very different. And rose leaves are not much more easily crushed flat than Polly's feelings. It seems absurd to Tom; but then it is a fact, and facts, you know, even if they are ever so much in the way, cannot be disregarded. Wouldn't Tom be the truer gentleman if he accepted facts and spared Polly's feelings, even at the loss of a little fun? After all, is the fun so amusing it can't be replaced with something better? Then, too, Polly loves Tom so dearly; she is so ready to believe in the extent of his strength and wisdom and ability, if he will but leave her faith undisturbed by teasing pranks. Tom has a warm heart under his jacket, and I think he privately enjoys Polly's love and admiration; but I also think it is a pity he covers up his feelings so carefully, and rather snubs Polly's kisses. For the day will come when the little sister's love will be valued at its worth, and, it may be, wished for in vain.

Once we were going on a grand fishing excursion from Cherrywold, and word was brought that a certain famous traveler would like to join us. He was a man that had ridden elephants in India, and polar bears at the North pole, for all I know! He had hunted lions, and been lost in jungles, and frizzled in hot countries, and stiffened in Arctic regions, and been all over the world; he had been a soldier, too; and everybody who knew about him knew what courage and patience and nobility made up the man. You can imagine how the boys shouted at the prospect of having such a fishing companion, who could tell stories of everything they wanted to know, and answer all the questions, and who liked boys, too!

Well, the reality was just as delightful as we all expected, which is saying a great deal, as every one knows who has ever belonged to a debating club and discussed the question about the pleasures of anticipation. After we came home I said to the famous traveler:

"Which of the boys did you like best!

And he answered promptly, "Jack."

So I asked why, because I thought he would have said Tom, or Dick, or Harry, and this is what he said:

"Because he went back after we were started to kiss his little sister, and wasn't ashamed of it, either."

Then this brave, wise man—the bravest man I ever knew—told me a secret. Said he:

"The real promise for a boy's future is shown in the way he treats his little sisters."

"Dear me!" thought I, "what a lovely time your little sister must have had!"

But I didn't say that. I only wondered how many of the Toms I know would be willing to have the hope of their future manliness measured by their treatment of their little Pollies.

But oh, my dear boys, I think my traveler was right; for the most truly brave soul is tender toward the little and weak; the most manly heart is the one that loves most; the greatest are the most patient; and the St. Georges, who are sure to conquer the dragons abroad, are gentlest with the Pollies at home.—Christian Union.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 80c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $35. tf

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n30m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.
A book you will want your neighbors to read.
A book that will silence opposers.
A book that will help those seeking light.
A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE
FAITH OF ST. PAUL
NEITHER
SADDUCEEAN
NOR PHARISAIC,
BUT
HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.
Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.
What did the Pharisees believe?
What did the Sadducees teach?
The pure theology—the ancient faith.
The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.
The true doctrine of a future life set forth!
Patriarchs expected it.
Prophets looked for it.
Jesus Christ demonstrated it.
Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.
Dead men are not alive.
Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?
What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.
Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.
Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT, FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 20, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.

Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.

N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication, ☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O Address.

A. F. Dugger, Sycamore, Ill.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address, WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

C. T. RUSSELL, jr. Will comply with your request as soon as possible. You will find something to the point in the Quarterly, if you have them....J. BROWN. Thank you. Appointment came too late. . W. H. WILLIAMS. Have no papers of those dates....C. BENJAMIN. Have a few left.

Tract Fund.

C T Russell jr $6 80. A C Huetson $4.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

W McCulloch J M Snook J R Cooper H Constable J Greaves J J Peavy V C Bryan J Shaw M Ring T S Rupel D A Bradley R Spotswood H Harrington J P Moon W H Lansing P Johnson H T Taylor E A Marsh J V Himes O D Gibson J D Olney T Stephenson J C Post N P Hathaway H J Munson W Strode G Wright M A Tibbe ts 2 E C Andrus M J Wellman J Smith C C Marston Mrs C D Williams W H Lawrence W Royce L C Collins C Rowley D J Vermilyea Dr G W Martin Mrs P A Clendenen C H Weltner E Tritton J Lowry B F Workman Miss R E Chichester E S McDonough J W Alston Geo Wright M V Johnson A C Huetson M E Green E Buckholder G T Adams R A Keating P G Marsh C and E Rice R Anderson C Newcomb D Q Kent Wm B McDowell S Cain S Carlisle J C Hooper C Benjamin A J Mears N R Sutton C D Lewis M Duncan J Hamilton M A Newcomb J H Cotton Mrs E Dyer E C Jewsbury J B Morgan J W Blaisdell C Gillespie O Prescott W L Redington G Thomson J S Galloway I Adrian C T Russell jr J Griffith A E Babcock J Wallace D E Atwood J Brown Dr C M Richmond J P Gardner H E Davis O Combe L H Davis O O Dinslow G Mathew N Breese J E Proctor G W Stetson J Raymond P L Wilson D Patten A M Matts G Lacy R T Taylor C R Stouffer Mrs M L Weldon L N Snell R B Cranson D Felch P Rice J Sutherland W E Hathaway C L Jones C D W Scott M M Morton H D Cutting D D Reed M R Miles G W Rossiter C Goud H Weby G Beafer S West C W Smith.

Minnesota Tent.

D Patten $10

Marriages.

WARDWELL—CHAMPLIN.—At the bride's father's, Aug. 11, 1872, by Eld. J. M. Snook, Mr. Samuel R. Wardwell and Miss Mary E. Champlin: all of Jackson.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

Afton, 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., Sabbath Sep. 1.
Beemerville, 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sep. 8.
Johnson's S. H. 3 p. m., same day.
C. W. SMITH.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

The first Annual Campmeeting of the Southern Illinois Conference will commence Aug. 17, and continue over the second Sabbath.

The place of meeting will be Saratoga, Union Co. seven miles east of Anna Station.

Friends of the cause are requested to meet with us on that occasion. Eld. Wm. McCullock will bring the Mission Tent with him.

J. B. Lawver, F. A. Childs, J. McCoy, Com.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

The Advent Christian church of Elida, Winnebago Co., expect, the Lord willing, to hold a tent meeting at Elida, commencing Friday eve. Aug. 16, and continuing over Sabbath, the 25th.

Elida is eight miles S. W. of Rockford. Eld. Himes is expected to be present to preach the Word. Let all the friends in the region about come up to this meeting. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, to labor for God and his glorious cause.

For the church, C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4 and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Milroy, Sabbath, Aug. 25.
C. W. SMITH.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

IOWA.

Campmeeting at Chase's Grove.
S. K. GIBSON.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks nor hwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings, and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, E. Stearns, C. F. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JANES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JANES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HINE, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

The Michigan Southern District Campmeeting will be held in the town of California, Branch Co. Aug. 20-25. The first Q. M. for this conference year will be held in connection with campmeeting. Particulars soon. Meanwhile let all the brethren in this district make preparations to attend. This is a new interest, auxiliary to the State meeting. Let the churches prepare tents and dedicate them to God at this meeting, and let them be kept for future meetings, then all will be in readiness for the next yearly meetings.

J. R. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, Sabbath Aug. 26, 10½ a. m.

Lake Shore, Advent chapel, same day, 2½ p. m.

Lexington, Earret Hall, same day, 7½ p. m.

Sanilac Union S. H. Saturday eve., Aug. 24. 7½ p. m. JOHN PATON.

This is an exchange with Br. P.

GEO. WRIGHT.

The Southern Michigan camp-meeting will be held on James Paul's farm in the town of California, Branch co., Aug. 20-25. We hope to have Eld. J. V. Himes to preach the word; also that Br. W. C. Hicks will be on the ground with "Pioneer" Tent. Every effort will be put forth to make this meeting a success.

We hope to see Brethren from all parts of the southern district on the ground with tents, ready for action at the commencement of the meeting.

The quarterly conference will convene at that time and place.

This will be a large meeting and one of unusual interest. Let all who love the appearing of Jesus prepare for a glorious waiting upon the Lord.

Those coming by R. R. from the North will stop at Fremont Station, where they will find a team waiting to convey them to the camp ground. Those coming on the M. C. R. R. will change cars at Jackson. Take the Ft. Wayne Road to Fremont. Those on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. will change cars at Jonesville for Fremont.

Come brethren, in the name of the Lord; and come with prayerful hearts that you may see and feel a glorious revival of the work of grace among us.

Hay and grain for teams will be provided on the ground at reasonable rates.

For the Brn. J. R. PRESTON.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20, and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m, Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. WM. SHELDON.

The Western District Campmeeting will be held at Tomah, on the Milwaukee and La Crosse R. R., at the junction of the West Wisconsin Road, 50 miles east of La Crosse, commencing Aug. 20, and holding over Lord's day. Hay and stable room will be furnished free for all who come and camp on the ground. This is a new place, but the people seem anxious to hear on the Lord's coming and kingdom. It is therefore desirable that we all make a sacrifice to attend from the beginning, that we may prepare a people for the coming of Jesus, and warn the perishing to flee from the wrath to come. Let all come forward to labor for the salvation of the perishing and thus get ready for the marriage feast. We shall have preachers who will preach Jesus. He is sure to be there. Is not this sufficient to induce all the children to come?

Excursion tickets will be given to all going to Campmeeting on the West Wisconsin Railroad during the meeting. See that you ask for excursion tickets to and from the Advent Campmeeting at Tomah.

Now is the time for our friends to Rally, for the camp. Bring Jesus with you, and come praying.

Board and lodging can be had at the hotels for $4 a week.

What ministers? Brn. Sheldon, Adams, and Putnam. P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

St. Charles, Vowles S. H. Sat. eve. Aug. 24.

Utica, Cheatham's Grove, 10½ a. m., and 2 p. m. Aug. 25. Nooka, Page S. H. 7½ p. m. Aug. 25.

S. C. WELLCOME.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawver, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open. J. V. HIMES.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The yearly grove meeting of the Church of God (called Adventists), will commence in the grove of Br. J. T. Ongley, in Bootville, Crawford Co., Aug. 22. Eld. C. F. Sweet will be (D. V.) present to preach the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus, having the spirit and the cause of the Master at heart. The meeting is expected to continue a week.

Friends from the east and west can take the express trains to Union, on the A. & G. W. R. R., connecting with the train that leaves Union on the U. & T. R. R., at 1.45 p. m. for Lincolnville, arriving at L. 2.20 p. m. Friends from the South on the O. C. & A. R. R. R., arrive at L. 11.30 a. m. and 7 p. m. There will be a team to take passengers to the ground from Lincolnville on the arrival of the train at 2.20 p. m. The grove is 2½ miles west of L. In case of rain, a barn near the grove will be prepared.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Sycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If those things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

NEW YORK.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 2, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $18. tf

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOC[illegible] [illegible]ATEST, BEST, [illegible]URABLE

ITS ADVANTAGES.

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n29m3) Box 103, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 4. CHICAGO, AUGUST 27, 1872. WHOLE NO. 435.

Advent Christian Times.

A Nameless Nature.

While some writers freely admit that Adam was not created immortal, yet they claim that there are irrefutable objections to the idea that he was made mortal; hence they assume that he had a kind of nondescript nature, neither this nor that, but about half way between a nature, which, it seems, they are unable to name or define; but one which could have lived on unlimitedly, just as do the angels who kept not their first estate, and yet not death-proof; and they might add with equal propriety, just as Adam who kept not his first estate, but fell and was driven from his own habitation, lived nine hundred and thirty years, yet was not death-proof. For it is mere assumption to claim that those angels, as also Adam, were not created with a nature susceptible of dying, and needed foreign aid in order to live on unlimitedly; for the angels sinned, as also Adam, and were sentenced to die, and were removed from their former habitation, the former to (tartarosas) hell, the latter to till the ground for his life until the sentence should be executed upon them. (2 Pet. 2: 4; Jude 6; Gen. 3: 23.)

In Adam's case, we know that God had provided in the tree of life that very aid which his nature needed, in order to keep him from dying; not by giving him a new nature, but by sustaining his original or mortal nature, not being, in itself, death-proof. And by a parity of reason, we may argue that God had provided in the habitation of the angels, who sinned and fell, an ample antidote for the tendency of their mortal nature while on probation, just as he did for Adam in his; yet both being shut out from that antidote because of sin, were doomed to die.

We propose to examine some of the irrefutable (?) objections to the idea that Adam was created mortal, or susceptible of dying. (1) If created mortal, says the objector, God's statement that death would be incurred by eating of the forbidden tree, was incorrect, because he would have certainly died without eating of it. This objection is refuted and falls to the ground when brought to the light of facts; for we are informed that the Lord God provided the tree of life, whose leaves, John says (Rev. 22: 2), were for the healing of the nations. Mortal nations, therefore, were contemplated in the creation of this tree; nor do we find the first intimation that it was designed to give a new kind of life, or change man's original nature to immortality; but to sustain the life of mortal nations while on probation. (See Gen. 2: 9; Rev. 22: 2.)

The second commandment given by the Lord God to man was to freely eat of the tree of life. (Gen. 2: 16.) Disobedience to this command would have been sin, and have exposed them to die as really as disobedience to the third commandment: "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it," for both were God's commands, and therefore law, and sin is the transgression of the law. (John 3: 4.) And if, as we argue, Adam was mortal, and needed the tree of life to sustain him in life, and heal him of sickness, to abstain from eating freely of the tree would expose him to death, so death would have been the result of disobedience in either case. After he had sinned, there was no necessity of his dying; though not in his nature death-proof, if he could still have free access to the tree of life. (Gen. 3: 22.) Thus the objection that, if man was created mortal, the statement of the Lord that death would be incurred by eating of the forbidden fruit was incorrect, is refuted.

Again, (2) it is claimed that when God told Adam if he ate of the forbidden fruit he should die, it was tantamount to an assurance that he would not die unless he did eat thereof. This would be true on the supposition that he obeyed the second commandment, viz., to freely eat of the tree of life, to sustain his life, and used its leaves to heal him of disease, not otherwise. It is a well known fact that ancient names were given to indicate the nature, object, design, or future history of the person or thing named. That this was the case in the names given to the two trees now under consideration, is clearly proved by the reference to them in Gen. 3: 22. "And the lord God said, behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever." This fact of itself goes to show that man was created mortal, and must have food and medicine, or sicken and die, as other animals would; and, therefore, to refuse or neglect these would seal his fate as really as being shut from the tree of life, with the earth curse against him.

Again, (3) the objector further claims that if Adam was created mortal, he would just as certainly have died without eating of the forbidden tree as by eating, which would make God's instruction deceptive or meaningless, and Adam might have replied: I am already mortal, and therefore must die, whether I eat or not. With Gen. 2: 9, 16 and 3: 22, 23, before me, I can but marvel at this singular claim. Let us read them. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food, the tree of life also (for food and healing, Rev. 22: 2); in the midst of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil."…. "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it….And now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever, therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden."

In the foregoing Scriptures, we have the following facts: (1) Adam being mortal, liable to sickness and death while on probation, God provided the tree of life as a perfect antidote for these liabilities. (2) God commanded him to freely eat of it. (3) By so doing, he would live forever, even though he became a sinner. And (4) that to prevent his living forever, it was necessary to send him "forth from the Garden of Eden" to deprive him of the tree of life. With what propriety, then, may we humbly ask, is it claimed that Adam, if created mortal, would just as surely die without eating of the forbidden tree as he would if he did eat thereof? So far from this being the fact, if he had not been deprived of free access to the tree of life, he would be alive to-day, a mortal sinner.

I argue, therefore, from these facts, that Jehovah's warning to Adam, that by disobedience in eating of the forbidden tree, he would incur death ("the wages of sin" Rom. 6: 23), was neither deceptive nor meaningless, but of the highest import as the sequel has shown. And if Adam had claimed that, being mortal, he must die, whether he obeyed God or not, the Lord God could have replied: Adam, I have directed you to eat freely of the tree of life, which will sustain your life forever, and its leaves are an antidote for sickness; if you obey me, therefore, you will live forever; but if you turn from my commandments, and eat of the tree of which I have "said thou shalt not eat of it," I shall deprive you of the tree of life, and you will "surely die." Is it just to call this trifling on the part of God? Remember, kind reader, that man was never death-doomed until he disobeyed God, and was shut out from the tree of life.

It was sin, not physical poison, that produced this dreadful result. (Rom. 5: 12.) The claim that the tree of life possessed a property which, if partaken of once, would produce an entire change in man's physical and organic nature, from that in which God made him, and which he declared to be very good, to an immortal nature; and that the tree of the knowledge of good and evil possessed a native physical poison, which would poison man's nature, producing death in all the race, are, to my mind, entirely foreign to the word of God; for in Gen. 3: 22, we are informed what the nature of those two trees were, as we shall endeavor to show.

It is claimed that the forbidden fruit planted the seeds of death in man's physical system, who otherwise would have lived on until he had gained access to the tree of life, and become deathless; whereas the Scriptures teach that he was placed in immediate access to it on entering the Garden of Eden, and the first commandment received from God on entering the garden was to freely eat of it. (Gen. 2: 16.)

Again, it is claimed that death is not the direct punishment for sin, but the result of physical poison, which God provided in the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, before man sinned, for the purpose of killing him if he ate of its fruit; thus virtually making sin and death a part of God's original plan; but where in the Bible do we find any authority for this singular claim? What is the testimony of Scripture on the nature of these two trees?

It is a well known fact that the ancients, following the example of the Lord God himself, as in the case before us, gave names to indicate ideas; hence the names of these two trees indicate their nature and design, and are so explained by their author. But we find not in either of them the most remote indication of the idea set up in this claim. The name tree of life cannot signify to give life, for this Adam received direct from his Maker; it must then signify the preservation of life, not by changing man's original nature, but as food to nourish and sustain that nature in life, and this it would do though the eater be a vile transgressor. Hence we read: "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden (among which was the tree of life in the midst of the garden, see v. 9), thou mayest freely eat" ("eating thou shalt eat," Mar.) (Gen. 2: 16.) "And now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever.' (Gen. 3: 22.) In these two texts we have (1) the name by which this tree is designated; (2) man's relation to it while in the garden, and (3) its nature and effect upon him as a life-preserver, clearly stated by the Creator himself.

We come now to the forbidden tree. We find nothing, says the objector, in the prohibition, intimating that God threatened to kill Adam for eating. O no. He only deposited the poison in the tree for the purpose of killing him if he ate of its fruits, (?) and that, too, without giving him direct notice of the fact. (?) The tree looks pleasant, and is good for food, in their view only the prohibition and its penalty stood in the way. Would this be deceptive? Does the name of this prohibited tree indicate that its fruit is to poison the eater to death, as set up in this claim? I think not. All the facts are against it. It is "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gen. 2: 9), (or of right and wrong, not of poison and death.) The nature and object of this tree, then, to correspond with its name, must be to give the knowledge of good and evil to intelligent, accountable beings, not to poison their physical nature, as we shall see; a knowledge which he needed and must have to be a moral agent. No right government would hold a man accountable to its laws who had no possible means of knowing them, or of knowing right from wrong; hence the publication of laws; nor would we suppose it necessary to transgress a right law, and incur its penalty, to learn what was evil, or wrong; but we should commend the man who, by a strict attention to such law, studied its authority, and his obligation to obey it; however crossing and trying it might be to his inclination, and thus obtain the knowledge of good and evil, or right and wrong. This was the Bible mode of obtaining it. (Heb. 5: 14.)

The forbidden tree, with the commandment, presented the law of God in its germ. It would give the knowledge of good and evil in two ways. (1) By trying and testing man's obedience and fidelity to his Creator, as the only law-giver, bringing his mind into trial, use, exercise, reasoning, on God's government, and his relation and obligation thereto. Hence Paul says: "Strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who, by reason of USE, have their senses exercised to discern both GOOD and EVIL." (Heb. 5: 14.) Isaiah also, speaking of the second Adam, Jesus Christ, who must pass the test of discipline, as did the first, speaks of his being restricted to certain kinds of food, "that he may know and refuse the EVIL, and choose the GOOD." Also of a time when he did not have this knowledge. (Is. 7: 15, 16.)

Or (2) this tree would communicate the knowledge of good and evil by eating its fruit, in violation of God's command, "Thou shalt not eat of it." This the serpent well knew, so he tempted them with the idea of being gods, knowing good and evil, through disobedience, while he denied the penalty (Gen. 3: 4, 5), perhaps pointing to the tree of life in support of his lie, "Ye shall not surely die." Under this temptation, the first Adam chose the latter mode of obtaining the knowledge of good and evil, sinned, and fell. By the former, the second Adam obtained the knowledge, and triumphed over the tempter and bore off the palm of righteousness in the law. (Heb. 1: 9.) Thus we read of the first Adam: "And the lord God said, behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil." (Gen. 3: 22.) By what means did he become so? By eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, surely. This is the Lord's explanation of the name given to this tree, and the serpent so explained it (Gen. 3: 5), and the woman so understood it. All agree that its name gave its nature and design, but not one intimation do we find of a physical poison in the tree of its fruit; unless it can be proved that the knowledge of good and evil is such.

Adam followed the serpent's mode of obtaining the knowledge of good and evil, which was by disobeying God. This was the crime, the transgression of the law, the sin, that brought death into the world; not by physical poison in the tree, but by transgressing God's law, whose penalty was death, of which Adam had full notice before the act. Hence we read: "When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." (James 1: 15.)

Thus, when tempted by the serpent, our first parents lusted after the forbidden fruit. This lust, when yielded to, brought forth the sin of transgression by one man, that brought death into the world. (Rom. 5: 12.) It was by one man's offense death reigned. (Rom. 5: 17.) This was the judgment upon the race (v. 18), because in him they all sinned. (v. 12, 18.) He being the unit of the race, whatever was his fate was the fate of all. It was the disobedience of one man that made the many sinners, and sin brought death. Why? Because the wages of sin is death. (Rom. 6: 23.)

Thus death is shown to be the direct penalty, or punishment, for sin; and not the result of a physical poison deposited in the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, for the purpose of killing Adam, if he ate of its fruit (Rom. 7: 7, 13); but by being shut out from the tree of life, which alone could preserve his life forever in his original nature, mortal with no healing balm as an antidote for sickness, except such as was contained in the herb of the field, and these were cursed against him, as an incidental evil; he was to eat his bread by the sweat of his face till the penalty of the law, which had been denounced against his act, was executed upon him. (Gen. 3: 17, 19.) I have dwelt upon this point because I consider it important, and in accordance with the foregoing is the entire testimony of Scripture from Gen. to Rev.

In further proof of man's original mortality, we refer to the incarnation of our Lord. (1) He must be the seed of the woman. (2) He must be made under the law. (Gen. 3: 15; Gal. 4: 4.) Why? Because he had undertaken to redeem them that were under the law (Gal. 4: 4); and therefore must be tried and qualified under and by that very law which held the race. (3) He must have a body of flesh and blood. (Heb. 10: 5; 2: 14.) Why? That he might be susceptible of dying. (Heb. 2: 14.)

Now Jesus took upon him our fallen nature, or he did not; if he did not, then he took Adam's original sinless nature. Which was it? if the former, then he was under sentence of the law as we are, and could not "by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him, ….that he should still live forever and not see corruption." (Ps. 49: 7, 9.) Was he physically poisoned? But if the latter, then all is plain; for he had a body of flesh and blood like his brethren (sin excepted), that was susceptible of dying, hence mortal. How was Adam made "a little lower than the angels"? (Ps. 8: 5; Heb 2: 7.) How was Jesus made? "A little lower than the angels." For what? "For the sufferings of death." Heb. 2: 9.) Ergo, Adam was originally made mortal, susceptible of dying.

Our argument then stands thus: (1) Man's original nature was mortal, susceptible of death. (2) The tree of life, of which "God commanded Adam" to "freely eat," possessed the property necessary to nourish, heal and sustain him in his original nature, while on probation. (3) The name of this tree, as also the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, signify their nature and object, and are so explained by the Lord God in Gen. 3: 22. (4) It was disobedience to God's commands that brought death on Adam and his race. (5) Death was and is affected by his and their being shut out from the tree of life, and the earth being cursed against them (Gen. 3: 17), and not by physical poison received in the fruit of the forbidden tree. And (6), that the incarnation of Jesus Christ in man's original, sinless nature of flesh and blood, that he might suffer death to redeem us, is proof positive that man's original nature was susceptible of dying, though sinless. May faith and love control our tongues and pens, while we try to spread God's word from pole to pole.

C. GOUD.

Poetry.

A Grand Old Poem.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less;
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket,
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thought and feeling—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overgrown;
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then,
Masters, rulers, lords remember
That your meanest hinds are men;
Men by honor, men by feeling,
Men by thought and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine,
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills;
There are feeble inch high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not station,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For to him all famed distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fatted on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice;
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifted up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sacred right;
God, whose word heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea.

—Sel.

The Star of Bethlehem.

Late one night, when all was still around a rude hostelrie in Judea, save perchance, the rippling of the wind through the tree-tops, a young mother gave birth to a son. She was one of a company of poor travelers who had taken up their night's lodgings in the stable. Such a birth was no uncommon thing among the poorer classes, and yet heaven never bent over a universe just rolled into being with such intense, absorbing interest, as it did over that unconscious babe, as it lay with feeble, flutter-breath upon its mother's bosom. The heavens were quiet above—the inmates of the low inn slumber peacefully—the shepherds were dreaming free from care amid their flocks on the fresh hill-sides, and all nature was at rest when the birth-throes of the young mother brought troops of angels from the throne of God.

But suddenly a change seemed to pass over nature—mysterious influences were in the air—the slumberers on the hill-side and in the valley felt a strange unrest, and arose and came forth into the open air. Whisperings were about them, and sounds like the passage of swift wings, all sweeping onward to one place, and then on the darkness of night a new star arose, bathing the landscape in mellow splendor, and flooding that rude inn and ruder stable with light that dazzled the beholder. There it stood, beautiful and bright, pointing with its steady beam to that slumbering babe. Encompassed in the still glory, the wondering shepherds turned in alarm one to the other, but saw in the shining countenance of each only cause of great fear. While they thus stood hesitating what to do, an angel hovered above them, saying, "Fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people: for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Suddenly crowds on crowds of radiant beings swept around them, singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." Oh, how the glorious anthem arose and fell among the Judean mountains. "Glory to God in the highest!" from voices tuned in heaven for ages to melody, and sent up in one exultant shout from that excited host, burst again and again on the ear. The heavens trembled with the song, and far away beyond the reach of watching shepherds, or listening men, were louder shouts, and more entrancing melody.

With that shout and that song on their lips, the host of angels wheeled away to heaven, and all was still again. But still the star kept shining on, and lo! the shepherds from the hill-tops, and wise men from afar, guided by its finger of light, came to where its beam fell on the infant in the manger, and worshiped him there. Strange occupants were in the stable. The wise and proud were there kneeling. Angels had been there adoring. The Son of God was there sleeping in a human mother's arms. That stable was greater than the palace of a king, for its manger cradled the "King of kings," "Emmanuel, the Wonderful, Counselor, Prince of Peace, Redeemer," Savior of men, were all embraced in that helpless infant. There it lay, calm and fair and lovely, the companion of cattle, and yet the maker of the earth, and the adored of heaven—the son of a carpenter, and the "Son of God." The feeble arm could scarcely lift itself to its mother's neck, yet on it the universe stood balanced. Its voice was faint, low, and infantile, and yet at its slightest cry, myriads on myriads of angelic beings would crowd to its relief. A few hours measured its existence, and yet it lived before the stars of God. Born to die, and yet the conquerer of death. No wonder that star beamed on its face, for it did more than declare its heavenly birth, direct the wise men to where it was cradled. It was pointing to the great solution of the problem of life, and of the profoundest mystery of heaven. For four thousand years the world had summoned its thought and energies, and exhausted its wisdom on the single question, "How shall man be just with God?" The smoke of the first altar-fire kindle on the yet unpeopled earth, as it curled slowly heavenward, was burdened with this question. From the borders of deserted Eden—from the top of Mount Ararat—from the Bethel of Abraham, and from the the tents of Jacob, had the sacrificial flame burned skyward in vain. The priests of Aaron had stood before the altar, and struggled for ages with the mighty problem, and lo! the "Star of Bethlehem" pointed to that babe as its solution. The long wanderings of the Hebrews—the miracles that preserved them—the imposing ceremonies of their religion—the "ark of God," the "mercy seat," the pomp of temple worship, what did they all mean? That silent star pointed to the reply. Altars and sacrifices, prayers and prophecies, all were to end here. For four thousand years the earth had been rolling on its axis to bring about one event, and lo! it was accomplished. To the thousand inquiries of the human heart—to its painful questionings—to all its hopes and fears for so long a period, this was the answer and the end. Like a shadow forever fleeing had the mystery of justification baffled both the thoughtful and inspired. The Hebrew with his temple worship and his offerings—the pagan with his heathen rites and his gods—the philosopher with his reason and his conscience, and the poet with his imagination, had pondered for ages over it. Watchings and fastings, self-humiliation, long pilgrimages, self-immolation, and death had been cheerfully, nay, joyfully endured, to solve it. Too high for the rapt prophet, too deep for the sage, it still remained to sadden and excite the heart of man, till the "Star of Bethlehem" arose on the plains of Judea. Then the problem was solved, and the mystery explained, but by one greater than all.

The long line of David, unbroken through so many centuries, was maintained solely to secure the birth of that child. Rapt in holy enthusiasm, Isaiah and Jeremiah, and all the prophets of God, had spoken of a king of Israel yet to come, whose throne should excel all the thrones of earth, and in the sublimest strains of eloquence spoken of the glory of his kingdom, and the splendor of his reign. Through ages of oppression—through long years of captivity—from the depths of suffering, had prophets and people looked forward to the coming of the "Redeemer of Israel," and now, as if to mock their hopes, that silent star pointed to the babe of a carpenter's wife as the fulfillment of all.

Oh what a bitter disappointment to be told that the King of Glory—the Prince of Peace—the Redeemer of Israel—the hope of the human heart, were in that infant, coarsely clad, and laid in a manger.

Yet that star said more than all this—to the longing after immortality—to the dim hopes—the painful bitter cry of the human soul after a life to come, it still cast its dazzling rays on that rude manger. The sad soul may question on and struggle on; but the sleeper there alone can satisfy its desires. It may range the fields of thought—exhaust all learning and philosophy—dive into its own unfathomed depths; yet there alone is the unfolded mystery. "Life and immortality" are in that manger—so speaks the ever-beaming star. Kneel there with thy soul, which has fallen back exhausted from the fearful heights it has endeavored to climb unaided, fling thy philosophy, thy pride, as well as thy fears away, and let the light of that wandrous star fall on thy countenance, and its rays subdue and gladden thy spirit. Painful doubts and appalling fears lest the sinful heart could never be accounted pure—unsatisfied longings and shadowy visions of a life to come, are all over. Oh, with what thrilling eloquence that silent star spoke to the bewildered, melancholy race of men.

Not only did it point to the only way of justification, and reveal the life of the soul, when its earthly clog is cast away, but it shed light on the grave of the body—cast the first ray that ever fell within its dark and voiceless chambers. It said as it shone, "Behold the resurrection and the life:" "There is the first fruits of them that slept." Wondrous beam, penetrating to the caverned dead, casting unearthly splendor on the charnel house, and flooding with light and glory the mutilated fragments which the worm and corruption have left. To the "whole creation travailing in pain and groaning," waiting for the redemption of the body, it said in accents sweeter than ever yet fell on mortal ears, "Be still, that babe shall open the portals of death, and lead captivity captive."

To the heaven above, it also spoke a language—it solved that mystery of redemption—showing how mercy and justice could be united, and revealed the length, and breadth, and depth, and height of the love of God—a length that reaches from everlasting to everlasting, "a breadth that compasses every intelligence and every interest, a depth that reaches the lowest state of human degradation and misery, and a height that throws floods of glory on the throne and crown of Jehovah."

Two great events mark the long history of the earth—one is the coming of Christ in a human form as the "Babe of Bethlehem," to save and redeem—the other is to be his coming in the plenitude of his divinity to judge the world. A single star arose and beamed on his birth: at his second appearance, the stars of heaven shall all be quenched, the sun be "turned into darkness, and the moon into blood.—Headley.

Fulfillment of Prophecy.

A Lecture on Palestine, by Rev. Prof. Porter, of Belfast, Author of "Giant Cities" of Bashan.

Palestine is only a little country, 150 miles in length by 100 in width. What is this compared to the great monarchy of Assyria or the empire of Alexander? But Palestine has exercised more influence on the human race than all the others. Palestine has neither beauty nor richness, according to our ideas. If he could set his hearers down on Lebanon, and give them a sight of the country, they would pronounce it the most desolate on the face of the earth; but on the other hand if he could bring an Arab tribe here they would pronounce this country uninhabitable. The first striking feature of the country is, that the rich plains are deserted, while the wildest recesses of the mountains are densely peopled. Nine-tenths of the inhabitants have their homes in the wildest and most inaccessible places. Villages densely populated are perched on the sides of rocks and on the tops of precipices. They would be startled by troops of naked children rushing out to see the Frank with the kettle on his head; and when he tried to see where their parents lived and where they obtained their sustenance, he would see a little vineyard, and a little strip of corn, where one would suppose nothing but an eagle could plant it. The poor and industrious peasants are driven to the rocks, and even there they have often to take their stand, rifle in hand, to defend their crops. The lecturer himself had seen a peasant sowing seed on a plain, with a rifle on his shoulder and two large pistols and a dagger in his belt, and in one corner of the field the bag, with the remainder of the seed, guarded by two men with rifles. Compare this picture of the country with the prophecies, and they are literally fulfilled. The country is divided physically and historically into four great belts: First, a belt of clay, parallel to the Mediterranean; parallel to that a belt of hill country; next a belt of plain country along the Jordan, 1,000 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, and on the east of the Jordan a belt of high table land, 2,000 feet above the sea, and 3,000 feet above the plain. In Palestine there are no railways, or roads that would be called roads anywhere else. In the plain country there were tracks such as sheep would make on a Western prairie; and on the mountains, paths on the sides of precipices, where sure footed horses and mules only could go. In Palestine he had only seen one wheeled conveyance. He had ridden a horse, and two mules carried his baggage, and at night he selected a spot near a spring and pitched his tent in true patriarchal style. Excepting one or two in Jerusalem, there are no hotels in Palestine; as for the inns in the villages, any one who wished a good night's sleep would be very careful to keep out of them. The lecturer then described some of the cities of Philistia. Ekron was a royal city; now there were a dozen mud houses and a few acres of cultivated land. Compare this with the prophecy—"Ekron shall be rooted up." Askelon he beheld from the top of a wall which had been built by the Crusaders. One part of it was a scene of utter desolation; not a house, not a fragment of a house remained. There was only one vineyard and a little field among the heaps of rubbish and slabs of marble scattered around; the rest of it was so thickly covered with sand that not a single remnant was left, and the sand is advancing so fast that in twenty-five or thirty years there will be nothing to mark the spot where Askelon was. Compare this with the prophecy given 3,000 years ago, and 2,000 years before Askelon began to decline: "Askelon shall not be inhabited. Askelon shall be a desolation." He appealed to a skeptic if a fitter description of Askelon could be given than this prophecy. Tyre was next described, and it was to be remembered that there were two Tyres—Old and New Tyre—but both built before the time of Solomon. New Tyre was on an island. Of Old Tyre not a vestige remained, not even a heap of rubbish. Three centuries B. C., Alexander captured Tyre, and not being able to reach the new city, he took the remains of the old and built a causeway for his army to cross and capture the new city, thus literally fulfilling the prophecy that Tyre should be scraped into the sea. New Tyre is now represented by a wretched village of 1,500 or 2,000 inhabitants, and the whole fleet consisted of three fishing boats. The lecturer next described what he had seen of the foundation of the Temple at Jerusalem, some of the stones of which he had measured and found to be from 25 to 40 feet in length, six feet in breadth, and five to seven feet in thickness; beautiful corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace, and he could never understand that phrase until he had seen these stones. The height of the foundations, as now remaining, was from 150 to 200 feet, so that the pinnacle of the Temple from which our Lord looked must have been at the height of 450 feet. He also described the bridge or ascent by which Solomon went up to the Temple, and which excited the astonishment of the Queen of Sheba. He next described the Dead Sea, saying it was well named; not a living creature had ever been found in it. A person cannot sink in the water, as it contains twenty six per cent. of salt. Its shores are unparalleled for sterility. The lecturer gave a description of the country as it originally was, and of its destruction as foretold in the Bible, and said that the value of Siddim, spoken of, and which now formed part of the bed of the Dead Sea, was pure bitumen, and on the shores of it sulphur was found in lumps, which presented the appearance of having fallen in a shower. There was also a ridge of salt rocks. He believed that Sodom and Gomorrah were built of basaltic limestone, which, though very hard, burned as well as coal, and that bitumen had been used instead of mortar, and if lightning struck these houses they would burn entirely up. Fire had rained down on Sodom and Gomorrah, and had burned them up, and burned off the whole face of the plain on which they stood. The lecturer next described the northern part of the great Jordan Valley; the cities of Galilee which had refused the Gospel. On the site of Chorazin there is not a house nor the fragment of a wall. The Arab does not pitch his tent there, nor the shepherd feed his flock, and not a sound falls on the ear but the summer breeze. Further west on the shore of the lake was Bethsaida, the only inhabitant being an Arab child, in a ragged tent. In looking over the plain of Genessaret, he saw a heap of rubbish which he supposed to be Capernaum, but it is so desolate, and all traces of it are so utterly obliterated, that its very site is disputed by geographers. The country east of Jordan was next described. Bashan is crowded with towns and villages, the greater part of them utterly uninhabited but not in ruins. The lecturer had ridden into empty houses in these villages at night, and stabled his horse in one room and slept in another, and ridden out through the village in the morning without having seen a single inhabitant, and not a solitary human being had been living there for the last 500 years. He believed that these houses had been occupied by [illegible] aboriginal inhabitants, and had been built in the time of Abraham. How is it that they are whole in that land of desolation, even the doors and shutters being in their places? He himself had opened and shut them. The walls are from five to eight feet thick, built of basalt, with roofs of stone; doors nine feet high, four feet six inches wide, and five to ten inches thick, composed of a single slab of basalt, with pivots on which they turned in sockets in the stone lintels. He had stood on a high hill and counted thirty of these towns and villages, and most of them had not a single inhabitant for the last 800 years.

Personal Efforts of Ministers.

Skill to converse with unbelievers on religion is an indispensable qualification of a good pastor. Power in the pulpit is very important; but personal conversation supplements the sermon and helps to render it effectual. There are a few men who do a great work by preaching alone, but they are exceptions. Among the most successful pastors of our day there are not more than two or three great preachers. They are generally described thus: "He is not a remarkable preacher, but a great worker." That means that their chief power is in personal contact with men.... The too common style of personal appeals is offensive, and repels from the Savior more than it draws to him. The talkers begin and spoil the matter from lack of skill. It is done in a formal, pretentious way, which is always repulsive. Sinners are more frequently provoked and repelled than persuaded by such ministrations; and the young flee from such ministers as they would from a sheriff or policeman. "I never had any one speak with me about religion but that it made me mad, except Mr. ——," said an intelligent young lady. How many of us can recall similar experiences! The manner of address, the spirit and bearing, was such as to provoke and irritate, or at any rate to leave us cold and indifferent. "He that winneth souls is wise;" but the many are not wise. They do not know how to fish for men.

The Christian Life.

The Traveler.

What heir on his way to take possession of a rich inheritance, lets a green meadow or pleasant garden detain him; or a black cloud or foul way dishearten him? O my soul, thou art traveling to take possession of a glorious inheritance among the saints,—wilt thou turn aside to crop every flower? Wilt thou stand still to hear every melodious sound? Wilt thou leave thy way to drink of every gilded stream of carnal pleasure? What is this, but to view a meadow and lose a manor—for a dying flower, to part with an eternal crown—for a flying vanity, to lose an immortal felicity? What though my way should be in tears, and my days in sorrow, a clouded sky and a swelling sea? Though my very life should be in danger, yet my infinitely good father, my large portion, my sweet rest, and my everlasting comfort, will make amends for all.

A Fool and His Burden.

"Alas for to-morrow! alas for to-morrow!" groaned a poor man under an enormous load as I passed him on the crowded highway. "Alas for to-morrow! however, shall I carry my burden to-morrow!"

"Why, you see, I must do it to-morrow, and I'm sure it's too much for me, it will break my poor back; and so after I got to-day's work done—and a hard day's work it has been—I must take up to-morrow's load and see how I can manage it."

"It seems to me very foolish to act thus; you do your work more than twice, for, now when you are worn out with the work of to-day, you burden yourself with that of to-morrow, and then to-morrow it must be all done over again. Would it not be wiser to go home, lay to-morrow's burden down, seek rest in sleep, and so both save your back to-night and fit it for the work of another day?"

He was persuaded, and did so. Next evening I met him, and he said, with a happy face, that, in the morning, when he was just ready to start with his load, the carts of Providence Hill came along and took up both it and himself too.

Reader! think not that this is at all untrue. I know the man; and, alas! many more who have not learned this wisdom are to-day found groaning under to-morrow's load, forgetting that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."—Gospel Trumpet.

Not Worse than Others.

"I am not worse than others," says another, who feels that he must have something to say for himself; and because he has nothing better, says this.

Granted, my friend, with all my heart. You are not a bit worse than a great many people—hundreds of thousands; and what is more, you are not half so bad as a great many of them. You never thought of that did you? You never expected a help up from this quarter; but we believe in the old saying, that "fair play is a jewel," and if you are not as bad as many, why should any one say you are?

But then, what about these others? What is going to become of them? If they are on the way to ruin, what comfort is it to you that you are no worse off? the point is, Are you any better off? If you say "you are no worse off than they," you are, in point of fact, casting in your lot with them; and what is that lot, that you should be content with it? If there are forty-nine men to be flogged, it won't make you feel the lash the less because you are the fiftieth; and if there are three men to be hanged, you'll as certainly die if you be one of the three, as if there were no one but yourself.

And even if you are not half so bad as others, there's only cold comfort there, for God will not measure you by others at all, but by a standard of his own.

If a man goes to be measured for a suit of clothes, the tailor does not take a general survey of him, and write down in his measuring book that he thinks he is three inches taller than Mr. A., and an inch and a quarter shorter than Mr. B.; but he measures the man himself, even to the eighth of an inch; for what he has to do with is that particular man, and not Mr. A. or B., or any one else.

And depend upon it, you will be measured without reference to any one else; and when Jesus comes, you will not trouble yourself in the least about what any one else is; you will know that God is going to ask you about yourself, and not about them.

If you were coming to judgment to-morrow, and the realities of eternity were straight before you; and a minister or Christian friend came in to see you, and began to try and appease the craving of your soul by telling you what a bad man A was, and that B was no better, you would say, "I don't want to hear about A and B, but about myself and the things which concern my soul, which will soon be before my God." Well! don't be doing now to yourself what you would not let another do to you. It is bad enough to listen to such talk from another, but it is far worse to listen to it from yourself.—P. B. Power.

Sulks.

You may depend, in some sense, upon a phlegmatic complaint, or a minutely cautious man; you know what he will do on any given occasion; you may shape your course accordingly. But the sulky, treacherous temper defies calculation. All at once a cloud comes over the face. You have unwittingly touched some sore, and he sulks. There is no honest anger, no blaze, but the coals are alight in the mine, and generally you must wait till they are burned out. You can't get at the hidden heat. It smoulders on; all work is stopped, though the outside looks much the same as usual. I remember a horse-dealer who had always cured a fault by indulging in it. He had once a brute sent to him which occasionally sulked and stood still. Farmer Waistcoat had flogged him, and he would not move for an hour. Well, this man took the beast, put him in his break, and drove off. In ten minutes he came to a dead stand. Breaker said nothing, did nothing. Horse didn't quite know what to reply tried to look back with his ears, waited half-an-hour, and then began to move on. No my friend, said the breaker; you stay here all day. The farmers passed him going to market with uncomplimentary greetings. What, can't you make him move? Breaker doesn't look put out, though. Tck! Farmers drive on, show their samples, dine at the ordinary, and jog home a trifle merrier, late in the afternoon. Breaker still there, master of the position. At last 'he jogged home victorious. The horse never stopped again except on legitimate orthodox occasions. So may we sometimes treat human temper, and give the sulky something to sulk about.—People's Magazine.

Courage in Every-day Life.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicity, by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences.

Have the courage to provide entreatment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

Have the courage to take a good paper, and pay for it annually in advance.

Make up your mind to do a thing, and then do it. If a spider breaks his web twenty times, twenty times he will mend it."

Never smile at, or in any way approve of, any trait in a child which you do not wish to cultivate."

" Kindness to others generally insures kindness in return."

" A good word is as easily spoken as a bad one."

The Great Religions of the World.

Dr Fowler, of Chicago, in a late missonary sermon before the Rock River Conference, groups the great religions of the world thus:

The religion of the world may be summed up in four great families, radically distinguished by their conceptions of the fundamental idea of God: Buddhism, Brahminism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity. Buddhism is accepted by 300,000,000 of people, Brahminism by 159,000,000, Mohammedanism by 180,000,000, Christianity by 369,000,000. Buddhism is atheistic—practically that there is no God—saying, "The Infinite cannot be revealed to the finite." Brahminism is pantheistic—that every thing is God. Mohammedanism is deistic—that there is but one God and no Savior. Christianity accepts God as revealed in his Word and Son. Buddhism, ramified into 84,000 sects, and Brahminism, divided into 270 castes, are found chiefly in China and India. Mohammedanism is found in Turkey, Arabia, Africa, and India. Christianity controls North America, South America, Europe, Northern Asia, British India, Oceanica, and other territory in Asia and Africa, amounting to as many square miles as that occupied by the United States.

Baby Wisdom.

It has been ordained that from the mouths of babes and sucklings wisdom should proceed, which was exemplified in the remark, not long since, of a little girl, the daughter of a Congregationalist minister. A younger sister, a babe, had been "baptized" on a certain Sunday. At night, the older daughter, when put to bed by her mother referred to the great event of the day, and gavely said, "Mother, I don't think —was very much baptised."

This naturally amused the parents, and the father has been heard to repeat the smart saying with a smile. We hope it may set them to thinking and examining. Little girl, you were wiser than your teachers.

A Good Receipt.

In a rural district in the North of England, the following dialogue lately took place, between a Friend and a shoemaker, who had signed the temperance pledge:

"Well, William, how are you?"

"Oh, pretty well. I had only eighteen pence and an old hen when I signed, and a few old scores, but now I have about ten pounds in the books, and my wife and I have lived through the summer without getting into debt; but as I am only thirty weeks old yet (so he styled himself), I cannot be so strong yet, Friend."

"How is it that you never signed before?"

"I did sign, but I keep it different now to what I did before, Friend."

"How is that?"

"Why, I gae doon on my knees and pray."

Better informed persons might learn a lesson in this respect, by applying to the source of strength possessed by William, the shoemaker.

Purity of Heart.

"Man looketh on the outward appearence, but the Lord looketh on the heart;" this is a brief way in which the Bible points out the difference between God and man. If Christianity consisted in outward show and ostentation, Mohammedanism and Paganism would take the preference; but since it consists in a heart void of offense, it stands unrivaled. But let those who imagine themselves pure remember that the conduct is the mirror of the heart, that purity of soul necessarily carries with it purity of life.

Gambling Taught.

It is not worth while to despise seeds because they are small. And to many a father the civil service reform, the Bullinger movement, the coming of the cholera, and a multitude of other overshadowing questions are of less consequence than the baits Satan is setting before his children in the prize packages of candies that are offered them on the cars, at the stores, and in the streets. A shrewder scheme for raising up lottery-lovers and gamblers could not have been devised. This is a poison that "takes" readily in human nature and is not easily eradicated. Let Sunday-school superintendents warn the children against their danger. If consistency requires that they at the same time condemn the gift cakes and raffles of church festivals, all the better.—Advance.

Ways of Treating the Word.

There are two ways of treating the seed. The botanist splits it up, and discourses on its curious characteristics; the simple hurbandman eats and sows; sows and eats. Similarly there are two ways of treating the gospel. A critic dissects it, raises a mountain of debate about the structure of the whole, and relation of its parts; and when he is done with his argument, he is done; to him the letter is dead; he neither lives on it himself, nor spreads it for the good of his neighbors, he neither eats nor sows. The disciple of Jesus, hungering for righteousness, takes the seed whole; it is bread for to-day's hunger, and seed for to-morrow's supply.—W. Arnot.

Do the duties of to-day and leave the cares of to-morrow till they come.

The finest hair casts a shadow.—Goethe.

Command your temper, lest it command you.

Kindness is a language which the dumb can speak, and the deaf can understand.

The Christian is a beggar on his journey, and a king when he arrives at home.

O. W. Holmes says that humility is the first of the virtues—for other people.

No Syllogism gives us so much wisdom as does the humble look upwards to God.

When a man has no design but to speak plain truth he may say a great deal in a very narrow compass.

By taking revenge, a man is but even with his enemy; but in passing over it, he is superior.—Lord Bacon.

I don't believe any one knows the sweetness of the promises who underrates the sanctity of the precept.—J. H. Evans.

If the world is to be held together by lies, the old, which are current already, are just as good as the new.—Lessing.

Cato said: I would much rather that posterity should inquire why no statues were erected to me, than why they were.

Most controversies would soon be ended if those engaged in them would first accurately define their terms and then rigidly adhere to their definitions.—Edwards.

It is no disgrace not to be able to do everything; but to undertake, or pretend to do, what you are not made for, is not only shameful, but extremely troublesome and vexatious.—Plutarch.

Dr. McCosh preached in a pulpit where the quartette choir sang the first piece in most finished and artistic style; so artistic that neither minister nor people understood one word of what was sung. When it was ended, the Doctor waited a moment, and then rose and gravely said: "And now we will commence the worship of God, in the use of the 27th hymn."

In direct contrast to the majority of the world, there are some hearts which are really lofty, brave, and heroic. All are not selfish and indifferent—beautiful exceptions exist of those who find more pleasure in assisting the purposes and forwarding the desires of others, than in giving themselves up to luxury and self-indulgence. Such are the happiest, as well as the loveliest natures on earth. Their reward is constant and abundant. Heaven multiply their number, and increase their joys!

Half the grievances of the world arise from inattention to small matters. The sum of human happiness or misery is not made up of great actions or their results, but depends upon the aggregate bearing of the seeming trifles of the hour. The lack of the proper estimate of the importance of minute things induces a carelessness—a want of thought—a neglect of which few would be guilty did they but rightly apprehend the important consequences of all actions.

I compare the troubles which we have to undergo in the course of a year to a bundle of fagots, far too large for us to lift. But God does not require us to lift the whole at once. He mercifully unties the bundles, and gives us first one stick. This we might easily manage, if we could only take the burden appointed to us each day; but we choose to increase our troubles by carrying yesterday's sticks over again to-day, and adding to-morrow's burden to our load before we are required to bear it.—John Newton.

Some of our readers may be interested to learn their new Darwinian pedigree. It is sufficiently ancient to satisfy the most exacting—a million years, more or less. Its principal memberships are as follows: Ascidians, Ganoids, Amphibians, Monotremata, Marsupials, Lemuridae, Simiadæ, Man. Or, to use the nearest popular terms, the pedigree would stand, Oysters, Fishes, Crocodiles, Duckbills, Kangaroos, Lemurs, Monkeys, men. If anybody is not satisfied with such an amount of blue blood as this, he must be hard to suit indeed.—The Index.

Unhappily, a great portion of our species are not very wise, and a good many of them not very honest. The former, if they hear of a person who does not admit the grounds on which they believe something, take for granted that he does not believe it at all; and the latter think it meritorious to take advantage of the silliness of the others, to garble and misrepresent their opponent's expressions, in order to expose him to odium, thus acting like those tyrannical emperors who used to dress up their victims in the skins of wild beasts, and then set dogs at them to worry them to death.—Whately.

What is it that, at this day, enables a thousand errors to keep their station in the world; priestcraft, tests, bribery, war, cabal, and whatever else excites the disapprobation of the honest and enlightened mind? Cowardice? the timid reserve which makes men shrink from telling what they know, and the insidious policy that annexes persecution and punishment to an unrestrained and spirited discussion of the true interests of society. Men either refrain from the publication of unpalatable opinions, because they are unwilling to make a sacrifice of all their worldly prospects; or they publish them in a frigid, enigmatical spirit, stripped of their genuine operation. If every man to-day would tell all the truth he knew, it is impossible to predict how short would be the reign of usurpation and folly.—Godwin.

As the last of these positions—immortality only in Christ—covers the whole field of argument, by embracing in itself the most conclusive proof, I respectfully submit to your thoughtful consideration. If I fail to establish all that I have said, I pray you to lay the failure on me, and not on the doctrine; for I am morally, mentally, logically, religiously certain, that no human being that ever trod this earth will live forever except he be a partaker of the Divine nature by union with the Divine Redeemer. On this I stake everything in this momentous controversy, which is destined to shake all the world, and to effect a doctrinal reformation equal in all respects, and greater in some, than that of the sixteenth century. MAY THE LORD OF TRUTH DIRECT US!—Rev. W. Leask. (Esq.) Congregationalist.

The Bible Class.

"Thoughts Perish."

When speaking of the nature of man, David says: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to the earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146: 4.) The Septuagint reads: "His breath shall go forth, and he shall return to his earth: in that day all his thoughts perish."

Those who do not believe in the unconscious sleep of the dead, sometimes try to evade the simple teaching of this passage, by saying it means his thoughts concerning this world. The Hebrew word gesh-toh-noth, rendered thoughts in this passage, occurs nowhere else in the Bible. The full definition of the word, given by Gesenius, is as follows: "Thoughts, counsels." The Bishop's Bible reads: "For when the breath of man goeth forth, he shall turn again to his earth, and so all his thoughts perish." If man continues to think when he is dead, and never stops thinking, then David must be wrong. But he is in harmony with all other Bible writers. Why not let God be true, if all the theological books of modern times are proved false? It is very easy to believe that a dead man has stopped thinking. The Bible, common sense, true philosophy, and sound reason, are harmonious, and all teach that in the day a man dies "his thoughts perish."—Crisis.

A few years since the Rev. Carteret Carey, Incumbent of St. John's, Guernsey, published a "Translation of the Book of Job." It is in blank verse, amply illustrated by critical notes and a commentary. The work is but little known in this country, though it possesses great merit. We extract the following lines from the thirty-eighth chapter. They begin with the twelfth verse, a well known passage in the English Bible:

"Hast thou, since thy days, commanded the morning,
And caused the day-spring to know his place—
To take hold of the wings of the earth
That the wicked might be shaken out of it?
It turneth round like a seal of the clay,
And things stand out as though in dress."

An examination of the original will satisfy any one moderately acquainted with Hebrew that Mr. Carey is correct. A verbal critic would be out of place. The translation alludes to the turning round of the earth like a seal of clay. Both in Assyria and Egypt these clay seals are found. They are made in the form of a wheel, and have their designs wrought in relief upon the tire, and, when used, were rolled over the soft wax or whatever was intended to take the impression. Thus the "objects" or designs "stand out," and as the seal rolls round, the revolution of the earth is declared and illustrated, and one remarkable agreement between science and Scripture is established conclusively.—Sel.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 27, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON OF GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

OUR attention has been called to the fact that some brethren who oppose THE TIMES, and endeavor to hinder its circulation and introduce other papers in its place, have their appointments in its pages. We understand this: but we have no disposition to make friendliness to ourselves a test of liberty to speak in THE TIMES. All who labor in the common cause, maintaining a Christian character and standing, can have the advantages our columns may afford, whether they oppose us or not. But those who oppose public interests, who divide, who break up and distract the cause THE TIMES is intended to sustain, unite and uphold, such cannot reasonably demand any portion of our space. Let us be patient toward opposers, and if any pull down, let us be more diligent in building up.

OF late the special items of news have been concerning fierce storms, with resultant disasters in the form of floods, and a remarkable number of deaths from lightning. These storms have occurred in various parts of the world, and have been exceptionally severe in our own country. As if in sympathy with the disturbances in the physical atmosphere, the moral and political skies are also covered with dark clouds. The fierce election riots of Belfast—serious indeed when considered by themselves, and accompanied by rancorous exhibitions of human hatred, pale into insignificance beside the story of the, brief 'reign of terror' with which the last Peruvian revolution opened. It takes our credulity to believe that three brothers, eminent politicians, should be slain by the mob, hoisted a hundred feet in the air, dropped to the earth, their mangled remains saturated with kerosene, and then burned to ashes. And while our blood is still chilled with these horrors, the Mississippi adds a tale of a seven-fold murder committed on its waters near St. Louis. Truly we are fallen on 'perilous times' in a most obvious sense of the term. Perils on land and water; in the religious, moral, and physical worlds, that would be frightful if we had to contemplate them. The world is too busy to pay more than passing attention to its own woes.

A LIVING SOUL.

"The first man was made a living soul." (1 Cor. 15. 45.)

The construction of Paul's argument here enables us to demonstrate the real nature of the man—the personality; for he is contrasting two beings—the first Adam and the second Adam. "The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." Now unless we adopt the theory that man is a unit we shall here fall into inextricable difficulties. If we say 'the body of the first Adam was made a living soul,' we must also read 'the body of the last Adam was made a quickening spirit;' for Paul is speaking of the same thing concerning each Adam. We cannot say he means the body of the one and the spirit of the other, for this would destroy the analogy. But if we affirm that the spirit of the first man was the living soul, then we must not only admit that the spirit is the natural man (see context), but must read v. 47—'The first man's spirit is of the earth, earthy,' a conclusion every immaterialist is bound to resist. And if we take refuge in the assertion that the body is here referred to, then we must submit to read the last clause of this verse—'the second man's body is the Lord from heaven!' I see here no escape from the conclusion that "the first man is of the earth, earthy"—a mortal corruptible being. All his seed are like him. But those of them who become incorporated into the family of the second Adam will be made like him; for "this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruptible shall put on incorruption," in the resurrection, at the last day.

This sentiment agrees with Paul's reasoning throughout this celebrated chapter, which everywhere affirms the personality of man to be that which dies, which is mortal, which is to be revived, and changed. And this shows that he understood the account of the creation of man in its literal sense. And why should he not? It is a plain account of a simple transaction. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." (Gen. 2: 7.) There are only two elements here, and their sum: the second is added to the first and the result is the third. We have, first, man; a material organization. Second, the breath of life—not a rational entity, not a conscious intelligent being, not the real man, for he had been formed of the dust, and lay there lifeless. But the breath of life being blown into his nostrils, the lifeless man became a living man or creature; for "living soul" cannot be made to fairly imply more than this. It is a general term for all earthly creatures endowed with life. So in Gen. 1: 21—"God created great whales and every living creature (Hebrew, living soul) that moveth." So in v. 24. And the term never loses this sense in Scripture. In the closing book of the canon we read of "every living soul in the sea," and that they all died—so far is the term from conveying any notion of immortality. If the phrase conveys the idea of immortality or a separate rational entity, it accords the same to "every creature that moveth" as well as to man. We are sometimes appealed to in piteous accents not to "drag man down to a level with the brutes." We respond by praying our opponents not to drag the reptile up to a level with man. We protest that practically man is infinitely above the highest brute, not by virtue of natural immortality, but because of his vastly superior organization, his moral nature, and his privilege of attaining to an eternal existence.

"The breath of life"—a spark of divinity, an emanation from God, say some, while others more modestly affirm it to be an immortal spirit. But Isaiah refers to it as proof of the frailty of man, the uncertain tenure of his life, to remind one of the little thread upon which his existence hangs. "Cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils." (Ch. 2: 22.) It is the same n'shahmah of Gen. 2: 7, still located in the same place—a curious residence, by the way, for man's immortal, real self,—one's nostrils! But it is not an entity at all. It is simply the life, the breath of life common to all the animate creation. "Yea they have all one breath." (Eccl. 3: 19.) Hence we read that in the deluge, reptile and bird and beast and cattle and man, "all in whose nostrils was the breath of life," died.

Thus we learn that not only is every living creature a living soul, but also that the breath of life—the n'shahmah or ruach—is their common heritage. Whatever it is, they all alike possess it: it is ascribed to them all in precisely the same terms. "As the one dieth, so dieth the other: yea they have all one breath: so that a man [in the article of death] hath no pre-eminence above a beast, for all is vanity. All go to one place. All are of dust, and all turn to dust again." But says one, "This is materialism!" Very well! Suppose it is. Shall we reject the plain teaching of inspiration because of prejudices attaching to a name? Let us believe the truth, by whatever name it may be called.

I know it is affirmed by some that they "know the spirit of man;" that it is analogous in nature to angels, to Divinity itself, and possesses endless life. But the doctrine is not in the Bible. I read that the just shall be as the angels hereafter, not that they are so now. Then, after the resurrection, they shall die no more. (Lk. 20: 36.) I find man compared to enduring things in philosophy and theology, ancient and modern, in fact almost everywhere but in the Bible. There he is never once compared to anything enduring in nature or quality. Instead of being styled immortal, he is called mortal. (Job 4: 17; 2 Chron. 14: 11; 1 Cor. 15: 53; 2 Cor. 5: 4.) Instead of an immaterial substance, "he is plainly said to be "dust," "earthy." (Gen. 3: 19; 1 Cor. 15: 47.) I read not that he is "undying," but "thou shalt surely die." When one asserts that his glory is his immortal spirit, an apostle echoes the Psalmist's assertion that "all the glory of man is as the flower of grass." (1 Pet. 1: 24.) Theology affirms man's days to be as the days of God; but Job says to his Creator—"Are thy days as the days of a man?" i. e. few. For "every man at his best estate is altogether vanity. (Ps. 39: 5.) He is like the failing waters that dry away. (Job 14: 12.) Like a sleep. (Ps. 90.) A cloud. (Job 7: 9.) Grass. (Ps. 103: 13–16; 90: 5, 6; Is. 40: 6–8; 1 Pet. 1: 24.) His days are "an hand-breath." (Ps. 39: 5.) Now I do not in this place lay any special stress upon the fact that these figures are employed in speaking of now, but I call attention to the fact that these and similar comparisons are used to the exclusion of all others. It is inconceiveable if the soul or spirit be the real man and also immortal that in all the Scriptures the fact should not be clearly stated so much as once. The silence of the Scriptures upon the immortality and separate existence of the soul is simply unaccountable if the doctrine be true. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

"Mortal man," then, is in the Scriptures a unit. True he possesses a body, and soul, and spirit: so he does also heart, and might, and mind, and strength; but not as separate entities. They are attributes or qualities of his being, not entities capable of existence apart from each other. Man is that organization God framed of the dust. "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife....in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. 3: 19.) Adam, the intelligent personality that disobeyed, is the "thou" that came from the dust and is to be resolved to dust again. This is God's definition of death.

THE ERRORS OF THE AGE.

(Second Article.)

The religious movements of our day have not been the mere diffusion of certain abstractions, the mere effervescence of certain doctrines. No truth, however true, could of itself accomplish what has been wrought within these forty years. God himself has come down. It is a divine voice that has spoken, and a divine hand that has been working. It is no mere summer-breath that has swept over the churchyard, and clothed its heaving turf with verdure; it is the Spirit of the living God that has gone into the tombs and touched the dry bones, and made dead men alive.

Yet this is what the world not merely overlooks, but rejects. It is the admission of a divine element into any movement, or any truth, or any dogma, that is refused. I do not say a supernatural element; for, strange to tell, there are not a few, even of the educated and the literary, that admit the supernatural while they reject the divine; nay, receive the former on purpose to be able to resist and deny the latter: as we see in the tens of thousands in America, on the Continent, and in our own islands, who are the enthusiastic devotees of Spiritualism and all its spirit-rapping delusions.

The expulsion, then—I do not say of a supernatural, or spiritual, or transcendental, but of a strictly divine element from our faith, either is its origin, its basis, or its contents—is what the fallen intellect has decided on as indispensable to its own free action in the investigation of truth. The recognition of a divine element would be considered as vitiating the whole process of inquiry, and the absence of such would be regarded as a necessary condition of authentic faith, and an essential criterion of the genuineness of the truth believed. For it is not speculation or opinion that the natural heart so desperately hates, but God himself, and whatever contains God.

There are some who say "there is no God;" but they say it with a flippancy that disappoints us. If they suppose honestly that they have made this discovery, they, of all men ought to be the most profoundly sorrowful. That this vast universe has no head and that they themselves have no parent, is one of the most melancholy of all discoveries. That which we see and hear and touch is the terminus, the ultimatum or limit to that which is; that the infinate is an impossibility; that the sun has no brighter fountain than itself out of which it came; that the beautiful in nature has nothing more beautiful after whose image it was designed; that the lovable in man and man's world is the highest type and widest circle of the lovable; that the stream has no fountain more transparent than itself; that a parent's heart has no prototype or model in an infinite heart above; what a dark and sad discovery! What a disappointment, what a blank, what an infinite loss! to be cut off from the possibility of so much hope and beauty and perfection and love; to be confined within the narrow circle of the finite; surely this is sad! Yet those men who profess to have made this discovery are not sorrowful! Do they believe in their own discovery? Or is it the thought of having succeeded in expelling the divine from their creed that has cheered them into mirth?

There are others who say there is a God, but there is no intercourse between him and his creatures. The finite and the infinite are separated by a wide gulf. He has not spoken to man. His only speech is that of nature. There is no divine teaching save that of nature: and men talk of interrogating nature in order to learn the mind of the Creator. The sun and stars speak, but God is dumb. The hills and forests speak, but God is dumb. Yet these men who have thus expelled the divine element from the circle of their being, seem not to miss it. They do not seem sensible of the awful loss which must be sustained by the creature in being cut out from all direct, all personal communication with God.

There are others who affirm that God has spoken, but not intelligibly. His words require an earthly interpreter; otherwise they are as dark as they are dangerous; as if God had muffled his words to prevent men hearing them; as if man alone could speak intelligible language! The Bible, they say, needs an interpreter; the Church is the sole interpreter; the priest is the Church's organ; and only through the Church and the priest can God be made to speak intelligibly to man. And this absence of simplicity, this want of the intelligible and transparent, which in human writings is esteemed a defect and a proof of weakness is not lamented as a loss and an imperfection, but triumphed in as a perfection and a gain! The Divine element of simplicity and clearness which pervades the works of God must be banished from his word; and without a sigh! The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament shows forth its handiwork; day unto day utters speech, and night unto night teacheth knowledge; so that even the peasant of the field, or the Bedawi of the desert, or the serf of Siberia may see and hear and understand; but the book of God gives no such glorious utterance of intelligible truth, till the Church's voice, more intelligible than that of the Holy Spirit, has spoken—man's speech removing the ambiguities of God, man's rendering legible the illegible hand writing of God; as if it were the Church and not the Lamb slain that had prevailed to open the book; as if it had been the priest and not the Lion of the tribe of Judah that had been found worthy to loose the seals.

But, say others, though God may have in a certain sense spoken intelligibly, yet he has not spoken articulately. The Bible is no doubt the book of God, but not to the same extent in which The Færie Queen is Spencer's, or Hamlet, Shakespeare's, or Paradise Lost, Milton's. These works of men contain not the thoughts of the writers, but their words; but as for the Bible, it embodies, no doubt, the thoughts of God; but to say that it contains the very words of God, his articulate speech, is unphilosophical in the extreme, and would assume that prophets and opostles were mere unintelligent machines or printing presses. Suppose it were so, is it a degradation or a hardship for a creature to be a passive instrument in the hand of the God only wise and would the book produced in this way, at the expense of the creature's liberty for an hour or a day, be less correct and less articulate? But, let the truth be spoken respecting both man and God. Man left to himself, to speak alone and act alone, is in bondage to influences which prevent his being really himself, which hamper his free thought, his free speech, his free action. It is only when taken posession of by the free Spirit, when filled with God, that he is truly himself, truly free either in thought or word. These hands are never more free than when the soul within moves them; these lips are not slaves, because acting according to the touch of the inner man; these eyes are not machines, because the intellect or the fancy kindles them into eloquent brightness; so the inspired prophet is not a machine, nor a pen, nor an electric wire, because God has come in and awakened his dormant being; because the Holy Spirit has set all his faculties in motion; because the master-hand has taken up the harp and passed his fingers over its silent strings, giving liberty to its imprisoned music, and calling forth a melody which but for that divine touch had been hidden there, in durance dark, unheard and unknown. The expulsion of the divine element from the words of Scripture seems to be reckoned by not a few amongst us rather a gain than a loss! The surrender of the perfect in a revelation is made without a sigh.

But, say the men of another class, though God may have spoken authoritatively. He has given us the Bible as a book of thought—a sort of hand-book or guide-book; but not a statue-book, not a promulgation of peremptory law or infallible and inexorable truth. By this class of reasoners the divine element of authority is struck out, and man is allowed to trifle with the Scriptures, to play fast and loose with their revelations, as if they were the mere utterances of a higher kind of genius than that which gave us the Iliad, or the Canterbury Tales, or Faust, Locksley Hall. Beauty, eloquence, lofty thought, tenderness, power, they allow to Scripture, but not authority! They will admire, but not obey. They will listen to its suggestions, but they decline its commands. They will study it, but they will not be bound by it. How this free-and-easy treatment of the Bible is reconcilable with the idea of a revelation from God, I do not now inquire. I point to it simply as another of the eliminations of the divine element from that which is yet recognized as a divine volume. How strangely desirous are some to trust in God out of his own book! How thoroughly they do this by this repudiation of infallibility and authority! And how blind they are to the loss which they themselves thus sustain in being shut out from all certainty by being deprived of all divine authority. We need not stay to show how this free-and-easy dealing with the authority of revelation leads to a free-and-easy theology, a free-and-easy creed, a free-and-easy mortality.—To be continued.

SCENES AND THOUGHTS EAST.

I did get away from home after all; and right glad was I to do so. I say home—I mean all the home I have, which is our office, in Chicago by day, at Norwood Park by night. For when we left Buchanan, our house was given up, our household scattered in various directions. The office furnishes a place to sleep and eat, where we cheerfully toil on, hoping for something better, perhaps before our Master returns, certainly when he appears.

While passing through Canada, the displacement of an unlocked switch, as our train was passing over it, gave us a little idea of the sensation of running off the track, and hindered us (Br. and Sr. Burr and others were along) some hours from the New York Campmeeting; and it was no small deprivation to be hindered from the enjoyment of such a campmeeting. New York has been hitherto skeptical on the subject of these feasts of tabernacles, and the friends of campmeetings have had to struggle to carry their point. But the crisis is passed, and an annual gathering of this sort is now a settled institution of this flourishing Conference.

It is but a few years since this field was a stronghold of opposition to organization; to-day it is one of the most effectively organized bodies of Adventists in the land; and the results are such as might be expected from healthful organization. Contending parties have been in a surprising measure reconciled, and it is really interesting to see how the tide of cordial Bible union is rising to cover the obstructions to its strong current. This was specially manifest during this meeting. Though a minister, in his sermon, or a zealous believer, in his Conference-meeting testimony might throw down the gage of contention by the introduction of points contended about, or pet personal opinions, the stagnating waters of strife refused a responding movement, while the waves of unity and peace rolled steadily on. God grant that New York may never again come to the wells of "the waters of strife."

In point of ability the average of the preaching was high. Whether the topics were all wisely chosen is, perhaps, none of my business. Yet I could but observe the illustrations it sometimes afforded of Horace Greeley's shrewd remark, that men may hold nineteen opinions in common, but differing on the twentieth, will, on meeting, by no means enjoy their common beliefs, but insist upon "locking horns" upon the point of difference. It is this disposition of human nature that at times turns our general meetings into a debating society, to the great detriment of public interest, whatever may be the result to private dogmas. I submit it as a question for the candid attention of the ministry whether the consideration of the aforesaid "twentieth" may not be properly expunged from the campmeeting programme? Not that I would advise the substitution of watery platitudes for vigorous, soul-stirring, live ideas; for, surely, the points of agreement—every-day religion, the life and death question and the subject of future punishment in their general aspects, the nature and proximity of the Advent, and the essential preparation for this most august of all events, will furnish the most active mind with material to be worked up in most useful and entertaining variety, and to the intense satisfaction of the household of faith.

And if one have "somethin [illegible]," or wishes to present an old controverted point in a new light, would it not be better to first talk over the matter with the brethren, and have a fair understanding with them before pressing in a public discourse a new or old "twentieth."

I recollect the case of one brother who, having experienced a revolution of opinion upon a vital question in theology, quietly prepared an extensive work upon the subject, and then shipped large quantities of the same, to fall like a thunderbolt in several of our campmeetings. In some cases, with great propriety, I think, the "committees" declined to have the meetings in their charge turned into a tournament. Every man has a right to hold his private opinion, and to disseminate the same; but he is bound, also, to respect the rights of others; and it is not right to introduce jarring notions into gatherings whose interests are of a public nature, without first consulting with, and obtaining the consent of those who are held responsible for the conduct of such meetings. A Christian, of all men, should be courteous; and the true Christian will be the model gentleman.

The Scriptures gives us full authority to "provoke" our brethren; but it is too often forgotten that this license extends only to "love and good works." Let us, then, without locking the doors of investigation, much less throwing away the key, in our general meetings, especially of a social character, pay more attention to the nineteen points of Unity than the horn-locking "twentieth" point of dispute. "I speak as unto wise men: judge ye what I say."

New York gave her Western brethren the heartiest kind of a welcome, and to Br. Burr was assigned the honorable position of "closing the meeting." He showed his appreciation of the responsibilities of giving the last discourse in a new field, both in his choice of a subject and his manner of handling it. The saints' future home, was set forth in a manner that showed faith in the renewed earth to be not only a logical but an inviting article of faith; and thus the meeting closed with a glimpse of "the rest that remains for the people of God."

As a sort of thank-offering for the goodness of God, the Wayne County brethren raised over two hundred dollars before leaving the camp-ground, on Monday morning, to put a new tent in the field. Fit offering to commemorate so blessed a gathering.

WM. L. HIMES.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

SOUTHERN IOWA.

MONDAY, Aug. 5. In company with Brn. Gibson, Baldwin, and Fulsom came to Clay, ten miles, where we were welcomed by Br. Daniel Amos, a young man of promise, in the faith of the Lord's soon coming. The family also greeted us, though not in the faith as yet. But we had much favorable conversation on the subject.

Spoke at the Williams S. H. at night. Among my auditors were Elds. Greenlee and Nelson, leading ministers of the Baptist church in this region. I spoke on the "Blessed Hope," showing how, and when it is to be consummated. Not at death, but at the second advent of Jesus. As I was proceeding with my subject, Elder Nelson asked me a question as to the translation of King James' version, its bearing on the future of the wicked. Was it a fair one? I told him I thought it was not, for the following reasons:

1. In relation to sheol. They have translated this Hebrew word in three ways, grave, pit, hell. The word is used sixty-four times in the Old Testament, and they have rendered it pit three times, grave thirty-one times, and hell twenty-nine times, when it should have been grave in every case.

Hele or hell, is a Saxon word which had no reference to a place of punishment, but simply to cover, to hide, and was used for covering or shingleing a house. The common English reader is often misled by this translation in reference to future punishment, it having no reference to it in any case, but always the grave.

Hades, the Greek word for grave, they have translated hell, in every instance, except 1 Cor. 15: 55. "O grave, where is thy victory," and here they have given hell in the margin. But hades like sheol means the grave, and not a place of punishment. The only case where it is spoken of as a place of suffering is in Luke 16: 23, "In hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment." And this is a parable, and Christ uses the heathen fables in a parable. The only place of punishment is gehenna. And this they have also translated hell. And by usage the old Saxon hele has come to be used for a place of torment. But this is the acquired meaning, gehenna is the place of punishment, and in this the wicked are destroyed, both soul and body. (Mat. 10: 28.)

Other questions were asked which led to long explanations of the truth of Advent theology. But the most gentlemanly spirit and kindness was shown by the interrogator, and answers were received in the spirit they were given.

At the close, Br. Nelson gave me the report of their Association for 1871, in which a circular letter to the churches appears, which was written by himself, the theme being, "No sleep in the grave for the spirit of man." The letter shows that the writer did not understand the subject on which he wrote. He gives a compound of truth and falsehood jumbled together in a way to make confusion more confounded. He uses the words soul and spirit interchangeably as though they meant the same thing, and speaks from this standpoint. And then, because the word spirit is used sometimes for breath, he tries his skill at sarcasm, by rendering it as breath in every case. He also quotes the usual texts used by immaterialists, with the common view, without giving a particle of light. Such efforts to save people from materialism, only confirms them in it. The more such letters, the better for the progress of Adventism.

Our meeting at Clay was a success. The people are intelligent, inquiring and liberal. Br. Baldwin is doing a good work here.

TUESDAY, Aug. 6. Spoke at night in the Walker S. H., at Peoria, to a crowd. I spoke on the signs of the second coming of the Lord. Brn. Gibson and Baldwin followed in interesting remarks. Some souls have been gathered here for the kingdom. This meeting closed our work in this portion of the field.

THURSDAY, Aug. 8. The weather continues fine and the farmers are getting in their harvest in good condition, and the harvest is plentiful. But with the abundance of the husbandman he has little to cheer his heart from the fact that the market is glutted, and prices are down to almost nothing. Oats, the chief crop here, are only ten cents a bushel, and it costs two cents of this to thrash them, and the balance for harvesting alone.

I spoke at night in Seymour on the soul, what is it? Some see the light, while others reject it, and hold to other views, without being able to give the evidence of their truth. One intelligent gentleman said that he had thought from modern teaching that nothing certain could be known of the future state of men. But now the subject appeared in a new light. I have a respectful hearing.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9. I find in this region a number of "Disciples." They have an institution of learning at Oskaloosa, in this vicinity. They are, as a people, well organized and active, and are succeeding. This new sect organized about sixty years ago, with Thomas Campbell, a Presbyterian minister of learning and talent. The first feeling of dissatisfaction he had with his own people was from their strict communion. He did not see why all the Lord's people should not come to the table. He spoke of this matter in a way to produce dissatisfaction, and so he was censured by his church, the seceding Presbyterians in the township of Washington in Western Pennsylvania. This led him to a stand against all sectarian churches, and the organization of one on more liberal principles, to unite those of different views. The principle of association was this: Where the Scriptures speak, we speak: where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent. This principle of association was designed to cut the Gordian knot of sectarian strife. But when they came to organize, they found that they had only added another sect to the legion already in existence.

His son, Alexander Campbell, was then a young man of commanding talent and promise. He committed himself to the principle of the association, and told his father he should carry it out in his future life. He soon found that the Bible was silent on the sprinkling of both infants and adults. And he with his father, and the members of the Association, were then immersed. From this time Alexander Campbell was the leader of the movement, and though now dead, his writings are the standard theology in the churches of his faith. He gave the churches the name of "The Disciples of Christ," and repudiated the name Christian, as a denominational name. He told me this on his visit to my house in Boston. And his writings, also, show it. Many of the churches of his followers, however, now take the name Christian, as more appropriate than that of Disciples. And so they have different names.

Mr. Campbell held that a sinner should believe and be immersed for the remission of sins, and not first pray and get evidence of a change of heart, or conversion before baptism. The ministers of this church are indefatigable in discipling men to Christ on this principle, but they have reason to lament over many of these disciples for the want of piety, or depth of religious experience.

As to the great principle of union, "Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent," it evidently became a dead letter long before Mr. Campbell's decease. Mr. Braden, a leading minister of this church, showed this clearly in the last debate in THE TIMES and the Standard. It was found to be easier to lay down principles than to follow them. The argument of Mr. Campbell on the state of the dead, and the destiny of the wicked, is founded on the violation of his cardinal principle, "where the Scriptures speak, we speak." But where do the Scriptures "speak" of the immortality of the soul? And yet he makes the Scriptures "speak" this, as do his followers.

This evening I spoke on the spirit of man, and closed my labors at Seymour. There is some interest in town, but the chief interest is in the country among families a few miles out. Br. Gibson and myself enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. J. Conger, one of the principle merchants, and were, made very welcome. Our views were favorably received by them.

SATURDAY, Aug 10. Took leave of kind friends, and Br. Bryant took us to the Kniffin S. H. on our way to Warsaw. I spoke at 11 a. m. from Lk. 12 : 31–48. The faithful steward, and his reward, at the coming of the Lord. Good conference meeting at the close.

While in the school room a Wesleyan Sabbath School book was taken up and opened, which revealed at first sight the following verse:

"There is a dreadful hell,
And everlasting pains,
Where sinners must with devils dwell
In darkness, fire and chains."

This kind of reading is put into the hands of children, by men professing godliness. But what kind of a God must he be who makes such a hell as the poet describes? What child can love or honor such a being?

Came to Warsaw, and put up with Sr. E. E. Sturgeon, formerly of the M. E. church, and a laborer and burden-bearer. Her house was the home of the preachers for long years. She made a great sacrifice for the truth, but feels that she made a good change, and is a gainer by it. Her house is still open to her old friends, but they do not now accept her hospitality. A bitter hostility has taken the place of Christian love and friendship. Religious hate is one of the most cruel and inexorable of all the human passions. The most lovely and estimable ones turned into objects of contempt and worthlessness, for opinion's sake.

Warsaw is a small town of a few hundred inhabitants. They have no chapel as yet, and all meet in the school room for worship. Br. Wm. McCullock opened the subject of the Lord's near coming here two years ago, and organized a church of ten members. The opposition was wicked but helped the truth, as always in such cases.

We were invited to the hospitality of Mr. Allen, a noble-hearted man, who opened his doors in the time of trial to Br. McCullock. He likes to see justice, and, withal, thinks we have the truth and ought to be heard.

The land in this part of the country, and the farming interest is good. But there is very much land yet to be possessed. Not half the prairie is yet under cultivation. There are thousands of beautiful homes—or beautiful situations—which with small means and Yankee pluck could be made so.

I spoke at 8 p. m. to a fine audience, on the promise that the meek should inherit the earth (Ps. 37: 9–11), and enjoy the abundance of peace. There will be no "more curse, but the throne of God and the Lamb." And so another weary week is passed, and the Sabbath is soon to dawn, and all creation groans for deliverance. When will it come?

SABBATH, Aug. 11. Thirty-two years ago to-day the independence of the Ottoman Empire passed into the hands of the four great European powers. This closed the prophetic period of Rev. 9: 15—"the hour, day, month and year, to slay the third part of men," or the Greek Empire. It began in 1449 in the taking of Constantinople by the Turks, and ended in 1840. And so the second wo was past, and the third, and last wo cometh quickly. And here in the "quickly" we wait. And soon Jesus must come.

I spoke in the grove to-day, on the signs of Jesus' near coming. Among them I spoke of the present condition of the Ottoman Empire. This power is to be "dried up" (Rev. 16 12), and to "come to its end, and none to help it" (Dan. 11: 45), when "Michael shall stand up." (Dan. 12: 1-3.) This brings the resurrection and the kingdom of God; and this will be soon.

In the afternoon the Restitution (Acts 3: 21) was my theme, showing that there is a good time coming. We had a good gathering, and a profitable day for the church here. Br. Gibson spoke in the S. H. at night.

MONDAY, Aug. 12. Took leave of our noble Br. Shottman's family, of Corydon, when he, with about a dozen of the brethren and sisters, including Br. Baldwin, came with me seven miles to my evening service in Bethlehem. We rode over the rolling prairie, hill, dale and creek, till we came to what they call the Creek or "Fords of Jordan," one mile from Bethlehem, just at dusk, and soon we were at the chapel in Bethlehem, finding a good congregation, as always, here. I spoke from Lk. 23: 39–43, showing that the thief prayed for a part in the kingdom of God at the second coming of Christ. At the close, a prominent member of the Baptist church, offered himself for membership, and was received. He was enlightened in the truth, by Br. J. H. Whitmore's book on Immortality, and was obliged, from a sense of duty to unite with the Advent people, and give his influence to the truth. Let others follow his example and "let their light shine."

At the close of the service I took leave of Br. Baldwin, who with the brethren in this field, had invited me to help them. He has been very kind and liberal, as also the brethren. There is a noble company of Adventists in all this field, who have been raised up by the labors of Brn. Baldwin, Gibson and McCullock, and a permanent cause will be the result.

Communications.

Has Man Inherent Immortality?

This is a subject much commented on at the present day. Some say man was made immortal from the beginning; that is, the inner man or soul. Let us examine the Scriptures on this point. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." (Gen. 3: 7.) The question is, what was man before the breath of life was breathed into his nostrils? We must conclude that he was a dead soul. Orthodoxy says that when God breathed into man the breath of life, man then received his immortal part. But it does not read that man received an immortal soul, or soul at all: it says he became a living soul.

"The Lord said, Behold the man has become as one of us, knowing good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and eat and live forever," he must be driven from Eden. (Gen. 3: 22-24.) If man was immortal why did God say send him forth lest he eat of the tree of life and live forever? If he, the real man, was immortalized, he certainly would live forever, any how. If man is the soul, and the body the tabernacle, then the soul must die, as man the sinner is threatened with the second death, unless he finds pardon in Jesus Christ.

Orthodoxy says the sinner must spend eternity with devils. We ask, has Satan immortality? I can find no place in the Bible where man is spoken of as immortal. On the contrary he is represented as like "stubble," "grass" and other perishable matter. He "shall utterly perish in his own corruption."

We poor mortals are always willing to boast of something which we don't possess. "Man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish." (Ps. 40: 12.) "The living know that they must die, but the dead know not anything." (Eccl. 9: 5.) Also their love and their envy and hatred are now perished." (Eccl. 9: 6.) This looks as if when we die we die really until the trump shall sound, and the sleeping millions shall awake, to everlasting life and everlasting contempt. This is the time when we expect immortality: "When Christ who is our life shall appear." Then "we" shall appear with him in glory. Let us have the word of God rather than that of men. Let us lay aside all creeds and traditions and take the Bible for what it says? If it says the sinner shall be burned up, destroyed, perish, let us have it that way. If it says we will die the death that never dieth, live forever in hell or the lake of fire, let us have it that way. But let us take the Bible before Plato, Josephus or any of our modern theologians.

Arkansas. H. M. JUDGE.

Playing Croquet.

I wish to introduce the above subject to my brethren and sisters for the purpose of ascertaining its merits (if it has any), and to inquire a little after its influence upon professors of religion and the churches in general. My thoughts were aroused to this subject a few days since while passing through a little lawn not far distant from my own house, where I had gone to console and sympathize with a bereaved mothre at the sudden loss of a beloved daughter. After performing this duty, much to the comfort of the stricken heart, I started for my own home filled with sad reflections at the misery produced by sin and death in the land, and only a little way from the house of mourning and sorrow, what was my surprise to come right up to a large group of men and boys engaged in playing croquet; and the very minister, who only a few days previously preached the funeral sermon of the young wife and mother, was taking an active part in the new and fashionable amusement.

The different churches were fully represented side by side with the rabble and notoriously wicked, too often found in many little country towns. I can scarcely express in words my astonishment and surprise, on beholding such a sight in broad day light by the public roadside, where every passer-by might behold the folly and, to say the least, the unwise example, of not only the young but the middle aged and even old men professing the religion of him who said, "For every word that men shall speak they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment."

Oh! if that minister, and that deacon, with the other professors of the religion of Jesus, had read the above passage of God's holy word before engaging in that idle play, they surely would have improved the time in something that could honor God or benefit man. The blessed Bible is open before me and I will write the words I have just read, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10: 31.) If these precious words were more fully known and remembered, surely many professors of religion would have less time and less disposition for playing croquet, "parlor dancing," and getting up festivals, than seems to be the case at the present day. I do rejoice that we as Adventists, looking for the coming of our blessed Lord, repudiate all these carnal amusements, feeling something like "Christian and Faithful," as represented by good old Bunyan, while passing through Vanity Fair, that they had no desire to so much as look at their wares. Let it ever be so with us who enjoy "the blessed hope" of soon seeing our blessed Lord, that we may indeed be "a peculiar people" so "zealous of good works" that we shall have no time to waste in such follies as seem to amuse the masses of the present day. Let us be spiritually minded, relieving the widow and orphan, comforting the sick, helping the poor, "going about doing good," that in this way our influence may honor God and the religion we profess, making the world the better for our having lived in it.

MARY A. TIBBETS.

The Time of Christ's Coming.

There is no event of past time, or revealed event pertaining to the future of our world, that begins to equal in point of magnitude and interest, the event of Christ's second advent to our world. It matters not how we view the matter of this event, whether it be spiritually or literally, it involves features of profound interest. With it comes judgments and rewards; resurrection and translation; everlasting meetings and everlasting partings. With it comes the transformation of all things sublunary, and the removing of all that is offensive in the sight of the Lord's annointed judge of quick and dead.

Who can think of an event impending upon which hangs such paralyzing facts and incidents, without trembling?

Perhaps we may safely say, that no single revealed fact of holy rite, has been productive of more error and speculation than that of Christ's second coming; and yet, it is but natural and legitimate that it should be so, from the very nature of the case.

When we consider the fact that Christ has been upon our earth as the very embodiment of love and sympathy for and with a fallen race, we need not marvel that his friends are over anxious to see him return; neither is it at all marvelous that the last token of his return should be magnified into unwarrantable dimensions.

One single principle in human nature fairly discovered, will account for all the mistakes in time-setting that have characterized the church in all ages, and that principle is this: We are so constituted that we have no trouble in finding evidence for what we desire to be so, at least evidence that is self-satisfying. Upon this principle we look into the face of Jesus, as revealed by the word and spirit and we say, "Is he not the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely?" and our longing hearts cry out, "O come!"

The most mature thought which centers in the event is its time; and we immediately inquire, "When shall it be?" "Does the Bible tell us of the time?" Fired with enthusiasm we rush to its sacred pages, and its symbols are all ablaze with light upon this one thing so much desired, and blinded with love for the event, and a curious feeling of fear and hope we commence the investigation of the wonderful symbols of nature; some fallen, some rising, and some to rise, some to continue "one time," and some "two times," and some "three and a half times." How thankful we are that we are wise, and can figure these periods, and point out in the history of the world just when each began; and with what confidence we come before the world all aglow with love for the event, and all on fire with enthusiastic power. We say, "The man who cannot see our numbers to be correct lacks wisdom, must share the fate of the foolish virgins." And should we be so fortunate as to be the successor of numerous figures, whose failures have been pointed out by the faithful index-hand of time, we can have the consolation of telling just where their mistake occurred, and base our calculations of success upon their failure.

So we can say: "That man's failure was 'the first watch;' and the other man's failure was 'the second watch,' and your failure was 'the third watch,' and my success will be the fourth watch: and that is the last you know, and he must come then." Some are ready to cry "I believe it!" "I know it!" "The 'wise' are going to see it." "Amen, let it come!" Now such things may do for some to eat, but they are hard things to digest, and they leave the body in a very bad state after they have been down long enough to dissolve. But let us examine the only hiding place of past time-setting. What is its forte called? NECESSITY is its name. Why call it thus? Because the parable of the ten virgins could not be fulfilled unless some one preached definite time and it proved a failure. Ah! let us look at that hiding place, now we are fairly behind the ramparts.

No fulfillment of this parable short of definite time, is the promise laid down. How is that? Why do you not see that some one must preach the coming of Christ at a specified time, and the church represented by the virgins must believe it, go out on it, and be disappointed in order to have a "tarrying?" No I don't see that the nature of the parable involves any such feature, but directly the contrary.

Let us see. Here is a parable or figure drawn from the ancient wedding ceremony and its accompaniments, and to violate the customs from which the lesson of the parable is deduced, is to veil the truth of the whole matter at once.

What are the essential features of the parable? (1) A wedding. (2) The Bridegroom expected. (3) He does not come as soon as the virgins begin to look for him. (4) The virgins are on the lookout with their lamps burning: and in the long delay they slumber and sleep. (5) The virgins are all aroused by a cry at midnight.

What would be the qualifications in order to become one of these virgins. (1) A knowledge of the wedding to be celebrated. (2) A knowledge of the country from which the bridegroom was to come. (3) A knowledge of the evening he was expected. (4) A knowledge of the preparation needed to meet him; which was "vessels with oil," [illegible] lamps burning."

D[illegible] ho celebrated these anc[illegible] know the exact time the bridegroom was expected. No, the[illegible] could not from the very nature of th[illegible] The condition of things forbade it. The facilities for traveling, and sending news would not admit of previous knowledge of the hour of the bridegroom's arrival, or the precise time of the marriage feast being known at the time the virgins go out; which fact is a very prominent feature in the parable itself, and, indeed the very point of interest in it.

The Savior does not select a thing that is of itself an exception to the class of things to which it belongs, when he uses this figure to illustrate the condition of his church in her relation to his second coming; but he grasps a figure, the prominent feature of which, would show the very thing he wished to teach.

The figure is, as we have said, an Oriental wedding. The prominent features of such a wedding, were a preparation to meet the bridegroom on the part of virgins, and a going out and waiting till midnight, if he did not come before. But if he did not make his appearance at midnight or before, the wedding celebration was deferred till the next night. No plainer fact can be seen than the fact that these virgins did not know when the bridegroom was coming; and this knowledge was not accessible, from the very nature of things; and from these considerations alone was this parable selected as a fit figure to represent his church, who in the evening of this world, or this dispensation, shall, from a knowledge of the fact that he is to come again [illegible] that the signs of his coming predict[illegible] Mat. 24, or that were to show [illegible] near, mount the watch tower of the gospel high-way, and with longing eyes and loving hearts watch as he enjoined them to do; for "they know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." (Mat. 25: 13.)

Relatively applied, the knowledge of the century in which Christ might come, would be equivalent to knowing the evening in which the bridegroom of an ancient wedding was expected.

The Savior in portraying the signs of his second coming said, "When these things [meaning the signs in the sun, moon, and stars, etc.] begin to come to pass, look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." (Lk. 21: 28) Now it is almost a century since these things began to come to pass; and agreeably to the parable I have drawn in the analogy, a century was to an evening, we are very near the midnight, when the cry shall roll over hill and dale, with the archangel's voice arousing all the virgins who sleep.

Shall this generation all pass before the glad news of his arrival shall reach the ear of those waiting, and those who are sleeping shall hear the shout, and trump of the Lord? God forbid!

Do any part of the virgins make the cry at midnight? No, they are all asleep, comparatively, and the cry awakens them. It would be a strange phenomenon of sleep, that those sleeping should behold a thing while asleep, that they could not see when awake, and the vision should arouse them to wakefulness, and they should find themselves the instruments which awake themselves! We must go to the nature of the parable to find the key to this feature.

The heralder of the bridegroom was not the bride nor her party, but some one attending him. So in the fulfillment of this, we shall find some one attending the Son of God, that has a work equivalant in character to do. What say the Scriptures on this point? "He shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect [from the marriage feast] from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Mat. 24: 31.) Again: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead [or those asleep] in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1 Thes. 4: 16-18.) Here is the analogy of the midnight cry, found in the angel attendants who accompany the Lord Jesus to the great marriage supper.

It is simply ridiculous to suppose the virgins of a wedding who have by long waiting fallen asleep, should awake themselves. Such was not the case in the preparation of ancient weddings; and no such thing can by any fair means be deduced from this parable, as applying to the church in her position in the last days. She is the counterpart of Noah. (Mat 24: 37.) As Noah preached the event of the flood and prepared for it, for a century (or thereabout), and from the fact of his faithfulness in the charge committed to him, he is found ready for the time of the event by being ready for the event itself; and as seven days before it came God declared the time to Noah.

So let us be on the watch-tower all ready for the event, and when the Lord in his own way shall make known the time, we shall be prepared for that, by being prepared for the event. In this position alone can we fill the mould of the parable of the ten virgins, as wise virgins.

What about those foolish virgins? Who are they?

They are those that thought the bridegroom was coming at a much earlier period than he did, and so prepared accordingly; and in that he tarried they were found without oil when he came; while the wise, not knowing the time when he would come, prepared themselves accordingly, and were ready, with plenty of oil, even at the late hour of midnight.

Although the foolish virgins did not have an idea of the precise hour in which the bridegroom would come, they seemed to limit the time much short of midnight, else they would have prepared for emergencies, and long delays, as did the wise.

If this parable affords any analogy for definite time, it is found alone in the character of the foolish virgins, indicated by a sufficient quantity of oil to last to a given period, and should the delay reach beyond that time, they would be in midnight darkness, as some confess they have been since set times have passed; whereas the wise have with confidence waited for his coming, and many have fallen asleep waiting; and unless he comes soon, all who saw the signs begin to come to pass (evidencing to them his near coming) will be found asleep. But as they close their eyes, with lamps burning, and oil in their vessels, they have nothing to fear, for they shall awake and rise to meet him. Then shall the wisdom of the wise be seen in their careful preparation for delays and emergencies; and the folly of the foolish shall be seen in a careful preparation for an event at a much earlier period than was the true one, and they are lost for their folly. They are foolish to begin with, and foolish to the end. (To be continued.)

A title of honor will no more abate the torments of conscience than it doth mitigate Beelzebub's torments to be styled prince of the devils. You may as well seek to cure a wound in your body by applying a plaster to your garment, as to seek to ease a wounded spirit by all the treasures, pleasures, and enjoyments of this world.—Hopkins.

Correspondence.

News From a New Field.

Information came to us from Hennepin, Illinois, that a series of exceedingly interesting meetings have been held there, lasting one week, and conducted by Br. C. C. Marston, of Amboy. This is a new field, in which our faith has never been publicly proclaimed, and in which there was, previous to Br. Marston's visit, only two or three persons in the whole country, who sympathized with the views of Adventists.

For reasons peculiar to such occasions, it was impossible to obtain the Methodist church in which to hold the services, so that it only remained to secure the Court House, which was freely granted. At the first meeting the auditorium was comfortably filled, at the next it was crowded, and at the next it was impossible to seat all who came, the aisles and hall were filled with anxious listeners, and at the following meetings the same large audiences assembled, with still increasing numbers. For Sabbath morning and afternoon the public square had been prepared with seats for about eight hundred, as no hall in the town could hold all who wanted to hear. All the seats were occupied and many were obliged to find seats on the ground beyond the seated portion of the square.

The most careful attention was given to Br. Marston, at all his meetings, while he held his large audience almost spell-bound with his earnest presentation of the truth. Many said they had never heard such preaching before, and listened as if they might never hear anything like it again. It was certainly "glad tidings of great joy" to which they gave their attention, if we may judge by the great number of friends Br. M. made while there, and from the manner in which the people take hold of the truths that were scattered broadcast.

It is indeed encouraging to receive intelligence of this church and to know that new fields are opening and already yielding fruit.

C. R. Stouffer.

Assyria.

Our grove meeting at Assyria, Michigan, has come off, and I trust has left a wholesome impression on that community outside of those who love the Savior. There was deep interest, and those who were so fearful of us are being persuaded they were mistaken, finding that we are not laboring to destroy Christianity, but to help men and women up to that standard. Br. Babcock was with us, and labored to good acceptance, and I trust good results will soon follow. On Sabbath three were buried by baptism. We organized a church of thirteen members. Br. D. F. Quimby was chosen elder, Br. Bowen deacon, and Br. Taylor clerk. In the evening, on Lord's day, near twenty joined in celebrating the Lord's Supper in the apostolic order, where deep, and, I trust, lasting impressions were made. At many points about here the people want to hear preaching. I expect to organize a church north of Fishville soon. I shall have to give nearly all my time to the ministry, which I love to do when I can see good is being accomplished. Let us strive to enter into the kingdom, and watch unto prayer.

P. Holler.

Pittsburg, Pa.

It is now ten months since I was called and came to Pittsburg, Pa., to labor, and, though we have worked quietly and made no flourish of trumpets, we are able to say "the Lord is with us," and the truth is spreading and taking a deep hold in this city and Allegheny. We now propose to "carry the war into Africa," i. e. invade the strongholds of "orthodoxy," by scattering among "the incorruptible seed," by free distribution of our standard works. The schism in the the body is nearly healed, the fragments gathered up, the marks obliterated, and the brethren are meeting together in harmony and holding public service regularly in Quincy Hall, No. 127 Leacock st., Allegheny, every Sunday at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Through the week all are busy in disseminating and presenting the truth among and to others, as they may have opportunity. We might give the names of some ten or a dozen Brn. who are especially assiduous workers, but as distinctions are invidious and comparisons odious, and all merit commendation, I forbear.

I had the pleasure, some weeks since, of seeing Br. Cherry, now of Chicago, among us, who gave a good report of the church there. He will be pleased to learn that several of his old acquaintances have, since he was with us, "put on Christ in baptism," and now more are "booked," and will soon be "planted in the likeness of Christ's death," that they may be with him in the likeness of his resurrection. The last three Sabbaths have been seasons of unusual interest and blessedness in our meetings. That the Lord may prosper, build and establish us in all our work and in his ways, preserve us from sin and from evil unto his glorious appearing, is our most earnest supplication to him who is able to keep us from falling, and present us faultless before his glory. Amen.

G. W. Stetson.

Iowa.

Dear brethren and sisters scattered throughout Iowa, greetings:

We wish to call your attention to an invitation extended at our last Annual Conference, held at Cascade, to all within the bounds of our State, who love the appearing of Jesus, to unite with us. The Adventists in Iowa should be one in action, as well as in faith, and nothing on our part that can be done for the unity of all, will be left undone.

If there is any considerable number of Advent ministers and churches who may not be satisfied with our present organization, who still wish to join in the organization of an Advent Christian Conference, that will unite all the Adventists in the State, we will hold a convention with them and reorganize if necessary, for a more perfect union of all, whenever they shall signify their wish to do so.

We shall expect to see you all at our feast of tabernacles and Conference to be held in Manchester, Sept. 6. See notice. Time is short. What we do must be done quickly. God help us that it may be well done.

F. H. Kenny, Pres't.
H. H. Janes, Sec'y.

The Scriptural Farmer.

The "rich fool" in the parable was not blamed for farming well and having good crops. With him it was meritorious, as it is with all other farmers to practice such husbandry as to have an abundant harvest. But he was selfish. He thought only of his own ease, his own elegance and luxury. With a world needing help, and demanding it of him, within easy reach of his charity, he had no higher thought than to "eat, drink and be merry." As the harvests are being gathered throughout the land, it is the duty of all to think of the share God has in the products. They who pull down barns and build greater, should be careful not to store all therein, for it may not be enjoyed. Even death will not rob the Christian of his harvest fruits, if he put them in immediate circulation.

Christ has taken our nature into heaven to represent us. He has left us on earth with his nature to represent him.

The clay of the pit may yet be built into palace for a King.—Spurgeon.

Consecration of Property.

It is as much the duty of a Christian to serve God with his property, as with his voice. If he has a talent to make money, he is under as great obligation to use it to the glory of God, as the man is who has a talent to speak or write to use that to the glory of God. The obligation is the same in both cases. The one can no more live for himself, and be in the favor of God, than the other.

But what shall a Christian man, who has a talent for business, do with the avails of his labor and skill? Shall he go on and make all the money he can, and lay it up for himself and children? The general practice in all the churches strongly sanctions this view. But is custom law? Not where it conflicts with the plain teaching of the word of God.

On no point does the Bible speak more plainly than on this. Its language is unmistakable. Jesus says, Mat. 5: 19–20. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." Superabundance of anything that has a commercial value, is an earthly treasure. God allows every man to provide for himself and those dependent upon him a comfortable home, food and raiment. Anything more laid up on earth, either in land or money, than is necessary to procure them, is plainly forbidden. If, then, you are wholly consecrated to God, you will take some such course as the following:

First—you will, all along, give according as the Lord prospers you, not less than a tenth of your income to his service. As your income increases, you will give a larger proportion. But you will have some system about it. You will not be governed by the fluctuating impulses of the moment.

Second—When you have all you need to make you comfortable, you will use all the money you can make, in doing good. You will not add farm to farm, and house to house, and keep yourself in debt and trouble all your days. You will work quietly, unostentatiously, and faithfully for the Lord. You will not think of retiring because you have plenty; nor will you seek to become rich, that your children may grow up with the impression that there will never be any necessity for them to labor.

Third—You will make provision, in some way, to have your property do good when you have no longer any need of it. You will make your will in the fear and love of God. You will not leave your property for the lawyers to contend about when you are gone.

Finally, you will no more seek to build up pride in the church than in your own family. How freely money is poured out for magnificent churches! How difficult, in almost every community, to raise the necessary amount to erect a plain, humble edifice, in which the poor may have the Gospel preached! Many professing Christians will give more for ornament in the house of God, than would be necessary to carry the Gospel to hundreds who will never hear it.

Beloved, how is it with you? Is your property consecrated to God? Are you free to give whenever God calls upon you, and in such a way as he directs? The judgment is at hand. Live for it. You cannot afford to lose a single opportunity for doing good.

A good example is one of the largest bells to toll people to church.

You cannot teach a child to take care of himself unless you will let him try to take care of himself. He will make mistakes; and out of these mistakes will come his wisdom.—Rev. H. W. Beecher.

Our Young Folks.

A Riddle.

A cross and a half cross, and a circle complete.

An upright where two semi-circles do meet.

An angle triangle that stands upon feet.

And two semi-circles and a circle complete.

The first person under the age of twenty-one years sending the correct answer to the above riddle in three weeks from the time it appears in The Times, may have their choice of any book published at The Times office, price not exceeding fifty cents, at my expense.

Those who have heard the riddle and answer, are not expected to write.

All answers must be sent to Virgil Hunt, Wellington, Sumner Co., Kan., with name and P. O. address.

A Proverb Illustrated.

BY JOSEPH ALDEN, D.D.

To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.—Prov. 21: 3.

"Is this a good article?" said a customer to Mr. Salsbury, a prosperous country merchant. "I am not a judge of it, and I must depend upon your recommendation."

"I hope you don't think I would knowingly sell you anything but a good article. I call it a good article, and I think I am a pretty good judge."

"You may cut me off twelve yards of it."

The cloth was cut off and delivered and paid for, and the customer left the store.

Mrs. Salsbury happened to be in the store when the sale was made. She thought that the fabric was not what it appeared to be, and was sorry to hear her husband say what he did respecting it.

"I was sorry to hear you recommend it so strongly," said Mrs. Salsbury. "I am very sure that there is some cotton in it."

"I bought it for a genuine article, and I must sell it as I buy it. I can't insure all the goods I buy and sell. I should soon be a poor man if I did. Besides, I did not recommend it strongly. I didn't say it was a good article, though I have no doubt it is as good as any he would be likely to find; I said I called it a good article. I didn't say I was a good judge; I said I believed I was a good judge. The truth is, my dear, that you don't understand the business of selling goods. It would be impossible to carry on business as you would have it carried on."

"I can't see that telling the exact truth would be out of the way in doing business."

"If I were to tell every customer exactly what I think of the goods, I should not be able to sell anything. There are certain business usages that business men must conform to."

"Suppose those usages conflict with the law of God?"

"They don't usually; of course when they do come in conflict, the law of God must be obeyed."

When Mrs. Salsbury had retired, her husband felt a little uneasy. He didn't seem to be quite satisfied with what he had done, and with the principles he had laid down.

His thoughts were, in a measure, diverted from the subject by the entrance of new customers.

When they had gone he thought of his subscription to the missionary cause; it was made on the previous Sabbath, but had not been paid. He resolved that as soon as he had closed the store he would call on the treasurer and double this subscription.

At 9 o'clock he closed the store, losing thereby the opportunity of selling some few articles, and called on the treasurer. "I have called to pay my subscription," said he, handing him double the amount that stood opposite his name.

"Did you intend to double your subscription?" said the treasurer, as he counted the money.

"Yes; I can't really afford to do it; but some sacrifices must be made, and I suppose I may as well make them as any one."

The treasurer was a very humble man, and was not in the habit of calling the motives of his brethren in question. He was glad to hear Mr. Salsbury make the remarks he did, and to receive the pecuniary proof of his sincerity.

If he had known what had taken place at the store, and the causes which prompted Mr. Salsbury to double his subscription, he would, perhaps, have been reminded of the passage, "To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice." There is no such thing as atoning for our sins by special acts of sacrifice. Christ tells us that when we have done all, we have done only that which it is our duty to do.—Christian Advocate.

As the best writers are the most candid judges of the writings of others so the best livers are the most charitable, in the judgment they form of their neighbors.

A NEW BOOK.

—:o:—

BY L. C. COLLINS.

—:o:—

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER
SADDUCEEAN
NOR PHARISAIC,
BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.

What did the Pharisees believe?

What did the Sadducees teach?

The pure theology—the ancient faith.

The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.

The true doctrine of a future life set forth!

Patriarchs expected it.

Prophets looked for it.

Jesus Christ demonstrated it.

Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.

Dead men are not alive.

Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?

What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.

Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.

Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of The Advent Christian Times.

—o—

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to The Times for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 27, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.
☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope, but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication, EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.
☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.
☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page, $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

JNO. MILLER. You failed to give us your P. O. address: what is it?....W. C. TAYLOR. The money is received.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

H Hathaway L Record W H Jarvis S W Thurber V Hunt L L Ames F King J Ecker J Miller H Bancroft E [illegible] V Mc[illegible] A Sumner E H Durand G T A[illegible] [illegible] L A Miller J S Dennett M L[illegible] W S [illegible] T J Giddings H Holabaw G L Abrams W C Taylor J R Preston J G Rogers J [illegible] J M Cassell M Preble P N Foulks Ichabod J F [illegible] W Hall O D Gibson H P Hathaway J Carr V F Hand J H Paton A Freeman G P Mattoon W R P S W Deyo M A Newcomb J H Paton G W Brown A M Goulding R Whitney D N Laing E C Brownligh W C Hall M J Quimby W B McDowell D S Clark G F Cranston S B Mabey N C Miller U A Barlow S J Rosbrook R R York M E Barlow.

P. O. Address.

S. W. Thurber, Minneapolis, Minn.

Marriages.

CHAPMAN—GARRETT.—In [illegible], Warren Co. Ill., [illegible] 19, 1872, by Eld. M. McCulloch, Mr. Orson G. Chapman and Miss Adaline Garrett.

Obituary.

SPENCE.—In Oneida, Knox Co. Ill., Aug. 22, 1872, Amanda M. Fuller-Spence; aged 36 years.

Services in the A. C. Chapel. L. F. COLE.

BATCHELOR.—In New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 10, 1872, Mary, wife of Br. Mathew Batchelor: aged 73 years.

Sr. Batchelor sleeps well. She has worked long and faithfully, and has a little rest vouchsafed her before the return of the Master. For more than ten years she has been an invalid. While Br. B. has been away from home proclaiming the gospel, she has cared for the family at home, some of them sick, ever mindful to "entertain strangers," as well as brethren and friends, many of whom will drop tears of sympathy with our afflicted brother. The ties of a happy union of forty-seven years are not easily severed. Death can accomplish the work, but memory will recall the form lost to sight. God bless the lonely mourner. May the Advent speedily bring reunion. W.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

Afton, 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., Sabbath Sep. 1.
Sommerville, 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sep. 8.
Johnson's S. H. 3 p. m., same day.
C. W. SMITH.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCulloch F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings, and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

The Indiana Tabernacle will be pitched at Goodland, Newton Co., Aug 22, and continue over two Sundays. E. C. ANDRUS.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 3. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HINE, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. of the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held in connection with the Southern campmeeting at Spring Grove, commencing Sunday, Sept. 1. GEORGE HOWARD.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20. and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m, Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Brackett or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. WM. SHELDON.

MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota State Tent will be pitched at, or near, Armstrong Station, for the purpose of holding our Q. M., Sept. 6, and onward. We invite all our friends to come, and as many as can do so to bring bedding and provision, and to come fully prepared to work for the Master.

GEO. W. MILLER.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawver, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open. J. V. HIMES.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Sycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley, (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union campground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18, 1872, to continue over Lord's day.

The object of this meeting will be to earnestly investigate the prophecies bearing on the time of the coming of Christ, and deliverence of the people of God; the justification of the sanctuary; and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence of Christ's immediate coming; and to take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ.

Let such as can, bring their provision; but such as cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally.

(Signed.) GEO. W. BROWN, S. W. BISHOP, CHARLES C. BARKER, CALEB THOMSON, L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 5, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. L. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $35. tf

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting: any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(239m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cisterns, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT, FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, August 27, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
(Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.)

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do not fail to comply with these suggestions.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address: WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject indicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page, $5 a ream, postal or express charges prepaid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1 25 for quarter ream, 25 sheets, 30c.

To Correspondents.

JNO. MILLER. You failed to give us your P. O. address: what is it?... W. C. TAYLOR. The money is received.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

H Hathaway L Record W H Jarvis S W Thurber V Hunt L L Ames F King J Ecker J Miner H Bancroft E C [illegible] M McCullock C A Sumner E H D [illegible] G T Adams [illegible] Beverley L A Miner J S Dennis [illegible] [illegible] J G Rogers J [illegible] J M Cassell [illegible] Fowlks Ichabod J [illegible] W Hall O D Gibson H P Hathaway J Carr V [illegible] J H Paton A Freeman G P Mattoon W H, P S W Deyo M A Newcomb J H Paton G W Brown A M [illegible] D N Lathrop E C Burrough W C Hall M J Quimby W B McDowell D S Clark [illegible] Crandall S B Mabey N C Miller F A Barlow S J Rosbrook R R York M E Parlow

P. O. Address.

S. W. Thurber, Minneapolis, Minn.

Marriages.

CHAPMAN—GARRETT.—In Ionia, Warren Co. Ill., June 19, 1872, by Eld. M. McCulloch, Mr. Orson G. Chapman and Miss Adaline Garrett.

Obituary.

SPENCE.—In Oneida, Knox Co. Ill., Aug. 22, 1872, Amanda M. Fuller-Spence; aged 28 years.

Services in the A. C. Chapel. L. F. COLE.

BATCHELOR.—In New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 10, 1872, Mary, wife of Br. Mathew Batchelor; aged 73 years.

Sr. Batchelor sleeps well. She has worked long and faithfully, and has a little rest vouchsafed her before the return of the Master. For more than ten years she has been an invalid. While Br. B. has been away from home proclaiming the gospel, she has cared for the family at home, some of them sick, ever mindful to "entertain strangers," as well as brethren and friends, many of whom will drop tears of sympathy with our afflicted brother. The ties of a happy union of forty-seven years are not easily severed. Death can accomplish the work, but memory will recall the form lost to sight. God bless the lonely mourner. May the Advent speedily bring reunion. W.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

Afton, 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., Sabbath Sep. 1.
Beemerville, 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sep. 8.
Johnson's S. H. 3 p. m., same day.
C. W. SMITH.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings, and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JANES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JANES, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

The Indiana Tabernacle will be pitched at Goodland, Newton Co., Aug 22, and continue over two Sundays. E. C. ANDRUS.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HINK, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. of the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held in connection with the Southern campmeeting at Spring Grove, commencing Sunday, Sept. 1. GEORGE HOWARD.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20, and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m, Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

